IN the December issue of DAILY WORKER we read Comrade Cannon's article in which he states that "The outstanding characteristic of the right wing always and everywhere is its political cowardice."

Now I have nothing against Comrade Cannon personally, in fact, I look upon him and Comrade Foster as two of our ablest leaders in the party.

Their ability and courage have been displayed upon more than one occasion. Their leadership in some of this country's most important strikes must be well remembered.

But their prominence cannot and will not belittle their opponents of the minority, for, in fact, it is the first time that I ever heard anybody accusing Comrade Ruthenberg with political cowardice. Comrade Ruthenberg's history is an open book with which we are very familiar. In so far as courage is concerned few are his equal.

So much for the personalities. Now I shall deal with the fundamental issue involved. We are told by our majority that the farmer-labor party is no longer in demand, therefore, we must forget all about it. What brot our majority to this conclusion is beyond my power to understand. It may be longing for good times, peaceful enjoyment of life, so that we may be relieved of that hard task and burlensome trouble of working and agitating for a labor party.

Why, look at our grandma socialist labor party. She is still "alive" in spite of herself! Then take a look at our infants of the proletarian party. They are making a lot of noise and get along so nicely So why shouldn't we of the Workers (Communist) Party feel safe, sane and secure in our little sect? We can form a united front with somebody sometime and somewhere. That is, of course, when we get disgusted with ourselves and too lonesome. In the meantime we can go out and make great, big "revolutionary" speeches, to show to the "public" what great leftists and rebels we are

We shall prove our revolutionary egoism by telling our audience of revolution which is coming tomorrow, and then we will ask: Are we leftest or are we not?

For a period of three long years Communists have been working for a labor party in the unions, fraternal societies, co-operatives and every other workers' organization. After years of hard labor we met with great success everywhere. Four big labor unions endorsed the labor party idea.

Powerful international unions were forced by their own membership to act and their delegates introduced resolutions for a labor party in A. F. of L. conventions. Communists took the leadership in the fight for a labor party and amalgamation. They were feared and hated by reactionary labor leaders. We bitterly condemned the socialist party and its leaders. They were traitors in our eyes because they wouldn't stand by the fight for a labor party.

Then reaction set in, Communists and sympathizers were expelled by dozens from labor unions. Gompers reigned supreme. But did we change our trade union policy just because we suffered defeat in the first skirmish? Oh! no! That would be a crime against the working class. We were expelled but workers still remained under the influence of Wall Street lieutenants who were and still are even more conservative and a great deal more reactionary than the petty bourgeois leader, LaFollette.

Our duty as Communists was and still is to work our way back to the unions, back to the organized section of the working class! This was and is a correct policy for Communists to pursue—100 per cent correct.

Now, comrades, imagine a Communist delegate to the A. F. of L. convention. A resolution for a labor party is introduced by the Molders and A. I. T. W. U. delegates. This is the fruit of our toil and the product of our labor.

What position is a Communist going to assume under these circumstances? He cannot vote for the resolution, for he would violate party discipline and be subject to expulsion from the Workers Party, since the central executive committee is on record against the labor party and he, as a Communist, cannot ignore its decision.

On the other hand to vote against the resolution would mean only one thing and that is, surrender to Gomperism. Could he as a Communist support the arch enemies of Communism?

The answer is: Never! By abstaining from voting he would again place himself in a centrist and cowardly position, unbecoming a Communist. Do you see such a delegate would find himself between the devil and the deep sea.

All this thanks to blunders of our majority!

More Questions and Answers

By MAX BEDACHT & JAY LOVESTONE.

19. Question—Where does the Cannon group get the brazen effrontery to call the Marxian group in the party liquidators?

Answer—That's more of the campaign mud-slinging in which Comrade Cannon is unsurpassed and unsurpassable. That's his most effective way of meeting issues—by avoiding them and throwing sand into the eyes of the membership so that they will have to follow him blindly.

There are only two ways of liquidating a Communist party. (1) The dissolution of the organization. (2) Robbing the organizations of its functions and thus coudemning it to a slow and certain death.

We, who as a group have done the bulk of the work in building the Communist movement and in organising the Workers Party, not only do not propose to liquidate the Workers Party but are pledged to fight tooth and toenail every attempt to liquidate the Workers Party regardless of how subtle, hidden, or unconscious (at best) the scheme may be. We have in mind particularly the second method of dissolving the Workerr Party. We consider that the attempt of the Cannon group to bury the farmer-labor united front slogan is an attempt in this direction. The C. I has emphatically declared that the Workers Party has elevated itself during the last two years from a state of sectarian barrenness to one of political activities. Back to the woods! That's the majority slogan. The Cannon group is attempting to lead our party or rather mislead our party back to its sectarian days. It is trying to make out of a party of action a Bolshevik party, a party of mere propaganda, a menshevik party. That is liquidation with a vengeance.

On the one hand, the Foster-Cannon group maintains that it is opposed to a farmer-labor party slogan because there is no mass demand for it. They say they would be in favor of it if there were a mass demand for it. On the other hand, the same group afflicted with a devastating dose of sterility in Marxism says that to work for the development of an F. L. P means to work for the liquidation of the party In short, applying the yard stick of common sense and the most elementary understanding of Communism this logic leads them into the following blind alley: We the Foster-Communists are in favor of a farmer-labor party only when it can be organized to be big and strong Then there is no danger of liquidating the Workers Party We are opposed to the farmer-labor slogan when there is no mass demand for it and when a big farmer-labor party cannot be organized; then of course there is danger of liquidating the Workers Party In other words these Cannon-Communists are in favor of what they choose to call a competing party when they can get a competing party, but they are opposed to one when they can't get it.

Really, who are the liquidators? Merely to pose the question is to answer it.

Thesis on Economic' Political Situation and Party Strategy

nection in every important territorial, industrial, political, etc. unit of the U. S. A.

b) To place every party member into the class struggle (Enforcement of the party requirement of membership and activity in unions, etc.)

c) To educate every member thru theory and practice so that he may be able to render maximum service to the party.

d) To reconstruct our party so that it may yield the maximum result in the class struggle: Application of workers' efficiency (accounting, communications etc.); organizational centralization (printing, dues payment of language federation branches thru regular party channels just like the English branches); shop nuclei (in each instance where the conditions make their organization possible without resort to artificial makeshifts).

e) An apparatus to meet the obvious requirements of a revolutionary party.

f) To maintain strict ideological and organizational discipline, i. e. to hold every party member strictly to account for every deviation from the accepted program of the party; and to make every party functionary accountable to a responsible committee with the understanding that he is obliged to give maximum service to the party.

G. ELECTIONS 1924.

31. The overwhelming majority of the party leadership, and by appearance also of the party, favored during six months of discussion a petty bourgeois election alliance. For this stand various reasons were given:

a) It is unusual; but we are facing an extraordinary situation.

b) It is not unusual; it would represent nothing but an American solution of a problem which in like manner was solved before elsewhere; see A) the Mexican letter, B) the British labor party, C) the alliance of the Communists with the social democrats in Germany and, D) of the Bolsheviki with the mensheviki. (Likewise do we find this year the majority thesis listing the latest developments in England, France and Germany as examples of how, recently, proletarian parties are effectively decomposed on the political field by the petty bourgeoisie).

c) It was advantageous because of the violent changes which had taken place the progressive demoralization of the American bourgeoisie.

d) It was good strategy because of the violent changes which were to come: the disintegration of the A. F. of L. bureaucracy.

32. The C. I. reversed this decision and upheld the contention of the anti-third party group. At various times did the various groups in the party react to this decision in the following manner (tho these reactions have nowhere been authoritatively been recorded so as to be committal):

a) The present minority argued that they had really been sustained in principle, and only been defeated as to its application; eventually they admitted complete defeat.

b) The present majority, while accepting the C. I. decision, did not concur with it; eventually they agreed to the correctness of the C. I. decision.

33. After both LaFollette and the C. I. had agreed with the anti-third party group that an alliance of the W. P. with LaFollette was unwise, it developed that we could not even maintain the united front of our F. L. P campaign and were by an additional withdrawal of temporary sympathizers forced to drop our F. L. P. campaign and to place a W. P. ticket in the field. A satisfactory vote of close to 40.000 was counted for our national candidates.

34. For the first time did the wage workers show enough political unrest to make it impossible to corral nearly all of them into the camps of the traditional parties of big business. This time it required a "third party" to draw a substantial number of workers and working farmers from their intended class action upon the political field. 4,360,000 votes were counted for LaFollette, one-eighth of the total vote, about half coming from rural districts and half from industrial districts.

H. Party Strategy for 1925.

35. Both official theses agree that there was a substantial F. L. P. movement early in 1924, and that it was diverted into the LaFollette movement. The minority thesis holds that this F. L. P. movement, as the political expression of economic conditions, cannot permanently be perverted into a petty bourgeois movement, that the economic basis of the movement must inevitably re-assert itself, and that therefore the slogan "for a farmer-labor party" must soon fall upon fertile ground.

36. The majority thesis does not deny the proletarian and semi-proletarian basis of the involved moving group of workers and working farmers; but it does deny that this basis will necessarily soon loosen from this movement the hold which the petty bourgeois party has on it. (Didn't the parties of big business have a stranglehold on them for 30-50 years? They could ask.)

37. The majority thesis considers the F. L. P. movement as having been not only absorbed but assimilated by the third party movement. The progressive defection of the F. L. P. movement passed several stages:

a) The pre convention period with LaFollette's anathema against the W. P. (which according to Foster reduced the convention attendance by 75 per cent.)

b) The partial failure of the June 17 convention.

c) The unconditional support of LaFollette on part of the C. P. P. A. convention on July 4.

d) The final phase leading up to the withdrawal of the F. L. P. national candidates, and their replacement by W. P. candidates.

38. If there was any time at all during which the F. L. P. movement was "absorbed" by the third party movement it must have been during any one or more of these periods.

39. Let us consider the following quotation: "Since . . . June 1922 . . . the party has carried on a consistent united front campaign with the end in view of uniting those workers and farmers who were ready to break with the capitalist parties in a mass F. L. P. with which the W. P. would be affiliated. This campaign has been the major political campaign of our party. We have during this campaign advanced the cause of independent working class action and made the F. L. P. an issue in the American labor movement. We can also say, without danger of the statement being challenged, that our party had made the greatest gains for itself thruout this campaign for the labor party. It is thru this F. L. P. campaign that our party has established itself as a political force in the U. S. It is thru this campaign that it has established its prestige and its leadership among the masses of workers and farmers. Nothing has contributed so much to develop our party from a sectarian group to a recognized political force in the life of the labor movement of this country than our manouvers in relation to the F. L. P. . . . The campaign for a F. L. P. was a correct estimatioh of the situation in the U. S. . . . must be continued and will be a major campaign of the party in the future."

40. This quotation is from the document entitled "Our Immediate Work, a Program of Action," issued in August by unanimous decision of the C. E. C.

41. These statements, if correct, establish the following facts:

a) It is correct to appeal to workers and farmers with a F. L. P. slogan even before a real F. L. P. movement exists among them, as long as they are "ready to break with the capitalist parties."

b) "This campaign has been the major political campaign of our party."

c) "We have made the F. L. P. an issue in the American labor movement."

d) "The campaign for the F. L. P. must be continued and will be a major campaign of the party in the future."

42. If, on the other hand, these statements are incorrect, it follows that:

a) The C. E. C., including its majority, made another mistake in appraising the political situation.

b) The C. I. shared in this mistake by not taking exception to this statement.

c) The majority of the C. E. C. failed in its duty to the party and the C. I. by not withdrawing formally and specifically what they now in their majority thesis are attacking as incorrect. (It should be noted that the quotations are not from a casual campaign document, but from one which the C. E. C. was proud to issue as a result and proof of party unity enjoined by the C. I., and for which both comrades Foster and Ruthenberg toured the party districts, familiarizing the party membership in detail and with emphasis with this "program" in August, the majority abandoning it in November.

I. Criticism.

43. It is logical that in countries where a strong Communist Party is confronting an unusual constellation of forces it must strike out upon new ways to achieve maximum result. The various social forces in the U. S. A. are of course producing certain special problems: The leading economic and financial position of the U. S. A.; the fact that it has relatively the weakest labor movement of an industrialized country in the world with the proporionately strongest labor bureaucracy, making the labor movement topheavier than anywhere else in the world; most important of all the absence of any effective class consciousness of the workers as expressed on the political field.

44. But our party itself does not produce any particularly new problems; while we are relatively the weakest party in the C. I., this very weakness makes our party problems such as are as a rule common and known, and whose repeated solution within the C. I. is well known.

45. Another feature of our domestic reasoning is the vision of rapid changes which are supposed to be either taking place before our eyes, or else immediately pending. (See the F. L. P. absorption of the majority thesis, and the ever critical unemployment situation as the minority sees it.)

46. The majority thesis claims that the F. L. P. sentiment of the first half of 1924 has been completely absorbed and is irretrievably lost to the LaFollette movement, in this time of "immediate downward plunge of American industry, renewed crisis, unemployment, and sharpening of the class struggle."

47. Political parties seem to be permanently severed from their economic foundation and slide around upon a surface greased with political expediency.

48. Still worse "the LaFollette movement . . . will be forced to overcome . . . the contradictions of group and sectional interests . . . sufficiently to crystallize into a new political party." In this era where political parties are unable to maintain themselves without adjusting the antagonism of the various economic groups (see point 6d) it is expected that the LaFollette movement will begin to create parties out of economically incompatible groups.

J. The Elements for a Revolutionary Party.

49. It requires a violent elimination of democratic-pacifist preconceptions to identfy oneself with the Communist movement even thru one's vote. One just disappointed with bourgeois politics, petty or otherwise, is as a rule not yet in the frame of mind that makes for a vote for Communism. History shows not a single instance where masses of workers change in times of comparative social security from bourgeois directly to revolutionary politics.

50. Without exception their first step after they break with bourgeois politics is working class politics—upon the basis of the bourgeois state. In continental Europe this lead to the broad class parties of the Second International; which were in theory in conflict with the bourgeois state, but in practice reformist parties upon the basis of the bourgeois state. In Anglo-Saxon countries we find reformism originally not so much permeating the socialist parties but forming a layer of labor parties around them.

51. An analysis of our party membership will show the largest part recruited from the S. P.; smaller parts from Y. P. S. L., the S. L. P., P. P., I. W. W. and anarchist organizations. All these sources are of course disappearing. A small influx of members, especially in Minn., was credited to our F. L. P. participation.

52. Just as in all other countries only a negligible fraction of the number and value of our party membership has come to us directly without intervention of any political or semi-political proletarian organization upon the basis of the bourgeois state. What should make us think that this unbroken national and international experience does not apply to the present situation!

53. Both official thesis beg the most contended question. The majority thesis declares, ". . . Neither are we bound to the theory of the historic inevitability of the labor party in America." The minority thesis "The inevitability of the formation of a C. L. P. is not the basis of our campaign."

54. But the inevitability—normally—of some intermediate form of political expression must be established. The majority thesis mentions casually some "labor congress, council of action etc." which together with a labor party are some of the forms which the united front on the political field might assume. This introduction of new, vague, and little known terms is no contribution to the discussion.

55. We must proclaim emphatically that we are for the united front, on the political field as anywhere else; we must have an opinion as to what the united front on the political field will most likely be. A reformist program of our own party is out of the question. It might be an election alliance; but eventually a labor party seems the logical solution.

K. The Principle of a United Front.

56. The Communist Parties the world over are making propaganda for Communist demands. They find however often groups of workers making propaganda for general everyday workers' demands. This leads to a division of the workers. The Communists are trying to convince the other workers of the superiority of the Communist demands; if they succeed they have made a direct gain for the Communist movement.

57. But if they fail, yet are unwilling to continue the division of the workers, they abide by the decision of the majority of the workers, and join in demands whose character or limitations often make them indefensible. In this they consider themselves justified because they are thereby preserving the workers' united front. The labor party is one of the forms of the united front on the parliamentary field. And yet they continue to make propaganda for the Communist demands both inside and outside of the united front, criticizing the defective united front demands and constantly pointing out the correctness of their original Communist, but by a majority defeated position. All the time however living up to the letter and spirit of their obligations arising out of the united front, and propagating and supporting with all their power the united front demands, as the best demands that get support from a substantial part of the workers.

58. If however, thru a perversion of the united front, Communists enter it with non-Communist demands (so as to conceal their own identity) and thereby incapacitate themselves for any criticism of the united front demands, both inside and outside, it is not anymore a united front. The munist speech. These were his only two appearances in and only contribution to the congress. In the executive committees' report, they accused the Communists of assisting the De La Huerta uprising. This in spite of the fact that Morones during the uprising denied this statement of Gompers and accused him of misusing his friendly relationship with Mexico in order to satisfy his hatred of the Communists. He even went so far as to use his influence over one of the Mexican papers to publish the reply of the Mexican Communist Party and their denial of the accusation made by Gompers. Gunittio Vargas, the Spanish-speaking secretary of the Pan-American federation, has admitted that this statement was not true and that it had only been put in the report because Gompers insisted upon it. Morones warned the delegates in the last few minutes of the congress, that if these people, (meaning the Communists) who parade as the real liberators should by any means find their way into the congress, it would be their painful duty to expel them. He assured them, however, that this did not mean that the organizations they "mis-represented" would be expelled. They would remain, I suppose, providing they elected delegates suitable to him and his chief, Gompers.

One of the immediate reasons for this attack upon the Mexican Communist Party was the hissing of Gompers and Morones by Mexican workers on the opening day of the congress. The other immediate reason was the complete victory of the Communists over Morones' lieutenants in the convention of the Agrarian League of Communes of the state of Vera Cruz. This convention, with 400 delegates representing the most powerful agrarian league in Mexico, endorsed the Communist Party, affiliated with the Peasants' International, elected a Communist president, vice-president, and secretary, and a Communist sympathizer as treasurer. This was a blow to the Morones-Trevino-Rico group of class collaborators who had boasted that they put this organization under yellow socialist leadership.

One has to come to Latin-America to really fully understand Gompers' trickery and duplicity. Here he is Comrade Gompers, the socialist, the radical, the man who has devoted his whole life to the liberation of the underdog. It may seem absurd to think that Gompers could be even considered a socialist or a radical anywhere. He is a little too old to adapt himself to the changed environment he finds in Mexico, however, he makes a brave attempt, and the interpreters give the socialist phraseology to his speeches. Besides, it is under this cloak that the counter-revolutionaries the world over do their most treacherous work.

Gompers and Hughes, hand in hand, are penetrating Latin-America in the interests of American imperialism. Where the democratic labor wing cannot accomplish the job, then all the forces of the army and the navy come into play. The most brilliant chapter in the history of the Pan-American Federation of Labor, says Gompers, is the part they played in helping to defeat the De La Huerta uprising. It is a frank admission that the purpose of this alleged labor organization is to assist American imperialism to defeat British imperialism in Latin-America and then to establish world domination.

We know but little of the Latin-American workers and they know little of us. These workers have very strong revolutionary tendencies. The labor movements in many of the republics are young and inexperienced This is an asset and not a liability. Thanks to this, they are not yet firmly orientated. They are not completely under the domination of reactionary machines such as we suffer from. They are looking for action and revolutionary leadership. Only the Communists can supply this. The Communist Parties, legal or illegal, in Latin-America have influence far beyond what their organized strength would indicate. We must not allow the invasion of Gompers to further create the impression that there are no anti-American imperialist forces in North America.

The manifesto issued by the Workers (Communist) Party, and the manifesto issued by the T. U. E. L. and the Pan-American Anti-Imperialistic League, are only the beginning of the campaign for uniting the Communist and left wing forces in North, Central, and South America, so as to strengthen them against American imperialism at home and abroad. This is a big and important task, one in which our party must play a major part.

THESIS ON ECONOMIC AND POLITICAL SITUATION AND PARTY STRATEGY

Communists therein are then Communists in "theory" only; but in fact they became centrists.

59. The support of the F. F. L. P. came to 90 per cent from the W. P.; now the minority thesis says "Opposition on part of the Foster-Cannon group was responsible for the failure to organize the F. F. L. P." If the group charged with neglect would have added any momentum to the F. F. L. P. it would have been a W. P. affair 99 per cent. This is where the united front becomes an ingrown front, an obsession, a shibboleth, a password for a sect going down to oblivion.

L. Our Slogan: A Labor Party Controlled by Labor Organizations.

60. The economic conditions will force a labor party in the near future. Many comrades object to carry the labor party slogan for the following reason: Since we will hardly be able to act upon this slogan in the immediate future it would be a "dead" slogan.

61. It has nowhere been recognized as a principle that a slogan is "dead" just because we cannot act upon it for the time being, e. g. "Dictatorship of the Proletariat," "All Power to the Soviets," "Recognition of Soviet Russia," propaganda in colonial countries, in the army and navy, etc. No valid reasons have been advanced why this particular slogan occupies an altogether different position in this respect.

62. A united front on the economic and the political field: Strong, unified unions "amalgamation," and a political union, "a labor party controlled by labor organizations" should always be ready to galvanize the labor movement into real life.

63. To speak of the "class F. L. P. slogan" as "the most effective agitational weapon which to deny is to deny the fundamentals of our Communist principles" shows the minority lacking all realism. But to raise the elimination of the F. L. P. slogan at the time to the central point of contention shows that the majority is underestimating all the other problems confronting us.

M. Corrections.

64. With the reactionary republican party winning hands down against a stand-pat democratic platform and candidates, without apparently any concession to any popular unrest nothwithstanding the unprecedented provocation of the Teapot Dome oil scandal; with both the political and the economic organizations of the workers at their lowest ebb in the last fifteen years; with the farmers rebellious unrest adroitly diverted by a buncomb third party movement; the minority thesis declares "the capitalist class is desperately hanging on to power."

65. With the exaggerated and often downright untruthful statements concerning the F. F. L. P. having made an international laughing stock of the comrades responsible therefore, the minority thesis declares "the F. F. L. P. represented 600,000 workers."

THE PIOUS MARCOSSON

A Review of the "After Lenin—What" Articles in the Saturday Evening Post

By JOSEPH KALAR.

THERE are several ways in which capitalism exerts an anti-Bolshevik influence on the masses. We have, first of all, the amusing and utterly impossible caricatures as dished out by the newspapers to newspaper intelligences, the second-hand influence of the artists who maintain that under Communism individuality would disappear, and lastly, the polite and urban monstrosities executed in subtle shades by the more intelligent run of lackeys. The newspaper caricatures are not usually effective, except on very immature and impressionable minds. To the intelligent mind, even tho it may be serving capitalism against Communism, such mental inventions are exceedingly humorous. The artists exert an influence only among their own set—for it is up to them to fear the displacement of a system whereby they profit. But the real dangerous sort of anti-propaganda is found in the subtle productions of semi-intellectuals. It is within this type that Mr. Isaac Marcosson, a very willing lackey, of the Curtis Publishing company, can be classed.

Capitalist Poison Gas Factory.

His "After Lenin—What?" articles are given great prominence in the pages of the Saturday Evening Post. The Post is too polite to revert to the caricature type of anti-propaganda, so it employs a man like Mr. Marcosson to write articles from the very scene of Communism. The danger in Marcosson's articles is that occasionally they verge into something that appears intelligent. Mr. Marcosson seems to be struggling between a sympathy for the Communist cause, and the possible chance of a large check from the publishers. It is this sort of semi-sympathetic literature that gives great harm. The case for Communism is represented as a hopeless one—even tho the case may be a justifiable one. In this way, the great middle class of boobery and bourgeois feel that Communism is impossible. To one with a half-way knowledge of capitalistic propaganda, the reason is plainly seen for this smearing of falsehood with a sweetness satisfying to the mediocre mental palate. Marcosson evidently has a hard time to suppress his feelings of sympathy, if artificial, but the knowledge that the Curtis Publishing company is one of the most reactionary of forces in the United States, with a far-reaching effect on the middle mass, is sufficient to curb any sympathetic break.

The Poor Boob!

Marcosson is still of the opinion that Communism and Bolshevism are upheld by fanatics of a very imaginative mental strain, who cannot see the impractibility of a Communist state. To one who has studied Marxism as applied by the Communists, this is absurd. There is nothing whatsoever romantic or adventuristic about Communism. It has the satisfaction of a reality. To the Marcosson intellects, we advise a study of Communistic principles, say, a study based on "The A. B. C. of Communism." Such a study should prove profitable.

The nature of Marcosson's intellect can be grasped from this excerpt from his first article!

"Far more damning than all this is the crusade against God, because Soviet propaganda respects neither deity nor man. The youth of Russia is being reared on the idea that there is no creed but a perverted Communism. All sense of the spiritual, the saving grace of individual as well as nation, is crushed. Atheism rules. The anti-religious literature is an offense to the eye and to the mind. I have never seen anything so sacrilegious. It is this undermining of what might be called the moral influence that constitutes perhaps the worst indictment against the Bolshevik order."

Blow number one of which I shall speak a little later.

And again, in the same article, he says:

"What we term fair dealing and opportunity they denounce as tyrannous capitalism."

How Sermons Are Cooked Up.

His diatribe against the atheistic doctrine of the Bolsheviks is perhaps the most effective. The great blood-sucking class of ministers are generally numbered among the readers of the Post. In its columns they will find nothing that is apt to bruise their already hardened conscience. This blow of Marcosson's gives them the cue. From the pulpit they will preach against Sovietism because it endangers their meal ticket, they will add imagination to the already reality, and thus give the religious millions a perverted caricature of the Soviet government. And the American nation is weak, particularly in this superstitious strain. And the great 100 per cent American mind becomes moulded into one form, the great American eye is furnished a pair of spectacles that looks at Communism, but not into.

To the reader of Marx and to the reader of Bucharin's "A. B. C. of Communism" the statement above quoted, "What we term fair dealing and opportunity, etc." causes nothing but amusement. But to the American public, accustomed as it is to receive dishes made to the capitalistic order, it will have the semblance of truth.

And Marcosson only serves to illustrate why we must war, not only against capitalism, but at their yellow lackeys, the writers who write to order, as well.

FAMOUS MOVIE FILM, "POLIKUSHKA," WILL RETURN TO CHICAGO

The famous story, "Polikushka," by the immortal writer, L. N. Tolstoy, which was made into a moving picture by the Moscow Art Theater, is coming back to Chicago for one evening only. The picture was shown in Chicago at the Orchestra Hall only once last winter. Thousands of workers who were unable to see the picture at its first showing are anxiously awaiting its coming back. The picture will be shown THURSDAY NIGHT, JAN. 15, at Gartner's Independent Theater, 3725 Roosevelt Road, near Independent Blvd. Mark the date on your calender and tell your friends about it.

All friendly organizations are requested to postpone their meetings on that date.

MUSSOLINI L[illegible]'D MURDERS SAYS CES[illegible]OSSI, FORMER FASCIST CHIEF, IN CONFESSION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Dec. 28.—The hero of world capitalist reaction, Benito Mussolini, Fascist dictator of Italy, is exposed by Cesare Rossi, former right hand man of Mussolini and secretary general of his government, as an instigator and head of Fascist murder bands who assassinated those who opposed him and terrorized the whole nation.

This sensational expose is made in the form of a memorandum of Rossi, who is now under arrest on charges of murdering Matteotti, the socialist deputy in parliament. The long and detailed account given by Rossi of the plots engineered by Mussolini for the assassination of his foes is a most lurid document and is published simultaneously in several papers together with convincing proof in the way of photographic reproductions of original documents furnished by Rossi.

Mussolini Ordered Murders.

Rossi says in the memorandum that Mussolini personally ordered the assaults on Deputy Misuri for making a speech. The order was given to General Balbo. Mussolini also ordered General De Bono, director general of the police, to frame up a beating for Minister Amendola for persisting in his opposition.

Mussolini, so Rossi asserts, sent Rossi and some others to Milan to murder Cesare Forni, a fascist insurgent. Also, Mussolini consented to the devastation of former Premier Nitti's property by local fascists.

Nine Thousand Workers Murdered.

Nitti, it must be remembered, was merely opposed to Mussolini on capitalist grounds, and was no friend of the workers, 9,000 of whom have been murdered in the last three years. Thousands of workers are in prison and the unions have been crushed or turned into fascist organizations wherever possible. Only lately, however, the shop committee movement has shown the workers' resentment and the Communists are gaining rapidly.

Rossi says that Mussolini ordered under Secretary Finzi to give three fascists 10,000 francs to go to Paris to assassinate a foe of Mussolini, while General De Bono furnished them false passports. The memorandum is a gruesome document, full of murders, conspiracies and dark deeds. It is a terrific blow at fascism.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

SCRATCH a liberal and you will find a reactionary. The Chicago Tribune ostentatiously displays an editorial from the New Republic, in which the American Communists are castigated for propagating Communism, much to the disgust of the saffron-hued "radicals" of Greenwich Village. The New Republic indirectly suggests that those who fail to properly appreciate the blessings of America be deported to Russia "and help in the real work of constructing a Communist state." This is only what could be expected from one of the leading journals of the intelligence that supported LaFollette in the recent election.

THE New Republic rebukes Soviet Russia for not producing a Utopia out of the industrial desert inherited from the czar's regime and asks with a flourish of disdainful superiority, "What traveler returned from Russia reports any brilliant achievement in any field, intellectual, artistic, educational, technical?" We can inform the New Republic that even the Associated Press, which cannot be accused of stopping over in its desire to play up Soviet Russia's accomplishments, is responsible for a recent dispatch testifying to the great impetus given to inventions during the past two years, since Russia got a position where the workers and peasants were no longer confronted by hordes of capitalist hirelings from those "civilized" and "accomplished" capitalist countries, the praises of which our petty bourgeois parasites like to sing.

THE ass who wrote the editorial in the kept organ of jaded liberalism, stepped on ground that one with a little more knowledge might hesitate to tread on when he ventured the libe that the Communists of Russia were acknowledging the importance of capital as an agent of production in their efforts to secure a loan. Well, any young comrade could tell the Greenwich Village scribe that Communists have nothing in the world against "capital" which any novice in economics knows to be that portion of the product of human labor which is stolen by the capitalists from the workers and is used to produce more wealth for the master class. What we object to is the system which enables one class, a small minority of the population, to use this stored-up wealth to heap up riches for themselves and keep the masses in slavery.

THE workers and peasants of Russia are not being solemn idiots like the hack who turned out the editorial against the Communists at the orders of some manufacturer who is subsidizing the New Republic, know that machinery and other kinds of capital are needed in order to more quickly bring the productive forces of the workers' and peasants' government to a high point of efficiency. This "capital" will not be used to exploit the workers of Russia. It will be used "by" them and the wealth thus created with the aid of this "capital" in whatever form it appears, will add to the happiness and comforts of the workers and peasants of Russia. Oh, no! Mr. Saphead of the New Republic, we entertain no hard feelings towards

PUBLISHERS IN FURY OVER NEW POSTAGE RAISE

Coolidge Scheme Works; He Drops Out of Picture

That Coolidge's scheme, to throw the postal clerk's fight out of the senate into the newspaper publishers' camp and thereby kill it without soiling his own hands, is working, is seen by the furore his proposal to increase postal rates on second class mail has caused among publishers.

Publishers Up in Arms.

The American Newspaper Publishers filed a protest today at the first hearing on the new measure.

They charge the new schedule proposed to meet the postal pay increases would "cripple the circulation" of their publications. They insist there is unfairness to them in hasty hearings on the new bill. They demand "sufficient" time (more delay) to study the report of the post office department. Scores of publishers have telegraphed their objections. More are expected to storm both house and senate.

The Senator Moses swears the hearings will be closed next Tuesday at the latest, it can be easily guessed that they will not.

Harry S. New, postmaster general whether naively or otherwise, is forging ahead with his demand that magazine and newspaper publishers make up the $63,000,000 necessary to pay the increase in pay.

New Submits Figures.

In making his argument he submits the following figures:

"It cost 1.6 cents per piece to handle first class matter and third class matter requires little distribution in the railway mail service, whereas daily and weekly newspapers receive letter mail service. It costs 1.45 cents per piece to handle first class matter and 12.73 cents per piece to handle fourth class matter.

"With such a small revenue from second class and such a large service conferred upon it, it is inevitable that there must be a large loss. The cost of second class is 2.39 cents per piece."

Of course no one will fool himself into believing that New's facts and figures will force this bill thru over the heads of big publishers. All that will come out of it will be lifting the responsibility off the shoulders of Coolidge and the senate and completely annihilating the post office clerk's demand for pay increase.

OLGIN GIVES COURSE AT WORKERS SCHOOL ON RUSSIAN REVOLUTION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 28.—Moissaye J. Olgin, noted Communist lecturer and writer, is giving a course of lectures on the Russian Revolution at the Workers' School of New York, 208 East 12th street, on Tuesday nights.

The course will consist of ten lectures dealing with the problems of the Russian peasantry, the controversies within the Russian Communist Party, the cultural aspects of the Russian revolution, the theatre in Soviet Russia, modern Russian literature, etc.

Comrade Olgin, who needs no introduction to New York militants, is especially well-qualified to give such a course. While a delegate from the Workers Party to the Fifth Congress of the Communist International he spent several months in Russia studying the problems and constructive achievements of the workers republic. His lectures will treat of vital aspects of the revolution which it is essential to know in order to understand the full significance of the new life that is being built in Russia.

At the next session of the class, on Tuesday, December 30th, Comrade Olgin will deal with "The Problems of the Peasantry in Soviet Russia." This subject should prove of great interest to all workers. The relationship between the peasantry and Soviet government, between the agricultural and the industrial proletariat of Russia, has been one of the most fundamental problems of the revolution. It is necessary to understand this problem to appreciate the achievements of the Workers Republic.

Extensive discussion will follow the lectures, which are given in English. The fee for the course is $2; single admissions, 25 cents.

Remember the date of the next lecture—Tuesday, December 30th, at 208 East 12th Street, N. Y. C.

PITIFUL STATE OF WORKERS IN BERLIN, GERMANY

Dawes Plan Brings Them No Relief

BERLIN, Dec. 28.—The following appeal has been issued by the administration of the City Refuge for the Homeless, in Berlin:

"Day after day, early in the afternoon, the four thousand and more miserable souls in this city who have no place to lay their heads at night begin to gather outside the walls of the city refuge in Hochstrasse; wretched, ragged, hungry creatures, will scarcely enough to cover their nakedness, many of them barefooted; waiting until the doors open.

No Rest; No Food.

"And next morning they must go again on the streets, not knowing whether or not some kind hand will give them a crumb of bread, whether some garbage pail will disclose a remnant of food. One day like another—without rest, without work, without shelter, freezing. Citizens! In spite of your own want, there are others who are in still greater want. Have you not somewhere a bit of clothing which you do not yourselves need, or which you can no longer wear. Thousands would welcome the least rag of clothing. Every small gift is a place on a wound—and there are so many wounds."

When the Dawes reparations plan gets well under way conditions will become still worse. It is feared.

Next Sunday Night and Every Sunday Night, the Open Forum.

PRISON OFFICIALS BAR DEFENSE COMMITTEE FROM SEEING VANZETTI

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 28.—The Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee was refused admittance to see Bartolomeo Vanzetti, on Wednesday, on the grounds that he is insane. Vanzetti has been removed from his cell in the Charleston state prison to th prison hospital. He will be examined by prison "sanity experts."

Reports were being circulated by Charleston prison authorities that Vanzetti "was continually muttering to himself and had barred the door of his cell against an imaginary assailant."

It has not been ascertained whether the prison officials are endeavoring to hold Vanzetti incommunicado on a fake insanity charge, or whether some violence has been practiced on his person, in an effort to hinder the Sacco-Vanzetti defense committee's appeal for a new trial.

Dever Helps Bosses Kindle War Spirit In Illinois Youth

Mayor Dever is co-operating with the Kiwanis Clubs and other 100 per cent employers' organizations in militarizing the youth of the country. Dever has sent a letter to Mayor Bullard of Springfield introducing 100 boy scouts. The scouts are being sent to Springfield in order to try to kindle interest in militarism there. They will be in charge of the Springfield Kiwanis Club.

Mayor Bullard recently acted in the interests of the Illinois Traction company in an effort to induce 500 striking trainmen to return to work.

WILLIAM GREEN WINKS EYE AS LEWIS APPOINTEE BREAKS UP KENTUCKY MINERS' UNIONS

The unorganized miners of eastern Kentucky have many times pleaded in vain to John L. Lewis, president, and William Green, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, the latter recently promoted to president of the American Federation of Labor, to give them aid in organizing the Hazard and Big Sandy coal fields.

They have petitioned the national conventions of the miners' union, they have sent personal letters, resolutions, and petitions to William Green and John L. Lewis. The answer has always been either absolute silence, or an excuse for further delay.

At the convention of the United Mine Workers of America, held in January, in Indianapolis, Local No. 4106, of Fleming, Ky., presented a resolution stating:

WHEREAS, the employes of the operators in the Hazard coal field, embraced in district 30, are at present living in a state of deplorable subjection and oppression at the hands of one of the most autocratic and detestable industrial despotisms in the country, namely, that of the coal operators in that particular field, and

WHEREAS, we have good reason to believe that the employes in that field are discontented, restive and resentful against the autocratic coal barons, who are at present their complete masters, and that they are ready and willing to become members of the United Mine Workers of America whenever the opportunity is presented to them; and

WHEREAS, we can see no valid reason for the inexcusable delay that has been made in attempting to organize the Hazard coal field; therefore be it

RESOLVED, that we respectfully call on our international president, John L. Lewis, to explain to the organization of the United Mine Workers at this coming convention in January, why no attempt has been made within the last four years to complete the organization of district 30; and be it further

RESOLVED, that a copy of this resolution be placed on file and a copy forwarded to our international president, John L. Lewis.

(signed) L. E. WHITEHEAD,
E. M. STAPLETON,
CROCKET STAPLETON,
Committee.

L. U. 4106, located at Fleming, Ky.

Receiving no results from this resolution, the coal miners of eastern Kentucky submitted a petition to the international executive board, addressed to William Green and John L. Lewis, which said in part:

"J. L. Lewis, Pres.,
Wm. Green, Sec.-Treas.,
United Mine Workers of America,
Indianapolis, Ind.

"We, the undersigned, coal miners of the Hazard (Ky.) coal field, district 30, take this occasion to state our needs and grievances to the international officials of the United Mine Workers of America and to the various delegates now assembled in convention at Indianapolis, Ind.; and respectfully request that action be taken thereon.

"We here state that the time was never more ripe for organizing this field, as conditions have become so bad and wages so shamefully low that a spirit of rebellion has been created in the hearts of all coal miners in this section and they are longing for an opportunity to break the chains of bondage that have been thrown around them by the imperialistic coal operators in this field.

"We further state that Samuel Pascoe, provisional president of district 30, to which position he was appointed by John L. Lewis, international president of the United Mine Workers of America, has now held his present position for more than four years and has never made any serious effort to organize the miners in this field, but on the contrary, for some reason, known only to himself checked the organization movement that was in progress at the time he became provisional president; and that on numerous occasions different ones of us have written to him, and others who live in different parts of this coal field have written to him about the organization of this field and he has treated all our letters, petitions, appeals and entreaties with indifference or insolent contempt.

"We further state that we believe it would be extremely to the advantage of union miners all over the country to organize this field, in view of the fact that wages in this field have been reduced to such a low figure that the operators in this field are in a much better competitive position than those of the central and other coal fields which are organized and paying the union wage scale.

"We therefore respectfully request the international officials of the United Mine Workers of America to use all their influence to see that prompt action is taken to organize the men who

PORT WORKERS IN AUSTRALIA FIGHT OPEN SHOP

Stewards Dropped Over Two Lunatics

(By The Federated Press)

SYDNEY, Australia, Dec. 28.—Waterfront workers at all Australian ports have declared a partial strike against openshop methods.

Members of the Waterside Workers' Federation have refused to work overtime—that is between 5 p. m. and 8 a. m.—until the labor agency at Sydney, thru which scab labor is being recruited, is abolished. The motion was carried at meetings at every Australian port. Some time ago, the federal arbitration court had members of the Waterside Workers' Federation should have preference in employment. Notwithstnading this ruling the shipping owners continued to employ non-union labor (principally returned soldiers).

Coal-trimmers have thrown in their lot with the waterside workers, and the decision not to work overtime has been indorsed by the maritime trans port group, the miners, and other key unions.

Trouble has also broken out between the maritime unions and the Australian government in connection with the dismissal of 47 stewards from government-owned steamers and the engagement of nonunionists. The stewards were dismissed because they refused to look after two lunatics being taken from Australia to England. The stewards contended that this was the work of guards and not stewards.

When the stewards were dismissed the union refused to supply any more stewards unless the 47 men were reinstated, and an undertaking given that stewards would not be called upon to do the work of warders.

NEW CAPITALIST DICTATORSHIP IN GERMANY AS ALLIES STAY IN RUHR PERILS DAWES PLAN

BERLIN, Dec. 28.—The refusal of the allies to evacuate Cologne as provided in both the Versailles treaty and the Dawes plan, has created a political crisis in which the present social-democratic government may be overthrown by the workers led by the Communist Party of Germany. To save capitalism again as it has done before under General Von Seeckt, President Ebert will again turn over the nation to a white guard dictatorship and abrogate the German constitution.

This is in line with all previous acts of the German social-democracy. Its acceptance of the Dawes plan, which means the enslavement of German labor, the violation of the 8-hour law and surrender of the national economy to American imperialism, is but the latest of a long series of betrayals of the German workers.

Now the new dictatorship of Chancellor Marx, Foreign Minister Stresemann and Finance Minister Luther, is aimed to suppress any new effort of German workers to break the clutch of American imperialism in alliance with German capitalism upon their lives.

Dispatches from Washington say that great anxiety is felt there, and doubtlessly in Wall Street, over the insistence of the allies to remain in the Ruhr, as shown by yesterday's decision of the council of ambassadors to refuse to evacuate the Cologne bridgehead on Jan. 10 as promised in the Versailles treaty and later pledged in the Dawes plan conference at London.

While the United States officially is "disinterested" in the dispute, as it is not signatory to the Versailles treaty, it is very much concerned in reality, because the additional loads upon Germany thru any added occupation threatened to upset the none to well-balanced arrangement of the Dawes plan, into which American capitalist-imperialism is involved up to the hilt.

The Lamont-Hughes Combine.

With the endorsement of Coolidge and Hughes, the American bankers have put hundreds of millions into the gamble for control of Germany and thru Germany of Europe, on the chance that the ratification of the Dawes plan would "stabilize" European capitalism on the basis of American hegemony thru the Morgan banks. Lamont sat in the London conference with Secretary Hughes just outside the door, both striving to make American imperialism the leader of European capitalism.

Now the prospect of a serious split over the Rhine occupation carries with it the peril of wrecking the whole Dawes scheme.

Continued occupation of Germany by the allies costs the allies not a cent, all expenses of millions of dollars a day are laid upon Germany, which is none too well off as it is. This extra load destroys just so much more of Germany's assets which otherwise could be used for reparations. And if Germany don't pay reparations, then the occupation is continued as punishment. A really excellent arrangement.

A Nice Arrangement.

How good it is (for the allies) may be seen by the fact that so long as France keeps her army in Germany, Germany pays every cent of the expense. But once France brings them into French territory, then France must pay the bill for the army's upkeep.

The Coolidge administration feels that France is performing badly as a beneficiary of Morgan's two loans by finding excuses for continuing the occupation.

These excuses are regarded as very poor, especially the French stories of "concealed arms" in Germany. Washington ridicules the idea that Germany can make war on France.

Fear a Soviet Germany.

Washington—and Wall Street—is a little worried. If the Dawes plan is so sabotaged by the allies that German economy is upset, not only will the American banks be allowed to whistle for their money, but they will have to ask a Soviet Germany for it.

For there is a great fear by Americans capital that the occupation of Germany will provoke the German workers into accepting the leadership of Communists, especially as a concurrent economic disturbance would drive them toward the left and the whole German nation would become a Soviet republic in alliance with Soviet Russia.

BAKERY TRUST ADDS 15 FIRMS TO ITS MONOPOLY

Cushman Interests in 'Monster Combine

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—The monopoly of the baking companies by the Purity Bakeries' corporation was practically completed when 15 plants of the Purity Baking company of Minn., the Tri-state Baking company of Michigan, the Banner Grocers' Baking company of Cincinnati, and the Grocers' Baking company of Indianapolis were merged with the baking trust.

The plants of the companies which have just entered the new merger are located in St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth, Minn.; Detroit, Flint, Jackson and Battle Creek, Michigan; Cincinnati, Columbus, Toledo, Akron and Hamilton, Ohio, and Indianapolis, Ind.

L. A. Cushman, and L. A. Cushman, jr., who control numerous bakeries, are among the directors of the new bakery trust. The Irving Bank-Columbia Trust company, is transfer agent of the stock, and the Central Union Trust company is registrar for the corporation. The controlled companies do an annual business of $10,000,000. The authorized capital stock is $15,000,000 at 7 per cent; cumulative preferred stock $10,000,000 of class A and 500,000 shares of no par value class B stock.

It was announced in Washington that four detectives of the department of justice are investigating the merger. The department of justice has been investigating the International Harvester Co., the U. S. Steel corporation and other trusts since their formation a score of years ago, but has taken no concrete action.

BOSS PRESS IN LIE CAMPAIGN AGAINST CHINA

PEKIN, Dec. 28.—The capitalist press is carrying on a persistant and vicious propaganda against Chinese unity under the camouflage of defending christianity. Great demonstrations are being held thruout China at which speeches denouncing foreign imperialism are delivered.

The Chinese masses are susceptible to Communist teaching and they realize that the missionaries are nothing else but tools of capitalism. The Standard Oil company, for instance, subsidizes several missions and the same is true of every other trust that is seeking to exploit the resources and man power of China.

Capitalism Learns.

A common trick of the bourgeois newspapers and news agencies is to send out fake stories of atrocities committed by military leaders who are not on the payroll of the Anglo-American capitalist combination.

General Feng, for instance, was once a great favorite of the allied imperialists, but he disappointed them. Now, he is represented to be the last word in cruelty. Capitalist correspondents comb the records for inspiration in writing him down as the Chinese Attila.

SOCIALIST LEADER SHOWS HOW TO MAKE HAY WHILE SUN SHINES

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PRAGUE, Dec. 28.—The leader of the social-democratic party of Czecho-Slovakia and the Czecho-Slovakian ambassador to Germany, Tusar, died recently in Berlin. It was discovered that he left behind him an estate which he had "saved" to the value of twelve million Czechish crowns. Five years ago Tusar was practically penniless.

PASHAS LOOKS AFTER CUSTOMERS CONSCIENTIOUSLY

They Become His Friend and Comrade

The record of sub-selling was broken today by George Pashas, owner of the Cozy Lunch Room, 2426 Lincoln Ave. The ease with which subscriptions to the DAILY WORKER sell was demonstrated by Pashas in several morning hours of business. No more than a dozen short, persuasive conversations with as many breakfast patrons of his restaurant netted nine subscriptions to the DAILY WORKER.

The international character of Pashas' patronage is indicated in the nationality of the names on the nine subscriptions blanks. Three were American, one Jewish, one Hungarian, one Scandinavian, one Russian, one Slavish and one French.

What They've Been Looking For.

Pashas said to the DAILY WORKER: "It is in no sense an expression of petty bourgeois pride when I say that the business of my restaurant has, far from suffering, shown a very noticeable improvement since I have been active for the DAILY WORKER. All of my customers are working men. It is no trouble at all to interest most of them in the paper. One of the most common remarks in my place is, 'That's what I have been looking for.' I have sold more than twenty-five subscriptions with a minimum of effort in the past few weeks. I have been convinced from what I have seen here that the DAILY WORKER has a prompt and forceful appeal to the majority of real workers that are introduced to it."

This should give encouragement to those who are taking part in the big Chicago subscription drive for five thousand new subscribers.

It Can Be Done!

Thurber Lewis, manager of the drive, told the DAILY WORKER at his office in Room 307, 166 W. Washington street: "The experience of Comrade Pashas in selling subscriptions to the DAILY WORKER is a real proof of the groundlessness of the belief many of our comrades have that it is a hard job selling a subscription to the DAILY WORKER. Of course, it's hard to sell one to a white-collared office clerk or a one hundred per cent rotarian, but it is not hard to arouse the interest of a real worker."

Dutch Industry to Lose Out in New Iron And Steel Compact

(Special to The Daily Worker)

AMSTERDAM, Holland, Dec. 28.—Creation of a European concern embracing 45 per cent of the world's production of iron and steel, would seriously menace Dutch industry. The Dutch shipbuilding industry has flourished partly because of the cheap foreign iron and steel prices brought about by pre-war competition in Holland. If the new international concern fixes a standard price for iron and steel sold in Holland, it would mean the end of Dutch shipbuilding, steel and iron men here say.

Holland possesses modern blast furnaces, the first two of which were built by the firm of Freyn Brassert and company, located in Chicago.

MEXICO CITY LABOR FAKERS EXPEL BERTRAM D. WOLFE FROM CENTRAL BODY "A LA YANKEE"

By ELLA G. WOLFE.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 28.—The growing influence of the Communists, specially among the peasants of Mexico, the recent affiliation of the League of Agrarian Communes of the State of Vera Cruz, consisting of a membership of 20,000, to the Peasants' International at Moscow, the intelligent propaganda on Russia amongst the proletariat, has so gotten under the skin of the leaders of the Mexican Federation of Labor that Morones in one of his speeches at the Pan-American Congress stated that his organization would stop at nothing in its fight against the Communist elements.

They began to put this threat into effect at the Central Labor Council of Mexico City. Bert Wolfe, active member of the union of newspapermen, was re-elected delegate to the Central Labor Council, a few days ago. The credentials committee reported that his credentials could not be accepted. The reason given was the publication of a series of articles in "El Democrata" one of the metropolitan dailies, in which Wolfe had attacked the Mexican Federation of Labor.

Excuse Number Two.

Wolfe jumped up and asked for the floor. He told those delegates who had not already read the articles, that they limited themselves to the description of conditions in Russia in 1924; that there was not a single attack against the federation, as most of the workers who had read them knew, that the report of the credentials committee was a frame up because they had no proofs of the charges they were making. The committee was stumped!

Excuse Number Two.

Then Alvarez, one of the "inner group" of the federation asked for the floor. He told the delegates that Wolfe was being rejected not precisely for his articles in "El Democrata," that those articles were excellent and very intelligently written, but that Wolfe had published four articles in the state of Vera Cruz, in which he had attacked the federation. Wolfe again demanded the floor, and told the delegates that he knew not a single editor in Vera Cruz that in all his life he had never published a line in that state, and he asked Alvarez to present proofs. Alvarez could not.

Then Wolfe pointed out that he had been a lone fighter for the affiliation of his union with the federation. That it took him six months to convince the newspaper men that only a united front of all workers would make possible a workers' victory. He was also one of the most energetic fighters for his union's affiliation with the allied printing trades; that he had served faithfully on all commissions to which he had been elected; that he had served faithfully as delegate to the Central Labor Council before he went to Russia, and that promptly on his return, his union re-elected him to serve again; that he could see no reason for the rejection of his credentials. The charges against him were trumped up and false, that he appealed the only reason for his rejection the credentials committee was unwilling to state—which was that he is a Communist.

At Last A Reason!

At this point Rodriguez, another of the "inner group," asked for the floor and he told the assembly that that was precisely the reason, that just because Wolfe was a Communist they did not want him in their organization. Then followed a wholesale attack upon Communists in general. That they were being instructed by the Third International to enter all organizations of workers and to break them up; that Communists were police spies, like Lynn Gale; that they accepted money from Soviet Russia to run their propaganda; that they were responsible for Fascism in Italy; that they were also responsible for the failure of the MacDonald government in England; that they were spouting a foreign theory; that Mexico was tired of importations and wanted to develop a nationalist movement of its own; that Communism was all right in Russia, but in Mexico there was no room for it, etc., etc.

To defend himself against all these vituperations, Wolfe again asked for the floor. He pointed out that he was being rejected on charges that had nothing to do with him; that if Lynn Gale was a fool and a coward and turned state's evidence that it had nothing to do with him; that as far as receiving money from Soviet Russia, that Felipe Carrillo a beloved leader of the Mexican federation had received much Russian gold in trying to build a labor movement in Mexico; that Leija Paz, another leader, had also received money for organizing the workers. That as far as importation was concerned that the red and black flag which the federation flaunts so proudly is an importation from Spain; that anarchism is also an importation; that [illegible] is anything which is native [illegible] soil, it is the primitive Communism of the Indian, to which he is clinging so forcefully.

Then another delegate from the newspapermen's union asked for the floor. He pointed out that for an organization that used so many revolutionary phrases, it was a little bit disconcerting to find it trying to expel a member for different political opinions. He proposed a motion to suspend expulsion until such time as the credentials committee could furnish proofs of the charges they were making.

Expulsion "a la Yankee."

The motion was put to a vote. Many voted in the affirmative. The opposition was not counted and the motion was declared lost. Then came the vote on the report of the committee. Out of an assembly of over 200 delegates only 27 voted for the report to expel Wolfe. The chair announced 47 votes. There were many sympathizers with Wolfe but they were afraid to vote. The chair declared he expulsion unanimous.

This is not the first Communist expelled by the "revolutionary" Mexican Federation of Labor. Soria, Communist delegate from the state of Michoacan to the congress of the federation was not seated because he was a Communist. And this expulsion policy will continue and will grow as the Communist movement in Mexico grows in influence among the workers and peasants.

The fight is not over yet. Wolfe will carry the fight back to his union

CANADA MOUNTED COP DOPE SELLER AND UNION FINK

Enticed Girls Into the Opium Habit

VICTORIA, B. C., Dec. 28.—After being employed as a disrupter in the Lumber Workers' Union of this province and later convicted as a dope peddler and enticer of young girls to the opium habit, Frank Eccles, former Canadian mounted policeman, has come back into the business world as an exporter of cedar coffins to China.

Now in Coffin Business.

Last week he shipped some 2,400 cedar coffins to the orient, and announces that he has opened up this business for the selling of B. C. cedar products abroad. The fact that this vile stoolpigeon is enabled to enter the exports business on such a scale is positive proof that between his dope peddling and labor spying activities he has been well rewarded financially.

Also Stoolpigeon.

Eccles was convicted, along with two other members of the mounted police, of having sold dope to young girls and when they refused to purchase from him, planted it on them and then made their arrest. In the trial it was brought out that he was the receiver of "hush money" for protected higherups in the traffic. He also confessed that during 1921-22 he was employed in disrupting the Lumber Workers' Union by fostering the idea of a dual organization among the discontended members.

work in the eastern Kentucky coal fields."

William Green, who has stepped into Czar Gompers' shoes, sent $5,000 to some scabs in Alabama when an explosion occurred two years ago, for which he received cheap notoriety in the capitalist newspapers. But Green has not lifted his little finger to organize the coal miners of eastern Kentucky.

L. E. Whitehead, secretary of the Blackey, Ky., wrote to William Green on Feb. 22, 1924, stating:

"When Samuel Pascoe took charge of district No. 30, in 1919, organizing work was progressing rapidly. The first thing Mr. Pascoe did was to disrupt Local Union No. 4099, of McRoberts, Ky., one of the best locals in Letcher county. He kept up this kind of work on the Kentucky and Big Sandy rivers until confidence was destroyed not only in him, but he destroyed the prestige of good, reliable union men who were trying to cooperate with him.

"Mr. Pascoe may have followed the instructions of the international board, but I do not believe that the policy he put in effect down here would meet with their approval if they were in possession of the facts.

"It should convince the board, if they take into consideration the amount of per capita tax that was paid in before Pascoe began his administration that something has been going wrong in district No. 30 . . .

"There have been letters received in this district which had a tendency to destroy confidence in Mr. Pascoe, as one letter came from the president of the Farmington (Ill.) local, saying he sold out in a congressional campaign, or at least, sold the miners' votes.

"The union men in this district believe it will be of material interest to the organization if the provisions president of this district, Mr. Pascoe is removed.

They Are Building Traps to Defend Property Rights and Are Caught in Them

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, they are burying the dead—mere hunks of burnt flesh and charred bones—the 33 who died in the fire that swept a little white school house, in the Babb's Switch Settlement in Oklahoma.

The living were caught in a trap of their own making. there was but one small door. Wire netting and iron bars at the windows stopped up these exits.

It was a Christmas feast for hungry flames. The clumsy Santa Claus brushed a lighted candle against some tinsel on the gaily decorated Christmas tree and the fire got its start. The dried evergreen was crackling in another second. Then the whole of the sun-dried shack of a school house, similar to thousands of others to be found in rural communities, was ablaze; a roaring furnace. Men, women and children fought to reach the lone exit already choked by others. Thirty-three died, helpless as the rooted trees before the oncoming fire in the forest.

• • • •

The trustees had had the bars and netting put over the windows to bar out intruders. It is declared that it was an effort to keep off "vandals." No doubt that refers to the wandering, homeless tenant farmer, who plods the cotton belt of the southwest; but who must oftimes seek shelter for the night. The property-owning, better-off farmer, who is not driven from pillar to post with each new season, must needs protect his school house against his plundered brother. It is just another slant at the struggle between property rights and human rights. The protectors of property rights prepared the trap in which they were caught, and in which many of them perished.

• • • •

So the great capitalist nations, with their organized governments to defend their property rights, build the traps in which they are caught. Armies are recruited, navies are built, flocks of planes come into being, to protect property rights by land, by water, by air.

Private property begets profits that must be invested elsewhere. Foreign fields for exploitation are sought out everywhere, and the whole world is turned into a tinder box, where the least spark sets off the whole powder magazine; and then comes—WAR; from which there is less escape than was to be found by the men, women and children at Babb's Switch, in Oklahoma, thru the lone, little door in their white school house. Another Serajevo can as easily plunge nations at each other's throats and light the flames of a new and greater world conflict.

Capitalism is building the trap that will destroy it; because the time will come when the workers and farmers of other nations, like the workers and farmers of Soviet Russia, will refuse to go to war and die for their capitalist masters. They will grow to realize that they can even destroy the trap, in which millions are due to perish in the next great imperialist slaughter, if they will only awaken to the danger that even now presents itself and destroy the capitalist social order that breeds world rivalries between nations and spawns world wars.

• • • •

Under any sane social order there is no reason why anyone should desire to vandalize a school house along the rural highway. It should be, under any sane system of life, a public shrine, at all time open to all. So the boundaries that divide nations should be only lines appearing upon a map; not the stalking places for marching armies, maneuvering spots for great fleets; of places to be studied by observers in bombing planes that darken the sky. It is time that the toiling masses realize that in order to obliterate the insanities of capitalism, they must obliterate capitalism itself.

POLICEMAN KILLS A HUNGRY NEGRO BRAGS, 'FINE SHOT'

Shot in Back of Head While Ten Feet Away

Policeman Thomas J. Larney shot a hungry Negro who is said to have snatched a purse from a woman on the stairs of the elevated station at Congress St. and Wabash Ave. Wednesday night.

The Negro was later identified as James Thomas, 6326 Rhodes Ave. Larney pursued him, and when but a few feet away, fired a bullet into the back of Thomas' head. Thomas was left for 25 minutes, dying in the snow without attention, while Larney was waiting for the patrol. Larney stood over the body and laughed and chatted with bystanders about his exploit while Thomas' lifeblood stained the snow crimson. Thomas died in the hospital.

Mario Giordano, assistant editor of the Italian working class daily newspaper "Il Lavoratore," who witnessed the killing, offered to aid the Negro, but spectators refused to allow him to do so. While Larney was poking the Negro with his foot, and smiling at the "wonderful shot" he made, bystanders told Giordano, "If you try to help him, you'll get the same medicine." Giordano suggested that Thomas be taken to a drug store, and that first aid be immediately rendered, but the crowd let the Negro lie twenty-five minutes in the snow without attention of any kind.

Later the report of the affair as given to the papers was that Larney had "fired thru a space between the running spectators, when Thomas was near escape, from 150 feet in the rear." The truth of the affair, declares Giordano, is that the Negro ran only 100 feet in all and that Larney fired when less than ten feet away.

The killing was entirely unnecessary, according to Giordano, as the policeman could have captured Thomas or could have fired at his legs.

WHEN Austen Chamberlain started on his recent European tour, the DAILY WORKER guessed that his main object in visiting Herriot, Mussolini and other lesser agents of the European brigands, was to form an anti-Bolshevik bloc under the leadership of Britain. The prediction is amply borne out by the facts. Immediately after Chamberlain reached Paris, Herriot stated his red rabbit. Mussolini was afraid to start any trouble, he has all he can handle and more. But the kept Balkan nations, like Bulgaria, Roumania and even Albania, hangout for budding capitalists still in bandit stage of civilization, expelled the Soviet legation on the orders of Chamberlain. This proves that the one power the capitalist pirate governments fear more than any other is the mighty workers' and peasants' republic of Russia. With that power they cannot and will not compromise.

PHILADELPHIA COMRADES ACTIVE IN UNIONS; HEALTHY INCREASE IN MEMBERSHIP, PARTY WORK

The city central committee of Philadelphia has arranged a concert and ball for New Year's eve at the Slovak Timberman Hall, 8th and Fairmount Ave. "Clouds" will be the special feature of the concert, which will start at 7:30 p. m. Dancing begins at 8:30 and continues until next year. All Philadelphia comrades and friends will be there to greet the new year. The committee has secured an especially good orchestra to entice even the most ardent leaders of the discussion to do nothing else but dance and enjoy themselves. The admission has been reduced to the unemployment rate of 45c, which will surely induce all our comrades to be present.

The party in Philadelphia takes the slogan of "Bolshevization" seriously and has taken a number of definite steps to put it into effect. The first step towards Bolshevization is education and in this field we have some concrete results already. Three study classes are now functioning regularly. A class in English language is held regularly every Sunday morning. A class in economics every Saturday afternoon and a class in trade union history and tactics composed of active comrades in the trade unions meets every Sunday morning. All the classes meet in the party headquarters, 521 York Ave.

Education Taken Seriously.

The party open forum conducted every Sunday evening at 1628 Arch street is developing into a first class educational institution. By far the most important educational feature is the series of lectures conducted by Comrade Carlson on Wednesday evenings at the party headquarters.

The seriousness with which the party takes these lectures can be demonstrated by the decisive action of the City Central Committee when an effort was made by the District Executive Committee to inject factionalism into this phase of our educational work. A motion was passed to repudiate the factional interpretation and action of the district . . . on this question, the membership was called upon to give full and complete support to the lectures and a motion expressing full confidence in the city executive committee was passed with only one dissenting vote.

The trade union work is improving with satisfactory speed, our comrade recognize the unions as a training ground for efficient leadership, and as the most satisfactory field for carrying on communist porpaganda. The Philadelphia Trade Union Educational League has to its credit the organization of these new unions and is creating a growing prestige in a score of others.

Gain in Membership.

Last eight months show a steady gain in party membership and it is interesting to note that during the four months of local farmer-labor party campaign from April 1st to July the party has gained 27 new members, while during the four months of the Workers Party campaign from August 1st to November 30 the party has secured 127 new members including four new branches and several others are in the stage of formation.

The election of Comrade Max Levine as the Philadelphia DAILY WORKER Agent is the first step towards a drive to raise 500 new subscriptions for the DAILY WORKER in this city.

Lenin memorial meeting at Lulu Temple on Saturday, January 24 will be our next great step towards teaching the workers of Philadelphia the principles and tactics of Leninism. The special feature of this great memorial will be the showing of moving pictures of the funeral of Lenin and the May Day pilgrimage of Communist youth to the Lenin tomb in Moscow.

Initial steps are being taken to organize a huge DAILY WORKER JUBILEE for Saturday, February 7. Philadelphia readers of the DAILY WORKER are requested to look for further announcements on this subject.

MANY JOBLESS BUY OUR POLICY— IT'S UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE!

"If I was working, I would make it a ten dollar policy instead of five," writes William Boyd from Forest Grove, Oregon, as he sends in his greenback to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925. "As the logging camps are closing down for the winter, I am temporarily without a master," he goes on to say.

"Some of us are out of work, most of us have been jobless this fall, and many of us expect to get laid off after New Years; consequently, we can't buy as many policies as we would like to," writes Edwin Peterson from Jamestown, N. Y. He encloses the first collection, adding, "we expect to do better before the campaign is over."

Another comrade writes that, tho he has been laid up for four months with a broken leg and other injuries received from an accident, nonetheless, he has persuaded his Branch comrades to take care of the 50 book of policies sent him. He encloses $25 cash. He is Gus Kirland of Dorchester, Mass.

"Owing to financial circumstances caused by sickness and death in my family, I cannot contribute what I would like, but I enclose $5.00 which was raised in our branch," writes Walter Luhn from Cincinnati, O., of the Herweg Maennerchor.

"Times are not good here so I am leaving for Mexico," A. Heide of Santa Ana, Calif., informs the DAILY WORKER, as he sends in his $5 for a policy

LUMBER WORKERS JOB DANGEROUS RECORDS SHOW

Get Small Pay But Take Long Chances

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Lumberjacks lead in the tragic list of workers who risk their lives for the owners of the world's natural resources, according to figures for 1923 by the Canadian department of labor. The department finds that in 1923 one out of every 176 employes in the logging camps lost his life in producing a profit for the lumber trust.

Heavy Accident Loss.

The department records 153 fatal accidents in the Canadian industry, which employs approximately 27,000 men. It finds that the greatest loss of life is caused by drownings among river drivers, falling trees and accidents in rolling, loading and piling operations.

The 1923 figures published by the departments for industries showing a relatively high accident rate are as follows:

	No. employes	Fatalities	Per 100
Canada 1922	26,950	153	0.567
Logging	13,156	97	.321
Metal Mining	31,838	97	.304
Coal mining	165,635	143	.086
Steam Rys.
Wood and paper	118,463	74	.062
Iron and steel	75,334	42	.055
Chemical	14,055	58	.056
Fishing	57,880	20	.034

These are labor's casualties due to the carelessness about the life of manual workers characteristic of capitalist industrialism.

Big Risks; Small Pay.

Like conscript soldiers, paid 30 pieces of silver to risk their lives in the wars of capitalist expansion, these workers take their chances in the woods and mines and mills for the lowest subsistence wage while the profits go to the master. In the logging camps where the fatality rate is highest, monthly pay runs between $40 and $45 with a few getting as high as $60 a month.

PRESIDENT OF COAL MINERS' FEDERATION OF GREAT BRITAIN ADDRESSES MINERS OF RUSSIA

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW (By Mail.)—The central committee of the All-Russian Union of Miners was addressed on November 8, by Herbert Smith, president of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain and an executive member of the Miners' International.

The speech was made during a visit of the large delegation of British trade unionists to the sixth national congress of the All-Russian Council of Labor Unions. President Smith spoke in part as follows:

"Comrades: According to British customs, I should first address the chairman, but following your custom I address you all. I convey to you the greetings of one million British miners. I came here to become familiar with the conditions and life of the miners of Soviet Russia.

"I believe and think that you all agree with me that all the miners, as well as the workers of other industries, should be organized in one great international union. United we stand, divided we fall. This old maxim of the labor movement is of special value to the workers of all countries today, and particularly to the workers of Great Britain.

"In June our collective agreement expires. In negotiating for a new agreement we shall demand better conditions of labor and life for our miners. However, this will be no easy task. The mine fields are controlled by private capitalists organized in about 1,500 companies and trusts. These companies or trusts have a common center, and they fight the miners in close contact with the united capitalists of our country.

"All sorts of rumors and lies are spread among the British miners about the life of the Russian miners. I am very grateful to the official representatives of your union who have given me quite substantial information on nearly everything pertaining to the work and life of the Russian miners. I thank them in advance also for the supplementary information which they have promised to furnish me shortly. I suppose that the information received by me here may be used in England upon my return.

"I hope to become even more closely acquainted with the life and work of the Russian miners during my visit to the biggest coal fields in your country. I intend to visit the various places chiefly for the following reasons: first, I am myself a practical miner, and have spent 25 years in underground work before I came to be a union official. Second, now and thruout my period of office I spend about two days per week in going down in the mines in order to keep myself in touch with the questions agitating the men and to take the necessary measures. I have a good knowledge of the situation of mining in Great Britain. I desire to learn your conditions in Russia.

"We intend to press for a number of reforms in order to improve the conditions of the British miners, and I want to collect material and information to enable me to benefit by the experience of the miners' movement in other countries, to work out the best possible schemes of such reforms.

"Here in Russia you have moved ahead in some reforms, especially in the matter of insurance and labor protection. For instance, you miners may leave the pit whenever there is an accumulation of about three per cent gas and he is paid full wages. We have no such rules.

"A miner in Russia leaves his work when short of timber, etc., without loss of pay if he finds that things are not in order and that there are conditions that represent a menace to him and to his work. This is a considerable achievement, and it enables you to prevent many accidents.

"The principal cause of England's large number of accidents is the want of proper safety appliances, etc., not being supplied by the private employers who control the mining industry.

"If I can learn in your mines anything that will prevent accidents and how you protect your labor in general, and if the experience gained could be applied even in some measure in Great Britain, my trip to Russia would already be justified.

"However, I would like to become acquainted not only with your achievements, but also with the difficulties standing in your way. I would like to help you in whatever way I might to overcome the obstacles and difficulties confronting you.

"We in Great Britain have been struggling for many years for the nationalization of mines. We base our claims upon the following reasons: First, we hoped thus to facilitate our struggle for safety of labor, for better protection of the miners. Secondly we hope thus to obtain better conditions of labor for the miners, and finally, to produce cheaper coal for general consumption by the masses of Great Britain.

"I intend to tell the international miners upon my return home of everything I have seen here, and particularly of the conditions of labor and life under which you live. I consider it my duty to state that I was particularly favorably impressed by the comradely spirit existing among the workers of Soviet Russia.

"I shall try to get the Miners' Federation of Great Britain and the International Federation to send a delegation to Russia in order to make a thorough study of the life of the Russian miners and to establish the closest comradely relations with the Russian miners.

"The horrors and destruction of war will never be forgotten and our attention must be given to the creation of better conditions of labor and life for all the workers that they may be united in powerful unions, in a powerful international union that would struggle for better conditions for the workers of the world.

"My time is limited and I shall not be able to dwell upon all the problems facing the miners of the various countries.

"Since I have honor of addressing the plenary session of your central committee, where I suppose every coalfield is represented, I consider it my duty to tell you that the British miners have never felt any enmity towards the Russian miners or the Russian peoples; on the contrary the British miners have closely followed your struggle, and are always ready to maintain with you the closest and friendliest relations.

"Please tell this to your miners in my name.

"I hold three responsible positions in the miners' movement, as for instance, the position of the president of the Yorkshire Miners' Federation which has 140,000 members, of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain and of the Miners' International which has a membership of nearly two million miners.

"But since I come in contact with the miners not only of Great Britain but of every other country, I want to assure you that all the miners who are members of our international would be greatly pleased to have you in the ranks of the Miners' International.

"We shall do everything possible to see to it that the All-Russian Miners' Union becomes a member of the Miners' International, if we can agree on policy in the near future, and we shall then fight, together with you for the aims and objects confronting the workers of the entire world."

SIDELIGHTS ON WILLIAM GREEN, A. F. OF L. HEAD

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—William Green, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, is the new president of the American Federation of Labor by choice of the executive council of the federation in special session in New York. Green is the man who led the attack upon William F. Dunne, radical delegate, in the 1923 Portland convention of the A. F. of L.

Duncan Has Grouch.

James Duncan, senior vice-president of the A. F. of L. urged his own claim to succeed Samuel Gompers but did not have his name presented for voting. He resigned from the council immediately. Action upon the resignation is deferred to the Feb. 3 meeting of the council in Miami, Fla. James P. Noonan of the Electrical Workers was chosen by the council to succeed Green on the council.

Green opposed the A. F. of L. indorsement of LaFollette and does not believe labor unions should form a party, is against the A. F. of L. group insurance plan, and opposes the recognition of Russia. He is a Baptist, Mason, Elk, and Odd Fellow. He is 51 and has six children. As floor leader of the Ohio senate he was instrumental in passing the Ohio workmen's compensation law.

FAMOUS MOVIE FILM, "POLIKUSHKA," WILL RETURN TO CHICAGO

The famous story, "Polikushka," by the immortal writer, L. N. Tolstoy, which was made into a moving picture by the Moscow Art Theater, is coming back to Chicago for one evening only. The picture was shown in Chicago at the Orchestra Hall only once last winter. Thousands of workers who were unable to see the picture at its first showing are anxiously awaiting its coming back. The picture will be shown THURSDAY NIGHT, JAN. 15, at Gartner's Independent Theater, 3725 Roosevelt Road, near Independent Blvd. Mark the date on your calender and tell your friends about it.

All friendly organizations are requested to postpone their meetings on that date.

RUSSIAN MOVIES

Four more mining towns, two in Illinois and two in Pennsylvania, have been added to the long list of working class centers where the Russian films make strong appeal. "The Beauty and the Bolshevik" will be shown:

Livingston, Ill., Movie Palace, Jan. 4.

Bentleyville, Pa., Opera House, Jan. 9.

Dalrymon, Pa., Home Theater, Jan. 10.

In the first of these towns one comrade made all the arrangements single-handed and expects success in full proportion to the small scene of action. In Livingston the German fraternal organization, Arbeiter-Krankenkasse, is backing the show. In Bentleyville the Workers Party city central committee has charge of all arrangements, while in Dalrymon the show is run in the $40,000 motion picture theater recently built by the Finnish co-operative.

How Not to Arrange a Movie.

"The Beauty and the Bolshevik," Russian feature motion picture, was ALMOST booked in one of the largest cities in this country. The local committee notified the national office that they wanted the film somewhere around an approximate date and received a reply that while the period had some free dates, many other locals were planning shows during this time—quick action was needed to fix a definite date. The local had something in selling a hall and about five weeks rolled by until one day the national office received a letter stating that a certain theater had been rented for a certain date, all legal permits secured, operators and machines hired—could they have the film?

They could not. Two days previous the same date had been asked for by another, smaller city, before putting a deposit on the theater. The national office gave the date and they went ahead to pay for the theater and print tickets.

Two things are necessary in arranging a film show. First the film. Second the show. Film plus show equals film show. Any locality that wants to run these Russian feature films should find out when and on what terms a showplace can be secured. Then they should notify the national office to find out whether the desired film can be had that day. If the answer is "Yes" they pay deposit, print tickets, start selling, imprint advertising furnished by national office, and get busy. If your local is not yet listed among towns showing "Beauty and Bolshevik" get in touch at once with the Movie Department, International Workers Aid 19 S. Lincoln St., Chicago, Ill.

NEW YEAR'S EVE THE FREIHEIT WILL ISSUE ITS 1,000th NUMBER AND CELEBRATE WITH MASQUERADE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Everybody in New York is going to the Freiheit New Year's eve ball on Wednesday evening, Dec. 31, at the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory.

By everybody we mean everyone in the revolutionary movement, everyone who appreciates the revolutionary militant workingclass paper will be there. No one ever misses the Freiheit Ball.

The Freiheit New Year's Eve Ball is the affair of the season in New York City. This year an additional feature will heighten the festivities. On New Year's Eve the Freiheit will issue its 1000th number.

The Freiheit ball is a masquerade ball. The costumes are always novel gay, inspiring and entertainig. They tell of the struggles of the workingclass under capitalist exploitation, they carry a message of workingclass solidarity and freedom. The Freiheit ball brings out the latest artistic expression of the revolutionary workingclass movement. The costume make this affair an institution in our movement.

The armory was selected for the ball because of its aptitude to take care of the largest crowd. There will be no waiting outside in line. No one will be kept out.

Advance preparations point to this year's celebration as the largest of them all.

Let us this year make our New Year's Ball a memorable occasion! Let us rejoice in true proletarian fashion!

Bring all your friends and sympathizers. As soon as you read this announcement get busy and do not stop until you have told everyone you know about the Freiheit New Years Eve Masquerade Ball!

WHAT HAPPENED TO $75,000?

By MORITZ J. LOEB

NOW that the campaign "TO INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925 is under way, it may be asked: "Why is it necessary to provide for THE DAILY WORKER during 1925? What has happened to the money that was raised to establish the Daily?" That is a legitimate question and fortunately for THE DAILY WORKER and for the party it can be given a glorious answer.

In 1923 the party campaigned for $100,000 with which to establish THE DAILY WORKER. The campaign did not reach its goal but it was decided that we could not wait until the full amount was secured. When it was seen that about $75,000 would be available it was thought possible to go ahead and begin publication.

It was the plan of the central executive committee to establish the paper but the establishment of the printing plant in which to publish was not seriously contemplated. "For," it was argued, "we are sure to incur a tremendous deficit with our Daily particularly at the start. In order to secure the existence of our paper we must hold all possible cash in our reserve fund to provide against this deficit."

Establishing Daily.

But it was soon seen that this was at best an opportunist point of view. To be sure deficits would be incurred. No working-class paper had ever been started without them, particularly no Communist paper. But it was not good communism to use the substance of THE DAILY WORKER to pour into the deficit selve. We must not only establish THE DAILY WORKER, we must provide now for its continued existence. If we use our money to pay off deficits, it will soon be gone and we will have nothing left. Our Daily may die. How may we best secure the future of THE DAILY WORKER? The answer to that question was of the utmost concern to those who were closest to our paper and the answer was soon forthcoming. WE MUST HAVE OUR PRINTING PLANT IN WHICH TO PUBLISH OUR DAILY. That will be the best insurance for its continued existence.

But we didn't have even enough money properly to start our Daily to say nothing of the printing plant. No matter! It must be done. We are not starting a daily to last a few days or a few months. We are here and we are here to stay! We cannot sacrifice the future of THE DAILY WORKER to its immediate desires.

And so one of the first things that was done after THE DAILY WORKER was started was to look about for suitable machinery and a headquarters in which to put it. But here arose another difficult problem which demanded immediate solving. Setting up a printing plant is an expensive proposition. Once set, moving a printing plant is equally expensive. Rents were high in Chicago. Landlords were not friends of the Communist movement. It was soon seen that to rent headquarters for our printing plant was not only to pay the landlord an immediate and heavy profit but also to place ourselves at the mercy of landlords with the prospect of sooner or later receiving a blow at their hands.

The same logic which demanded the purchase of our own printing plant also demanded a building of our own in which to house the plant. There wasn't enough money. Yet it couldn't be helped. In deciding between the future security of THE DAILY WORKER and the immediate ease in getting out the Daily there could be no question of the step which had to be taken.

Purchased Building.

What has happened is pretty well known. We not only have established THE DAILY WORKER but also we have bought a building which houses our Daily and the national headquarters of the party as well. We have established a printing plant which products not only THE DAILY WORKER but The Workers Monthly, The party's Italian Daily, The Young Worker, our Greek Weekly and all of the job and publication printing of the party.

And we have run THE DAILY WORKER for a year with a deficit far lower than we had dared to hope for!

It hasn't been an easy task. Ever since our money has been invested in the machinery and the building it has been a bitter struggle to keep our heads above water. We weren't adequately financed even for the purchase of the many things that were essential. We didn't have the working capital which is so necessary to the operation of so large an undertaking.

Where Money Went.

What happened to the $75,000? It has been invested in the most efficient and soundest investment which our party could possibly make. It has been the laying of a cornerstone of the Communist movement in America, nothing less.

The tale of what happened to the $75,000 also tells the story of the need for the campaign to INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925. We didn't have enough money to start with! There was plenty of misgiving about our ability to keep alive the Daily with so small a sum. But it was never dreamed that so much more in addition could be done.

The whole plan of the party has been to make every penny spent count for the permanence of the DAILY WORKER. And it is the opinion of the writer that if the party membership will now provide the $50,000 to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925, the insurance will be not only for 1925 but until that time when "insurance" will no longer be necessary.

ANTI-CHRISTIAN SENTIMENT RAGES THRUOUT CHINA

Missionaries Branded as Imperialist Tools

PEKIN, Dec. 28. — The religious advance agents of American capitalism as in China are quite worried over the growing sentiment against Christian missionaries, sweeping this country. Christmas day has been selected for demostrations to expose the Christian religions as agencies for foisting foreign rule on the Chinese people.

To Hold Convention.

The anti-Christian elements in Shanghai, arranged for a convention. Students thruout China are taking a leading part in the anti-Christian demonstrations.

Literature branding the missionaries as agents of imperialist powers is distributed. The capitalist press blames Communist propagandists for the literature. The Shanghai police recently raided the local university and declared that evidence of Moscow funds was found.

The raid was inspired by the British autorities.

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

WHY IS THE MINORITY SILENT ON THE THIRD PARTY ALLIANCE?

By EARL R. BROWDER.

IN the minority thesis there are two great gaps, two tremendous silences, which speak louder than words. The minority does not say if our judgment in July, that the farmer-labor movement had been swept into the LaFollette movement, was correct or incorrect. And the minority DOES NOT SAY WHETHER THEY BELIEVE THAT C. I. WAS RIGHT OR WRONG IN ITS DECISION ON THE PROPOSED THIRD PARTY ALLIANCE.

When pressed to the wall on this point, spokesmen for the minority say "That is not an issue." They mean, they wish it were not an issue.

Comrade Zinoviev thought it an issue important enough for him to give it a special section in his report to the Fifth Congress. Following all good Communist practice, Zinoviev reviewed this important decision and rendered judgment as to whether it had proved a good or a bad decision. He said:

"We must also combat some digressions to the right in the American movement; these digressions made their appearance with the third party, the LaFollette party; the tendency to form a common election platform with this petty-bourgeois movement . . . The executive committee decided to oppose these tactics, and as events have shown we were quite right."

This, one of the most important decisions ever rendered for the American movement, was opposed by both the minority and majority. Even after the decision had been rendered and carried into effect, members of both majority and minority expressed themselves as being convinced that the decision was wrong. But experience proved that the decision was right.

The majority, in writing its thesis, thought it absolutely essential that the party must know what our final judgment on this decision was. And we came to the unanimous conclusion that the decision was right. We said so in the thesis. We admitted our previous error.

But the minority is silent. It is neither hot nor cold. It neither approves nor disapproves. It says "this is not an issue."

But the Communist International thought it was an issue. Comrade Zinoviev thought it important enough for a special report. Our party thinks it important to know whether the "digressions to the right" in the American party, about which Comrade Zinoviev spoke, are to be repeated. The party has a right to know what the minority, which asks for the leadership of the party, thinks about these "digressions to the right." But the minority is silent.

The reason why the minority is silent is because the minority wants to lead the American party again into election alliances with the "third party" movement. The minority thinks the C. I. decision was wrong. They want to go back to the C. I. and convince them of their mistake. And that is one of the big reasons why they cling so desperately to the "class farmer-labor party" slogan—it is their means of penetrating the LaFollette party.

The silence of the minority thesis on the "third party alliance" convicts the minority of attempting to perpetuate the right wing digressions of the past year. Their silence is the strongest proof that the party should not entrust its guidance to them. Under cover of phrases of Marxism and Leninism, they want to continue to combat the political line of the C. I., and drag the American party again back into the muck of LaFolletteism from which the C. I. rescued us.

NEW YORK EXPERIENCES

By CHARLES KRUMBEIN.
District Organizer, District No. 2.

IN September, 1923, a conference was called in the name of mostly members of unions (W. P. not mentioned on call) where F. F. L. P. was organized. Delegates from forty local unions, forty-seven branches Workmen's Circle, eleven branches Workmen's Sick and Death Benefit Fund, and eighteen miscellaneous. Fraternal organizations were present, representing about 90,000 workers.

A large representative council was decided upon by the conference. One meeting of this council was called, but only about fifteen showed up. Second meeting was never called. An executive committee of about fifteen was elected—made up of almost all W. P. members.

F. L. P. local New York entered campaign in fall of 1923, putting six assembly and four aldermanic candidates on ballot. (Here allowance must be made for shortness of time.)

During campaign, four indoor meetings were held averaging 250 to a session. Average seating capacity of halls was 900. Speakers were amongst others, Olgin, Gitlow, Lore and Poyntz. Open air meetings few in number. Two leaflets issued in English and Jewish, 50,000 all told. Badly distributed. $1,500 raised during campaign. Expenses about $1500, difference paid from W. P. Of the $342 contributed, $295.00 was from 22 organizations.

Average vote for assembly candidates, 197—for aldermanic, 110. All this happened during administration of the F. L. P. enthusiast, Comrade Lifshitz. From above it appears that membership was not enthused about campaigns. This is an important factor.

Now between 1923 and 1924 campaigns.

Lenin memorial meeting arranged on Feb. 4, 1924. The preliminary arrangements were made by Lifshitz. So lacking was the understanding of united front that he called the meeting in the name of one "Lenin Memorial Committee." 60,000 leaflets, 1000 posters and 19,000 tickets were printed and well distributed on which the W. P. was not mentioned nearly being under auspices of Lenin Memorial Committee. Publicity went out in same name to our own press until my arrival here, when it was immediately stopped and thereafter all publicity that went out was in the name of the W. P. This was called to attention of E. C.

During campaign for June 17 convention, we organized in New York and N. J. F. L. P.'s. This was done using F. F. L. P. Executive committee was called together twice a month with five to seven W. P. members of committee appearing. F. L. P. of New York has organized with ourselves and close sympathizers; those that supported us in recent campaign. N. J. F. L. P. organized on moment's notice, thru instructions from C. E. C. by mail, the result of the conference attended by W. P. branches and four or five outside organizations, none of which were unions.

An incident during conference in Schenectady on May 18, 1924, where New York F. F. L. P. was organized. We were instructed by C. E. C. to affiliate state parties with national F. F. L. P. Purpose of organizing state parties as I understood, was to strengthen F. F. L. P. for June 17 convention. In committee in which I learned that Hopkins, representing N. Y. progressive party, who was there with three delegates would split if we affiliated N. Y. party with F. F. L. P. I was for affiliation, regardless of split, and Hopkins was for it but stood alone in conference of leading comrades. Lifshitz, Lore, Weinstone, Poyntz, and others being against affiliating if it meant a split. Result no affiliation.

Now for the recent W. P. campaign. My understanding of our objective in this campaign was to popularize the Workers (Communist) Party. This, as the facts will prove, we accomplished. First we put the national and state ticket on the ballot. This required 22,000 signatures with a minimum of 100 signatures in each of 62 counties. This cost money, but we raised it. We had one Gitlow meeting, 2000 attendance; two Foster meetings, 6000 attendance; twelve Cannon meetings, average attendance 500; one Olgin meeting, attendance 800. Averaged 30 to 40 outdoor meetings a week during campaign. Six red nights where we concentrated our forces in six different sections of New York City, trucks, red lights, etc., holding six to twelve meetings on each red night. Many of these open air meetings were mass meetings of from 200 to 1200 in attendance. Indoor meetings, best political meetings ever held here.

Nearly one million pieces of literature distributed, included leaflets, pamphlets, posters, stickers and 85,000 DAILY WORKERS. Raised nearly $16,000 for the campaign. $2,222.00 of this was contributed by 25 local unions, 18 branches of Workmen's Circle, 49 branches of Workmen's Sick and Death Benefit Fund and 16 miscellaneous, fraternal organizations. 5500 votes for our national and state tickets and in the six assembly districts where we averaged 197 votes for the F. F. L. P. we averaged 225 votes for the W. P.

In October we took 189 new members which is about 60 more than the average for the last 10 months. Response of the membership, as compared with 1923 campaign, financially, in the distribution of literature, etc., showed that the campaign helped towards building a mass C. P. They were enthused, $16,000.00 proves that, and the party acted as a unit as never before.

We reached the masses as never before and I am sure better than we ever could thru a F. L. P. Many members stated they were glad they could make the fight and not as against than a camouflage as our F. L. P. was known and called by all our enemies. An incident, in one of the large bakers' unions here when the fight took place to endorse the W. P. candidates, it resolved itself into a fight to endorse the W. P. as such which was finally done.

Whoever says we can't go to the masses in our own name, but must use a "false face" in face of the above facts has another guess coming.

Your Policy Must Be
—Buy a Policy—

COMMUNISM VERSUS OPPORTUNISM

By J. G. OBOLONSKY

OUR party is at the cross-road. Its membership has to decide whither it is to go—right, or left; that is, whether it is to work for the creation of a farmer-labor party, or whether it is to get busy rooting the Workers' Party into the fertile soil of class-struggle on the basis of the united front and the immediate burning needs of the workers. Some "minorities" propose to work for the organization of the class-farmer-labor party. So said Comrade Ruthenberg in an article entitled "Is America ripe for a Labor Party" in the Modern Quarterly: at this (St. Paul—J. O.) convention the foundation was laid (?!) for a class farmer-labor party" and further, "The building of a class-(?!) political party is not a matter of a few months or even of a few years. It may be a matter of another five years before there is created in this country a mass political party representing the two producing groups in capitalist society, BUT SUCH A PARTY IS BOUND TO COME." (caps mine J. O.).

Where is the foundation laid at St. Paul? If we drop the policy of bluff and face hard facts then we are bound to get a different picture of the St. Paul convention, in the words of Comrade Foster:

"The situation at St. Paul was this: The elections were approaching and it was absolutely necessary to crystallize the farmer-labor party in order to make or try to make, a campaign under its banner. The situation was difficult, WITH THE LAFOLLETTE FORCES SUCKING THE LIFE OUT OF THE FARMER LABOR MOVEMENT. Consequently the C. E. C. made extreme efforts to hang on to the disappearing masses. In some respects its policy verged into OPPORTUNISM. THIS MUST BE ADMITTED." In true Marxian-Leninist light THIS is a correct analysis of what occured at St. Paul. Foreseeing such a "foundation," the Comintern was a thousand times correct, as against the minority of three on the C. E. C. when it instructed our weak party to drop the dead ballast AND GO ITS WAY. It takes courage to admit mistakes, but Lenin always had it and its high time that our young leadership become also in this sense fully Leninists. So much for St. Paul.

Now as to the building of a "class" farmer-labor party; the logical inference to be drawn from Comrade Ruthenberg's statement that a farmer labor party is bound to come, in other words—it is inevitable, and more than—in FIVE years or so. The inference is—get on the job and start organizing it. Five years is a very small interval of time and if we don't get busy at once it will be too late.

This is another fundamental misconception of the forces operating in the class-struggle in America. It is rather bold to assert at this time that a farmer-labor party will be created in five years, as it is in general incorrect to assert that the coming labor party of the labor party in America is inevitable. At least such utterances need unmistakeable proof and such is still forthcoming from the minority quarters.

As angry as we may be at that petty-bourgeois Messian LaFollette, yet it is only common sense and frankness to admit that the farmer-labor movement—whatever therb was of it that counted—has been most effectively and completely swallowed up by the LaFollette movement.

Most of the wild flights of the minority abstract and pure theorists rotate about their landing field—"correct" thinking in the objective conditions of our present activities as a Communist Party. Simon pure stubbornness disguised as virtue and desire is mistaken for conditions.

They swing in a truly pendulum style. They jump from extreme to extreme. The group that was the "left sick" and paralyzed in 1920 that when it issued a leaflet to the Brooklyn car strikers it issued to them a slogan "to arms" now swung so far to the right that it makes a cut-and-dry division between economic and political activities of the workers and identifies political activities of the working-class with the farmer labor party ALONE, considers the farmer-labor party the ONLY expression of the united front tactic on the political arena and lets the Workers Party appear as a bystander and not as an active participant in the struggle.

The minority conception calls back to life the feebleness developed in our movement thru the necessity to work underground (its negative phase and expression). Contact with workers had to be established thru other organizations, indirectly. Well, we have done away with the underground organization, but the lack of faith in the strength and power of attraction by the Workers (Communist) Party still exists and assumes various forms. The "philosophy" of our underground days still lingers . . . a harmful prestige, a hangover and a hindrance to the free development of the Communist Party and movement, a blind for some and cause for confusion to others.

Said Comrade Lenin: "It is insufficient to be a revolutionary and a Communist in general, but it is necessary to find at each moment that particular link in the chain which one must seize with all his strength in order to hold the whole chain and to PREPARE A SURE TRANSITION TO THE FOLLOWING LINK." What is that link that will keep the chain unbroken at this moment?

The general flow of sentiment, which was the manifestation of a general movement for a labor party in 1922, has been the beginning of a process. The policy of the party then clearly was as follows: "The party must not oppose the coming to life of this power." Since then the process has been consummated; the movement has been completely directed into the channel of LaFolletteism. Never mind the building of boggies, conjuring up ghosts and shoving them to the forefront by some of our comrades,—there is no mass movement seperate and apart from the LaFolette movement now in Dec. 1924. The boss of the "progressive forces" is now carefully laying the corner-stones in his foundation. His strategists have carefully studied the various tendencies that manifest themselves in the ranks of workers and dissatisfied farmers, who in their political immaturity are BOUND FOR DISILLUSIONMENT but not by the minority medicine.

All the delicate slogans of "class," "mass," "class mass," "revolutionary," "class revolutionary," "class mass revolutionary" ad infinitum, will fall on deaf ears; we will deliberately cajole ourselves into a position, where fiery leaflets to northwestern farmers will be most eagerly and effectively distributed on Second Ave. and 8th St., New York City; a party with one of the above titles will be formed of ourselves and sympathizers. Our "pure" agitation for the slogan will result in OUR taking out hot chestnuts of the fire of class struggle and delivering them to our bitterest enemies, to the LaFollette movement. Meanwhile the LaFollette movement will slap us right and left and well (as in the past) neglect the most essential elementary work of building up our young, and very weak Communist Party.

Let us not go for another campaign of draining the life-blood of our infant party, let's admit our past blunders (and if it were not for the decision of the Comintern in the last elections there might have been MORE than three in the then minority), let's learn from our past mistakes how to realistically build hereon. We must leave the utopia of getting to the social revolution on a high white horse by quick route, but rather stick to our reliable fundamentals that our road is hard, windy, and full of obstacles and turns. We must hold fast to our basic principles and ALWAYS hold in the forefront the banner of the only class political party of the proletariat—the Workers Party of America.

There may be advantages for the Workers Party in partaking sometime in block formations with other political groups, yet it is up to the minority to prove that it is correct Marxian and Leninist policy and tactics to CREATE AND BUILD non-Communist, or semi-Communist parties as a general principle, that it is permissable to sneer and scoff at the EXISTING Communist Party, neglect it and have to utter lack of faith in it.

The way of the minority is the SWAMPY way, the one which leads to opportunistic leanings and tendencies. That road is impregnated with "chvostism" and liquidation.

Slogans must be effective to be used. They must either be rallying cries for the mobilization of large masses of workers, or must have the attractive power to bring large masses into action.

The C. E. C. (majority) thesis proposes that the party for the first time in its history gets out of the clouds of speculation, puts it both feet on the class-struggle ground and in true Marxist-Leninist way begin considering ITS manifold practical problems on the economic and political fields.

There is only one party that fights always and everywhere for the interests of the working-class, that has no interests apart from those of the working class and that party is the party of Communism, the Workers Party. The Workers Party under its own name, its own banner, its own program of political struggle, must enter into every battle of the workers against their oppressors, calling for and forming where possible all sorts of united fronts upon special issues, and using every such struggle, whether alone, or in a united front, as instruments for directing and educating workers into the Workers Party and building it into the mass Communist Party that will lead the proletarian revolution in America."

Help Insure
THE
for 1925!

IS IT THE MEASLES? A DIAGNOSIS.

By JOHN J. BALLAM,
District Organizer, District No. 1.

OUR party is now living in its five years old. We are quite lusty, much given to chatter, as is most natural, and to playing of pranks which give the Communist International some concern lest we do ourselves some permanent injury.

But, on the whole growing, running about, and gaining our education thru our own experiences and the examples of our older sister parties of other countries.

In our early infancy, we developed a bad case of "left sickness" which was protracted by the fact that we were compelled to stay in-doors on account of the Palmer raids which deprived us of the proper nourishment furnished by the class struggle and contact with the masses which is the very breath of our nostrils.

Any trained observer might now know that something is the matter with our young party. Of late we have become pale and lifeless. Our "united front food" does not seem to agree with us—we have a slight indigestion together with some hysteria.

Dr. Foster has shoved his finger down our throats and made us throw up the farmer-labor party slogan because Dr. Foster thinks the stuff is indigestible and will kill us if we are given any more of it.

Our quack doctors on the central executive committee are shaking their heads ominously and are all for putting us to bed and closing the windows and keeping us indoors for a long time, or until we get strong enough to play with the farmer-labor party again. The chief rabbi claims that it all came about thru playing with the unclean gentile masses in the farmer-labor party and the medicine men of the central executive committee majority say that if this continues it will not only kill (liquidate) us but, "will spell death and destruction to the Communist movement in America." What a horrible prospect!

When the Communist International specialists take our temperature and diagnose the case I am sure that they will find developing another incipient case of "left sickness" complicated by a little right wing sectarianism and syndicalistic idiosyncrasies. Let us examine the symptoms.

What is the majority thesis? I was struck with the similarity of its slogans and its arguments with those of the "leftists" of 1921. Those who were with me in the fight against the L. P. P. (legal political party) will recognize many of our old arguments in the majority thesis. We were not opposed to the L. P. P. "in principle." We declared that nevertheless, the L. P. P. would "liquidate" our party (read faction). We branded everyone who favored the L. P. P. as liquidators, reformers, opportunists, centrists, social democrats, etc. We raised the cry of "Save the Party." We proposed "something just as good" in place of the L. P. P.—The United Toilers of America (see Foster's LABOR CONGRESS). We announced the "crushing policy" to "relentlessly combat it and stamp it out." But at least we were honest, we were not "horse traders"—we had a homogeneous group—we refused to trade or compromise with any one who did not accept our point of view. We maintained discipline within our own ranks and because of this we were able to accept the decision of the C. I. We recognized our mistakes and openly avowed them like the Leninists that we are. We are now totally immune from "left sickness." We can no longer be caught with the catch phrases of a bastard leftism—especially when they emanate from the mouths of our fifth-thinkers and Centrists.

The majority thesis is so filled with inconsistancies—it is such a hodge-podge that I cannot believe that it was presented for any but factional purposes. It appears to me to be deliberately workable and confuse the membership and to form a basis upon which to unite every dissident element in the party from Katterfeld to Lore and in order to maintain a factional group in power.

On the Horns of a Dilemma

The majority executive committee majority finds itself poised upon the horns of a dilemma. It is interesting to note how they attempt to extricate themselves from it. The majority thesis says;

"At the time when the farmer-labor movement was developing a mass character, moving in the direction of an INDEPENDENT PARTY, it was correct for our party to raise the slogan of 'a farmer-labor party' and participate actively in the movement for it."

Up to July, 1924, this policy was basically workable and successful. This policy must now be discarded and abandoned. Why? Because, says the thesis;

"The formation of a labor party becomes INEVITABLE and POSSIBLE only inasmuch as the economic mass organizations of labor are compelled to join hands for independent political action. But when the LEADERS of these organizations enter into a PERMANENT alliance with the petty bourgeoisie, and when such an alliance receives the recognition of ALMOMST THE ENTIRE ORGANIZED LABOR MOVEMENT, then the question of forming a labor party loses its basic foundation and ceases to be a fighting issue for immediate practical use."

This is a major premise of the majority. I shall prove later that it is not only untenable, but that it is not based upon facts. I shall prove that the minority knows it and that they may find it advantageous ADVISABLE TO RAISE THE SLOGAN for such a party AND ACTIVELY PARTICIPATE in the movement for it." . . . "WE ARE NOT OPPOSED TO A LABOR PARTY IN PRINCIPLE."

The majority thesis concludes by saying;

"Therefore, every attempt by the Workers Party to set up middle-of-the-way bodies to take the place of the Workers Party in the eyes of the masses is in DIRECT VIOLATION OF COMMUNIST PRINCIPLES, and if carried to any length will spell the LIQUIDATION OF THE WORKERS PARTY . . .

"This farmer-laborism opportunistic tendency within the Workers Party means DEATH and DESTRUCTION to the Communist movement in America . . . This tendency must be relentlessly combatted and stamped out." (All emphasis ours. J. J. B.)

Here you have it. Reconcile these statements if you can. Let us reduce the arguments of the majority to a syllogism:—

Major premise: Any middle-of-the-road party set up by the Workers Party will liquidate the Workers Party;

Minor premise: The labor party is a middleof-the-road party.

CONCLUSION: THE LABOR PARTY WILL LIQUIDATE THE WORKERS PARTY.

Does the majority believe this? They are not opposed to a labor party IN PRINCIPLE. The party becomes INEVITABLE when the economic mass organizations of labor join hands for independent political action. The majority will again raise the slogan of "a farmer-labor party" when the development of the class struggle creates an ENVIRONMENT for it and they will ACTIVELY PARTICIPATE in the movement for it. But, they say, the advocacy and formation of a middle-of-the-road labor party by the Workers Party means the LIQUIDATION of the Workers Party and DEATH AND DESTRUCTION to the Communist movement. Therefore, the Foster-Cannon-Bittelman group declare that they are ready to LIQUIDATE the Workers Party and to destroy the Communist movement whenever the LEADERS of mass economic organizations become ready to organize a middle-of-the-road labor party. Who are the liquidators? Could rank opportunism go further? Could factional bitterness and personal hatreds lead sane men further astray? Could a graver misconception of the united front tactics be imagined?

But this is not at all. THE CLASS STRUGGLE IS THE POLITICAL STRUGGLE. Even syndicalists may come to recognize this Marxian fundamental—"in principle." While waiting for the masses themselves to join hands for independent political action, our precious majority is compelled to recognize the need for some substitute for the farmer-labor party slogan. The majority thesis states the problem thus:—

"At present the MAIN OBJECTIVE of our united front policy is to start a movement from below to compel the so-called labor wing of the LaFollette movement to break its alliance with the petty bourgeoisie and to win the masses to the class struggle and to the leadership of the Workers Party."

"At present the MAIN STRENGTH of LaFollettelism and consequently the main danger to the class struggle comes from the ideological hegemony of LaFolletteism over the minds of LARGE SECTIONS of the WORKERS and POOR FARMERS. We must therefore concentrate our energy to expose and defeat the petty bourgeois influence of LaFollettism in the labor movement."

How?

By " . . . putting up against the LaFollette party the Workers Party."

And is this all? Only "opportunists" could ask for more. But the majority thesis proposes much more. Listen:—

"As the working masses gain militancy and aggressiveness the situation will become ripe and the necessity urgent for a general mobilization of all the forces of labor for a concerted struggle against the triumphant capitalist reaction. The working class will then feel the need of a UNIFYING CENTER for LEADERSHIP and DIRECTION and a GENERAL LABOR CONGRESS elected by the rank and file of labor in the trade unions and in the shops and amongst the unemployed will become the best means FOR THE UNIFICATION of the struggles of labor. It is the duty of the Workers Party to IMMEDIATELY begin to popularize the idea of such a LABOR CONGRESS." (emphasis mine J. J. B.)

A unifying center for leadership and direction! We had thought that the Workers Party was such a unifying center and that nothing else could replace. Is it possible that our majority "patriots" are losing faith in the Workers Party? Or—horrible thought—does Foster propose a dual union? Another T. U. E. L.? Is Foster getting ready to liquidate the T. U. E. L. in favor of a GENERAL LABOR CONGRESS? Who will come to the GENERAL LABOR CONGRESS called by the Workers Party? Will the big international unions send delegates? Will we gather together more than we did in the F. F. L. P. Conference? Will Foster launch his own LABOR PARTY in his GENERAL LABOR CONGRESS? Come out with it, Comrade Foster, the whole party is breathlessly awaiting more particulars about your LABOR CONGRESS.

And is this tenuous LABOR CONGRESS the only substitute that the majority have to offer in place of the farmer-labor party slogan? Oh, no! Listen:—

"As the class struggle develops and our campaign against LaFolletteism progresses there will be found in a number of LOCALITIES organized LABOR BODIES ready to break their alliances with the petty-bourgeoisie and to enter the election campaigns as LABOR ORGANIZATIONS. It will be the duty of the Workers Party to secure the support of these labor bodies for the Workers Party. Wherever this is IMPOSSIBLE because of the immaturity of the masses, the Workers Party will propose UNITED LABOR FRONTS for election purposes. In proposing whether such united fronts will be carried on under the auspices of LABOR CONGRESSES, COUNCILS OF ACTION, LABOR PARTIES, etc., the Workers Party will be . . ."

Try as our majority may to conceal and to hide from the farmer-labor party slogan. They are like men spitting into the teeth of a gale—the wind drives the spit back into their faces. All their syndicalistic substitutes for a farmer-labor party amount to the same thing. They can't get away from it. The farmer-labor party slogan is with us because it is inherent in the present movement of the poorer farmers and workers in their attempts to break away from the republican-democratic party of the big bourgeoisie and in their attempts to find a common basis for independent political action and struggles against the capitalist class as a whole. It is the rapid development of the class struggle will forestall the actual establishment of a farmer-labor party in America and that thru the operation and effects of the Dawes plan an intensive economic and political crisis may drive the workers into extensive revolutionary activity. In such periods the working class learns more in a few months than in years of ordinary struggle and in such a revolutionary epoch the Workers Party will know how to raise the slogan of "ALL POWER TO THE WORKERS." But we are writing of no such impending crisis and there is no such impending crisis on the immediate horizon.

Therefore the slogan "for a farmer-labor party" remains potent to mobilize the workers for independent political action and to break the hegemony of the petty-bourgeoisie over the poorer farmers and workers—the quicker them into class political action for their immediate demands and to draw them closer to the influence and leadership of the Workers Party. Our party will be the only party or organization which can or will raise this slogan. The slogan "for a farmer-labor party" will become a COMMUNIST slogan since the socialists, the progressives, the petty bourgeois politician and their labor lieutenants, the reactionaries of all stripes, will oppose and denounce it. Under this slogan we will be expressing the hopes, the sentiments, the aspirations of millions of workers and poor farmers, organized and unorganized, and by this means we will penetrate the ranks the most advanced, the most developed and the most revolutionary elements.

In this movement the Workers Party remains intact, spreading its Communist propaganda among all its sympathizers and adherents in the united front political movement; maintaining close contact with all working class elements in the united front, criticising the reactionary rightwing leaders, pushing the vacillating center more to the left; always holding aloft the red banner of the Communist International, and continually pointing the way to the proletarian dictatorship and the Soviets as the ONLY MEANS of abolishing capitalism and capitalist rule.

Let us go back for a moment to

MY POSITION TOWARD THE FARMER-LABOR MOVEMENT

(Article I.)

By LUDWIG LORE.

IN view of the veritable landslide of articles concerning my attitude, past and present, on every question of importance to the Communist movement in the last four years, I feel that I owe it, not only to myself, but to the party membership, to outline, as briefly as I can, considering the number and nature of the charges against me, my party activity and the point of view from which it has been undertaken.

I regret, Comrade Lovestone's minutes to the contrary notwithstanding, that the majority and minority theses were not submitted to me by the national secretary for my vote until a very few days ago, long after they had become party property, and the discussion well on its way. I am, however, of the opinion that the issue that has been thrown into the forefront of the party discussion is an artificial one, an issue that has neither foundation nor life in the labor movement at the present time. As to its purpose, there can be no doubt. In spite of the distinct instructions of the Communist International that the majority and minority groups adjust their differences, the hatchet has not been buried. The minority group is a frank aspirant for power, and is determined at all costs to find an issue, be it ever so flimsy, upon which it can base its unmitigated opposition to the present administration.

Why a Farmer-Labor Party?

One of the fundamental tenets of the Communist movement has been, that the masses must become imbued with the significance of the class struggle, not merely by propagandistic political and educational endeavor, but, above all, by active participation in the class struggle on the political as well as on the industrial field. Obviously, therefore, it becomes the duty of the Communists to participate in every working class movement that has for its premises the maintenance of the interests of the working class against that of its exploiters, whether this movement appear on the industrial field, as a labor union, or on the political field, as a labor party.

I am convinced that, in America, the labor party will come. Not immediately. On the contrary, it will come into being only after a slow and torturous process, only after the poor farmers and organized labor have been betrayed again and again by leaders of the third party, LaFollette type. I am convinced that 1928 will see third parties in a number of states—Minnesota, the Dakotas, Nebraska, Washington—perhaps even nationally in some form or other. Out of these third party movements, themselves primitive, a left wing will develop that will become the nucleus for a real, class conscious labor party movement in the future.

Where Will We Stand?

Whether, when that time comes, the Communist movement in this country will fight or support this movement will depend entirely upon the strength that we, ourselves, will have attained. If our party shall have been successful in gaining a firm foothold in the masses, it will have to take up the fight against the reformistic aims of the labor party movement. If, on the other hand, and I consider this much more likely, the Communist movement still consists of only the most advanced part of the working class, we will not only have to support the movement, but do everything in our power to become a part of it, if this can be achieved without losing our identity.

The growth of the Communist movement in a country whose working class, like ours, lacks every vestige of political interest and understanding, will be slow. The American worker is an individualist, is incapable of seeing the larger aspects of any question of national importance. Contrary to the current impression, the American has no revolutionary tradition, and the democratic illusion still holds and will hold him in its grip so long as a certain degree of economic success can still be won by personal and individual endeavor. He will always be ready to support reformers, men who like Roosevelt, Bryan, Hearst or a LaFollette take up the cudgels against big capital to give the little man a chance to aspire to a place in the sun.

Our work in the labor movement, therefore, will be, for years to come, to go hand in hand with the industrial labor movement in its struggles, to force it to take up a more energetic fight against the capitalist class, and so doing to bring into being the political class consciousness that must exist before a labor party movement, in which we can participate, can come into existence.

In the meantime we will educate the advance guard in the labor movement, those who will listen to our message and help us in our work, to a clear understanding of the inevitability of the social revolution and the methods and weapons with which it can be successfully brought about.

The Communist movement can do this, however, only if it understands that it must participate in all struggles of the working class; that it must be the leader in these movements. The recent decision of the central executive committee to carry on an active campaign in support of the child labor amendment, is a case in point. Here our party supports not only the minimum made possible by the constitutional amendment, but demands state responsibility for the child's education and welfare up to the 18th year, as determined by federal legislation.

The Majority Thesis.

Taken as a whole I agree with the majority thesis. The farmer-labor movement is dead and is not likely to awaken to a new existence for years to come. My differences with the majority conception on the question of the farmer-labor party are differences of emphasis rather than of fact. While I maintain that our support of the class farmer-labor movement was not accidental, but part of our fundamental Communistic conception, I believe that any attempt to resuscitate the deceased class farmer-labor movement at the present time can and will result in confusion and resentment against our movement.

The Minority Thesis.

While the minority evades the question of organizing a new edition of the federated farmer-labor party, it stands committed by its own thesis, to this program. One cannot actively engage in a campaign for a theory and refuse to put it into practice. There can be but one alternative. Either we believe that there is at present in existence a distinct and numerically significant movement for the creation of a party of labor and farmers along class lines. If that is the case, it is the duty of the Communist movement to support it and to augment its growth. If, on the other hand, this movement has dwindled into nothingness, it is not our duty artificially to recreate it.

The experiences of the past year have shown us the danger of the position that the minority is taking. The very laudable desire to apply theses and theories to actual conditions, leads to attempt the organization of farmer-labor groups wherever this was humanly possible. Whatever our aims may have been, the fact remains that, with very few exceptions, the state farmer-labor party organizations were artificial bodies created by our party with the help of organizations influenced or controlled by our own members. But a peculiar quirk in the human mind makes us see favorable conditions, once we have based our program of action upon certain premises, even where these do not exist. The result is a policy of self-deception, such as could have been observed in our party even after the June 17 convention, when some of our leaders maintained in DAILY WORKER articles that there was a clear division between the farmers at St. Paul who went with LaFollette and the workers from the industrial states, who maintained a class program and adhered to the leadership of the Workers Party. And yet we all knew then, as we know today, that the latter, practically without exception, represented makeshift bodies of Workers Party origin. So far did we go in this policy of mutual self-deception that an attempt was made at that time to convey this obviously false impression to the comrades in Russia.

The Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

In one of his articles, Comrade Cannon refers to the fact that I supported the federated farmer-labor party at a time when the present majority opposed it. This was undoubtedly the case. But a brief review of the history of our activity in the unfortunate federated farmer-labor party venture will show that the minority is right when it "refuses to have Lore pinned to its coat lapels." At the Chicago convention where the federated farmer-labor party came into being, the Comrades Foster, Ruthenberg, Manley, Lovestone and myself had been appointed by the central executive committee to act as steering committee. Comrade Pepper had insisted upon my membership on this committee, and I had accepted very unwillingly. It is not generally known that I strongly objected to the decision that brought about the rupture between our followers and the Fitzpatrick-Nockels-Buck group, i. e., the decision to instruct the organization committee of the convention to bring in a full plan for the organization of a farmer-labor party on a national scale. The steering committee persisted in its course even after Buck had twice pleaded with the convention and with our group that the motion be withdrawn, stating that they would not stand for this thing that was being rammed down their throats. I insisted upon a special meeting of the steering committee after I had approached the members of the steering committee. In vain. I am still convinced that the split that placed us in so disadvantageous a position and that prompted the present majority to abandon the federated farmer-labor party almost at birth, because it feared the active opposition of the trade union movement, should and could have been avoided.

The opposition of the present majority to the federated farmer-labor party was obviously not based upon theoretical opposition but upon a very understandable desire to leave well enough alone. Certainly its opposition to the federated farmer-labor party offers a very poor basis for the "holier than thou" attitude of this group, especially in view of its more recent (LaFollette) past.

I believed, while I recognized the gravity of the situation that our headlong action had precipitated, that it would nevertheless be possible to keep the federated farmer-labor party alive. At two central executive committee meetings I moved to send out trade union organizers to bring local unions into the new party. Hundreds of local unions would have joined if an honest attempt had been made. The motions were adopted but never carried out by the present minority, then the majority, in spite of its present enthusiasm for that policy. Again, at a later central executive committee meeting (unfortunately I have not Comrade Lovestone's easy access to central executive committee minutes), a program for immediate action for the federated farmer-labor party was adopted, consisting of three labor and three farmer demands, which were to be submitted to a special session of congress, for which an energetic campaign was to be waged, counteracting Senator Brookhart's propaganda for the immediate convocation of congress. The program was endorsed by the executive council of the federated farmer-labor party with all against one vote—and there is ended. The present minority, which is so anxious for mass action, played hookey with its friends of the executive council of the federated farmer-labor party, and the entire program was forgotten. Inquiries at later central executive committee sessions for a report on action undertaken brought no response.

It would have been possible at that time, in my opinion, to build up, not a gigantic movement, it is true, but a movement that would have enabled us to galvanize large sections of organized labor into political class action, to establish for the revolutionary working class a sphere of influence that would have given it a broad field for active work, had it not been for the open opposition of the present majority and the sabotage of the present minority and the national office. There is many a true word spoken in jest. Perhaps the remark made by an active supporter concerning a minority member, that "he is afraid that MY party may become bigger than HIS party" came pretty close to he truth.

But what was possible at that time, is possible no longer. We who did our honest share of the propaganda work in the labor organizations before and after the Chicago convention, we who visited the industrial and fraternal organizations and—I speak pro home in this case—we who worked night after night for months preaching the necessity of political class action and the united front, and succeeded in arousing sympathy and understanding that could have been crystallized into affiliation—we know the mistrust and ridicule that meets us today, whenever we try to repeat this performance.

When immediately after the St. Paul conference I realized the impossibility of continuing to form fake parties, I insisted, that our work lies for the present in the building up of the Workers Party and briefly outlined this policy last June at a district No. 2 membership meeting, to the open horror of Comrade Foster, who regarded this opinion as rank heresy In spite of the verbal slaughter that followed, the central executive committee, hardly more than two weeks later, took the same position and by nominating Foster and Gitlow, led the party, after two years wandering in the wilderness, back into a period of constructive Communist work.

where the majority thesis claims that the leaders of the mass economic organizations of labor have formed a PERMANENT alliance with the petty bourgeoisie and that this alliance has received the recognition of ALMOST THE ENTIRE ORGANIZED LABOR MOVEMENT.

Even if this were so it would make more imperative than ever before the necessity of raising the slogan of a farmer-labor party for independent class political action in order to mobilize around our banner the militant left wing and split them away from the third capitalist party movement and to discredit their class collaborationist leaders in all working class organizations.

BUT IT IS NOT TRUE. The official leadership of the mass economic organizations of labor are in alliance with the republican-democratic party of AMERICAN IMPERIALISM thru the "non-partisan" policy which was reaffirmed at the El Paso convention of the A. F. of L. They are against the THIRD PARTY and against the LABOR PARTY. They are in favor of the Dawes plan, the American Legion and imperialistic war; they are against recognition of Soviet Russia. The A. F. of L. and the reactionary unions are the allies of American imperialism on every count.

The Majority Policy in Practice.

Here in Massachusettes we have had the opportunity to see how the majority thesis works out in practice. The C. P. P. A. convention was held in Boston December 14. About 30 of our comrades were elected from their unions and fraternal organizations to the C. P. P. A. conference. If we were working under our old united front policy we could have had at least 30 more. The big reactionary A. F. of L. unions and the R. R. unions were not represented. None of their leaders were present. All our comrades and many of their fellow delegates were instructed to vote for a farmer-labor party. A general membership meeting of the Boston T. U. E. L. voted unanimously in favor of raising the slogan of a farmer-labor party in the C. P. P. A. As the party D. O. I was compelled to oppose the motion and uphold the C E. C. We received instructions from the national office to fight the resolution for a farmer-labor party in the C. P. P. A.—to introduce our own resolution for the W. P.—and when defeated to WALK OUT OF THE HALL. No resolution for a farmer-labor party was ever introduced in the C. P. P. A. by the socialists or any one else. Delegate after delegate representing labor unions took the floor and spoke for independent working class action and a labor party. We sat quiet. We never got a chance to introduce our resolution—and after making a statement our comrades walked out. If we were not operating under the majority policy of abandoning the united front slogan of a labor party we could have won the support of a majority of the delegates against the socialists who controlled the convention. We could at least have split on the issue of a labor party. As it was about 15 of our comrades walked out the hall and the rest of the delegates didn't know what in hell we were driving at—they simply could not understand us. Our delegates are ashamed to report to their unions; our candidate for the Joint Board of the A. C. W., who occupied that position and was a delegate to the C. P. P. A. instructed for a labor party has just been defeated in his union on this issue. We missed an opportunity to fight for the working class as COMMUNISTS and against LaFollettelism. The socialists and the left wing delegtes laughed at us: WE RAN AWAY FROM THE FIGHT; WE RAN AWAY FROM THE ISSUE:

AND THE ISSUE IN THE MASS. C. P. P. A. WAS THE FARMER-LABOR PARTY vs. LAFOLLETTE THIRD PARTY!!

This is DEFEATISM with a vengeance. THIS IS THE POLICY NOW PUT INTO ACTUAL PRACTICE BY THE C. E. C. MAJORITY AND WHICH THEY ASK THE MEMBERSHIP OF THE PARTY TO ENDORSE.

The majority of the C. E. C. has by putting its policy into immediate effect over ridden the decision of our last convention; they have flouted the program of our party; they violated the decisions of the Communist International.

I call upon all comrades to thoroughly defeat them in the next convention.

Break the unholly alliance between the leftists, the syndicalistic center and the Lore right wing. Support the "Old Guard"of our party. Help develop our party into a real mass Communist Party under a Marxian-Leninist leadership. Vote for the MINORITY thesis; elect delegates to the City District and National Convention who will support it.

I believe that our party is not sick, but full of the contrary it is healthy and growing. I have absolute faith and confidence in our membership and in their Communist understanding to enable them to see thru the majority shams, their fake leftism, their syndicalistic vagaries, their silly inconsistencies and that the comrades will decisively defeat them, thus saving our party the loss of one golden year in its development towards the realization of a mass Communist Party in America.

Chicago Greek W. P. Branch Supports Majority Thesis

The following resolution was adopted at a meeting of the Greek Branch of Chicago, Dec. 25, 1924.

Resolution

"The Chicago Branch of the Greek Federation of the Workers Party, after careful and practical discussion of both C. E. C. and minority theses, declares itself for the thesis of the C. E. C. majority as the only correct and practical Communist policy which our party must follow, and recommends to all members of the federation and all members of the party to support the thesis of the C. E. C. majority."

For the majority 12. For the minority 8.

MAKE THE MILITANT PAGE WORTH $20,000 TO THE DAILY

Party Members, Branches, Party Officials Can With a Little Effort Make the Militant Page the Feature of the Year.

By ALFRED WAGENKNECHT.

We are for a militant party. So are you. Together we must help build that kind of party, a fighting party for which no task will be too difficult.

In the forefront of a fighting party stands its press. It leads the party in thought and action. It cements the party, centralizes it. It gives the party life. The party press, as Lenin said, is to the party what scaffolding it to a building. Upon it the workers stand, handing material to other workers with which the building, the party, is built.

We have by all ways at our command tried to impress the party membership with the need of safeguarding the DAILY WORKER. The Central Executive Committee has passed a series of motions in connection with this campaign which ought to have stirred every party member to action.

Either we INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925 are we run the risk of having to retrench. And who wants to retrench? Who wants to vote for enforced economies which will decrease the power of our daily?

A test for the party membership and branches has been decided upon. The DAILY WORKER will be one year old on January 13. Upon this date a beg red special edition of the DAILY WORKER will be issued. It will contain 12 pages and will constitute a document which should become part of the library of every revolutionist.

In this big special edition will be featured the PAGE OF MILITANT BRANCHES. This MILITANT PAGE will be the roll call of the red branches of the Workers Party. And because it is a test of our militancy, we earnestly hope that EVERY party branch will have its name engraved upon the MILITANT PAGE as a sign of its Communist understanding and determination.

The district organizers, federation secretaries, federation editors and the city central committee secretaries can help in this attempt to register every party branch in the insurance campaign—in fact, must help. Every party official must give this thought and action.

The name of your branch will be printed upod the MILITANT PAGE of the big special issue only if your branch repaits for insurance policies sold before January 8. There is only one more word to add—and that is, REMIT.

Douglas Park English Branch on Record for The Majority Thesis

After thoro discussion of the party policies at three consecutive meetings set aside for this purpose only, the branch went on record in favor of the majority thesis. Lithuanian Branch No. 2 Overwhelmingly for The Minority Theses

The Workers Party Lithuanian Branch, No. 2, in its regular meeting Dec. 18, with Comrade George Maurer present, who was given unlimited time for the discussion and, supporting the majority theses, criticized the minority theses and its leaders Ruthenberg, Lovestone and others, and after the considerable discussion voted almost unanimously for the minority. Only two comrades did not vote but even these expressed that the minority theses was the better of the two. The following motion was accepted:

"The Workers Party Lithuanian Section Branch 2, in its meeting on Dec. 18, after hearing Comrade George Maurer report on the majority C. E. C. theses and after thorough discussion of both the majority and the minority theses almost unanimously voted for the minority.

"We are fully convinced that the minority's position is much better more practical to go to the masses of workers and poor farmers and thus to build our party, the Workers (Communist) Party in America."—Organizer V. V. Vasys.

Detroit Workers to Welcome New Year at House of the Masses

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 28.—The real New Years Eve event in Detroit this year will be staged in the House of the Masses, 2646 St. Aubin, when the Workers' Educational Association will be giving its annual international costume ball.

This annual affair always attracts, and this year the arrangements committee has promised a program more elaborate than ever before. Something will be doing in all the House halls.

Dances in national costume will be given at odd times thruout the evening. Solo and group singing will also be featured. Russian "Chi," Turkish coffee, and Bulgarian pastry will be served by girls in respective native attire, and our Greek and Armenian comrades will serve one of their famous dinners. Anyone attending who fails to enjoy himself on this occasion will be turned over to the Uffa Uffa Imps for treatment. Admission is 50 cents.

Cleveland, O., Jewish Branch on Record For Minority Thesis

CLEVELAND, O., Dec. 28.—The Jewish Branch of the Workers Party of Cleveland, after thoro discussion of both thesis unflinchingly endorses the minority thesis as the one pointing out correct tactics and policies to pursue for our party in order to develop and build our movement as a mass Communist organization.

Why "River Work" in China?

By a "stroke of the pen" President Coolidge has given the imperialist business interests of the United States just 14 more warships. With the same pen, very likely, he signed a letter to the Federal Council of Churches "assuring" these anxious followers of the lowly Nazarene, that there was "no strike" whatever between America and Japan, and that all was favorable for a future of peace and brotherly love.

But we have warships for war, not for peace. Furthermore, by the signing of the naval construction bill appropriating $110,000,000 for eight new scout cruisers and six gunboats, we are getting some warships—for they are not "peace-ships," but warships. Incidentally, we are, under the bill, going to "modernize" the old warships we have. All in the name of peace and brotherly love.

But in the official news statement given out at Washington, we come across a rather amazing revelation of the uses to which these nice new gunboats are to be put. It says, "The gunboats are urgently needed to replace antiquated shallow draft ships for river work in Chinese waters."

Now to the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ it will probably appear quite strange and accidental, so to speak, if, after these gunboats are built and are, by the magic carpet of the House of Morgan, wished into the rivers of China, that our "national honor" or the "lives of missionaries" or any other fair sounding excuse, gives them the chance to bombard the inhabitants of China, or—more than likely—the Japanese who have taken control of some parts of China.

But to the revolutionist, to the Communist, it will be no accident. The fact that the American government openly acknowledges long before the event, that it is deliberately going about the work of building gunboats to trespass upon the sovereignty of the Chinese nation is only a central fact of a series connecting up the process of imperialist expansion of Wall street.

Not only the necessity of new markets for manufactured commodities—the commodity surplus is reduced to a minimum in the age of monopoly—but the need for a market for surplus capital, which in turn calls for strict control over the terrain of the debtor nation to insure the safety of the principal and interest—all these call for warlike preparations. This is why we have the appropriation for $110,000,000 new warships. They are aimed to insure a return of super-profit from imperialist business far larger than this modest sum.

That is why we see President Coolidge, after assuring the good Christians that no war is in the offing, issuing a statement that "gunboats are urgently needed for river work in Chinese waters."

Educating the Chinaman

Havelock Ellis once said that China was the most civilized of any nation on earth. Certainly China has a cultural history that, in point of time, compares with our own like a sage with a child. And perhaps the comparison will hold in other respects as well. It is very possible that our notion of China's backwardness is due to a perverted view engendered by a complacent satisfaction with our own artificial and stimulated sense of "superior" western culture.

But however old and traditional the culture of a people may be, world economy has a very material way of paying no attention to it. Western imperialism takes the same attitude towards strange idols as Tamerlane. Nor is it in other respects any the less brutal than Tamur and his golden horde. The difference is that Tamerlane's Mongols went about their rapacious business with commendable unhypocrisy. Western imperialism destroys with a smile of pious justification.

Our troops went to China years ago ostensibly to suppress the Boxers. What they did was to give America a commercial foothold and come away with $14,000,000 indemnity in the bargain.

Last year, congress was overwhelmed with an exaggerated feeling of it's own generosity. It decided to give the money back. But not to the Chinese government. It gave the money, or rather, returned it, for "educational purposes." A special commission, headed by an American, of course, was set up to see that the fund was used for educational purposes only.

That was the best investment the U. S. government has made in years. Educational appropriations are always the best kind of propaganda capitalism can buy. That fourteen million was calculated to help "Westernize" China. The more China is westernized the more fit it becomes for capitalist exploitation. A people imbued with the tradition and culture of Old China make poor factory slaves. They must be "educated."

But there is another kind of "education" seeping into China from another direction. There is a culture more agreeable and more easily assimilable growing on the great steppes to the North. It is a race. It is a race that is already showing bad signs for Western capitalism. The Soviets are very popular in China.

Walk Right Up and Ring the Bell

Above all, rebels should not have inferiority complexes. Rebel training is directed as much against this complex as against mental confusion. And there is a certain connection between the two that we don't now wish to take the time to go into. But we can all be agreed that such states of mind have no place in a rebel movement.

If we are rebels, we have got to talk rebellion under all possible circumstances. We have got to speak our minds about capitalism on every occasion that presents itself. Those are propagandists who are not afraid to talk.

Something that gives an excuse to talk propaganda is something that is appreciated and taken advantage of by the real rebel. That something, for one, is the DAILY WORKER.

At this time, in many cities of the country, the DAILY WORKER is making propaganda possibilities that are not overlooked by those members who appreciate the value of extensive propaganda. The DAILY WORKER is conducting local subscription drives. By supplying special "sub" equipment the "Daily" is not only making it easy to sell but easier still to TRY to sell subscriptions.

It's the TRYING that counts. It's in the TRYING that we do our propaganda chores. It's in the TRYING that we train ourselves as organizers for Communism. It's in the TRYING that we convince class-conscious workers that their place is in the Workers Party.

If you haven't sufficiently overcome your timidity to allow you to walk up to a workingman's house and ring the bell, how is your courage to be depended on to perform the many feats of daring required of a rebel in really serious moments.

When you say you can't sell when you are asked to go from house to house with DAILY WORKER subs, you are admitting defeat. Because in the first place you are not asked to sell. You are asked to TRY to sell. It's the trying that counts. You are not a salesman. You are an organizer, a propagandist. When you walk right up and ring the bell and start talking about the DAILY WORKER you are performing a service for Communism.

Kissing the Club

The organ of the German social-democracy, the Vorwaerts, in its Christmas edition complains bitterly of the refusal of the allies to withdraw their troops from Cologne after the social-democrats had carried out their part of the bargain of betrayal—getting a majority for submission to the Dawes plan in the last elections.

The Vorwaerts says:

"The German nation is convinced that its disarmament is complete and the government states that no sensational discovery has been made during the last 1,744 inspections carried out by the Allies. Is this true? If Mr. Herriot's accusation is a hypocritical pretext for a refusal to evacuate Cologne then he forgets that such hypocrisy is bound to weaken the position of the supporters of the republic and the supporters of fulfillment of the Dawes plan."

The German workingclass has been disarmed and the Vorwaerts is pleased. The refusal of the allied imperialists to remove their troops weakens "the supporters of the fulfillment of the Dawes plan" and the Vorwaerts is displeased.

The tremendous support given the Communists in the industrial centers, in spite of the terroristic activities of the social-democratic government, shows that not all the German workingclass has been convinced that kissing the club of the capitalists is the way for freedom.

Those simple folk who always hope for the best quite generally hailed the Herriot regime in France as a herald of peace. What else, indeed, could a "radical socialist" and a bosom friend of Ramsay MacDonald be, otherwise than a sucking dove burdened down with an olive branch. Regretfully must we quote General Nollet: "The new superior council created by the Herriot government is working at toop speed . . . preparing a complete mobilization of all industries in case of another conflict."

The kind-hearted Calvin Coolidge commuted the sentence of one federal prisoner to celebrate the Christmas holiday and indicated the possession of a christian spirit.

The favored prisoner is an ex-soldier who has already served nine years of a life sentence. Cal fixed it so he has to stay in jail only eleven years more. This outburst of generosity shows that Cal does not believe in straining the quality of mercy.

The superb forward drive of the left wing in two of the largest of labor unions, the Carpenters and the Miners, shows that a great ground-swell in again begining to stir the masses. Tired radicals and those who expect, or expected, to win the unions in six months, need not report for duty. Only Communists can be effective.

The christian spirit is in the ascendant at Paris, Illinois. The city is filled with klan and anti-klan forces, well armed and thirsting for one another's blood. Each side depends upon their god to bring them victory.

Both sides denounce the Communists as menaces to civilization.

The Mexican Was Right—They Are Bankers

By HARRISON GEORGE.

WHEN the 375 delegates to the 44th annual convention of the American Federation of Labor at El Paso, Texas, crossed the international bridge over the Rio Grande to visit the sixth convention of the Mexican Federation of Labor (C. R. O. M.) meeting at Juarez, Mexico, a Mexican immigration officer remarked, "These are surely not laboring men, they look more like bankers!"

The Mexican official was correct. They are bankers, running about thirty "labor banks" with approximately $150,000,000 of capital and planning to start others. But what is far more they have the same imperialist program as bankers, especially the large bankers who hold forth on the south end of Manhattan island in the city of New York.

All Cut and Dried!

Bankers they are! No banker could be more devoted to capitalism at home and imperialism abroad than Samuel Gompers, president again upon re-election, which election was so well provided for in advance that the telegraphic news agencies sent out advance news of his re-election with the note to release the item at 11:30 a. m on Nov. 25.

In Europe the leaders of labor organizations must idealize for the membership's consumption, all programs of class collaboration with reactionaries Gompers throws up every veil of reformist "respectability" and cavorts before the labor movement, naked and unashamed, the harlot of American imperialism.

If anyone had expected more from this convention, which met on Nov. 17 and adjourned on the 25th, they expected too much from a body from which every sign of a left wing had been carefully eradicated long before it met. It was a meeting of the $10,000 a year "fat boys," the "international officers," the union bureaucrats. Besides these pot-bellied "sons of labor" whose heaviest "work" is to get some contractors to "come across," the United States senate is a beacon star of intelligence and a gathering of progressives.

Lots of Socialists—But No Left Wing.

There simply was no left wing. There were, certainly, from fifty to one hundred socialists or ex-socialists present, but these distinguished themselves only by being more virulently and actively reactionary than their more swinish brothers. The labor party got one spokesman and two votes, amalgamation was unanimously defeated, as was the resolution for recognition of Russia—which might have fared better in the U. S. senate. And similar unanimity prevailed in the most disgraceful collaboration with imperialism.

Since the Portland convention last year, when Bill Dunne was unseated the policy thruout the federation has been one of ruthless suppression of the left wing. The result was a convention from which all shade of revolutionary or even reformist opposition had been carefully filtered.

Lack of Mind, Not Opportunity.

No wonder that after sizing up the delegation Gompers could safely assert that "Every delegate has a full and free opportunity to speak his mind." That no delegate spoke from the floor during the first five of the eight days did not indicate lack of opportunity but lack of mind.

Only on the last day, when Kovelesky of the Waiters' Union objected that at the next convention at Atlantic City, Gompers should not pick out a seab hotel for headquarters, as he had picked the seab "El Paso del Norte" this year, did Gompers find it needful to refuse the floor to a delegate. And this time, so savage was his attack that the delegate murmured, "Well, if you want to eat in seab hotels, all right!"—and then sat down. Only on one or two such occasions was the slightest sign of life shown.

Amalgamation Hardly Mentioned.

Altho the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers had brot in a resolution asking that all crafts in the steel mills come under the jurisdiction of one union in behalf of the organizing campaign, it was defeated unanimously.

This, in spite of the speech of A. B Swales, the British delegate, who told of the progress of amalgamation in England and the slogan, "More unionism and fewer unions." In spite, also, of the jurisdictional quarrel which has left the 350,000 carpenters outside the Building Trades' department, the fight between the Stone Cutters and Granite Cutters which resulted in scabbing by the Granite Cutters on the Stone Cutters at New Haven, Connecticut; and in spite of the rivalry between the Ladies Garment Workers' Union and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, the former bringing to the convention a resolution asking that the A. C. W. label be declared unfair.

The Labor Party's Early Death.

The labor party issue was disposed of nearly as easily. The two resolutions asking for a labor party, the result of previous work of the Trade Union Educational League in the Molders' Union and in the Operative Potters' Union, were killed with the adoption of the recommendation of the executive council, with only two votes dissenting, after Lasky of the Stone Cutters' had been the only one to champion the idea.

These recommendations represented the compromise arrived at between the republican party element, led by John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers and Hutcheson of the Carpenters; the democratic party group led by Major George L. Berry of the Pressmen, and the LaFollette group, comprising Gompers, who himself had led the executive council into the LaFollette indorsement, and Wm. H. Johnston of the Machinists, who sat with his whole delegation, silent, and saw the labor party issue killed and a so-called "non-partisan" program adopted without making a protest.

A Meaningless "Program."

This program provides the following: "(1) That the present cumbersome ballot be changed to make voting easier. (2) That labor participate more generally in primary elections. (3) That all non-partisan campaign committees be maintained on a permanent basis. (4) That a plan be devised whereby forward-looking persons who are not trade unionists may be enlisted in labor's non-partisan political campaigns. (5) That changes in laws be advocated where necessary to make the functioning of independent political movements more effective." Max Hayes, ex-socialist, raised his voice for a "third" party. So much for that. Gompers will be seen by this, not as objecting to futility in labor politics, but as improving the technique of futility.

The resolution favoring recognition of Soviet Russia, which had been fought thru the last Molders' convention by the Trade Union Educational League, was sabotaged in its presentation, two essential paragraphs being left out completely. Max J. Sillinsky of the Tailors was the lone defender of the resolution, Frey of the Molders disavowing the whole thing as a work of Communists and members of the T. U. E. L.

King Sam and the Royal Family.

The little group of princelings around King Samuel seized the opportunity to attack Russia without regard to facts in Russia or elsewhere. Gompers himself made a vicious speech upon Russia and the Communist International, which he declared was trying to destroy all democracies and labor movements. He expressed his feeling at the "ingratitude" of Russia for the United States, which "had sent a friendly committee an e warship, a labor man on board, to congratulate Kerensky and give Russia a message of good will."

Lest those who came into the labor movement lately misunderstand, I explain that the warship conveyed the precious yellow-socialist prostitute, Charles Edward Russell, to Russia, to report the starving and munitioned Russian masses to keep on fighting on the eastern front to save imperialist France on the western front.

Wants a "Well-Balanced" Navy.

Some may say, "But that is past; in the future labor will know better." But not if labor bureaucrats have their way. The Metal Trades department, which held its convention just prior to the main body, petitioned by resolution, "The president, the secretary of the navy, the cabinet, the committee on naval affairs and the members of congress to make adequate provision for building up and maintaining a well balanced navy."

And what response was there for the words of the British delegate, Swales, when he said, "Our hatred for war must be translated into action and practice. We must have internationality of the workers of the whole world"?

And Conscript Armies.

To begin with the national commander of the American Legion, James A. Drain was given an ovation and gave a "For God and Country" speech, after which a resolution favoring conscription in time of war was passed just before a resolution against Japanese immigrant workers.

Green Becomes Ass't-Sec'y of War.

Then "Resolution 75" was reported by Matthew Woll of the resolution committee, which advised that it be referred to the executive council. And what is "Resolution 75"? It is, in essential part, as follows:

"Whereas, the American Federation of Labor stands opposed to war except in the defense of our country upon the belief that the safety of our country can be preserved only if its citizens are able to defend it, by force of arms if necessary;

"Therefore be it resolved, that the citizens' military training camps and observing of the support of American laboring men and the executive council is authorized and directed to nominate three civilians aides to the secretary of war at large and one civilian aide in each of the forty-eight states to cooperate with the government in recruiting candidates for these camps."

What Do You Mean, "Defense"?

That the assertion of the above resolution being motivated only by a desire for "defense" is pure hypocrisy, may be seen from the action taken on resolution 22, proposed by the Seamen's union. This resolution reads as follows:

"Whereas, modern wars are begun largely thru pressure by and influence of the international bankers; be it

"Resolved, that while we freely grant any American citizen the right and privilege to invest his capital in any country of his choice, we most emphatically protest against the use of our army or navy to collect either the principal or the interest of such investments when collections are no longer possible thru legitimate channels."

"No Isolation of Our Great Republic"

By the treatment of resolution 22, we very clearly see that the purpose of Gompers in appointing himself as under-secretary of war and appointing labor bureaucrats in every state as recruiting agents is by no means "defensive." The resolutions committee in adolt language, after "subscribing to the high and lofty purpose," said:

"With the rapid extension of international finance, industrialism and commercialism, the restriction proposed for the end sought by this resolution, confined as it is to our nation alone, would tend to isolate our people and nation from participation in the world's developments . . . We enforce all legal obligation entered into within our domestic borders by processes of law and by discipline of governmental forces.

"So, too, in the present international intercourse, our methods of obedience and discipline to obligations entered into are harsh and cruel at times. Nothing within the realm of practical possibilities should remain unobserved so that the people of all nations will be inspired to develop processes of a humane and peaceful character. This cannot be achieved by a lessening of national honor or the isolation of our great republic from co-operating with all other democratic nations in the world's present tendencies and developments. We cannot recommend approval of the resolution."

Morgan's "Meritorious Loans."

In other words it is "national honor" to use the army and navy to collect the loans of the House of Morgan and make war against Soviet Russia, Haiti, Santo Domingo, or even—who knows?—war upon France or upon the enslaved workers of Germany who may revolt and repudiate the Dawes' plan and its loans. In all this, the labor bureaucracy offers to be both the recruiting agent and the priest who blesses the war and makes it holy. "We are against isolation" means "We are for imperialism," and Woll made it plain when he upheld verbally the necessity of war to collect "meritorious loans."

Amsterdam Reformists Have No Plans

That labor may not find these loans so "meritorious" was indicated by the fraternal delegates from Europe in particular. The English openly admitted that the Dawes' plan was already forcing a lower standard on British workers and they might lose still more. But they had no policy to oppose it and didn't know what to do. The German delegate said that Germany accepted the Dawes' plan to "get a breathing spell," but admitted that labor was being strangled in the process of "breathing." He asserted that it was either the Dawes' plan or Bolshevism, and the yellow social-democrats, of which he is one of the leaders, chose the Dawes' plan, tho he couldn't clearly explain its advantages as compared with Bolshevism.

It is with these fraternal delegates from Europe, and the ones coming from the Mexican federation then in convention across the Rio Grande, that the most significant events developed in showing the American labor bureaucracy as the labor department of American imperialism.

Morones and Calles; Gompers and Coolidge.

The leading group of the Mexican federation has wholly subordinated itself to the Gompers bureaucracy, just as the Mexican government has made its peace with American capital and accepted heavy loans from Doheny, one of the "Teapot Dome group of oil imperialists, to defeat the last de la Huerta rebellion backed by the Cowdray oil imperialism of England. The Mexican federation certified its servility by unseating a Communist, Alfonso P. Soria, and by pleding itself to "defend the A. F. of L."

"The Monroe Doctrine of Labor"

In reply, this was acknowledged by adoption of the motion of Matthew Woll to mark "the beginning of the Monroe Doctrine of American labor to apply to the western hemisphere. In that I mean united resistance against attempts by foreign capital or foreign labor, to get a foothold either in concessions, property or economic principles or aspirations."

One could scarcely conceive of a more flagrant or complete statement of the unreserved adherence of the American Federation of Labor to the purposes of American imperialism, including the intention to oppose the "economic principles or aspirations of foreign labor"—meaning the revolutionary principles of the Red International of Labor Unions.

A. F. of L. Follows Dawes.

Last, but not least, was the intrigue engineered carefully thruout the whole convention, to lay the foundation for re-affiliation of the A. F. of L. to the Amsterdam International Federation of Trade Unions.

On the third day of the convention, the Hearst correspondent, Kenneth Clark, reported "conferences between federation leaders and fraternal delegates from England, Germany, Mexico and Canada," looking to the formation of a new international. That was the inference, since "a definite organization of American and European labor" was contemplated, without mention being made of either Amsterdam or the Red International of Labor Unions.

This was apparently a "feeler" of Gompers. The British and German delegates denied holding such conferences. But evidently a move was on foot by the A. F. of L. bureaucracy to affiliate to Amsterdam, upon their own terms.

Gompers to Control Amsterdam.

And what does the A. F. of L. want in Amsterdam? It wants control of European labor—and to attain this it must control Amsterdam. So it is making a feint at "starting a new international" more to the right than Amsterdam, to force Amsterdam to the right and to sign over its leadership to Gompers in order to get the affiliation of the American Federation. Just as European governments have been forced to sign over their policies to American imperialism in order to get loans to ward off collapse.

Gompers' policy has always been and remains, the policy of the capitalist government. If he is now going back to Europe, it is not for Europe's good, but for the benefit of American imperialism. He revealed this malevolence in his attacks on Russian workers, and by his henchmen's public opposition to the speech of A. B. Swales, British fraternal delegate, who said that Amsterdam, or British workers at least, did not fear the Russian workers and wanted unity with them. Later Swales admitted that Amsterdam would drop some of its "objectionable features" to get the affiliation of the A. F. of L.

A "Dawes' Plan of Labor" Being Made

Chester M. Wright, yellow ex-socialist and Gompers' publicity man, manufactured "resentment among the delegates" at Swales' remark. And when the matter of international relations came up, Matthew Woll stated the official objection that the A. F. of L. wanted its "autonomy." But just as Woll believed in the Monroe Doctrine of labor when the Mexican federation gave evidence of belonging by expelling a Communist, so will he believe in a "Dawes' plan of labor" when Amsterdam will refuse unity with the Red International of Labor Unions, when Amsterdam will refuse the Russian industrial unions admission into the industrial internationals and will surrender to Gompers the dictatorship of European labor just as the governments of Europe have surrendered to J. P. Morgan and company.

The Surrender to Capital.

These are the big developments of the American Federation of Labor's 44th annual convention. Faced with rapidly dwindling membership, with antiquated craft unions unable and unwilling to fight for the workers' interests, with reaction triumphant in both politics and industry, with war against Japan clouding the horizon, unemployment, the open shop drive and the menace of the Dawes' plan threatening wage and hour standards, the A. F. of L. surrendered body, soul and boot-straps to the capitalists, ignored all the vital interests of the workers and openly became the labor department of American imperialism.

What Shall Labor Do?

What shall American labor do in the face of this wholesale betrayal. It cannot quit the class struggle, nor can it bear forever the miseries that are forced upon it. The sooner it makes up its mind to fight, the sooner the inevitable battle will be over, it must look to the left wing, the militants, the Communists. These are not in the high councils of the A. F. of L., but down among the rank and file of workers in the shops.

Build the Party Nuclei and Union Fractions.

The Workers (Communist) Party is organizing its basic units in the shops. Revolutionary workers, join the Workers Party factory nuclei! Form revolutionary fractions in your unions under the guidance of the Trade Union Educational League to fight class collaboration and official treachury.

Organize All-Inclusive Shop Committee

Resist wage cuts and open shop drives by rallying all the workers, organized or unorganized, around shop committees, representative of every craft in the shop! Make the shop committees the leadig organs of mass struggle for political demands, demonstrate with these shop committee mass organizations against injunctions, against blacklist or discharge of militant workers!

For Political Struggle in the Shops.

Call shop meetings to protest against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti, the imprisonment of Tom Mooney and Warren K. Billings! Demand thru your shop committees the government relief of unemployed! The withdrawal of armed forces from China, Haiti and Santo Domingo! Rally the masses around the shop committees to protest against government strikebreaking with troops, courts and police! Invite them to vote for Communists.

Against the open capitalist enemy and the enemy within the ranks of labor, against the capitalist and labor union bureaucrat, organize the Communist Party factory nuclei! Organize the masses in all-inclusive shop committees!

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE Union Advocate of Sioux City, Iowa, labels itself a labor paper. It is edited by a faker named Wallace M. Short, who served three terms as mayor of that city. In order to win that office he had to have the support of labor. It looks as if he lost that support, judging by the raving of the gentleman in a recent issue of his paper. Short may not be long on knowledge, but he has an abundance of gall. His name appears in 30 point type on the front page of his weekly rag. It is the biggest thing in the paper.

WHAT is getting between Short and his night's slumber is the presence of a radical in the trade union movement of Sioux City. The writer has not the least idea who this radical is, but Short's tribute to him is by no means underdone. He states that this radical, a Communist, now reigns supreme in the Labor Temple and has the trade unions of the city in his vest pocket. He admits that for his efficiency, his skill and aggressiveness and then charges that with being an ally of the Ku Klux Klan. Perhaps Short is a socialist.

THIS stingy faker then intimates that the Communist is an agent of the open shoppers, but the worm, fearing to make an open attack on a man who would probably punch him out dirt for it, goes about the task of saving his dirty hide by saying in the next paragraph that he does not charge any "specific" interest with being an agent of the employers. "I have not seen any money pass," he writes. Short finally gets the object of his wrath with the whole, to invoke mob law on this man who undoubtedly has more brains in one finger than Short likes to find in one hat in Sioux City, when that does not happen to be Short's.

AFTER picturing this Communist "monster," swallowing one organization after another like an octopus, Short says: "I expect to see a change in his near future. I expect to see a crowd of real men in the Labor Temple who will say what they stand for. Then I expect to see many of these thousand members growing to be as effective as the Communist. When that time comes, and I think it is near at hand, then the Communists will not last seven days." The labor faker must be at his wit's end when he resorts to an open threat to get rid of somebody by violence that he cannot handle politically by the exercise of his intelligence.

A VERY thrilling story comes from Kalispell, Montana. It comes in the columns of the Times of that shining town. It is about a gallant deed performed by four employes of the Anaconda company in risking their lives to protect the copper trust's property. And, of course, the A. M. C. octopus industrial octopus manifested its gratitude by plastering each one of its willing slaves at the receiving end of a check for $250.00. Like September it appears that a fire broke out in the powder magazine. Four men braved sudden death in extinguishing the fire.

NOTHING much was said about the deed until a few weeks ago when the heroes were called into the office of the company and presented with the checks. They shared honors with the A. M. C. officials. The slaves who received the paltry checks carried plaster boxes, containing dynamite, out of reach of the sunlight. Evidently $250.00 is the price the Anaconda sets on a wage slave's life. And heroism of this kind must be encouraged.

NAIL DRIVERS HIT HUTCHESON ON HEAD TO JENSEN'S CHAGRIN

The left wing militants of the Carpenters' Union continue to send in accounts of remarkable progress against the Hutcheson machine.

In a stronghold in Local 1051 (German) of Philadelphia, the count was as follows: Rosen, 71; Brown, 11, and Hutcheson, 165. This shows that the militants are appealing to the masses in the unions with some effect.

But here is another letter, which we give just as it came:

"I want to give you the results of the election for national president of the Carpenters' Union of Local 504.

"President Jensen, being present on the evening of the election, spoke in favor of President Hutcheson. Following this speech, I spoke in favor of Mr. Rosen.

"The result was 185 for Rosen, 82 for Hutcheson, and 3 for Brown."

BIG LEFT WING STIRS ITALIAN LABOR UNIONS

But Convention Is Like A. F. of L.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MILAN, Italy, Dec. 13 (By Mail).—The Communists and adherents of the Red International of Labor Unions are making strong gains in the General Confederation of Labor as shown by the vote at the annual convention of the organization just ended.

Like some American conventions, especially of the American Federation of Labor, it was not a convention of the masses but of the union bureaucrats.

D'Aragona Copies Gompers.

The local "Chambers of Labor" and their powers were the subject of dispute in the form of amendments to the constitution taking away their power and giving it exclusively into the hands of the reformist leaders led by D'Aragona. These changes to rob the local chambers of power were proposed by the reformists and put over against a great mass sentiment among the rank and file.

Upon the question the Communists and supporters of the Profintern (Red International of Labor Unions), cast a convention card vote of 51, 290. The regular democratic reformists cast 145,724. The local chambers of labor too poor to send delegates made 40,798 votes "absent" which would have voted with the Red Internationalists.

The Carpenters' Union cast 95 per cent of their vote for the Communist program. Many other unions showed large blocks of revolutionary workers. But as the chambers of labor were voted as a unit, the case being if a local chamber went 4,000 for the Communists as against 4,100 for the social-democrats, the whole chamber was voted in the confederal convention as 8,100 for the social-democrats—the real strength of the Communist position is concealed by the convention vote.

At the end of the convention, the Communist spokesman asked D'Aragona to protest to the Mussolini government against persecution of the Communists. D'Aragona refused.

Deret Breaks Flying Record.

NEXT INTERNATIONAL AID CONFERENCE IN NEW YORK JAN. 4

The next conference of the International Workers' Aid and the Labor Defense Council will take place on Jan. 4, 1925, at 8 p. m. at 208 East 12th St. It is important that every branch of the Workers Party and the Young Workers League be represented at the conference.

All the delegates must be able to report on what the branches are doing in the sale of tickets, in procuring articles for the bazaar and in inducing their branches to have a booth at the bazaar.

No delegate should fail to attend.

ATTEND GOMPERS FUNERAL; FIGHTS FOR CHILD LABOR

Mansfield News Lauds Defenders of Slavery

MANSFIELD, Ohio, Dec. 29.—The local capitalist sheet called the "Mansfield News," runs a long editorial against the proposed child labor amendment to the U. S. constitution now being voted on by the various state legislatures.

After quoting at length from these "authorities" who agree that "states' rights" is the matter at issue and not the profit from child slavery, the News gives a long list of celebrities who signed the protest. The list is headed by George W. Wickersham, who was a former attorney general of the United States.

Mr. Wickersham attended the funeral of Sam Gompers as an "honorary pallbearer." Mr. Gompers was supposed to be valiantly fighting for the child labor amendment. He died. Mr. Wickersham mourned, then went on fighting the child labor amendment.

The sheet says that "widespread opposition is being expressed thru the American constitutional league, which maintains headquarters in New York." Quite likely. New York City is the financial capital of the nation. It has one important center called Wall Street, as we remember.

The Mansfield News says that the protest against the child labor amendment is signed by "prominent educators, churchmen, business and professional men." Professional defenders of wage slavery, we may add.

REVOLT BREAKS IN JUGO-SLAVIA, ROYALTY FLEES

Fascisti Eye Balkans; Trouble Brews at Home

ROME, Dec. 29. — A serious and widespread revolutionary movement has broken out in Jugo-Slavia, dispatches arriving here state. King Alexander and Queen Marie have fled to Paris by airplane. Premier Teanker of Bulgaria has left for Belgrade capital of Jugo-Slavia, to confer with Premier Pastich with the announced purpose of "combining the governments of the two countries to fight off Communism."

Mussolini, fascist premier of Italy, is aiming at the conquest of the Balkan states, and his colleagues declare he plans to attempt armed interference as soon as the Communists seize power. However, Mussolini now has his hands full at home. The Italian workers, led by the Communists, are gathering their forces to strike a death blow at Mussolini.

The petty bourgeois parties in opposition to the fascisti, have also amalgamated their forces. Two new opposition parties, the Mazzinani and the Garibaldini, have been formed. The "Union of the South" and the "National Union," two opposition parties, have combined with the avowed purpose of "crushing the fascisti government." These parties have announced their intention of establishing a "democratic constitutional government." But the Communists have countered with the slogan, "All power to the workers," and the demand for the Soviets.

The division within the fascisti party continues to grow more acute. The extremists insist that no new election be held. They demand retention of dictatorial powers at all cost. The right wing of the fascisti follow Mussolini's plan of taking part in a new election in March.

Western Electric Reaps Huge Profits From Ill Paid Slaves

The Western Electric company, which is noted thruout the country for its spy system and its low wages, made a bigger profit in 1924 than in any succeeding year, selling the Bell Telephone system, which owns the Western Electric, one million dollars worth of electrical equipment.

The president of the company, however, declared that the large sales have created a supply for the Bell system, which makes the outlook for 1925 less bright.

"New telephone construction for 1924 has caught up with hitherto unfilled demand," Charles DuBois, president of the company declared. "We do not expect as many orders in 1925. We look forward to a year of less activity in 1925 than in 1924."

STORM CLOUDS OF IMPERIALIST WAR AND WORKERS' REVOLUTION GATHER AGAIN OVER EUROPE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Dec. 29.—Storm signals of war and—dread word to capitalists—"revolution" were flashing over the horizon of Europe today with ever-increasing intensity.

The contradictions within the system of antagonistic imperialisms which seemed buried during the short period of pacifism up to the time of the defeat of Ramsay MacDonald in England, has flared up again, and the national jealousies are whispering "War."

And the winds echo back, "And revolution!"

Day by day, since the first inkling that Cologne would not be evacuated on January 10, as twice promised Germany by the allies, the German interior has been showing an increasing tornado of protest.

The keynote of the whole of Germany is crystallized in the cry, "We have been cheated!" The social democrats, who have beguiled and betrayed the German working class into acceptance of the Dawes' plan, who have tricked the workers into one trap after another to keep them enslaved to capitalism and who have now shown themselves as betrayers even of national interests in their support of the Dawes' plan which rivets American imperialism's shackles hard and fast upon Germany—now stand revealed even to the most backward worker.

Monarchists, Too, Not Trusted.

Nor are these workers going to trust very far the monarchist nationalists who, they remember, largely went over to the social-democrats in accepting the Dawes' plan in exchange for jobs in the cabinet but a few months ago. The workers of Germany now can look only to the Communists to protect both their interests as workers and their collective right of self-determination.

From London comes the report that while most of the English press is cautious about commenting on the evacuation of the Rhine, the Morning Post published an article by Brigadier General Morgan, which claimed that Germany has concealed her military strength and has nearly 500,000 reserve troops. In a series of papers there are loud praises of Marshal Foch and his report.

Conflicting Interests Threaten.

Dispatches from Paris show that Herriot can no longer be trusted as a "friend of German-French harmony." He conferred with Poch prior to the allied decision. Today he conferred again with War Minister Nollet and General Guillaumat, head of the army of occupation. Afterward the government issued a note giving its reasons for continued occupation of Germany. The note is hoped by France to be adopted as the official inter-allied note to Berlin. France is trying to deny that the Dawes' plan is peril.

But try to conceal it tho they may, the conflicting interests of clashing imperialisms are threatening the Dawes' plan with collapse, European economy with new dislocations and western Europe with both war and revolution.

CHICAGO MEET ENTHUSIASTIC FOR DAILY WORKER

Detroit Raised Over $300 for Fund

Moritz J. Loeb, business manager of the DAILY WORKER, was given a rousing ovation when he mounted the platform in Schoenhofen Hall, Sunday, to speak on behalf of the DAILY WORKER to the one thousand Workers Party and Young Workers' League members assembled for the Chicago General Membership Meeting.

Comrade Loeb told of the struggles the DAILY WORKER has had the past year and was applauded vigorously when he said the "Daily" was good for many years to come.

Splendid Spirit Shown.

"The insurance policy campaign constitutes the first instance of the DAILY WORKER seeking subsidy from the membership of the party since its inception. We have asked you to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925. But if the present campaign dnishes with the same splendid spirit in which it has begun, I can assure you there will be no more subsidation, not only in 1925, but for many years after."

Thurber Lewis, manager of the local subscription drive for the DAILY WORKER, briefly outlined the plans of the drive and presented the special sub-folder consisting of five one-dollar, two-month subscription cards to the membership. Those receiving the folders gave their names and branch numbers and are expected to report on the results of their efforts to sell them to either their branch secretaries or DAILY WORKER agents.

Detroit Goes Over Big.

The general membership meeting in Detroit Sunday gave $274 in cash and $70 in pledges to the DAILY WORKER insurance fund. Edgar Owens made the talk for the DAILY WORKER Insurance campaign pointing out the great value of the "Daily" to the Workers Party and urging the three hundred members present to come to the aid of the DAILY WORKER in its first call for help since its inception.

Many Pledges Given.

One hundred dollars of the $274 raised in cash was in the form of a check representing a donation from a sympathizer. This check was given by Cyril Lambkin on condition that one hundred members of the party raise ten dollars apiece for the insurance fund. The English branch promised twenty-five ten dollar policies and the rest of the branches pledged to raise the other seventy-five to make the $100 donation good.

The branches reported that the drive was successful beyond all expectations and that they were by no means finished.

Cleveland Boosts Daily.

By ALFRED WAGENKNECHT.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Dec. 29.—The mass membership meeting held here yesterday went on record unanimously in favor of completing the quota of fifteen hundred dollars to insure the DAILY WORKER next year.

All branches were requested to complete their quotas at the earliest

PARTY MEMBERSHIP MEETINGS VOTE ON THESES ON THE PARTY'S TASKS

The first five of the ten scheduled meetings of the Workers Party members arranged by the Central Executive Committee were held Sunday, Dec. 28, and all of them went according to arrangements and in a most orderly fashion, in each case being a credit to the party for its ability to discuss its affair and vote thereon in a Communist manner.

The results of the meetings in each place, as well as the speakers for each position, were as follows:

NEW YORK—C. E. C. (majority) speaker, Cannon, vote 482; minority speaker, Ruthenberg, vote 330.

CHICAGO—C. E. C. (majority) speaker, Foster, vote 309; minority speaker, Redachi, vote 362.

CLEVELAND—C. E. C. (majority) speaker, Bittelman, vote 62; minority speaker, Lovestone, vote 107.

DETROIT—C. E. C. (majority) speaker, Browder, vote 110; minority speaker, Engdahl, vote 161.

MINNEAPOLIS—C. E. C. (majority) speaker, Dunne, vote 80; minority speaker, Gitlow, vote 81.

LEWIS BURIED BY MINE VOTE IN O'FALLON

Progressives Have Big Lead in West Va.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

O'FALLON, Ill., Dec. 29.—Local Union 705 does not think much of the agents of the coal operators in official positions in the coal miners' union, judging by the vote cast for the progressive candidates.

Frank Farrington received only 69 votes while his opponent John Hindmarsh got 145 votes. John L. Lewis received only 80. George Voyzey, his progressive opponent, polled 230. Philip Murray got 93 votes while Arley Staples got 206. William Green received 118 votes and Joseph Nearing 177.

But why should Farrington worry about votes? His favorite boast is "I don't give a God damn whether any of you fellers vote for me or not; I'll be your next president anyway."

BAXTER, West Va., Dec. 29.—The returns from local 4046 give George Voyzey, 87, Lewis, 54; Arley Staples 81; Murray, 89; Green, 90; Nearing 84.

MT. CLAIRE, West Va., Dec. 29.—John L. Lewis polled 22 votes to 49 for George Voyzey. Philip Murray received 30, while Arley Staples got 50 votes. William Green, 24; Joseph Nearing, 44.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Dec. 29.—The coal operators ably assisted by the officials of the union and particularly by Rinaldo Capellini, who sold out to the operators shortly after he was elected by the radical vote of District No. 1, are desperately trying to drive the striking miners back to work.

In the meantime the coal operators of District No. 2 are trying to reopen discussions with the union in an effort to bring about a reduction in wages despite the Jacksonville pact.

Plots New Revolt In Mexico Under U. S. Protection

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 28.— Jose Ismael Aguado, former congressman, who acted as secretary to De La Huerta in Vera Cruz, was arrested here today. He arrived from the United States ten days ago. He has been lodged in the military prison.

Guadalupe Sanches, leader of the De La Huerta revolt in the state of Vera Cruz, is reported to be in New Orleans where he went to confer with rebel leaders on a renewal of the rebel campaign. The America claims to be friendly to Mexico and savagely represses working class revolutionists, it lets Sanches travel freely and conspire without let or hindrance.

Burst in Gas Pipe Causes Panic.

GALESBURG, Ill., Dec. 29.—Four persons had been overcome and entire families were feeling ill today when a big gas pipe broke in the residence district of Galesburg. Scores were endangered by the spread of the gas thru sewer mains and along water pipes.

FINNISH FEDERATION BUREAU SUPPORTS C. E. C. MAJORITY THESIS

The Finnish Federation Bureau, Workers Party of America, unanimously decided to support the C. E. C. majority thesis and urge the Finnish members of the party to sustain this decision.

The party has now come to the end of the road in its farmer-labor party agitation and organization. In fact the end of the road was reached July 8, last. The question now before the party is: shall we start this farmer-labor party agitation with its reckless maneuvering to follow all over again, in time when there is no actual basis for such agitation in existence? The minority in its thesis says "yes." The majority in its thesis says "no." We also say emphatically "NO," because our first experience does not warrant another trial at this time.

Our energy and means can be used to a better advantage in building up our own party organizationally and ideologically to a party of action so it will be able to undertake successfully maneuvering on large scale when necessary and beneficial to the Communist movement of this country. There are no shortcuts to Communism in this country anymore than there has been anywhere else, and if the workers of this country are not yet ready to accept the leadership of Communists we have to continue to participate in their struggles under our own name until the time we have established confidence, of our movement and leadership, among the working masses and in the meantime build our own party. There is ample field to participate in the struggles of workers outside of the farmer-labor party issue, (which is not at all a Communist issue) as much as our useful forces permit.

Signed: K. F. Tuhkanen, Chairman.
Fahle Burman, Secretary.

YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE OF NEW YORK INDORSES MINORITY, 76 TO 45

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 28.—The Young Workers League of District No. 2 by a vote of 76 to 45 went on record for the minority thesis of Comrades Ruthenberg, Lovestone, Bedacht, Engdahl and Gitlow at a general membership meeting held Thursday, Dec. 18 at Stuyvesant Casino.

Comrade Oliver Carlson, official representative of the National Executive Committee which has accepted the majority position, presented the arguments for the majority thesis and Comrade Jack Stachel the district organiser of the Y. W. L. of district No. 5 presented the position of the minority of the C. E. C. of the Workers Party, which has been accepted also by the D. E. C. of the Y. W. L. of the New York district.

There was a great deal of interesting discussion and then the rebuttal followed, which did not begin until 12:15. First Comrade Stachel summed up for the minority and then Comrade Carlson for the majority.

Two resolutions were introduced, one favoring the majority position and the other for the minority. The resolution in support of the minority thesis was passed by a vote of almost two to one, 76 to 45.

The resolution adopted reads as follows:

"Resolved that we, the members of Young Workers League, District No. 2 in membership meeting assembled Dec. 18, 1934, declare that we favor the application of the labor party policy as a maneuver of the Workers Party in the united front tactics.

"Be it further resolved that we condemn the prevelant manifestations of petty factionalism so destructive to our movement, and endorse the appeal of the Y. C. I. and the C. I. for a united, harmonious movement, in which differences of opinion will be vigorously maintained, but in which able comrades will not be prevented from contributing their services to the movement in an effort to punish them for holding minority opinions."

Comrade Stachel was elected chairman of the meeting and Comrade Herbert Zam as secretary and vice chairman.

Altho there are about 600 members in the New York League, only 121 members voted at this meeting. The statement of the N. E. C. of the league has not yet been discussed or voted upon at any general meeting.

Detroit South-Slavic Branch Unanimous For Minority Thesis

DETROIT, Mich.—At a special membership meeting of our branch held Sunday, Dec. 23, after a thoro discussion of both thesis, the C. E. C. and the minority, the following resolution was adopted unanimously, 38 to 0.

"The South Slavic Branch 17, Detroit, Mich., Workers Party of America, does, after a thoro discussion of both the C. E. C. and the minority theses, approve and stand with the theses of the minority (Ruthenberg Lovestone, Gitlow, Bedacht, Engdahl) as a real Communist policy for our future work." Yours for Communism. Tony Gerlach. Recording Secretary, Branch 17, W. P. of A.

TOKIO, Dec. 29.—Twenty-six were killed, 253 injured and 77 warehouses and other buildings wholly or partly destroyed in Saturday's explosion of gun powder in trans-shipment, it was officially made known today.

Chicago Mid-City English Branch 15 To 2 for Majority

The Mid-City English Branch of Local Chicago, Workers Party, after discussing the theses of the C. E. C. majority and minority at both the December 11 and December 14 meetings, voted at the latter meeting, by a vote of 15 to 2, to adopt the following resolution:

"WHEREAS, The Mid-City English Branch, Local Chicago, of the Workers Party of America, having thoroly discussed the theses of the Central Executive Committee and of the minority, and having heard speeches from both sides, hereby

"RESOLVES, That it supports the viewpoint and the thesis of the Central Executive Committee as the only program of our party's tasks which follows the Communist line of revolutionary struggle as against the thesis of the minority, which is a dangerous deviation that may engulf the party in opportunist maneuvers harmful to our Workers (Communist) Party and therefore harmful to the Communist International and the world revolution."

South Slavs of West Allis, Wis., All for Majority

Arne Swabeck, district organizer, announces that the South Slavic Branch at West Allis, Wisconsin, of 39 members, has voted unanimously to support the thesis of the C. E. C. majority as against the minority.

Chicago South-Slavic Branch Unanimous For Minority Thesis

The Chicago South Slavic branch unanimously indorsed the minority thesis by a vote of 27 to 0, after a thorough discussion at the branch meeting Wednesday night. Comrade Max Bedacht supported the minority thesis, and Comrade Earl P. Browder spoke for the majority. A previous branch meeting had unanimously indorsed the minority thesis, after a rank and file discussion but since no majority C. E. C. member spoke, it was decided to hold another discussion to give the majority a chance to state their position more fully. The following resolution was passed:

"We, the South Slavic branch, having heard Comrade Bedacht, representing the minority thesis, the minority of the C. E. C., and Comrade Browder, representing the Foster-Lore section of the C. E. C. voting for the majority thesis, do hereby reaffirm our previous decision in favor of the C. E. C. minority thesis."—Signed: Louis Hrsich, South Slavic Branch, No. 6—Secretary.

BOSS PEN HACKS LOCK HORNS ON MONEY QUESTION

Scribes of Easy Virtue Entertain Miners

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH.

PITTSTON, Pa., Dec. 28.—In addition to reporting on their efforts, to have the rest of the miners of District One join them in their demand for justice at the hands of the greedy coal operators, the men who constitute the general grievance committee of the "outlawed" employes of the Pennsylvania Coal Co., were treated to an interesting verbal cross-barrage by the two writers for the capitalist sheets, who are in attendance at all the sessions of the committee.

Journalistic Hawks Quarrel.

It appears that when the men decided that they would issue full page advertisements in the local papers setting forth all their grievances, the men who scribble the stuff for public consumption found themselves in a place where they would have to show their sentiments. One of them, who offered the advertisement for his paper, felt that, inasmuch as the men were on strike, he could well do with out the commission which is paid while the other one possesses a philosophy that "Money is money, no matter whence it comes," so when the bills for the advertising were presented, there was a decided difference in the amounts and this needed explanation.

Scribes Swap Epithets.

It was during this process of explanation, that the two scribes came near to locking horns and when the Wilkesbarre Times-Leader representative told the other one that "he would have more than Myerscough on his neck" if he wasn't careful. The reference was occasioned by the manner in which I was forced to attack that individual for his lying attack against me in his article of a previous day.

Steps are being taken to assemble a meeting of all the general grievance committees at an early date, when measures will be attempted to get results, with a general strike as the alternative if sufficient support is secured for the venture.

THOUSANDS MEET IN ATHENS TO FIGHT FASCISM

Communists Take Lead in Huge Demonstration

ATHENS, Greece, Dec. 29.—Thousands of workers crowded the large Alhambra theatre here in a huge demonstration against the fascisti movement of Greece which is led by Kondylis. The government sent several hundred troops to guard the vicinity of the theatre. Antoniades, representing the organization of 14,000 ex-officers of the Greek army, pledged the audience that the ex-officers will not allow fascism to make their organization a tool of the Greek capitalists.

"The ex-officers will not be again the tools of the capitalist class, which is behind the fascisti movement in Greece, but will unite with the working class to which we belong and will fight capitalism," said Antoniades. "The employing class wants us to be strikebreakers, but we refuse to fight our fellow workers. We who carried on the imperialistic wars of the Greek exploiters in Asia Minor and elsewhere know that we were not fighting in the interests of the workers of the capitalists. We must unite the forces of the workers against fascism."

P. Michaelides, speaking for the 30,000 Greek tobacco workers, denounced the new move of the Greek capitalists to spread terror among the workers by means of fascism. He pledged the support of his organization against the onslaughts of the white terror.

CAL COOLIDGE GIVES NEGRO WORKERS JIM CROW BATHING BEACH

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 29.—After three unsuccessful attempts, Col. C. O. Sherrill, in charge of public buildings and grounds in the District of Columbia, succeeded in forcing segregated bathing beaches upon the Negroes of Washington. Last year Sherill on two occasions offered the Negroes a beach on the Virginia side of the Potomac, which they refused. Later Sherill offered the Negroes a beach on the Anacostia river in the southeast section of the city. They refused this also.

But it took Coolidge to do it. Following President Coolidge's signature to the bill which appropriated $72,000 for the project, the beach will be constructed for the Negroes. It is located in the tidal basin, East Potomac Park.

Only Communists Fight for the Needs of the Whole Working Class

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, and day by day, the New York Times, petted puppet of the plutocracy, is patting itself on the back because of $226,205.13 raised during the holiday season for what it calls the "Hundred Neediest Cases."

This is the New York Times that is one of the biggest allies of the police in organizing pogroms against the discontent of the unemployed; that helps rally brute force in the war on the jobless.

The New York Times says it raised $3,630.88 in 1912, when it made its first Christmas appeal. It prides itself on the fact that this amount has increased more than 60 times; until it is now close to a quarter of a million dollars. This year's contributions, proclaims this mighty organ of "The House of Have," will take care of more than 300 needy cases.

That is about the number of jobless and homeless men that Urbain J. Ledoux marched into the Camp Memorial Church, on New York's East Side. So the Times and Ledoux are about on a par insofar as their forms of philanthropy are carried out.

• • • • •

The New York Times had on its side, in addition to its own big capitalist and middle class readers, such other organizations as the States Charities' Aid Association, the Brooklyn Bureau of Charities, the Charity Organization Society, the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, the Catholic Charities and the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies, all of which are bulwarked by "the best people."

This aggregation is of course jealous of its claims to the right to "protect" the poor. It claims a monopoly. Charity is a good paying business, especially when in the hands of the churches.

It can therefore be easily understood that the American Board of Applied Christianity in New York should issue a statement "advising churches, if applied to for their shelter, to refuse the same."

To be sure the churchmen are shocked that the gilded interior of their handsome edifices should be soiled by the presence of the poor, but they are also jealous of the fact that Ledoux is trying to compete with them in the exploitation of misery.

This situation only emphasizes the fact that tinkering with the nation-wide, and world-wide problem of unemployment leads no where.

Charity is a narcotic for doping unrest growing out of poverty. Ledoux' annual outbursts around the holiday season, with pleas for the jobless, merely confuse the situation.

The fight for the unemployed is the fight of the whole working class. It is a struggle in which the employed as well as the jobless must participate. It is a drive against the whole capitalist structure that must have its organizational roots deep in the laboring masses.

• • • • •

Only the Workers (Communist) Party puts forth a program of action in the present jobless crisis; rallying the masses for their own protection, for aggressive action as a class.

The New York Times talks about its "100 Needy Cases," and feels it is doing a service. But that service is in the interest of its class—the capitalist class.

• • • • •

The Workers (Communist) Party fights for the needs not only of a paltry 100, but of the many millions of robbed and exploited workers and poor farmers. It fights for the interests of its class—the working class. It is under Communist leadership that the proletarian masses will win the victory over its class enemy. Rally the workers everywhere in the present crisis for the Workers (Communist) Party program in the fight against unemployment.

BIG CONSTRUCTION PROJECTS IN PRINCIPAL CITIES

Builders Get Into Action.

THE new year will see an intensive subscription campaign for the DAILY WORKER in almost all of the leading party locals thruout the country.

Coming as a result of an organizational tour by various field workers of our daily thru whose efforts full-time DAILY WORKER agents were named to devote all their energy toward building the DAILY WORKER subscription strength, the first three months of the coming year promise at least a doubling in size of the present circulation.

Chicago has now under way a drive for subs that is including ever more branches of the party and by the first of the year will include all of the 60 branches in full swing. A stream of subs is already coming thru the office of City Agent Comrade Thurber Lewis.

Comrade Merrick of Pittsburgh, newly appointed city agent has initiated a drive to immediately stir into motion the comrades of the town where steel is king.

Philadelphia not to be outdone, has under way its own drive led by Comrade Levine, who is devoting all his energy to this work.

The Twin Cities, St. Paul and Minneapolis, under Comrade Skoglund, are beginning to hum. Here District Organizer Comrade Hathaway is lending a hand by participating actively and urging all local comrades to give their best efforts to this work as a basis for a full-fledged membership drive that promises much in results.

Boston, with Comrade Zeims in the lead, is beginning a drive of its own that is sure to flood the literary town with reason for mental gymnastics. A successful drive is sure to give them a keener appreciation for real literature.

In Duluth, Comrade Korhelen, city agent for the DAILY WORKER has welded a committee of the local English and Finnish comrades that is already beginning to send in subs.

Cleveland and Detroit, always big towns on the DAILY WORKER map of live cities, are swinging into line to begin the new year in a fashion that promises an increase of at least double the present circulation for the DAILY WORKER.

These locals, and others with local campaigns in prospect are those having realized the absolute necessity of a large local subscription list for the official party organ as the only basis on which a growth of the local can even be thought of.

Kerensky with Soft Job Rails Against Russian Workers

BERLIN, Dec. 29.—Alexander Kerensky is living here on money supplied him by disgruntled monarchists and friends of foreign imperialism. He is editing a paper composed mostly of violent invectives against the judgment of the Russian workers and peasants in choosing the Soviet system and the dictatorship of the proletariat instead of his traitorous alliance with the bourgeois.

Kerensky recently said he would "continue to fight the Bolsheviki even in the life hereafter." Kerensky has found an easy way of making a living.

CANADIAN BANKS BURGLARIZED BY THEIR OWN HEADS

Their Assets Liquid; Hootch Mon!

By SYDNEY WARREN.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

VANCOUVER, B. C., Dec. 29.—The banking combine of Canada is uneasy over the growing demand for a revision of the dominion's banking act that would compel all banks to guarantee the funds of each depositor up to $2,000 and are broadcasting thru the brass check press of the country a series of articles by Sir John Willison, chief lackey for the ultra-tory and financial interests.

This plutocrat argues that such a guarantee would destroy the financial acumen of Canadian banks and impair business incentive. He claims that depositors placing their funds at a very low rate of interest in banks chartered by the dominion government are not entitled to any security beyond that given in an ordinary business venture.

Since 1929 the business of Canadian banks has increased 1,100 per cent while their capital has grown only 84 per cent and the number of banks decreased from 40 in 1900 to 14 today. The available liquid assets of Canadian chartered banks to make secure the money deposited with them are $47,000,000 less today than 30 years ago.

The Home Bank failure cost hundreds of small depositors, mostly workers, their savings. At Fernie, B. C., the miners lost over three-quarters of a million dollars with this institution and are at present destitute facing winter.

The banking interests have systematically subsidized the press of the dominion with their advertising patronage and their loaning powers. A few months before the Home Bank failed every one of the large daily newspapers printed the bank's balance sheet showing a net profit of $282,539.17 and an item saying:

"The thanks of the shareholders should be tendered to the general manager, the assistant general manager, and the other officers of the bank for the efficient manner in which they have respectively discharged their duties during the past year."

A few months later the whole of this bank's reserves were wiped out. $2,000,000 of its capital disappeared and its liabilities were in excess of its assets by $9,500,000. The two directors of this bank, who were active in its wrecking, received sentences of 6 months and 18 months, with the chance of an early pardon.

possible moment and to sell insurance policies to maximum before January 1, in order to have all Cleveland branches appear upon militant's page of January 12, anniversary issue of the DAILY WORKER.

The meeting also pledged wholehearted support to the work of increasing the number of subscribers in Cleveland realizing that the party increases membership and influence in proportion to the increase in readers for the daily. It was resolved to make every member of the party a daily builder and to set minimum of two thousand subscribers the immediate goal.

WORKERS ARE CRUCIFIED IN BOSS PARLIAMENT

Bourgeois Josabouse is Plute's Machine

By SYDNEY WARREN.
(By The Federated Press)

VICTORIA, B. C., Dec. 29.—The timber wolves of British Columbia demonstrate their control of the legislature when all parties except labor's three members and a few scattering independents, voted to permit the lumber interests of British Columbia to escape paying their just taxes for a period of 10 years. Instead of having to pay the legal $3.25 per 1000 feet on timber they are let off with $1.25 per 1000 feet until 1935.

Towing Firms First.

Not content with escaping taxation, the lumber interests are hoping to set aside the power of workers to place liens for wages in default and have presented a bill which aims to give towing companies the first lien on any boom of logs and take precedence over any other liens.

They are also attacking the eight-hour law, with other employes. For two days representatives of the bosses dolefully droned to the eight-hour day act commission that British Columbia would be faced with ruin and red Bolshevism if eight hours were made the legal work day. The commission was regaled with the most brazen lies respecting working conditions. A few employers reluctantly admitted that they could adjust their plants and factories. The employer representative on the commission advised one employer to violate the act if it was going to interfere with his profits.

The Plute Was Spoofing.

One big timber baron said that for the past year lumbermen in the Pacific northwest had lost over a dollar for every 1000 feet of lumber cut, and in the next breath announced that the amount cut was over 10,000,000,000 feet. That would mean a loss of $10,000,000,000, which would wipe out the capitalization of the lumber industry in the northwest. Another lumberman frankly stated he had closed down his plant and reopened it working his men 12 hours a day. He said the men did not object to working 12 hours a day.

Many concerns are planning on closing down several months so that they can claim total or partial exemption on the ground that their industry is "seasonal." A rice miller is claiming exemption on the ground that his business is agricultural therefore exempt.

Labor men have little hope for the enforcement of the act, which was only passed as a political sop to the electorate.

ILLINOIS MINERS DEMAND SPECIAL CONVENTION—PROTEST AGAINST ELECTION STEAL BY FARRINGTON

WEST FRANKFORT, Ill., Dec. 29.—Seven hundred miners gathered at the Strand Theatre to hear of the election steal that was pulled off by the Farrington machine at Buckner, Illinois. Despite the bitter cold and icy streets and roads the mass meeting was a huge success.

The president and the secretary of the Buckner local union told the miners how the hinges were taken off the door of their hall and bogus ballots were exchanged for the ones the men had voted. Both the sub-district and the district ballots were stolen and home-made ballots marked for the Farrington machine were substituted in the place of the genuine ballots marked for the left wing slate by the miners.

Break Down Door.

The tellers had counted 126 of the sub-district ballots by midnight of Tuesday, Dec. 9. They all left and locked the hall and the ballot boxes and returned Wednesday morning at eight o'clock to continue counting. They found that the doors had been pried off, and then discovered that the ballots were bogus, those marked for the left wing having been stolen. All the bogus ballots have been locked in a bank vault for safe keeping.

The meeting unanimously voted to petition for a special sub-district convention, and call for a new election. They demanded that new rules be made that will in future make certain a clean election. Three or four members of Farrington's official family were present, but did not dare to open their mouths. They are apparently not interested in a clean election, for that would mean they would no longer have the fat jobs they now hold.

"The bogus district ballots are the answer to Farrington's statement that he didn't give a damn whether any of the miners voted for him or not—he'd be the next president of the Illinois miners anyhow," Henry Corbishley, president of the Ziegler miners' local union told the DAILY WORKER. "If the men won't vote for him he'll have some creature so low down as to need a ladder to kiss a snake, that will do Farrington's bidding, and steal the votes the men put in the ballot boxes, and replace them with fake ballots marked for Farrington and his stool pigeons."

"How long can the United Mine Workers of America live as an organization when it gets to the point where the men cannot elect the men they vote for?" Corbishley asked. "How long will the real union men in the organization allow this to continue? Are they afraid to protest against such outrageous stealing for fear some ex-scab or stool pigeon of Farrington, most likely himself belonging to the Ku Klux Klan, will call the rank and filers reds or I. W. W.'s or some other of their many phrases they sting at every man who fails to jump thru the hoop every time they snap their fingers!"

Demand New Election.

"The rank and file have got to take more interest in their organization if it is to live to make another contract after this one expires. Every red-blooded union miner in the state of Illinois should rise up and demand a special district convention to set aside the election just held and make some rules that would make it impossible to steal the votes. A new election should be held. If Farrington's stool pigeons are prevented from stealing the ballots he would not get to first base on the votes that are cast for him. Down with the fakers! Let the rank and file rule!"

CALLES IS AGAINST THE REDS AND FAVORS FORCED ARBITRATION

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 29.—The capitalists, especially those who deal in stocks of American investments, concessions and mines in Mexico, are enthusiastic at the reactionary character of the Calles administration. Stocks and bonds are showing an upward trend.

This coincides with the statement of a prominent government official that—"The president's publicly expressed displeasure at the reds and the agrarian agitators and his conservative reconstruction policy are the best things that have happened to the Mexican government in a hundred years."

Calles is much opposed to strikes, wishing to impress the American capitalists to whom he has practically sold the nation of Mexico, that he alone is the guardian of their profits. He wishes to establish the institution which has been discredited wherever tried—a court of arbitration from whose decisions there is no appeal.

A decree only a few days ago by the Mexican supreme court denied the right of appeal against decisions of an arbitration court. This is causing union workers some anxiety.

COTTON BOSSES ONLY ONES FOR CHILD SLAVERY

Fake Groups Traced to Manufacturers

By ART SHIELDS.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

BOSTON, Mass.—A convincing expose of the ownership of southern cotton mills by New England capitalists is set forth in the "Struggle for the Child Labor Amendment." The pamphlet proves its case, company by company, giving the economic reason for the opposition New England manufacturers are making to the amendment.

Charles S. Rackemann, member of the Citizens' Committee for Protection of Our Homes and Children, an organization formed to oppose the amendment, is director of the Dwight Manufacturing Co. of Chicopee, Miss., a company owning mills in Alabama City, Ala. Louis Coolidge, his associate on the Citizens' Committee, is treasurer of the United Shoe Machinery Co. and has financial interests in southern child labor exploitation. Coolidge is also chairman of the Sentinels of the Republic, which collaborates with The Woman Patriot in opposing all progressive measures at Washington.

The list of big Massachusetts companies that own southern mills is illuminating and sets at rest the New England cry that wages must come down because of southern competition. If there was genuine competition the New England manufacturers would welcome national child labor legislation which would tend to raise the cost of their southern competitors. The fake slogan of southern competition is used to reduce wages in the north.

Only Massachusetts companies owning southern mills are cited. If the list were extended to Rhode Island it would include the two leading companies of that state which have recently cut wages under the pretext of southern competition the $23,000,000 Manville-Jenckes Co., with big North Carolina plants, and the Consolidated Textile Corp., with mills in six southern states.

Among the Massachusetts companies that spread their tentacles south are the Mason and Hamlin Co. are the Merrimac Manufacturing Co. of Lowell; the Dwight Manufacturing Co. of Chicopee; the New England Southern Mills of Lowell, Mass., and Lisbon, Me.; the Pacific Mills of Lawrence, N. H. and Lawrence, Mass.; the Massachusetts Cotton Manufacturing Co. of Lowell; the William Whitman Co. of Lawrence and New Bedford; the Bemis Bros. Bag Co of nine northern states; Beaver Mills, of North Adams, Mass.; the William Carter Co. of Springfield, Framingham and Needham Heights, Mass.; the Lewis Manufacturing Co. of Adams, Mass.; the Lowell Bleachery of Lowell; the Renfrew Manufacturing Co. of Adams; the American Net and Twine Co. of East Cambridge, Mass.

The next stage in the fight for ratification comes in the legislature in January.

Australian Labor Takes Stand Against Imperialist Wars

MELBOURNE, Australia.— At the All-Australian congress of the Australian labor party, held at Melbourne, the following important resolution was carried unanimously:

"That this conference, convinced that with another great war the horrors and terrors of the last war will be eclipsed, affirms it to be the duty of the Australian labor movement to declare that under no circumstances should the workers take up arms in the interests of international rivalries, but, instead, join with the workers of all countries in striving wholeheartedly for peace by international action."

It was also decided that the Australian labor party shall convene a Pan-Pacific conference in Japan in order to promote a closer understanding of the labor movements in the countries bordering the Pacific ocean.

Silk Workers Make Progress

PATERSON, N. J., Dec. 29.—The Associated Silk Workers' Union, an independent organization, has more than 4,000 members, according to Fred Ilgenfelder, secretary-treasurer, and is a recognized factor in the Paterson silk industry. The union has made headway among the hatband and ribbon workers altho its recent strike was of broadsilk workers. Fewer broadsilk weavers are unemployed now than in September. Two hatband companies have given wage increases of $1 to $4, Hoelscher says.

Shoddy Industry Booms.

COHOES, N. Y., Dec. 29.—The batt and shoddy industry is reported booming at Cohoes, because of the increased use by textile manufacturers of reworked materials and cheap filings in cloth. The mill owners claim that they pay an average wage of $22.50 for a 48-hour week instead of the old $9 to $12 for 60 to 72-hour weeks. Textile mill workers are drawn to the shoddy mills.

Workers' Dollars Pour In To Battle Yellow Press

IS THE DAILY WORKER A GOOD PAPER? The financial support given by individual workers who read it is a barometer, and fully answers the question. And if the sympathetic readers are willing, yes, anxious, to contribute generously, to INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925, it seems as if the party membership ought be spurred on to double duty.

But we also ask every reader of this paper to do his full share. It will be only those who realize that the DAILY WORKER is needed to battle every manifestation of the bourgeoisie era,—its yellow press, its yellow schools, the big expanse of yellow in which the imperialists still flourish—who will help sustain it. It is the dollars of these workers which will build this paper and many like it in years to come.

Michigan Cities Demand Immediate Phone Rate Cut

LANSING, Mich., Dec. 29. — The petition of the city of Detroit for a reduction in telephone rates will be heard before the Michigan Public Utilities Commission on Jan. 14, that body announced. All cities in the state having Michigan Bell Telephone company service are expected to be represented at the hearing. The petition demands an immediate cut in phone rates.

It is pointed out by the Detroit petition that the Detroit Bell telephone exchange shows huge profits for the last year.

Russian Newspaper Statistics.

MOSCOW, Dec. 29.—There are 531 newspapers in the Russian Soviet Union, according to the press department, central committee of the Communist Party. Of these 160 are dailies with a total circulation of nearly 3,000,000. One hundred and fifteen are in non-Russian languages.

Of Russian editors, 20 per cent are former newspaper men, 40 per cent are revolutionary journalists, and 40 per cent are new men. There are also 25,000 worker correspondents writing for the Russian press while 1,200 working in factory or village.

VAN LEAR GANG SUES STAR'S OLD STOCKHOLDERS

Trades and Labor Body Engages Counsel

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 29. — The farmers and city workers of Minnesota and the northwest who contributed over half a million dollars to found and keep alive The Minnesota Star as a daily paper devoted exclusively to their interests will not have to pay over additional sums to the reactionaries that now control it under the name of The Minneapolis Daily Star, if organized labor can prevent it.

The Star went thru receivership after its policies under Thomas Van Lear who remains as editor and others had caused organized labor to wash its hands of the paper. The original Star was incorporated in Minnesota whose laws make stockholders in corporations liable to the corporation creditors for twice the amount of their stock. Bank stockholders are liable for three times.

To Sue Stockholders.

The reorganized Star is incorporated outside the state, but the receiver for the old Star and the present owners who assumed the debts in part are apparently making ready to sue the old stockholders for their full liability.

This attempt by those guilty of treachery to the purposes for which the producers contributed their cash will be fought on behalf of both farmers and city workers by the Minnesota Trade & Labor assembly, which has engaged counsel to meet the assault in the courts.

Coal Mine Fatalities.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29.— Accidents at coal mines in the United States during November caused the death of 155 men, the bureau of mines announced today. Of this number 114 lost their lives at bituminous coal mines thruout the country, and 41 at anthracite mines in Pennsylvania.

The fatality rate for the entire industry is 3.36 per million tons of coal mined as compared with 3.45 for November, 1923.

Wheat Crop Bad This Year.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 29.—The winter wheat crop is only 87 per cent normal this year, being in worse condition than in the two preceding years, according to A. J. Surratt, state agricultural statistician. The winter wheat fields of central Illinois have been heavily damaged by recent ice storms, and serious concern is felt over the crop.

CHINESE GREET SOVIET WARSHIP VISITING CANTON

Not Like Warship of the Imperialists

By Reeta.

CANTON, Dec. 29.—The following telegram was received by the Soviet training ship Voroveky, visiting Canton, from the Anti-Imperialistic Society, Peking:

"We heartily welcome the arrival of your vessel at Canton.

"All warships of the imperialists always came to China for intimidating and seizing. Indeed, no sooner would the Chinese people raise a voice against it than the imperialists would, with renewed violence and without fear of any consequences, commit their rapacious acts again.

"So it was recently when the Chinese laborers were striking at Shameen and while the merchants' organization rose against the Canton government, the powers' warships gathered, like clouds, at Canton, in order to bring pressure to bear upon the government and the people of Canton. This has become quite a usual proceeding.

"This time, however, the government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, this true friend of all the oppressed nations of the world, has despatched a ship to China, and we fully believe that it is with the best purposes of the government of the Soviet Union that you have come here. We sincerely believe that you can, in the spirit of your ideas, help China, oppressed as she is, in her struggle against imperialism.

"It is in this firm belief that we look with great hope on your arrival, and it is this firm belief again that prompts us to send you our heartiest greetings."

British Columbian Parliament Owned By the Timber Trust

VICTORIA, B. C.—The legislature of British Columbia is owned body and soul by the timber trust and the members of both liberal and conservative parties are unking to do the bidding of the timber interests.

For months prior to the election, the timber industries council has waged a propaganda campaign for the reduction of timber royalties to the government and worked to secure the election of timber men on both parties to put over a proposal that would net the timber interests of the northwest several million dollars saving on royalties. The present royalties on government timber have amounted to $1.10 per 1000 feet, which even in view of the tremendous increase in timber prices is ridiculously low. In 1915, the government passed an act that would increase timber royalties to $3.25 per 1000 feet and would take effect in 1935. The present government, as the behest of the timber interests, proposes to cancel this legislation and fix timber royalties for 10 years at $1.25 per 1000 feet.

Labor men in the legislature are agreed that the pseudo eight-hour day measure, passed by the provincial government was merely a smoke screen to put across the timber royalties steal.

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

As to the "Marxian Trunk" of the Party

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER.

If there is one thing in this discussion more than another that gives me a gentle pain it is the high and lofty air of intellectual superiority assumed by the leading comrades of the minority. This is a hangover from the reign of Comrade Pepper. At that time it was quite the mode for the "intellectuals" of the minority to ridicule with disdain the efforts of the merely proletarian members of the C. E. C., as expressed by the various theses, statements, etc., which they submitted. This practice, which was ill-fated for those following it, we thought had passed. But the party discussion shows that it is still the fashion with the minority leaders.

In now many articles do we find this anti-Communist attitude permeating their arguments. With what assurance they brag of being the only bonafide Communists in the party, that they are the Marxian trunk of our organization. That is the burden of their whole song. Now, nauseating though such an attitude may be, it has at least one advantage for the comrades of the minority to praise themselves so highly as Marxists. If they did not tell us of this Marxism it could not be known otherwise. Certainly no one would discover much Marxism in their advocacy of a "class" farmer-labor party to "fight the battles of the working class." The fact is not a single one of the minority leaders, despite their ceaseless bragging, has ever written anything which would from a Marxian point of view attract a moments notice outside of our party. This is true also of the most outstanding "Marxist" among them, Comrade Wicks, who only a few weeks ago was urging the left wing printers to vote for the Gomperite, James Lynch.

Now what is there to this endless claim of the minority, who never cease blowing of their Marxism, that they are the only element to direct the policies of the Workers Party? Fortunately we have a little something to go on in this respect. This question, too, has been passed upon by the Comintern. It was when the last delegation was in Moscow to get a decision upon the most question of the "third party alliance." It came about this way: Comrade Pepper, on behalf of the minority, carried on a vicious campaign of misrepresentation to discredit the present C. E. C. as a lot of syndicalists and opportunists. In this campaign he was militantly, if not very effectively, assisted by other members of the minority who sent to Moscow the most bitter series of letters it has ever been my unhappy lot to encounter in a revolutionary organization. The writers of these letters dwelt in strong accents of their own revolutionary activities, but they assailed the majority from every point in the compass, and from many that the compas never heard of.

After this big barrage, which we hoped would smash the majority's poor defenses to the ground, Comrade Pepper drew up his army in full array and made a frontal attack upon the present C. E. C. by demanding that the Comintern removes it from power. Although so badly discredited by the convention, he demanded that the party be turned over to the tender mercies of the minority. He asked that the minority be given four additional members on the C. E. C., full control of the DAILY WORKER, and other measures calculated to place the minority fully in control of the party. Incidentally, as a sort of good measure, he demanded that our unemployment and other policies be reversed.

Now here was the issue squarely placed. The question of the fitness of the two groups was fairly in question. And the Communist International was to judge. On the one side as our minority comrades would have it, there was the splendid "Marxian trunk" of the party (which was incidentally the author of the August theses, the third party alliance and every other opportunistic move for the past three years) and on the other side, the present C. E. C. of "syndicalists" and "opportunists" and "non-Marxists." The fate of the party was at stake. If the party were turned over to the minority, all would be rosee and progress; but if it were turned over to the majority, everything would be lost.

And what was the Comintern's decision? How did it choose between the two groups? We all know that the C. I. is a real international and that it does not hesitate to re-organize a central executive committee in any country if such action is necessary in order to put the party involved back into Bolshevik control. Now if the claims of the minority were true the duty of the Comintern would have been clear, and we know it would have performed that duty relentlessly by removing the present C. E. C. from power. But the Comintern refused to do this. Somehow it failed to get the point that the minority were the only Communist, Marxian branch in our party. Possibly it may have thought that there were just as good Communists and Marxists among the majority. But at any rate, and this is the big thing, the Comintern rejected completely the demands of Pepper giving the minority a sharp rebuke incidentally. It not only maintained the C. E. C. in power, but it expressed confidence in the present majority. This expression of confidence was later reiterated by Comrade Zinoviev at the Fifth Congress. Let the decision of the Comintern on their demand for control of the C. E. C. be the answer to the eternal bragging of the minority of their Communist superiority.

No, the Comintern did not reject all of the minority's demands. There was one that it granted, and that we joined; viz., that the Pepper-Ruthenberg and Cannon-Foster groups be amalgamated. In making this demand the minority showed the hypocrisy of their whole case. If the majority were such non-Communists and syndicalists as the minority said they were why did the latter want to amalgamate within them and thus possibly poison their own purity? May be, it the goodness of their hearts, they were willing to adopt us poor orphans. But if this were so, however, we mention the Comintern gave no encouragement to their gentle aspirations. It seemed to think the majority quite capable of sitting up and taking nourishment. The minority have learned this also during the past year. They have learned that the proletarians of the majority can at the very least hold their own with the "intellectuals" of the minority, and can puncture their opportunism quite effectively.

RUTHENBERG'S "FARMER-LABOR AUDIT"

By JOSEPH MANLEY.

COMRADE RUTHENBERG, in the DAILY WORKER of Dec. 9, seeks to prove to our membership that I am a common liar by his publication of an alleged audit of farmer-labor expenses, supposedly, compiled with the due care and accuracy that befits his office of executive secretary of our party.

It may come as a shock and a surprise to our membership to find Comrade Ruthenberg using his high office to misrepresent facts and figures with the end in view of destroying a political adversary. To substantiate this grave charge I will analyze but a few of the items of the alleged audit published by him as an answer to my original estimate. In making my analysis I am at a distinct disadvantage, I am living "on the land" at present in the anthracite region. I can call no bat-ting bookkeeper or adding machine to my assistance.

The first fault I find with the "audit" of Comrade Ruthenberg is that, as usual with his estimates—as I will on another occasion point out—no one but himself can understand it. It does not tell the story. My estimate, on the contrary, took first the cost of operating the federated with which I was thoroly familiar, and the other items with which I was most closely associated and of which I had intimate knowledge.

Comrade Ruthenberg accepts my estimate on the first item—the federated. He knows my figure of $7,000 is a conservative one.

Now let me ask Comrade Ruthenberg if his figure of $6,532.41 —the alleged total labor party campaign expense for 1924—includes: (1) The subsidy given the Minnesota Workers Party to help organize the farmer-labor federation; (2) The sums advanced to the St. Paul committee to organize the St. Paul convention; (3) The expenses of Comrade Wicks and the several organizers while engaged in the farmer-labor party campaign work; (4) The sums we spent on getting farmer-labor leaders (several of whom double-crossed us at the farmer-labor party, the darling of their hearts) to the several conferences held in St. Paul and elsewhere; (5) The expenses of yourself, Comrade Foster and others on the various trips to confer with Mahoney and others; (6) The expenses of other central executive committee members while on farmer-labor work and the whole central executive committee to the St. Paul convention; (7) The sums advanced to the various districts to help finance delegates; (8) The advance hall rent at St. Paul and all the other incidentals while in St Paul in connection with the actual convention.

None of the above items, and some not mentioned, are included in my estimate of the cost of operating the federated. Therefore, they must be included in any real audit of the total farmer-labor party expense. They must be included under the head of "national farmer-labor party expense, $990.65." Because I remember being the agent at the March St. Paul conference thru which the Workers Party pledged $500 to the St. Paul committee and I remember Comrade Ruthenberg telling me shortly afterwards that he had to send another $500. Neither of these items were entered in the books of the federated and, therefore, must be either in the item of $6,532.41 or are entered in the Workers Party books under some other head that does not show up in the farmer-labor party "audit."

One more item in the alleged "audit" excites my suspicion that Comrade Ruthenberg with his usual wave of the hand and smiling countenance wishes to hang something on me. The item—Farmer-Labor Voice deficit, $1,905.39: The Farmer-Labor Voice—of which I was editor and which by the way taught me more about the extremes of opportunism to which I was being driven than any other one thing—had no real income at all. It was financed entirely by the Workers Party, and its mission was to peddle farmer-labor damnfoolishness to elements that in reality were LaFollette bandits. Its circulation ran down from 20,000 in its first issues to less than 10,000 in its closing issues. In all, 20 issues were published. Comrade Ruthenberg must prove it to me that the cost of printing, mailing and the circular letters to boost circulation was as low as he claims.

Comrade Ruthenberg has completely left out of his "audit," a reckoning of the expense to our district organizations of participating in the farmer-labor party campaign. All this is done with a purpose, first, to make me appear a dangerous critic, for I was a member of the Pepper faction he thought me sensible enough to nominate me twice to be the secretary of two of his pet farmer-labor parties—and, second, to minimize the expense to the Workers Party of that which he was such a devout champion—the farmer-labor party.

Until Comrade Ruthenberg publishes a complete itemized statement covering all the items above enumerated and showing that the total to the Workers Party national and district for its participation in the farmer-labor party campaign was actually the sum he claims, namely: $19,491.60, I will continue to stand by my original estimate, which I maintain is conservative namely: $50,000.

No sleight of hand audits; no insulting remarks from Comrade Ruthenberg or some of his dear followers will bluff me off. So Comrade Ruthenberg pray let me advise you to get your bat-ting bookkeeper and adding machines busy. The dead hand of the farmer-labor party has lost its grip. Down with its corpse! Up with the Workers (Communist) Party!

HOW BITTELMAN PLAINLY LIED ABOUT WHAT HAPPENED AT THE HUNGARIAN COMMUNIST CONVENTION

By BEN GITLOW.

IN the wilderness of New York a sage was found in all his naked innocence by the present majority of the C. E. C. Because he became a member of the infallible flock he was elevated by Comrade Cannon with the approval of Comrade Foster to the leading position in the party, thereby becoming the grand apostle of Communism in the country. So it came to pass that he left New York for Chicago. In Chicago where the stench of the stockyards nauseates be raised his sinewy arm felling with one fierce blow the giant Pepper to the ground. And behold, ye unsophisticated members of the Workers Party, the giant is no more. Comrade Bittelman, shy and bashful like a maiden that knows better, is now the political secretary of the Workers Party of America.

Wearing the mantle of the great and assuming the position of the political oracle among the Communists in America it has become the painful duty of Comrade Bittelman to supply in the magic words, both spoken and written, that in their very utterance destroy all opposition, particularly that of the minority. We find this firebrand speaking before the convention of the Hungarian section for over two and a half hours on behalf of the majority, pouring forth long thousands of words that would have scuttled a pirate ship, leave alone the minority, he was surprised to learn at the end of it all that the delegates were not overcome but soberly by a vote of 23 to 1 supported the minority.

Bittelman therefore in his anger deliberately forgets what actually took place at the convention. The convention was very orderly. It deliberated fully on all matters before it. Comrade Bittelman was given every opportunity to present his viewpoint. Comrade Bittelman in his article admits that the discussion on the majority and minority lasted over four hours. That alone is sufficient proof that every phase of the question was considered.

Comrade Bittelman comes to the following conclusion because the delegates by a vote of 23 to 1 supported the minority. He is however afraid to make a definite charge so he frames it in the vague terms that it seems as it:

Says Bittelman, "It seems as if the farmer-labor party idea had become an obsession with the comrades who cannot imagine the further development of our movement without this slogan."

Please, Comrade Bittelman, don't tell us that it seemed so. What actually did the delegates say? Many delegates spoke and pointed out why it was necessary to continue the use of the farmer-labor party slogan. Why don't you present quotations from their arguments to prove what seemed to you was actually so? The truth of the matter is that Comrade Bittelman was either asleep while the discussion was on or that from the arguments presented the above conclusion can not logically be drawn. A mere assertion, Comrade Bittelman, is no proof.

Then Comrade Bittelman with his political sagacity quotes from the C. I. and comes to another conclusion. This time the political secretary of our party gets an impression. After all we are living in an impressionistic age.

Thus states Comrade Bittelman: "The impression forced upon me by the debate at the Hungarian convention was that at least some sections of our party are becoming contaminated with (petty bourgeois pacifist) illusions. That this is a menace to our party every one will admit."

Comrade Bittelman, concretely, what did the Hungarian section and its convention do to warrant such a serious charge? Why does not Comrade Bittelman, the political secretary of the party, bring definite motions before the C. E. C. to eradicate the dangerous petty bourgeois pacifist tendencies manifested at the Hungarian convention? To fail to do so in the face of such a serious menace to our party is to neglect one's Bolshevik duty to our party. For a C. E. C. member who is aware of such a dangerous tendency within our party and not to actively oppose it is a crime. But Bittelman and the majority of the C. E. C. will not take action against the Hungarian section because the insinuations of Comrade Bittelman contain not one iota of truth. The damaging insinuating charges Comrade Bittelman has so carelessly indulges in should be severely condemned.

The Hungarian convention and the activities of the section conclusively prove the opposite of what Comrade Bittelman contends. The report of its executive committee and the resolution passed proves that the Hungarian section is Bolshevik, an active section of the party and a wholehearted and loyal supporter of the Communist International.

Comrade Bittelman, will you contend that a fight against the Two-and-a-Half International ideology as proposed in the report of the Federation secretary, is a symptom of petty bourgeois pacifist illusions? Or will you hold that to insist upon a Marxian-Leninist education of our party membership together with the reorganization of the party on the basis of shop nuclei, also part of the resolution, is that the Hungarian section is petty bourgeois pacifist and therefore a menace to our party? Comrade Bittelman is using methods that are a real menace to the party in an attempt to discredit a whole section of party workers who are loyal to the party and who are acting as true Bolsheviks only because he happens not to agree with them on party tactic.

Comrade Bittelman then takes up my presentation of the minority at the convention. Says Bittelman in his article:

"Comrade Gitlow resented very much the charge of opportunism directed by the central executive committee against the minority for its policy of emasculating the Workers Party and building a substitute for it. In reply to this charge Comrade Gitlow informed the Hungarian convention to examine the personnel of the majority and minority of the central executive committee. To assist the convention in this examination Comrade Gitlow volunteered a list of information. He said the minority is composed of comrades of long standing in the labor movement, people who have suffered for the movement, have served prison terms for their ideas and have thereby proven their fitness for leadership in the American Communist Party. I do not recall whether Comrade Gitlow volunteered any information on the record of members of the majority. But the conclusion that is to be drawn from his statement was that members of the majority of the central executive committee do not possess virtues attributed by him to the minority, at least in the same measure and therefore the contentions of the central executive committee must not be taken seriously."

Needless to say that the above is a complete distortion of what I did say. I protest most vehemently against such deliberate falsification to discredit an opponent in a party discussion. Comrade Bittelman should stick to facts. Comrade Bittelman knows what I said.

What I said was in answer to the charge that the majority calls the minority liquidators. In reference to this I asked the delegates to examine the personnel of the minority and their service in the Communist movement to determine whether or not the minority is made up of comrades who want to liquidate the Communist Party. I pointed out that the minority was composed of members who had been active in the left wing of the socialist party and in the organization of the Communist Party of the country. I stated further that these comrades had fought for the party, defended it in all kinds of situations, and had gone to jail for it. These are facts. Bittelman and the whole majority cannot deny them. As a further example let us take Comrade Ruthenberg. Comrade Ruthenberg is of the minority. The majority brands him as a liquidator after having spent three years in prison for the Communist Party he is again, as a result of the Bridgeman trials, facing a ten year sentence for his loyalty to the party. Nevertheless, Bittelman and his supporters, many of whom are recent adherents to the party, have the audacity to brand him and others of the minority like him as liquidators. On the question of opportunism I will answer Comrade Bittelman a little further on.

Comrade Bittelman also distorts another statement I made. He states in his article that I said the following: "That the Russian Communist Party initiated a movement for the organization of Soviets. Why did the Russian party do it? Why did the Russian party build non-Communist, non-partisan political bodies such as Soviets? Because the Russian party knew that by means of these Soviets it will be able to mobilize large masses of workers and poor farmers, organize them around itself for revolutionary struggles against capitalism. The American party has the same duties to perform in the United States. It must therefore create non-partisan political bodies in order to achieve the above end. Consequently the Workers Party of America must carry on a campaign for a farmer-labor party."

The above is a complete falsification of what I said. When the political secretary of a Communist Party resorts to such deliberate methods of misrepresentation in the furtherance of factionalism, the party is bound to suffer severely. Now what did I say in the question of Soviets? I said that the Russian Communist Party participated in the Soviets even though the Soviets were not Communist bodies and even though they were not integral parts of the Bolshevik Party. That did not stop the Russian party of the party from using the slogan of all power to the Soviets thereby through the revolutionary struggle that ensued making the Soviets the instruments of state power and the basis of the dictatorship of the proletariat. I used this argument in connection with the sectarian poison that is being injected into our party by the majority that maintains that only through its own organization can the party wage a Communist political struggle, and that it is opportunism for the party to wage political struggle thru the instrumentality of other organizations. The farmer-labor party I therefore contended could be made an instrument of our political struggle even though it is not a Communist body. The British Communist Party demonstrated that it is possible to do so when it ran Communists on the labor party ticket in England.

Comrade Bittelman follows up with a statement that when a representative of the minority finds it necessary to resort to such arguments as those related above it would prove that his cause is in a very bad way. But dear Comrade Bittelman you are a member of the C. E. C. of a Communist party. Don't manufacture arguments yourself and then credit them to some member of the minority. They will call your bluff every time. And don't wind up your argument by saying that five or six delegates refrained from voting. You know that all the delegates voted and if five or eight did not vote how comes it that you could not convince them to vote for the majority? In order therefore to infer that your imaginary five or eight (you were not present) are a majority you end up by saying that it really required some courage for the one lone delegate who voted for the majority to raise his voice against the minority. That it took no courage to speak for the majority Comrade Bittelman was told. No blackjacks or guns were used. Even Comrade Bittelman was permitted over two and a half hours to speak on the majority. The lone delegate got the same courtesy that all the other delegates received. If he didn't let him present charges to the C. E. C. and the C. E. C. will act accordingly.

Comrade Bittelman introduced a trick resolution at the Hungarian convention. In his resolution he failed to include an out and out indorsement by the delegates of the majority thesis. This resolution was so framed that supporters of the minority position if they were not on the watch could easily be fooled into voting for his resolution in the belief that it was not an indorsement of the majority. The first paragraph of the resolution is proof sufficient to the above contention. It is as follows:

"The convention of the Hungarian section accepts the report of the central executive committee submitted to it by Comrade Bittelman and pledges its full support to the program of Bolshevizing the party as outlined in the program of the central executive committee particularly the section which calls for an ideological struggle against all opportunistic tendencies in the party."

He wanted the Hungarian convention to pledge itself for an ideological campaign against opportunism and opportunistic tendencies in the party. Opportunism Bittelman defined as participation by the party in the farmer-labor party movement and the opportunistic tendencies are the tendencies of the minority. When the Hungarian comrades suggested that Comrade Bittelman, if he did not want the Hungarian convention to go on record for the majority, that he change that clause to include acceptance of the clause to include a fight against the Two-and-a-Half International tendency, Bittelman refused. Bittelman, who refuses to include in his resolution a plank against Two-and-a-Half International tendencies in our party, because it contains conservative petty bourgeois pacifist and opportunistic because they insist that the C. I. decision in this respect he carried out. The antics of Comrade Bittelman are really ludicrous. The tragedy of it, however, is due to the fact that they seem to be considered by our membership which holds in high esteem whatever the political secretary of the party has to say or do.

Comrade Bittelman objects because the Hungarian convention wants to see the decision of the R. I. L. U. put into effect. The Hungarian convention will as all other comrades would really like to know what the industrial department has actually done to put the decision of the Profitern into effect. They know that unless it is that our industrial work will continue to suffer severely. They know, furthermore, that Comrade Bittelman but show us what the majority has really done with this most important decision affecting at the present time one of our most important tasks. Comrade Bittelman after distorting everything that Comrade Amter said at the convention objects because Comrade Amter brought in Comrade Pepper's name in his speech to the convention.

Comrade Bittelman, without the wink of an eyelash, on the matter of injecting Comrade Pepper's name has this to say:

"The point that I wish to raise here is on what ground will Comrade Amter and the minority justify the raising of this issue in the party? By what arguments will they prove that such speches as Comrade Amter's are contributing to the welfare of the Workers Party? Factionalism as a rule is most rampant in pre-convention periods but it would seem that there must be a limit to it somewhere."

It little behooves Comrade Bittelman to preach against factionalism in our party. He has been an arch factionalist in the Jewish federation of which he was secretary and at all times in the party. The manner in which the present majority of the party succeeded in removing Comrade Pepper from valuable service to our party was a crime against the party. It was actuated by ugliest factionalism. Comrade Bittelman was a party to that crime. No single man has rendered the American party as much valuable service as did Comrade Pepper. The majority of the C. E. C. having closed an alliance in a bound caucus with Comrade Lore formed by the Two-and-a-Half International, unable to withstand the Communist criticism of Comrade Pepper decided to get rid of him. The mistake the majority made is that they did not as they had hoped to, get rid of the Bolshevik elements by the put-up job when they got rid of Pepper. And now after the majority has been and still is guilty of a thousand factional sins, after they have contaminated with their unholy alliance the party with the ideology of the left social democrats, they come out and try to raise the cry of factionalism against the minority. We hurl the charge back into Bittelman's teeth and into the teeth of the whole majority. Why does the majority still support Lore and with his support seek to compel the minority to accept the fact that the Communist International, March, 1924, has ordered that unity be established between the majority and minority?

Comrade Bittelman closes his article with a resume of the activities of the Hungarian section. He complains that the membership of the Hungarian section is very small, and tries to imply that it is due to the fact that the Hungarian section neglects to work among the numerous Hungarian workers who are employed in the basic industries. In this respect Comrade Bittelman ignores completely the report of the executive of the Hungarian section to the convention. In that report it was pointed out that the Hungarian section had made special efforts to reach the Hungarian workers employed in the basic industries. But Comrade Bittelman should not blame the Hungarian section of the party for the

REALISTIC SHREDS

By BUD REYNOLDS.

THE issue raised in the present party discussion, is the possibility for good or ill to the cause of Communism, in the party's reviving the slogan, "For a farmer-labor party."

The minority have, by the importance they attach to it, practically raised this issue to the status of a Communist principle. Reading some of their contributions to the discussion, one would gather that the farmer-labor party was to Communism what municipal ownership was to the old S. P., a purgatory in which the metal of the workers was to be tempered to a revolutionary hardness. And as the minority leadership had its roots deep in the S. P., the possibility of S. P. "political action" reviving, leading into the party, is not too remote to be considered. I understand the F. L. P. slogan to be but a phase of the united front tactic. If we define the meaning and purpose of the united front tactic, and examine it in this light, testing how it meets the requirements as compared to other phases of the united front tactic, we will be getting down to reality. If we find only "realistic shreds," let us not let Comrade Zevaloff's ghost rise from its calm consideration of them by an inept quotation from Lenin.

The united front tactic has for its purpose the attracting of workers who do not at present follow our leadership, but who stand near to us or who may be brought into action in concert with us, to achieve a common aim; with the end in view of immediately getting them into action and ultimately winning them to our party. This definition is exact enough to serve the purposes of this discussion. Let us examine our experiences in Detroit.

It is to be understood that Detroit is an extremely industrialized city, that its trade union movement has been known for years as being very progressive (comparatively) and that Detroit has for years been a hot-bed of radicalism. These factors favored us.

Our first united front was for Russian relief. In this, we secured the support of the Detroit Federation of Labor and many local unions. Our work extending over a year was highly successful. We made many contacts, gained many members and supporters, and were in a greatly strengthened position at the end of the action. It was a success.

Our next drive was for amalgamation. In this we acted in the local unions to get resolutions endorsing same. We succeeded in getting the Detroit Federation of Labor favorably on record. Thru the Detroit delegation to the Michigan Federation Convention, we succeeded in its adoption there. (At this point, I can hear the minority shout for action instead of resolutions.) I may say that much good propaganda was done in pointing out the present organizational weakness of the unions, the jurisdictional disputes which divide the craft into warring groups, and the stumbling block to progress presented by the reactionary officialdom in the various craft divisions. The slogan which would be modified or eliminated by amalgamation. More could have been accomplished, had more of the minority leaders and their federation followers been looking for action then.

Our next major problem was that of defending Communists arrested in an illegal convention with all the yellow pack of the kept press in full cry. That we could organize a successful united front on this issue, raising money and getting the Michigan Federation of Labor to condemn the law, the arrests and the prosecution, investigate the matter and bring in a report of much value to the defense in raising money and molding public sentiment, is an indication that a fairly healthy sentiment prevailed as a result of our party's activities. This united front was a success. We strengthened our position.

Now comes the farmer-labor phase of the united front, which we are told by the minority is to be the "seven league boots" of Communism. While the federation supporters of the minority were conducting their singing societies, dramatic clubs, and real estate ventures, not yet realizing that the farmer-labor party slogan was a similar prelude to Communism, the Detroit supporters of the majority thesis carried on a militant campaign for a farmer-labor party. The report of the July convention to the Detroit Federation of Labor cost us our first serious defeat. We accepted defeat with a determination to come back stronger to the next trial of strength, believing that the fault lay with us instead of the slogan.

When the June 17 issue came up the Detroit Federation of Labor tactfully refused to consider it. We called our own conference. Those unions we controlled and a few others sent delegates. The action was condemned by the Detroit Federation of Labor, with telling effect upon some of our affiliations and some of our party members. The convention was held, with what results we are all familiar. We were never possible to get the delegates together again, except our own party members. The decision of the party to run our own candidates pulled us out of a hole that had become untenable, locally as it had become nationally. At the end of this "united front" action, and particularly on this farmer-labor issue, the party stood stripped of all its former supporters. At the end of the action, we stood in a weakened position. The result was a united front of our opponents.

We need not anxiously regret this isolation. It has clearly shown us the nature of our struggle. It has shown us how scant are the forces now favoring a class party. Our experience has been sufficient to dispel the illusion that class elements are to be conjured into being by sounding the magic phrase, "class farmer-labor party."

THE LaFOLLETTE REVOLUTION

By LUDWIG LORE.
(Article II.)

IT will be always a matter of gratification to me that in the period when our associative committee and our party allowed itself to be infected by Comrade Pepper with the virus of the third party madness, our group—the New York group—had not only the political wisdom to come out immediately against the most dangerous piece of opportunism, upon which any revolutionary movement has ever embarked, but that it had the courage to stand up under the wave of popular disapproval and official ostracism that is always the lot of those who dare to oppose the decisions of our leaders, before the latter have become convinced, by the grim logic of circumstances, of the error of their ways.

In the discussions during and after the LaFollette era, various motives were imputed to me to account for my stand on the petty bourgeois third party. Nothing that I could say at this time, I believe, could describe my fundamental position that prompted my opposition more convincingly than brief excerpts from a number of articles that appeared in the New Yorker Volkszeitung on this subject.

On December 5, 1923, immediately after the publication of the November thesis, I wrote the following:

"... They (the present minority) say: 'Where such third parties, calling themselves farmer-labor parties, or workers and exploited farmers come into existence we must become a part of them. But it must be our policy to win all workers and exploited farmers away from the third party and to organize them in an F. L. P. class party.'

"It is easy to see what the majority (now the minority) of the executive committee contemplates. It feels, rightly, that large proportions of the working class will be drawn by a so-called F. L. P. under the control of petty bourgeois elements and capitalist politicians, and that it therefore becomes necessary to adopt a tactic of boring from within similar to that of the T. U. E. L. in the labor unions. But they overlook the fact that labor unions and political parties are two widely different things, which certainly can not, in practical questions, be judged by the same standards.

"But there is a more important consideration. The American worker must not be confused. Neither directly nor indirectly should the Communist movement assist in wiping out the class lines that the socialist movement, in the many years of its pioneer work, helped to draw. It is true, today the American worker has not class feelings. Only a exceedingly small percentage knows the word class consciousness. Still, in the American party literature as well as in the heads of the most progressive proletarian elements the word has a very definite concept which we all have helped to establish in our fights against Gomperism, against the Johnstonian primary election policy, and by the propagation for an independent class policy directed against all capitalist parties. . . ."

On December 18 an editorial under the heading, "The District Convention of the W P.," contained the following:

"... And even then the thesis which provides for the possible entry of the Workers Party into a petty bourgeois third party would have been voted down had not Comrade William Z. Foster, who had come to the convention as a guest, cleverly drawn the red herring of anti-Gomperism into the debate. This determined a number of delegates, who up to this time had been in opposition to the thesis, to turn. So, for instance, six delegates from the Finnish branches. Instructed against the thesis, were won by Foster's illogical Gompers argument."

After expressing the hope that the question will go by default, the article proceeds:

"The third bourgeois party will be possible only if the democratic and republican parties both nominate conservative reactionaries. The republicans have their Coolidge. . . . But if the democratic party should be so incredibly stupid as to nominate an Underwood—i. e. a reactionary whom not even the A. F. of L. could support—then, to be sure, the formation of a third party becomes a possibility. And since LaFollette is a warm admirer of the A. F. of L. president, Mr. Gompers would go with flying flags and glaring trumpets into the camp of the new party, having taken good care, however, that the W. P. and the F. F. L. P. have no place in this illustrious gathering. And again: LaFollette may be very liberal-and unprejudiced. But surely he is much too good a mathematician not to know that numerically the support of the A. F. of L. machine is much more important than that of the leaders of the class conscious workers . . ."

On December 30:

"... For the simple reason that there will be no third party of the kind we are dreaming of, LaFollette will have the masses behind him just as little as did all other would-be Moses of the petty bourgeoisie, and without the masses he will not leave his republican flesh pots . . ."

"... It is a long way to Tipperary. There are no short cuts. There is only one way, the straight—and therefore the shortest way—to mass education and to a mass movement of the proletariat. He who believes that mass parties can be maneuvered out of the ground is in danger of losing his way and going dangerously astray.

"... And because we are in favor of this mass education along the straight path we wholeheartedly support the F. F. L. P. which will bring those elements within the circle of our influence, with whom we can and must work, whom we must reach if we wish to create a strong and inclusive labor and small farmer party."

On January 2, under the title, "Good News from Chicago":

"... This proposition is fraught with grave dangers for our party and for the entire labor movement in the United States It is based upon a (in our opinion absolutely false) conception of the existing political situation, upon an incorrect understanding of the intentions of the radical bourgeois politician of the LaFollette-Borah type and a gross exaggeration of the influence of the left wing in a bourgeois third party . . ."

On January 17, this was followed by an article in answer to an editorial published in the Hungarian "Uj Elore" entitled, "The Workers Party and the Middle Class," from which we quote the following:

"... Our Hungarian party organ attempts to locate the impression that the supporters of the third party alliance were in favor, and the opponents of this unnatural union against the bringing of the factory workers into contact with the petty bourgeoisie. That, of course, is not the case. We, too, are very definitely in favor of reaching the farmer and the middle class and intend to disappear in the proletariat with our propaganda, of making them, if not members of the Communist Party at least sympathetic toward it. Not only do we not oppose propaganda among the farmers, but we have always actively supported it... The writer of the Elore's article overlooks another fact which is strongly emphasized in the thesis of the C. E. C. majority, namely, that it is not the purpose of this move to win the middle class or working class elements, but that the going into the LaFollette alliance is intended only as a maneuver by which the proletarian elements are to be separated from the petty bourgeois party and turned over to a working class party. That would mean not only that we will not attempt to bring the LaFollette movement under the influence of our Communist ideas and line of thought, but that, on the contrary, we turn them into our most intense enemies, embitter them by representing ourselves to them in the role of the splitters of a great united front movement, thus hindering the very things which Stalin and the Elore editors consider absolutely essential for the success of the American revolution . . ."

Need we say more to prove the utter fallacy of the argument that the New York group was opposed to third party participation because it was so much like LaFollette, that it was afraid to lose its identity? Is there in these editorials anything that has not been said in these columns again and again during the last three weeks by representatives of the majority thesis in their opposition to new F. F. L. P. overtures?

The consistent opposition of our group to the "policy of maneuvers," of which Pepper and Ruthenberg were so proud, had brought down upon us the accusation that we are opposed to all maneuvers at all times, and are therefore out of sympathy with an important phase of Communist policies. Nothing can be further from the truth. It so happens that some of the most important members of the N. Y. group are men and women whose entire work in the party has consisted in the direction of Communist maneuvers in the labor movement. Practically every one of us did valuable work in the class farmer-labor party movement, as long as we believed it had a chance for success. I, myself, during this time, together with the comrades of the German group, carried on a campaign for increased propaganda possibilities in an important German working class organization, the Workingmen's Sick and Death Benefit Fund, that has opened up for us a valuable field for our work. What we did oppose was the attitude assumed by our comrades that "we would maneuver capitalism into a corner," and that "we would maneuver LaFollette out of the control of the working class and farmer elements in his own party," because we knew our own weakness, and appreciated the dangers attendant upon a policy of alliance with this would-be farmer-labor party under the control of the petty bourgeois.

Nothing can be achieved by a tactic of bluff. Some of us live under the delusion that the political opponents, whom we would outmaneuver, are ignoramuses, and look down upon them from the height of their superior wisdom. It is about time that we understood that our real strength is known and that we are only hurting ourselves when we insist upon exaggerating our accomplishments. The time will come, when the Workers Party will be able to undertake large scale maneuvers and to undertake them successfully.

When I see the frantic efforts that are being made by the two groups to burden each other with the responsibility for Lore's misdeeds, I cannot help but think mournfully of those days, not more than a year or two ago, when I was still the respected friend and co-worker of the present minority group. Until the national office was moved to Chicago, I was Comrade Lovestone's trusted confidant, and altogether was treated with a great deal more consideration than has fallen to my humble share since I cast my lot with the "syndicalist" group. Before I left New York for the Chicago convention, just a year ago, I was told by a mutual friend here that Lovestone would meet me at the Chicago railroad depot on my arrival. Lovestone, who had been obliged to get out of bed at 4 o'clock of a very unpleasant December morning in order to meet me, dangled, after a few preliminaries, a model ballot list before my eyes, a list of names in the handwriting of Comrade Ruthenberg. My name stood at the head of this slate that the Ruthenberg-Lovestone-Pepper group was prepared to propose to the convention. I informed Lovestone that I had one main purpose at this convention, to oppose the LaFollette alliance with all my might. At a secret session of the convention Pepper moved that the entire third party question be submitted to the C. I. for final decision. It was, of course, understood by the entire convention that this was the strongest possible card for our support. As is usually the case when Pepper maneuvers, he made his reckoning without his host. Our group unanimously voted to support the present majority, because we felt in general our orientation was more in harmony with the Foster-Cannon conception.

Who was this Lore whom Pepper, Ruthenberg, Lovestone were so anxious to place at the head of their C. E. C. slate at the end of 1923? The same Lore who had written the Serratti and Paul Levi articles that are being used now to create the new fake issue of Loreism in the party!

CLEVELAND COMRADES WILL GREET THE NEW YEAR WITH BIG DANCE

CLEVELAND, O., Dec. 29.—A serpentin and confetti ball—this is the affair to which all Workers Party members and sympathizers and lovers of a jolly good time should come on New Years Eve, Wednesday, Dec. 31. The committee has arranged for a peppy orchestra, there will be lots of refreshments available, and in order to see the New Year started on its way, dancing will continue after midnight.

A large hall, with a splendid floor has been secured at the Institute, 2491 East 55th St., opposite the East Technical High School. Admission 50c per person. Come and bring your friends and help make this the biggest affair yet held by Local Cleveland.

The Workers Party in Action

Decisions of the Central Executive Committee

At Meetings Held December 7 to 13.

The central executive committee of the party, in addition to decisions already announced in the party press, made the following decisions in meetings held between Dec. 7 and 13:

Slovak Federation—Sent invitation to the Slovak federation, which is not affiliated with the party, inviting federation to affiliate with our organization and outlining certain points of policy in relation thereto.

Sacco-Vanzetti Campaign—Set the second Sunday in February for mass meetings thruout the country in support of the defense of Sacco and Vanzetti. Authorized the arrangement of united front conferences to conduct such meetings. Complete statement of the campaign will appear in the party press in a few days.

New York Propaganda Paper—Authorized the district executive committee of New York to publish a small size propaganda paper after the present DAILY WORKER drive is completed.

Italian Section—Approved the new bureau and officers of the Italian section of the party.

Elected a special committee to investigate a certain article written by A. Capraro in which it is claimed statements were made violating the discipline of the party.

Armenian Section—Approved of the action of the New York branch in expelling Comrades Sunarian, Gahalian and Demirjian from the party for publication of the paper in opposition to the Armenian section of the party and for organizing a group in opposition to the Armenian section.

Advertisements in Party Papers—Decided that party papers should not carry the advertisements of public service corporations. The question arose thru offers to the Freiheit of advertisements of the New York Telephone Co. and the Consolidated Gas Co. of New York

Shop Nuclei Organization — Approved of thesis and program of immediate work and for submission to the national convention. The thesis will appear in an early issue of the party paper.

Educational Work—Reaffirmed appointment of Comrade John Brahtin as educational circuit lecturer in Cleveland over the protest of the city central of Cleveland as per statement sent to the party press

German Section Convention—Appointed a subcommittee consisting of Comrades Cannon, Krumbein and Gitlow, to investigate the charge that a certain comrade had called Comrade Bedacht an "agent of Moscow" at the German section convention.

Executive Committee—Sent an inquiry to all district organizers inquiring what elections would take place in their territory during the coming year and asking for a full report to the central executive committee on these elections, the character of the vote and issues which might arise locally so that policies might be formulated.

Position of Comrade Lore on Party Discussion — To question Comrade Lore within a week to register his vote on the theses submitted for party's discussion or to submit a thesis of his own.

Anthracite Coal Situation—Authorized Comrades Manley and Myerscough to take charge of the situation in the anthracite coal fields in relation to the outlaw strike and to work out a program of assisting the workers in their struggle against the Lewis machine.

Russian Section Party Discussion—Called attention to the editor of Novy Mir that all articles in the party discussion must be signed and appointed a subcommittee consisting of Comrades Oblan, Chramov, Brailovsky, for the majority, and Comrades Ashcenudse, Golos and Bourgin, for the minority, to make arrangements for the discussion before the branches in district No. 2.

Massachusetts Conference for Progressive Political Action—Sent the following instructions to District Organizer Ballam as our policy for the conference for progressive political action in Massachusetts: You are instructed to put into effect policy Workers Party and should have done so in league meeting. Following are instructions for conference: Introduce resolution criticising futility petty bourgeois reformism LaFollette movement. Brand alliance between union reactionaries and socialists and petty bourgeoisie as class collaboration and betrayal of working class. Take uncompromising stand for class struggle and present Workers (Communist) Party as only political party standing for working class interests. Fight socialist party resolution for far farmer-labor party as fake phrase mongering covering alliance with petty bourgeoisie. Call for united front action of all labor organizations around Workers Party upon program contained in central executive committee statement on conference for progressive political action published in DAILY WORKER Nov. 29. Make strong fight for this resolution. When defeated make statement that you will not participate in betraying workers. Leave conference. District committee should immediately prepare for calling united front conference for child labor campaign.—C. E. Ruthenberg, Executive Secretary.

PHILADELPHIA EDUCATIONAL WORK GOING STRONG WITH CARLSON IN CHARGE; CLASSES GROW STEADILY

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Dec. 29.—There may be doubting Thomases who say that study class work is unessential or that it attracts the attention of very few of our members. The C. E. E. of the party thinks otherwise. And so do the members in the Philadelphia district now that their lecture-study circuit has gotten under way under the leadership of Comrade Oliver Carlson.

Baltimore, Washington, Chester, and Philadelphia are already holding their classes, while additional classes are being arranged for Bethlehem and Wilmington. The course consists of eleven lectures on the "Elements of Communism"—the first five of which are devoted to establishing a background upon which the principles of Communism are based; the remaining six lectures are devoted to establishing all tactics of the revolutionary workingclass parties; the difference between reformist and revolutionary parties, etc. etc.

To date every city has shown a growing interest in the course by an increased attendance. Baltimore, where there were about 23 present for the opening lecture showed 35 at the second lecture, Washington, with 32 at the first lecture almost doubled its attendance at the second one with 60 present, a large number of whom were non-party members. Chester (where the W. P. is very small and just recently organized) had 10 present at the first meeting and 12 at the second. In Philadelphia, the opening class began with about 35 present. At the conclusion of the meeting a motion was made from the floor of the meeting that the lecture be given over again for the benefit of those who were unable to atend the first meeting. A new group of about 40 have been obtained who will attend the second delivery of the opening lecture and then become a part of the regular class.

The interest in the classes has been growing steadily. Every member who has attended one of the classes has expressed complete satisfaction with it. time" has been the expression of comrades in all of the cities where the course has been started.

The system of instruction used by Comrade Carlson consists in giving a lecture of from one hour to one and a half hours on the subject to be considered, then follows a period in which the students ask him questions pertaining to the subject matter discussed, or they discuss those points on which they are in disagreement with the speaker. He then makes closing remarks. All students are expected to be supplied with notebook to write down the main points made in the course of the lecture. They are also supplied with a list of references which can be used to verify the matter dealt with by the lecturer as well as to get a more complete understanding of the subjects dealt with. Certain texts which are inexpensive and classics are given as essential, but besides this a more complete list of reference books is also given.

The following class is opened by questions from the lecturer to the members of the class on the main points dealt with at the previous meeting. Following this all members are presented with a mimeographed synopsis of the proceeding week's lecture. Then follows the current lecture; questions, discussion, etc.

Twice during the course the members will be asked to supply written answers to a series of questions that will be presented to them a week in advance.

Comrade Carlson stated that he was more than pleased with the progress that the classes are making.

"My lectures" said Comrade Carlson, "are merely the connecting links between our membership and the vast literature which we possess that will give to our membership that fuller understanding which they need to carry on the struggles of our party and Young Workers League in the midst of the world's strongest and most ruthless imperialism. Of course many of our members have done a good deal of reading but it has not been done in an organized fashion and for that reason they fail to get that firm grasp of the principles of Communism, without which we are completely at sea. My lectures can do no more than touch the high points of each subject to be dealt with—but in doing that it enables them to understand the continuity of social development, to get an idea of the play and interplay of social forces (economic, geographic, biologic, and ideologic) which are totally unexplicable to the average layman. It helps them to think, to observe, to analize and to synthesize—and is doing this it is helping to make more competent Communists in this section of the country."

The complete course of lectures follow:

1. Class struggle in past history.
2. The state, its origin and functioning.
3. The economics of capitalism.
4. The dialectics of capitalism
5. The materialist conception of history.
6. Historic role of a revolutionary working class party.
7. The party in the political struggles.
8. The party in the trade unions.
9. Strategy and tactics of the party
10. The First and Second International and the world war.
11. The Russian revolution and the Communist International.

CHICAGO COMRADES! KEEP JAN. 11 OPEN FOR LIEBKNECHT DAY

January the 11th will be one of the red letter days for the Communist movement in Chicago. It will be on this day that the International Karl Liebknecht Day will be celebrated. This will be the day on which the Young Workers League of Chicago will rally the working class youth to protest the foul murder by the social-traitors of the two valiant fighters and leaders of the Communist youth movement and to mobilize our forces for a determined fight for our demands.

Foremost of these demands is our slogan against capitalist war and militarism, and against the enslavement of German workers thru the Dawes plan, thru our struggle for the abolition of child labor, maintenance by the state of all school children of workers under sixteen years of age, and the six hour day, five-day week for all youth labor with full pay, and for a workers' republic.

The Karl Liebknecht celebration will be held in the Northwest Hall, corner North and Western avenues. Admission is 25c. Tickets can be secured in advance in the local office, room 303, 166 W. Washington St., or at the door on the eve of the day.

The speakers for this affair are: Comrades Shachtman, of the Young Workers League, and Alexander Bittelman, of the Workers Party. There will also be an appropriate musical program, and a demonstration by the junior section of the league.

OMAHA COMRADES DISCUSS THESES AT SPECIAL MEET

OMAHA, Nebr., Dec. 29.—The Omaha branches of the Workers Party will meet at the party headquarters tonight to discuss the theses of the majority and minority of the central executive committee. The meeting will begin at 8 p. m. sharp, and all members will be expected to attend.

Unemployment Serious in Omaha.

District Organizer, Comrade J. E. Snyder, visited Omaha last Wednesday on his way to open the district office at Kansas City. While here Comrade Snyder reorganized the local general group of the Trade Union Educational League, which will immediately plunge into the issues facing the local trade unions, particularly the unemployment problem, which was never so serious in this locality as now.

Help Wanted Ad Brings 1,000.

An advertisement inserted in a local daily for 250 men to cut ice brot a response of a thousand. The same story repeated itself at every scene of ice-cutting operations. In the first-mentioned case, there were angry mutterings among the crowd, until the superintendent came along in his car, announcing a "free feed" for everybody at the "company hotel." Dissatisfaction was then forgotten in the pell-mell rush for the "feed."

neglect of the central executive committee. The central executive committee did not submit any plan to the Hungarian convention for work among the workers engaged in the basic industries. It was the duty of the central executive committee realizing that many Hungarian workers are engaged in the basic industries, to submit such a plan for work among them. After all the central executive committee is the leading and directing body in our party. It must initiate and direct important work of this kind for our language sections. When it doesn't do so it has no business to blame a particular section of the party for not making progress in that direction.

The whole article written by Bittelman on the Hungarian section convention is an example of how an article should not be written. To have to answer such an article is bad enough. Such articles make it impossible to conduct the discussion on serious lines. If Comrade Bittelman will continue to write such articles the whole discussion will degenerate into an expose of the methods used to distort and confuse the real and important issues involved.

When a discussion was decided upon I thought that there were fundamental issues involved that had to be seriously discussed. And there are. real fundamental issues involved. In order to discuss in a manner that would be beneficial to the membership and to the party a consideration of facts and their application to tactics is necessary. To divert the discussion into a misrepresentation of facts, mudslinging, unfounded charges, as the charges made by Comrade Bittelman against the Hungarian convention, and the issuance of empty, inapplicable fake slogans, is to greatly hurt the discussion, to confuse the membership and to injure the party.

Krassin Makes Them Mad

Leonid Krassin, Soviet ambassador to France, has a habit of getting under the skins of bourgeois editors and one of the most susceptible to his tricks is our blatant and vulgar contemporary, the Chicago Tribune.

The Communist diplomat declared in an interview to French journalists that the Soviet government would not undertake to pay to the big capitalists of France the money loaned by them to the czar and which was used to crush the Russian workers and peasants and keep them in slavery. In fact a goodly portion of the money was expended specifically in drowning in a sea of blood the revolution of 1905.

Krassin said, however, that the Soviet government is willing to consider payment of loans made to Russia by small investors.

To the Chicago Tribune this is a most outrageous breach of the ethics of diplomacy. Here is a Russian ambassador actually trying to widen the gulf between the French people who invested small sums in Russian loans during the czarist regime and the big plutes who invested millions! In addition, is it not a repudiation of national debts? asks the indignant Trib.

When a capitalist paper grows frantic over Russia's refusal to pay blood money to the bloated robbers who participated in the murder of the Russian workers by proxy, it is treading on thin ice. France, the country where Krassin is playing his anti-capitalist pranks, has practically refused to pay the United States several billions of dollars, yet there is no question raised as to the right of France to be considered a member of the family of nations.

What angers the Tribune is not Soviet Russia's refusal to recognize the czar's debts, but the persistence with which the workers' government holds true to the principles on which it is based, its championing of the oppressed of all lands and its utter hostility to the capitalist bloodsuckers. Soviet Russia stands like a beacon light to the subject classes of the world, guiding them on the road to their emancipation. Between Soviet Russia, the symbol of proletarian rule, and the robber capitalist nations there can at best be only a truce between battles.

Dawes Plan Hitting Snags

Germany is going to have another capitalist dictatorship, if Marx, Stresemann and company carry out their plans. It appears that the Dawes plan is not going over very smoothly. The radical workers under the influence of the Communists are carrying on a bitter campaign against it. The capitalist nations are fighting over the spoils that this infamous slave plan wrings from the bleeding bodies of the German workers.

How the victorious allies can squeeze reparations loot out of Germany without killing their own markets and shutting up their own factories is the big question that is keeping the allied statesmen awake nights. They have not yet solved that problem despite the galaxy of experts that have been thrown into the fray on the side of the dollar army. It will not be solved because it is beyond solution. The contradictions of capitalist society cannot be reconciled.

There will be another capitalist dictatorship in Germany—very likely. But it will not last long. Capitalism in the period of its decline is resorting to all kinds of expedients to save itself. Like the proverbial drowning man it grasps at straws, only to meet the drowning man's fate.

The German workers will have their fill of capitalist dictatorships, and all capitalist governments are dictatorships, open or veiled as suits the purpose. But conditions will compel them to choose between the capitalist dictatorship which now crushes them and the dictatorship of the workers and they will choose the latter. Until then there will be recurring crises in Germany and misery and want for the toilers.

An amusing thing is a liberal. The editors of the New Republic, for example, run a vicious denunciation of Communists in general and Russian Communists in particular, asking "What have the Russian Communists done, anyhow?" We might refer the editors of the New Republic to some of their good friends, but "What has the New Republic ever done, anyhow?"

King George and Mussolini are both stamp collectors. At the risk of offending Adolph Ochs, owner of the New York Times, and Elbert H. Gary, head of the steel trust, patrons of these two rulers, we express the holiday wish that the two stamp collectors may soon have a chance to share their hobby in common—in exile.

Oh, Well!

The other day a "socialist" periodical arrived in the office of the DAILY WORKER. This is not a remarkable fact in itself, but the way in which it came was worth a bit of comment. This "socialist" newspaper, on the front page of which were articles by that "great revolutionist," the Reverend Norman Thomas and the cautious "rebel" Kirkpatrick, arrived in an envelope from the "publicity department" of the General Electric company, Schenectady, New York.

The practice of great corporations, such as the General Electric company, of getting "labor" or "socialist" papers to print some "constructive" articles concerning the company, then "buying" for an exhorbitant sum a large number of copies which are sent out to all newspapers that might reprint or review the "puff" for the corporation—the practice of doing this kind of thing is getting to be old stuff in newspaperdom.

Today we are under the obligation of commenting on another spectacle, shall we call it sad or repulsive? Anyhow, we picked up a copy of the Minneapolis Labor Review, which used to be a labor paper under the editor who used to be a labor editor—but which isn't any more.

In this paper we find the leading editorial is an attack on the Workers Party. The Workers Party, says Cramer, "is not menacing—it is disgusting."

On the opposite side of the page there are two advertisements which stand out as a subsidization of the Minneapolis Labor Review, begging pardon for the adjective "labor." The Bell Telephone company is one, and the other is none other than the Sinclair Refining company, the same one that smirched up Daugherty and Secretary Fall until we were unable to recognize them for petroleum and oil splattering down from Teapot Dome.

Now, it is hardly a paying investment as far as immediate returns go for either the Bell Telephone trust or the Sinclair Refining company to spend chunks of money for ads in labor papers which are supposedly read by the workers only. If a worker can afford a telephone in his house he usually get it regardless of ads, and again if he is so fortunate as to have a touring car or even a flivver, he will get his oil at the filling station whether it bears the Sinclair brand or any other subsidiary of the great oil trust. Advertisements of such things are merely bribes paid to the papers that get them. They are supposed to sit up and bark. Then the advertisements flow in regularly.

The editor of the Minneapolis Review sits up and barks. He says the Workers Party is not menacing but disgusting. The Minneapolis Labor Review is both.

Send in that new "sub" today!

The T. U. E. L. Ball

Besides being an entertaining event, the annual ball of the Trade Union Educational League, which takes place on New Year's eve, is of great importance to the organized educational work that is carried on in the trade unions by the militants under the leadership of the industrial department of the Workers (Communist) Party.

The T. U. E. L. needs funds to carry on this work and it is that consideration more than a desire to give radicals an opportunity to test their terpsichorian ability that the local committee planned the affair which which will take place at the West End Women's Club, 37 South Ashland Blvd., next Wednesday evening. The recent revival of militancy in the trade union movement is manifested in the elections of the carpenters' and miners' unions. In several unions here in Chicago the radicals, under the leadership of the T. U. E. L., are putting up a splendid fight against the reactionaries. The educational work carried on by the league requires funds. It is the duty of every Communist and every sympathizer to attend the ball on New Year's eve and help supply the necessary sinews of war.

Aside from that consideration we can promise you an interesting evening.

We Simply Can't Please Them

According to news dispatches published in the capitalist press, the Russian people celebrated Christmas this year with as much gusto and swapping of gifts as they used to in the days of the czar. It is even hinted that they partook of the cup that cheers in the form of vodka, which is, according to second-hand information, about as polite in the stomach as a mouthful of dynamite. The "c-r-o-o-l" Cleeka was not near so officious as the American army of prohibition agents. The Soviet government did not prohibit religious worship. The people could burst their breastbones in a paroxysm of pious crawthumping if they saw fit. In fact, they were allowed to enjoy themselves in their own way.

The correspondents who raved last year over the public attacks on religion and superstition were equally scandalized this year because there were no anti-religious demonstrations. It is mighty hard to please those fellows. One can never tell what they want or how they want it. The Soviet government being a busy institution, we might suggest to the capitalist scribes in Moscow that they might do well to advise the red government in advance what kind of copy their editors want, so that the necessary arrangements might be made to provide them with the right material.

Funny how many nasty things the capitalist press can say about the British labor union delegates to the congress of the Russian unions because they give an honest, favorable report on conditions of labor in Russia. As supporters of Ramsay they used to be the acme of wisdom and honor.

TEXTILE SLAVES TO SWALLOW DOSE OF HELL 'N MARIA

Butler to Dig Claws Into Germany

The New York Times of Dec. 24 carried the report that the Botany Consolidated Mills, Inc., one of the largest textile companies in the United States, had acquired an interest in two prominent German textile manufacturing groups, the Kammgarnspinnerei-Stohr & Co. and A. G. Elberfelder Textilwerke, A. G.

The textile workers will watch these developments with more than passing interest. It will be remembered that some months ago a number of the northern mills bought up a number of large textile plants in the south, which operated under unusually low wage scales. Almost immediately thereafter the northern mills announced a series of slashing wage cuts and the excuse given for this raid on the workers' pay envelope was the pressure of "competition" of the southern mills, which were owned and operated by the northern textile interests.

It takes but little imagination, therefore, to see that similar tactics will be used against the American textile workers in the very near future, in order to protect the "poverty-stricken" American textile barons from their ferocious German "competitors," and then will be imported into the textile districts of this country, the terrible state of misery and want which has been the lot of the unfortunate German workers for the last few years.

At the time of the taking over of the southern plants by their northern textile interests, the wide-awake and militant elements among the textile workers pointed out the necessity of organizing the southern workers for joint action against their employers. And so it should be the task of the American textile workers today to immediately establish an active contact with the textile workers of Germany so that they may combat effectively their mutual enemy, the American capitalist.

The way to form this fighting alliance is thru the International Propaganda Committee of the Textile Workers of the Red International of Labor Unions, Moscow.

Coal Drivers to Strike Unless They Get Wage Increase

Two thousand members of the Chicago Coal Teamsters' Union will meet representatives of the coal merchants' association this week to thrash out their demands for a 20 cents an hour raise in wages. The coal dealers declare they will stand pat on the present wages and are preparing for a strike. Drastic action is expected by the union unless the demands of the teamsters are met by Jan. 1. The teamsters now receive 70 cents an hour. They work ten hours a day.

Filipinos Denounce Syndicate.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29.—Syndicated stories appearing in various parts of the country picturing the Filipinos as a semi-barbarous people are denounced as untrue and intended to delay the promise the United States has made to give the Filipinos their independence, in a statement by the Philippine press bureau.

In additional statements to be made public the next few days, it is announced, the interests that are exploiting the Filipinos and obstructing independence will be revealed, it is declared.

Unions Fear Quack Doctors.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 29.—Following a new medical fee schedule by the California Industrial accident commission, the building trades unions have called a protest meeting. It is charged that minimum fees have in some cases been cut to as low as 50c a visit, at which rate no competent surgeon would undertake a compensation case, and injured workmen would be left to the mercy of quacks. The unions also claim the commission is endeavoring to monopolize the compensation business for the benefit of a small group of organized insurance doctors.

More Textile Wage Cuts.

LOWELL, Mass., Dec. 29.—The Massachusetts, Appleton, Tremont and Suffolk cotton companies will reduce wages the first of the year say statements issued by the managements. The mills are on part time but hours are to be increased, following the cut. Nearly half of Lowell's textile workers will be affected by the reduction.

More Wage Cuts.

NASHUA, N. H., Dec. 29.—A statement by Agents Walter Whipple of the Nashua Mills and W. H. Caldwell of the Jackson Mills that wages of 3,500 cotton mill workers will be reduced the next few weeks has brought threats of strike from the workers. The company officials said the reduction would be in line with similar action expected in mills at Lowell.

When you buy, get an "Ad."

This is what you must know in order to know

What you must do

We'll tell this story in BIG TYPE. We want it to stay with you so that you may tell it to others.

And So They Said— "Here's $75,000!"

This happened just a year ago. The party membership and sympathizers piled up the sum of $75,000 with which to start the FIRST COMMUNIST DAILY in the English language in the world.

January 13, 1924, The Historic Date!

It was upon this date that the FIRST ISSUE of the DAILY WORKER appeared. We printed it and many issues thereafter in a print shop that WAS NOT OUR OWN, located in a building that WAS NOT OUR OWN.

We Did Not Want to Be Considered Off-Color!

We had a big responsibility upon our hands. We had to measure up to the trust placed in us. We had to act with GOOD RED COMMON SENSE. We soon saw that printing the DAILY WORKER in somebody else's print shop would mean that some day this somebody else might say "OUT WITH YOU" —and then where would we go? Not many capitalist print shops care to print Communist papers.

So We Took Part of The $75,000 and Bought A First Class Plant.

We bought FOUR PRESSES, SIX LINOTYPES, STEREOTYPING OUTFIT, BINDERY MACHINERY, type, stones, stock, ink. It's a BIG lay-out and there's no kind of printing we can't do.

Then We Saw Another Danger Ahead.

If a printer could refuse to print our DAILY WORKER, a landlord could easily refuse to house our printing plant. That is, if we put the big printing plant we bought into a rented building, the owner of the building could also some day say to us "GET OUT"—and so we did what? We took another part of the $75,000 and bought a building, the building that our national headquarters is located in.

After All of Which There Wasn't Much Money Left.

The sum of $75,000 is just that much. After buying a big printing plant and a big building, there were not many dollars left with which to finance the DAILY WORKER. But we went right ahead and for nearly a year we published the daily without making a single call for help.

But Now We Need Money And Need It at Once!

We must look ahead. We'll only get ahead by looking ahead. We must make the DAILY WORKER safe for 1925. Therefore, this campaign to INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925. We want to make the DAILY WORKER so impregnable, so powerful, that it will weather all storms in the year to come.

One Year Old on January 13, 1925.

The DAILY WORKER will soon be one year old. Upon its first anniversary a BIG SPECIAL BIRTHDAY EDITION will be published. This BIG SPECIAL should be distributed nation-wide. Order your bundle now—100 copies for $2.00.

The MILITANT BRANCHES of the party will have a place of honor in this ANNIVERSARY SPECIAL of the DAILY WORKER. Upon a page to be called the MILITANT PAGE, the names of all branches will appear that have remitted for INSURANCE POLICY sales before January 8. Those will be known as the MILITANT BRANCHES. It will be those branches that will greet the beginning of the second year of revolutionary service of our daily.

SOVIET SCHOOL HAS SUCCESSFUL DRAMATIC SHOW

Despite Competition of White Guards

The performance of "Coal Miner Kort" given last Saturday at the Soviet School went off with the usual success. The hall was overcrowded in spite of the fact that the counter-revolutionists were running their rivales on that night.

The actors, almost all members of the Technical Aid, succeeded in the interpretation of the bitter struggle waged by the coal miners of Kort against the bosses and the white guards. An unusual incident happened when in the last act the miners, after winning their battles began to sing the International. The audience stood up and joined in the singing. More than anything else, this showed the spirit of the Russian workers.

The next affair of the Technical Aid Society will be the showing of "Ikushka," Thursday night, Jan. 15, at Gartner's Independent Theater, 2700 Roosevelt Road.

Southside Actors Present Drama of Workingclass Life

On Tuesday night "Salesmen or Suckers," a play by Comrade [illegible] of the South Side English Branch, was presented and acted by several members of the branch and their friends. "The South Side Players." A large audience tramped thorough the snow to see the play, and it is expected that as the news goes round many more will come to the second performance to be given later in some other southside neighborhood.

Lewis Gordon and Esther Berg were very good as "Mr. and Mrs. Slick," a young couple of "go-getters" who classify the whole world as "saps, mugs, mien or suckers" They gave much comical amusement to relieve the tragedy of this little play. Hubert Hunt as "Jim" the sick war-returned soldier band of "Olympia," was very fine. He spoke as simply as though he and "Olympia" were really living their difficulties alone; and there was no surer way of making an audience forget itself.

Millie Babbin as the exploited and victimized white girl, "Margaret Bryant," was so good that she had cause to feel the nervousness that affected her at first. Her voice was beautifully rich and she gave the part a short of "oh, what's the use?" manner that was striking. I cannot speak too highly Elizabeth Griffin, who played "Olympia," the young girl whose whole life was a battle against poverty and disease. She showed great poignancy and a real understanding of the role, and like Hubert Hunt, had the ability to make us forget for minutes at a time that there was not a real glimpse of a real family. Hands are usually a great difficulty for amateurs, but Elizabeth Griffin's beautiful and expressive hands were acting for her all the time! Her voice was flexible and moving.

The play shows "Olympia" working for the sordid young business couple and giving up the job because her husband is very ill and she herself is exhausted. In one speech she lines up "Mrs. Slick" with the exploiters and herself with the working class. "Yes, it's class that counts—you said it! and I belong to the working class!" Her man dies, and "Olympia" and the children are in despair. "Mrs. Slick" turns up like a bad penny and offers her a sordid "way out" which she indignantly refuses, and after saying to give "Margarete," who has been on the streets, her job at the factory we leave her looking with glazed and desolate eyes at the shining revolver which is the "only way out" that she can see. The play is based on a little news item, the suicide of a young widow who really lived on the south side, and whose story, left out of capitalist newspaper as "unimportant," was told Comrade Shelley by the reporter.

In one scene there was a spirited discussion between "Jack Sharp" played by Norvel Allen very ably, and "Rev. Gumble" played by Wesley Lewis, that brought out the futility of "pie in the sky when you die," and the necessity of solidarity between all races in the class struggle. Bob Robinson as "Mrs. Jones" joined in this scene.

YALE UNIVERSITY LIBRARY NEW HAVEN CONN

MINERS FORM JOBLESS COUNCIL

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THERE is a gentleman here in Chicago known as Mr. Well, popularly called the "Yellow Kid." The appellation is not due to any public suspicion that Well is averse to taking chances with his person provided the speculation has any promise of financial returns. It appears that the additional nomenclature had its origin in the liberal equipment of hirsute adornment, which keeps the elegant Well's chops oblivious to the icy winds of winter and also assists him in selling his various stocks to those who like elegance and yellow whiskers.

HAVING disposed of the "Yellow Kid's" chin underbrush, so to speak, we can go on with the story. Mr. Well works for a living, after a fashion, but not in the usual sense. He is not a wage slave and refuses to walk up to a little window outside a factory building and wait to get exploited. Upon that mode of making a living he frowns. He is not a capitalist and is very unpopular among that fraternity. Yet he lives luxuriously, whenever he is not in jail, which is quite seldom and not for long. Once he managed to get to Joliet, but Len Small, who feels that he has a great kinship for the "Yellow Kid," turned him loose after Mr. Well promised to spend the rest of his life preaching the gospel.

BUT after Well's release from Joliet he developed a feeling of marital jealousy of Small. The latter got away with several million dollars from the state treasury and was reelected with the governorship twice in succession. He may be elected president if he gets away with a billion during the present term. CULTURAL LIFE AMONG WORKERS EXPANDS DAILY

Thousands of Working Men and Women Study

By ANISE.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

RUSSIA, Dec. 30.—Every day life in Russian city and village is growing and changing daily. New manners, new social connections are building up a manifold culture.

Take, for instance, the tremendous growth of workers' and peasants' correspondents, writing to the newspapers not a single complaining letter, but a series of letters for the purpose of fighting some graft or inefficiency.

These men and women until recently never put pen to paper. Now they are taking special courses in newspaper writing, and every newspaper in Russia likes to brag of the number of its worker correspondents. Pravda in Moscow boasts of more than 5,000 letters published in a single year.

A Workers' Government!

There are courses for factory worker correspondents in Kazan; there are clubs of worker correspondents in all the districts of Leningrad. There is a group of working women correspondents in Sokolniki.

Then there are the wall newspapers which one sees in every factory and club, gay with cartoons spotted with jokes and terse comments upon the factory life, edited usually by the young people of the factory and full of energy. A contest of wall news-

GERMANY MAY UPSET WHOLE DAWES PLAN

Trade War Looms Over Cologne Evacuation

BERLIN, Dec. 30.—Failure of the Dawes plan was predicted today by Foreign Minister Stresemann, unless the allies withdraw their troops from Cologne. Streseman made the statement to foreign newspaper correspondents.

"If the allies remain in the Cologne zone without endeavoring to compromise, or find a possible solution for later simultaneous evacuation of both Cologne and the Ruhr, then it will mean complete bankruptcy of the conciliatory policy which led to the acceptance of the Dawes plan," he said.

Disillusion for Workers.

Stresemann then hotly declared that if troops remained in Cologne, it meant "Bottomless disillusionment for the German workers and will drive them into the hands of the extremists.

"Allied troops staying on in Cologne, make fools of us all, including myself, who fought bitterly for acceptance of the Dawes plan against the Communist opposition," he continued. "We welcome the full text of the report of the military control commission. We do not want excerpts and generalities. Come out with it! Give us all the findings."

Stresemann and the social-democrats, both of whom worked loyally to save German capitalism by making it an appendage to American imperialism, are now somewhat at outs, particularly are the socialists trying to lay the coalition with the nationalists at the door of Stresemann who is still unyielding in his demand that the nationalists should be formally invited to accept representation in the government in order to remove them from the reichstag opposition.

Can't Tell 'Em Apart.

"Vorwarts" complains that nobody can tell where Stresemann's policy leaves off and Chancellor Marx's policy begins. The Communists sarcastically add that neither can anyone tell where both Marx's and Stresemann's policy leaves off and the socialists' policy begins.

One critic who, among the many now disillusioned with the Herriot capitulation to Marshal Foch, raises a voice against the French "socialist," says, "It is not an edifying spectacle to see this reconciler of nations using as a crutch the sword of Marshal Foch."

Trade War Perils Dawes Plan.

On every side the resentment at the allies grows hourly, and while German officials refrain from making threats, rumors are flying about unofficially that Germany will hit back with a trade war, even if it means the wrecking of the Dawes plan. Germany is able to begin a trade war because on Jan. 10, the date set by the Versailles treaty for the evacuation of Cologne, Germany regains her freedom of commercial control.

After Jan. 10 Germany can discriminate commercially against the allies as much as the allies discriminate against her.

It is suspected that the whole allied outcry against Germany still being armed is merely a pretext for France to remain in the Rhur and in Cologne to exert pressure on Germany in the trade negotiations now going on. In any event the Dawes plan scheme is in danger.

They Part with Their Shekels.

PARIS, Dec. 30.—South Americans arriving aboard the steamship, Lucretia, discovered today they had been made victims of the Polish counterfiter, Jelka Goldman, in changing French francs for supposed 150 bills on board ship. The bills had been raised from smaller denominations.

Use International Exchange and Credit

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—The American government's determination to collect the war debts owed it by France and other European nations, and not to engage in any international round table discussion of pooling or cancelling, was reaffirmed at the White House today with great emphasis. To concede this would surrender the whiphand American imperialism now holds over Europe.

And the intimation was plainly conveyed that if nations owing the United States repudiated their debts or default in them, the American government is possessed of retaliatory powers in the way of checking private credits such as Morgan grants, that might prove extremely embarrassing to the countries concerned. American imperialism is speaking with its blood up, determined not to lose its grasp upon Europe.

The debt discussion was projected at the White House, because of the Clemental report to the French parliament, in which the French finance minister classed the $4,000,000,000 debt France owed this government as "a political debt" and intimated that pay day was a long way off.

"Officially" We're Clams.

Officially it was said at the White House, the United States government can take no cognizance of the Clemental report, because it was not addressed to Washington, but it was made plain that this government has a very lively "unofficial" interest in the epochal French balance sheet, which ignored the American debt.

With the minister of finance in Paris talking openly and officially to parliament of repudiating the debt, and making no effort to arrive at an agreement with creditors, members of the debt funding commission here declared today they are at a loss to account for the reiterated pledge of Ambassador Jusserand that France intends to pay the $4,000,000,000 borrowed here.

"M. Jusserand talks one way; his government talks another," one member of the commission said today. "Which are we to believe?"

RIVALRIES BETWEEN ALLIES 'OF VERSAILLES PEACE SHOW CONFLICTS SHAKING EUROPE

GERMANY—Disillusioned at allies' refusal to evacuate Cologne as twice promised, German workers blame socialists who forced Dawes plan acceptance, and turn to Communists who opposed. Government desperate, threatens wreck of Dawes plan by trade war against allies.

ENGLAND—Tentatively approves allied ambassadors' decision not to evacuate Cologne. Now held by British troops. Fears to leave France alone in Germany to capture trade advantage. British trying to keep America from claiming reparations, says claim is "not legal."

FRANCE—Holds up evacuation of Germany in violation of both Versailles treaty and Dawes plan, to force favorable trade agreement, under pretext Germany is still armed. Finance minister declares the $4,000,000,000 debt to America is "political" and does not have to be paid. Does not include it in liabilities.

ITALY—Exposure by Cesare Rossi, a former fascist minister under Mussolini, that Mussolini ordered murders and persecution of opponents threatens to force out Mussolini from power and wreck fascism. Italy insists that she must have at least 10 per cent of all reparations from Germany.

SPAIN—Continuous defeat of Dictator Primo De Rivera in Morocco gives republican capitalist opposition to his regime and the monarchy much strength. Abdel Krim, Riff chief, refuses all compromise and threatens to drive Primo De Rivera into the sea.

JUGO-SLAVIA—Riots mark attempt to suppress all political freedom under new dictatorship, outlawing Communist Party, then the Croatian peasants' party. Threatens to annex Albania by force against threat of Italy.

ROUMANIA—With other Balkan countries is demanding that they, too, get reparations from Germany and obtain equal hearing with big powers in inter-allied finance conference at Paris Jan. 6.

PRESS AGENT FOR T. U. E. L. NEW YEAR'S EVE BALL LEARNS A THING OR TWO EVEN ON MADISON STREET

While walking down Madison street recently, some weeks before the cold spell, my curiosity attracted me to a swarthy person of stout build who walked around the corner (corner of Green) and tossed half dollars and quarters on the ground, wearing a rather quizzical smile as he did so.

After dropping each coin, the street faker (that is just what he was) would ring a bell over it.

It was very mysterious and within a very short time a large crowd gathered. When the auidence looked respectedly large, the faker mounted an automobile and proceeded to sell snake oil.

Do you get the point?

Now For The Story.

Dances happen so often that if I started out to urge you to come to such and such a place, you might yawn and turn to Pigsley Wiggley. Hence the tantalizing introduction. The fact of the matter is that the New Year's Eve ball of the Trade Union Educational League needs no introduction. It has become an institution in Chicago and every radical goes there whether he or she dances or not.

Using the Optics.

It is not a social event in the society sense because radicals do not go in for that sort of thing, but you cannot prevent girls from looking their prettiest and we cannot prevent the boys from looking at them. What greater attraction can be offered?

If this story was properly written it would give the place and time of the affair in the first paragraph, but as that is the most uninteresting part of the tale, we have held it over until last.

ENGLAND, TOO, JOINS CHORUS AGAINST U. S. MORGAN IMPERIALISM

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Dec. 29—Rome and Carthage in the days of their greatest glory and profligacy were nothing compared to America today. The accusation is made in a lengthy editorial in the Daily Chronicle today. It is evidently propaganda for repudiation of the debt owed the United States by England.

Commenting on America's great wealth, it said.

"The suction of America's vast wealth is rapidly drawing in all that money can buy. There has been nothing like it before in the history of the world. The power of Rome and Carthage was small compared with that which America wields. All this power has been won not by physical conquest, not by the sword, but by a new kind of imperialism—economic imperialism."

The Chronicle bewailed moreover, that Europe is being stripped of art treasures by rich Americans.

PROGRESSIVES GET THE VOTES; FAKERS COUNT

Militants Wallop Lewis in Alberta, Canada

SESSER, Ill., Dec. 30.—The progressive miners scored heavily against the reactionaries in the recent elections in this mining center. Despite widespread fraud and downright stealing militants made a splendid showing.

In local union 3160, the vote was: Lewis, 24; Voyzey, 79; Phil Murray, 13; Arley Staples, 84; Green, 24; Nearing, 71.

For district president, Farrington received 24 and John Hindmarsh, 62. Fishwick, 18 and E. B. Hewlett, 86. Nesbit, 26 and Contouriaux, 43. Freeman, Thompson, Hindmarsh and John Watt, got the highest number of votes for delegates to the American Federation of Labor convention.

Voyzey Beats Lewis.

O'FALLON, Ill, Dec. 30.—The official returns from the elections in local union No. 705 give the following results: Lewis, 89; Voyzey, 230; Murray, 93; Staples, 206; Green, 118 and Nearing, 177.

For president of sub-district No. 7, the vote was: Dan L. Thomas, 240; and for vice-president, William Jack, 163, and Lake Coffey, 134.

The vote for district president was: Farrington, 69; Hindmarsh, 145.

Removes Ban on Literature.

SYDNEY, Nw South Wales.—The federal government has removed the ban on international labor literature coming to Australia from Europe, which was refused entry since last July. Apparently the literature which was considered dangerously red last July is now considered to be quite safe for circulation. The Red Trade Union Bulletin and other international labor publications will now circulate freely amongst the workers in Australia.

FIRST MOVE IN ILLINOIS MADE AT CHRISTOPHER

2,000 Coal Diggers Idle in Franklin County

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CHRISTOPHER, Ill., Dec. 30.—The formation of unemployment councils in the southern Illinois coal district is beginning, according to Arley Staples, the left wing candidate for vice-president of the U. M. W. of A. in the recent elections.

On Sunday last a conference was called at Christopher attended by delegates from a dozen of the big mines of Franklin and Williamson counties.

Both Communist and non-Communist miners participated. It was estimated that 2,000 miners are out of work in Franklin county alone.

For some time the members of the Workers Party have been demanding in their unions that the United Mine Workers officially act to relieve the unemployment among the miners and make demands upon the authorities for support. The left wing candidates in the miners' election, Voyzey, Nearing and Staples, made unemployment an issue in their program for the international organization.

The delegate conference decided that organization of unemployment councils should be undertaken city by city in the coal mining district, beginning with Benser, where the mines have been closed for over a year.

Joint Action With the Employed

It will be the particular aim of the new effort among the miners to get the employed workers, even of other trades, to participate in the unemployment councils as the growth of the army of jobless threatens the wage and hour standard of every other worker. Appeal will be made to the labor unions to see that by their co-operation with the unemployed, the bosses will not be able to attack the unions and union conditions with a starving horde of unemployed bidders for jobs.

A resolution was adopted by the conference demanding that, since the government required "Work or Fight" during the war, the workers now demand "Work or compensation." This compensation must be at union rates, to be raised by local and state government by a levy on profits to make the industry bear the burden of supporting its workers. The fund for relief must be administered by the organizations of the workers—by the unions, to prevent discrimination against union workers.

Such are the demands of the southern Illinois coal miners, and an executive committee of twelve was elected to proceed to effective action along these lines. This organization follows the program given out by Arne Swabeck, district organizer of the Workers Party for work in the coal fields.

ESTIMATE OF 95,000 CHICAGO JOBLESS TOO LOW, SAYS SWABECK

The estimate of 95,000 unemployed for Chicago is far too low a figure, according to Arne Swabeck, district organizer of the Workers Party. The figure is that given by various estimates made by some authorities connected with the state, city and private employment agencies and published by the capitalist press.

"The usual unemployment minimum must run considerably higher than 95,000," says Comrade Swabeck, "as the unemployed minimum for the country as a whole is 1,750,000 and Chicago's share must reach over 100,000 by quite a good deal. In addition there are the seasonal unemployed who are out of jobs temporarily in particular lines.

"The unemployment record of recent months shows how the relation stands between jobs and jobless. In July there were 203 applicants to every 100 jobs; in August, 165 to 100; in September, 147 to 100; in October 150 and in November a slight rise with 156 asking for jobs to every 100 jobs open. And this does not count the seasonal unemployed who are not generally applying for work."

CARPENTERS IN FIGHT AGAINST LOCAL FAKERS

Hutcheson's Henchmen Use Gag Rule

The members of Local No. 181 of the carpenters' union were given another dose of autocracy from their officials on last Monday evening when they tried to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of their former local president who quit office after he discredited himself as a servile tool of General President Hutcheson and District President Harry Jensen, who wanted the progressive members of the union expelled.

The expulsion without trial of five members of Local 181 aroused the anger of the rank and file and since that occurrence every meeting has been a battle between the membership and the officials, the latter enforcing gag rule to prevent action by the members against the illegal expulsion of the most active workers in the organization.

Tried to Elect President.

On last Monday evening the members attempted to elect a successor to the official who quit. The vice-president claimed that he was entitled to act as president until the end of the term the constitution to the contrary.

Harry Jensen, district president, who is also president of Local 181 upheld the decision of the vice-president. Jensen was one of the signers of a scab agreement which forces the carpenters to use material manufactured under Landis award conditions. For protesting against this treachery by resolution the five members over which the fight now rages were expelled.

Refused the Floor.

Several members of the local tried to take the floor but the vice-president refused them the privilege of speaking. One member was fined one dollar by the chairman. He protested and was fined another dollar. Another member made a motion that both fines be remitted but the chair refused to entertain the motion. This was also a violation of the constitution but such trifles as that do not bother the fakers.

The membership is rallying behind the expelled members one hundred per cent. An appeal has been sent to general president, Hutcheson, protesting against the illegal action of the chairman of the trial committee in bringing in a cooked-up report and falsely declaring that the defendants pleaded guilty. The members of the local insist that their fellow unionists did not have a trial and they are more determined than ever that they shall have a square deal.

JAPANESE DIPLOMAT ASKS SOFT PEDAL ON IMMIGRATION BUNK

TOKIO, Dec. 30.—In an interview today with Japanese newspapermen, foreign minister Shidehara advised Japanese newspapers not to stir up questions over the United States Pacific naval maneuvers and the immigration law.

He declared such agitation was detrimental to international relations and likely to have an unhappy outcome.

The foreign minister declared that Great Britain's Singapore naval base project was not intended as a menace to Japan. The newspapermen were polite, but accepted this statement with sly smiles.

Discussing the immigration ban, Shidehara said Japan had never been informed that the United States considers the immigration question a closed incident. He declared that he believed the exclusion law was a blunder and thinks that America will some day recognize it as such and rectify the error.

In the meantime he warned the Japanese newspapers, Japan canpot force the United States to rescind the ban.

GOOSE-STEP PROFESSORS RANT ABOUT GLORIES OF CAPITALISM WHILE UNEMPLOYMENT INCREASES

Twelve hundred college professors, teachers and upholders of bourgeois economics, sociology and psychology, who make poor salaries teaching economics, because they don't know enough about economics to organize into unions, admitted the failure of the system of society which they are paid to uphold, in their convention here.

Goose-Step Economists.

"The deadliest enemies of man at the present time are not disease, war and famine, but the industrial conditions of the city," Warren S. Thompson, of the Scripps Foundation, Miami University, told the American sociological society yesterday afternoon. "They not only take their heavy toll in deaths, but prevent their victims from participating in the future because they sterilize them." The sociological society which, is now in session at the Congress Hotel, is one of seven economic organizations promoted by business men to uphold the capitalist system of exploitation of the workers.

The close connection between these organizations, which include the economic foundation, the statistical association, farm economic association university instructors, and association for labor legislation, and the large business interests which supply them with funds is shown by the fact that all the arrangements for the convention of these organizations are in the hands of Chicago business men.

"Swift's" Manager a Member.

Among those who took a leading part in organizing the convention of the bourgeois economists are—L. D. H. Weld, manager of the "commercial research department" of Swift and Co. packers, who is chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements; C. H. Crennan, of the Continental and Commercial Bank; Walter Lichtenstein of the First National Bank; Rudolf Clemen, of the Illinois Merchants Trust company; John Bowman, of the Chicago association of commerce; and H. W. Moorhouse, of Brookmire's agricultural service.

Purpose: Bigger Profits.

Most of the speeches were advice to business men as to how they can make bigger profits. "Train college students to win white collar jobs by means of the overall route" was the suggestion of Professor Charles C. Leeds, head of the department of machinery production of the Carnegie institute of technology, which is controlled by the United States Steel corporation. Leeds said that the college students must learn how to fit themselves into the profit system. "They must learn the value of discipline," said the goose-step professor. Culture and science have largely been forgotten by these professors. They openly bow down to big business and openly use the colleges in the service of the large corporations.

Thorstein Veblen admitted this in his address before the American economic association yesterday. "No argument on economic matters will get a hearing unless it is set out as a business proposition," said Veblen. "And a business proposition is merely another term for business profits." The convention now meeting is avowedly for the purpose of aiding the employers to increase their profits.

Veblen Preaches Nationalism.

"To our statesmen," Veblen continued, "Economic interests mean advantages in trade and opportunities for gain for the business concerns within our national frontiers, as against outsiders. Things have taken such a turn that nations, national interests, national policies and national armaments no longer have any other use, serve no other purpose than the differential gain of business concerns doing business in competition with outsiders. And such economists as commissions of economic inquiry as are drawn into the service of the national establishment, are drawn in for no other purpose and on no other qualifications than such as are presumed to serve the bankers and traders of the nation."

The convention addressed by Veblen (economists called together to perfect the organization for teaching the college students to turn away from Marxian socialist thot) affords the best possible proof of Veblen's words.

Professor C. R. Hoffer, of the University of Minnesota, frankly spoke in behalf of big business, his address being entitled, "some merchandising suggestions."

Teach Business Not Science.

Dr. Wesley C. Mitchell of Columbia University told how the Columbia students are taught in terms of business rather than scientific study. "Put business under the microscope," advised this fake professor, who is president of the American economic association. "Have a business laboratory. The old political economy is gone. It has no place in the modern practical scheme. The new economics has come in the service of the business man." Mitchell was chairman of the commission appointed by President Harding to report measures for the reduction of unemployment.

Altho Mitchell is considered "the world's foremost authority on unemployment," by the business men, all his rant has been unable to stop the increase in unemployment and the intensification of the world economic crisis.

DOMINIONS TELL BALDWIN "MIND OWN BUSINESS"

Declare Independence from British Interference

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, England, Dec. 29.—The dominions of the British Empire have informed the British colonial office here that their parliaments are quite capable of handling their own affairs and that they will not send their premiers to London to confer over policies of the empire.

The replies of Canada, Australia and South Africa to Secretary Emery, refusing the invitation to attend a conference in March to discuss the empire's policy toward the Geneva disarmament protocol, is a virtual declaration of complete independence.

The dominions declare that their parliaments are capable of settling these matters. They have their own opinion of the Geneva protocol and do not intend to take advice from Great Britain. The dominions see in the British protest against the registration of the Anglo-Irish treaty with the league of nations an attempt of the Baldwin government to curtail their independence.

the development of bananas in Norway. Now, however, seeing how other leading public men got along, Mr. Weil decided that being a piker did not pay. He organized half a dozen corporations, discussed the operation of the Dawes plan with leading Chicago bankers, posed as purchasing agent for the Grand Duke Nicholas to the society dames on the north shore, was American representative to Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany to those who have a warm spot in their hearts for that gentleman, and some cash in their pockets; in fact he was all things to all men and to all women. It paid.

THE fact that he has been arrested and taken to jail is merely one of the obstacles placed by the regular robbers, whose principal method of living without performing any service to society is the robbery of the workers thru wage slavery. The "Yellow Kid" has not sunk that low. He robs the robbers. The robbers own the government, so they punish this "outlaw" every once in a while by sending him to jail. But the legalized robbers have not things their own way at all times. Occasionally a politician with Weil's proclivities slips into high office. Perhaps he is mayor, governor, chief of police, bailiff, judge or state's attorney. He also robs the robbers. And when the fellow craftsman like Weil comes along ready to wear the stripes, he simply cannot stand seeing a mate in distress, so he turns him loose.

THIS is not a bedtime story with a heavy moral. There is nothing moral or immoral about it. The "Yellow Kid" is not dangerous to those who have no money to be separated from. Far from being obnoxious he is an interesting fellow. He fell somewhat in our estimation when he threatened to carry the bible around as camouflage, but he was only having his little joke. Mr. Weil has sense enough to know that society as it is constituted today is divided between those who are robbed and those who do the robbing. He robs the robbers. We wish him a long and active life in his chosen field.

ELECTRIC TRUST BACKS SHOALS BILL IN SENATE

Coolidge Pushes Private Control Bill

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 30.—The power trust organized around the General Electric and the Westinghouse companies, is sponsoring the Underwood bill which would turn Muscle Shoals over to these private interests, senate debate disclosed yesterday. The "insurgent" bloc, however, has signified its willingness to accept the Jones bill as a compromise between Senator Norris' government ownership bill and the Underwood power trust bill. The Jones bill would put the matter of Muscle Shoals before a committee of three, which would not be required to bring in a recommendation for one year.

Senator Norris has introduced a trust busting resolution in the senate which cites "rumors" that a power trust is in existence, "which wholly or partly controls various combinations of water companies, large manufacturing and industrial corporations, banking institutions, public utilities, power companies and other corporations."

Speaking on the Norris resolution which demands an investigation by the federal trade commission, Senator Ashurst of Arizona, declared, "A gigantic monopoly that can extend its tentacles everywhere and crush the substance from out the people, crush out their very life, has sprung up in our midst. If we wait until fines and threats of imprisonment restrain monopoly we will wait until we grow gray."

Ashurst advised that the government go into competition with the monopolies, evidently closing his eyes to the fact that the large monopolies control the government.

POSTAL CLERKS WANT WAGE BILL PASSED AT ONCE

No Excuse for Delay, Union Head Says

A fight is being waged in the senate against 300,000 postal employes, who are virtually disfranchised by their civil service status, David W. Johnson, chairman of the resolutions committee of the Chicago postoffice clerks, local union No. 1, charges in an open letter to Senator William B. McKinley.

"There is no fight being made against the president; the fight is being made against the postal employes," Johnson states. "It is unprecedented. There is no record in the history of congress that can be compared with it. This fight is being made against a defenseless body of employes virtually disfranchised by their civil service status."

The postal employes believe that there is no excuse for the senate delaying the passage of the bill, according to Johnson. "The general opinion of the postal employes is that, according to all previous parliamentary rules and legitimate practices of the senate, this bill should have been passed within at least four days after congress convened," the Chicago postal clerks' official writes. "However, since it was not, there should be a showdown. Since the economic situation has not improved any, we believe the senators will vote for the bill, if they are relieved of the obstructive tactics and given an opportunity to register their will."

The obstructive tactics referred to by Johnson are being carried on under the direction of President Coolidge, altho Johnson seemes to lack the courage to directly place the responsibility upon the Coolidge administration. Coolidge has induced Senator Sterling to confuse matters by bringing in a dual bill, raising postal rates of newspapers, which has a chance of passing. Coolidge is trying to forestall the passage of the postal bill over his veto of the rate increase passed by the last congress.

POLICE AID GLASGOW LANDLORDS EVICTING WORKERS' FAMILIES

GLASGOW, Scotland, Dec. 30.—Evictions of unemployed workers continue here. They are now executed with the support of Glasgow sheriffs and and the assistance of the police who are out in full force. Four evictions were carried out today in the vicinity of the banks of the Clyde river. The police smashed into the barricaded doors and drove men, women and children out into the freezing streets while large crowds of workers stood by and looked on. No attempts were made to resist the police who were armed ready for murder.

Mexican Socialist Wing of Fascism Shows Face Under Rule of Calles

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the regime of the "socialist," Plutarco Calles, president of Mexico, has the endorsement of The New York Times. That is getting results very quickly. But the results are not on the side of the workers and farmers of the Mexican republic. They are on the side of the dollar dictatorship.

Calles, the "socialist," has already shown that he is willing to use the proverbial "strong arm" of international capitalist rule against the workers and peasants of his own country.

Putting on the face of an Italian Mussolini, this Calles recently announced a decrease in wages on the railroads, declaring that any strike would be put down with every available force at the command of the capitalist state. This was to be only the beginning of a drastic campaign of "economy" that hits only the workers, as usual.

Wall Street's New York Times is happy over Calles' reason as well. It waxes ecstatic over the announcement made by Calles that he is going to reduce the Mexican army from 75,000 to 25,000. Wall Street's pet organ declares this is a sign of real "courage." It even compliments Calles on his features, claiming they are of the kind "not to be trifled with." It said something of the kind about the crumpling Italian fascist dictator.

In the past few years Mexico has been spending from 60 to 70 per cent on her army. The United States spends 80 per cent to maintain her militarism, past, present and future.

Soviet Russia devotes 20 per cent of her budget to military expenditures, for the Red Army and the Red Navy.

Wall Street's New York Times is happy over Calles' promise. It not only means that Mexico will be called on to pay interest and principle on loans advanced by Wall Street, away back to the terror regime of Diaz, out of the alleged "saving," but that the threat of American intervention over a disarmed people will have more effect. The Times does not urge a reduction in the strength of American militarism, north of the Rio Grande.

Calles, however, like Obregon before him, has shown that he is willing and ready to go still further. He is not only ready to cut down the military forces of the Mexican republic, but he is also ready to disarm the workers and peasants. Thus his real intentions are revealed.

When the Russian workers and peasants quit the imperialist world war and returned to their homes, they took their arms with them. They used these arms to rid themselves not only of the czarist regime, but also of the makeshift capitalist governments that followed.

The Maxican workers and peasants fought for the Obregon-Calles regime as against the De La Huerta counter-revolution. The struggle victoriously ended they returned to their homes, taking their arms with them, like their Russian comrades.

The danger is not so much that Calles may reduce military expenditures, but that he may carry out his threat to disarm the workers, just as the regime of the "socialist" Ebert, has tried to do in Germany, ever since the kaiser was overthrown.

An armed Mexican working class is the promise not only of valiant struggles when necessary against Wall Street rule, but also against fascism, parading as socialism, in the seat of government in Mexico City.

Calles has not only carried out arrests of Communists since coming to power. He threatens retaliation against all radical elements among the workers and peasants. The New York Times says "Amen!" to his threat to "show no favor to extremists."

Under these conditions the Mexican workers and peasants can be relied upon to cling to their arms, at all costs, and carefully preserve them against the day when they will be badly needed in the struggle to win the proletarian Mexican revolution, the Bolshevik Revolution for the establishment of Soviet Rule in the hands of the workers and peasants fighting for Communism.

NO PEACE EVEN FOR PACIFISTS UNDER BOSS RULE

Militarists Place War Foe on Grill

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—Because he wanted to disarm the nursery of toy pistols, toy soldiers and other means of inculcating in the impressionable minds of children a hatred for war, representatives of various patriotic organizations, the United States marine corps and anti-peace organizations denounced Frederick J. Libby, executive secretary of National Council for Prevention of War as a coward and a "white-livered imbecile."

The attacks against the representative of the organization opposed to war occured at a special committee hearing of the local board of education, which was appointed to investigate charges of unpatriotic remarks made by Libby while addressing the school children in the public schools.

Libby Is Grilled

The grilling to which Libby was subjected became particularly vicious during the testimony of Maj. Gen. Barnet, former commandant of the marine corps. The deportation of all who refuse to aid in preparing the young for war was urged by Barnett. Representatives of a number of peace societies appeared in defense of Libby. One of the accusations made was that Libby is an agent of the Soviet government.

Hindus Basement Rights.

SUVA, Fiji, South Pacific Ocean, Dec. 30.—The indenture system, under which Hindus were shipped from India to Fiji as slaves for the sugar plantations, is now completely broken. No more Hindus are coming to Fiji, while many are being repatriated to their home land. The Hindus, now possessing some measure of freedom, are commencing to assert their rights.

$75 to Settle $2,000,000.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—At a total cost of $75 the department of the interior has settled an estate of $2,000,000 left by an Osage Indian woman, Lucy Perry, whose common law husband gets half the estate and whose brother-in-law and niece under a former regular marriage get each one-fourth. The woman's wealth was in oil lands.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Dec. 30.—After a two day strike of the 90 weavers of the Achusnet Mill of New Bedford the workers adjusted their grievance thru textile union officials and returned to work.

FASCIST PARTY NEAR BREAK UP OVER ROSSI MEMO

Liberal Ministers Have Resigned

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Italy, Dec. 30.—The extremists in the fascist party have sent a statement to Premier Mussolini, warning him that if he shows signs of weakness they will act against him. The movement to replace Mussolini as leader of the fascist party, and elevate Deputy Farinacci to that position is growing. The extreme fascists are opposed to the calling of a new election, fearing defeat.

The "Cremona Nuova," fascist organ, has openly declared that Farinacci must be made the leader of their party, which they declare must be reorganized if defeat is to be averted.

The opposition accuses King Emanuel of being an accomplice of the fascist government, charging that the king is not using his influence to bring the fascisti accused of violence into the courts.

The Rossi memorandum, accusing Mussolini of being the inspirer of the murder of Matteoti and attacks on other deputies, has gravely compromised Mussolini's regime. The sentiment for Mussolini's resignation is growing, and even a large portion of the fascist party believe Mussolini's early resignation is inevitable.

The council of cabinet ministers was urgently convoked yesterday afternoon. The meeting has been summoned, it was stated, to discuss the resignations of the liberal ministers Senator Casati, and Gino Sarrocchi, minister of education and public works, respectively.

at as early a date as possible. The machinery of international exchange has already started to move in this direction by the emphatic warning that emanated from the state department yesterday that this government will not tolerate nor listen to any talk of cancellation.

Members of the debt funding commission have been prepared for something of the sort, it was disclosed today, ever since the Parmentier debt commission came to the United States two years ago. M. Parmentier came ostensibly to discuss "settlement," yet he politely and firmly rejected every overture made by American officials, anxious for any kind of settlement, and returned to France leaving only wonderment behind in Washington as to why he had come.

100 Years Not Enough Time!

In this connection, it was revealed today for the first time that when M. Parmentier was here, members of the American debt commission asked him to take back to Paris a settlement providing for a ten year moratorium, and payments to be stretched over a period of 100 years, with a rate of interest approximating that paid by the British in their settlement.

Parmentier replied to the offer by stating that his government had not "authorized" him to receive or transmit any such concrete proposition.

The same proposition M. Parmentier rejected was also broached to M. Jusserand, it was learned today, and the ambassador replied: "When the time comes to take up the question of paying the debt my government will send a commission here."

TEMPERATURE GOES UP SO HEAVY FOG MAKES DAY NIGHT IN CHICAGO

Chicago yesterday was enveloped in an inky blanket of fog and smoke which tranformed day to night and at noon gave the loop an appearance of midnight.

Automobiles and street cars travelled slowly with headlights blazing, street lights gleamed faintly thru the murk and office buildings were ablaze with electric light. Fires in the fog area were under "slow" orders which failed to prevent one fatal accident. There were scores of minor accidents in the streets.

The darkness was caused, according to the weather bureau, by the rise in temperature after the cold wave.

NO "DAILY" NEW YEAR'S DAY

The next issue of the DAILY WORKER will be dated Friday, Jan. 2, 1925. The DAILY WORKER plant, editorial and mechanical, will be closed Thursday, New Year's Day. Many party members will utilize the holiday to collect subscriptions for the DAILY WORKER, and sell policies to "Insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925." What better New Year's gift could a worker receive than a one year subscription to the DAILY WORKER or the WORKERS MONTHLY?

Insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925 with a New Year's present of a ten dollar policy! If you are a member of the working class, it will be a New Year's present to yourself.

ALL RADICALS TO BE DEPORTED, SAYS KLANSMAN

Secret Meetings Plan Fight on Workers

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 30.—The Ku Klux Klan, in its secret meetings openly states its purpose of "deporting every radical in the United States." At a secret meeting of the Klan in the Walker Auditorium, Isaac Kushner succeeded in gaining admission with a Klan pass, and found that the entire meeting was devoted to denunciation of labor organizations and radicals.

The main speaker, Mr. Kemel, a "realm lecturer," and Baptist preacher from Georgia, declared "the main and primary mission of the Klan is to war upon the radicals. It proposes to check up all radicals and liberals in the country, and deport every foreign born radical to his native land and every native radical to some far away island."

The speaker stated that "there are thirty-three million dollars in gold deposited in New York banks by the Soviet government for propaganda purposes against the government of the United States. All radicals are opposed to our institutions, and the Klan intends to exterminate them all. The inferior races are the Poles, Russians, Roumanians, Italians, etc., and we must maintain the supremacy of the protestant Anglo-Saxon race."

The Klan speaker spoke against birth control. He declared against intermarriage between whites and Negroes. "There are already 1,600,000 mulattoes in this country and we don't want any more," he said.

Coolidge Leading Drive Against Pay Raise for P. O. Clerks

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—President Coolidge's latest scheme for beating the postal salaries bill is to have the reactionary majority in the senate adopt the Sterling postal revenue bill before the vote is taken, Jan. 6, on the setting aside of his veto of the salary increase measure.

If the senate adopts the Sterling bill, it will then be likely to use that fact as an excuse for upholding the veto on the salary bill. And the Sterling bill will then be killed in the house.

If the friends of a living wage for postoffice workers become so active in the house as to force the passage of the Sterling measure—as a last resort—during the present session, Coolidge and Postmaster General New will have one last trick to play. They will call upon the house machine leaders to change the date for the higher postal salaries from July 1, 1924, to July 1, 1925. That will cheat the workers of their $225 apiece for the year 1924-25, anyhow. The amount involved is $68,000,000. As the Sterling bill now stands, it provides for raising $68,000,000 a year from July 1, 1925, and for payment of this sum in higher salaries for the year beginning July 1, 1924.

Knowing that the Sterling measure will probably die in the house because so little time remains for its passage before March 4, several republican senators who have been wavering on are now said to be prepared to stand the issue of upholding Coolidge's vetto with Coolidge and against the postal workers.

Building Trades Department.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—George Herdick, president Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators of America, succeeds John Donlin of the Plasterers as president of the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor, headquarters in Washington, on Jan. 1. William Tracy, of the Plumbers, residing in Philadelphia, replaces William Spencer, of the Plumbers, as secretary of the department. Spencer has been secretary since the formation of the department in 1907, and Donlin has been president since 1916.

RANK AND FILER TELLS OF BIG LEFT WING VICTORY IN NEW YORK GARMENT UNION ELECTION

By a DRESSMAKER.

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 30.—The election for executive board members and secretary-treasurer in Local No. 22, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, held here on Dec. 11, will long be remembered. It was a thoro sweep and sent the reactionary clique into oblivion never to be resurrected. The entire left-wing ticket got in by majorities of four to one. What adds great interest to this election, is that unusually heavy voting was done, about 2,200 ballots having been cast.

On the morning of the election, the main polling place looked like veritable scenes of combat. Groups of girls and men of all ages and nationalities, marched back and forth on the sidewalk defying provocation of the reactionaries actively manning the interests of the machine. The old executive board members who marshalled their armies of rough necks, were exasperated when they saw the crowds of workers maching to the polling places.

Particularly was this the case at the 21st street office, where an old warhorse for the machine was doing his bit marshalling his cohorts. He assailed everyone with his vile language and pointed out well-known lefts to his haggard crew. When a girl worker came along and passed the Freiheit to some of her fellow workers, he determined to have it out with her.

Faker Gets Furious.

"Who gave you leave to distribute this paper here?" he shouted. "This is my union and I won't let you sell that paper here," he railed at the girl, shaking his fist furiously. His cohorts immediately closed in, ready for some dirty work, but a few husky workers stepped forward and prevented a fight. The girl worker gained courage and took the machine thugs to task with some pertinent questions.

"Who gave you this union? This union belongs to the workers and not to you. After today, this union will be in the hands of an executive board which will take care of the workers' interests. The workers,and not a few politicians, will own this union. What have you done since you are in power? Have you done something constructive to better the lot of the workers? You drew checks for some unknown expenses? You raised our dues against the expressed wishes of the members. You defied every decision made by the members"

Reactionary Nonpluused.

The reactionary was so befuddled by the rapid succession of questions fired at him that he took refuge by saying, rather sheepishly, "You are a Bolshevik; you take orders from Moscow."

Such scenes were duplicattd at practically every important polling place. In the meantime, the workers kept up their voting, and when they emerged from their polling places, their faces were aglow with joy at the opportunity given them to do their share to oust the old guard.

When the voting was over, it was evident that the gang received as thoro a thrashing as they well merited. Notwithstanding the tricks they employed to defer the election for months, the day of their doom had to come.

The tallymen sat thru the night anxiously counting the cheering votes. Practically every ballot was voted straight left; the right votes were very difficult to find. When the counting was over, the lefts were literally swept in by the greatest majority in the greatest election ever held in local No. 22.

The venomous secretary-treasurer of the local, who was only recently honored with a vice presidency of the international for his diabolic attacks on the left and for enthusiastic support of every vicious crime committed against the interests of the workers, was so completely snowed under, that he was to be found neither on the ballot nor in office.

The left administration of local No. 22 is now getting ready for serious work to meet the pressing issues awaiting solution.

BALTIMORE, MD., Dec. 30.—The proposed new agreement of the Cloth Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers' Union of Baltimore includes unemployment insurance and sanitary label provisions. The new agreement, if accepted, will go into effect at the beginning of the year.

FORMER BRITISH SPY EXPOSED IN ANTI-RED TALK

Expelled from Russia as British Agent

A workingman who strayed into Walsh's Hall to hear Francis McCullough, professional international Red baiter, speak about Soviet Russia, summed up the talk with the words "It was cheap, and it was rotten. The monarchists bought McCullough cheaply, and now he is peddling his story."

McCullough ran into difficulties at the meeting. Several Russians got up after the speech and ridiculed his contradictions and mis-statements. When B. Borisoff, of the Russian "Novy Mir," arose to nail some of McCullough's lies, the priests sprinkled thru the audience started to shout "No Jews allowed here. Throw him out."

Borisoff told of the power of the Russian trade unions in controlling the working conditions in Russia, and gave the lie to McCullough's statement that the Russian trade unions do not bother about economic conditions but are used as a political tool. "You are shouting for freedom of expression in Russia," said Borisoff. "But what freedom have you in America?" Borisoff then told of the oppressive measures used by the police and the employers during the steel and coal strikes, when workers were killed by hired gunmen. He declared that at the present time, workers are not allowed to hold meetings in Gary, McKeesport and other industrial towns.

Another worker arose and demanded to know why McCullough did not give the audience some real information about what is going on in Russia at the present time. "You have told us nothing that has not been in the Tribune," said this man. "The workers are now the rulers of Russia. The landowners, the bourgeoisie and nobility have fled the country. I would like to know what the people of Russia want. I would like to know the good points and the bad points of the Bolshevik regime. Instead you have told us what has already been printed in the capitalist newspapers."

McCullough, when pressed to tell who received the proceeds of the meeting, refused to answer. He refused to say who had arranged for him to speak. The DAILY WORKER learns, however, that Lee Keedick, of New York, a monarchist, arranged for McCullough's speech. Many of those present were old religious Russians who are against the Jews and who want to perpetuate the superstitions of the Russian church. A Russian czarist colonel, Col. Tchslavsky, was present.

Ziegler, Ill., Dec. 27, 1924.
THE DAILY WORKER,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Comrades:—Enclosed you will find the sum of $53.75 as part of a collection that was taken by us two comrades on Christmas day among the South Slavic comrades and sympathizers for the DAILY WORKER.

We did not sell any insurance policies as we did not have them anyhow. We understand steps will be taken at our branch meetings about the insurance policies. This house-to-house collection was merely in small donations, but it will help our DAILY a little.

Yours for the revolution,
MATT BUKOVAK,

CONDITIONS ON CANADIAN SHIPS WORSE THAN JAIL

Crews Subjected to All Kinds of Graft

By SYDNEY WARREN
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

VANCOUVER, B. C., Dec 30.—Conditions aboard the Canadian government's vessels lead seamen of Vancouver to believe that the government has deliberately settled upon a policy to force white seamen from the vessels as an excuse to replace them with coolie labor, as is the case on vessels belonging to the Canadian Pacific Steamship Co.

Seamen on these vessels are subjected to conditions worse than those prevailing in most jails ashore. Food is so scarce that it is a common thing for vessels to arrive in port with the crew half famished and ill from working for days on short rations of very inferior food.

Fines Are Assessed.

Apart from general living conditions aboard the government's vessels, the crews are subjected to almost every conceivable kind of petty graft and discipline. Fines are assessed for the slightest infractions of the ship's articles and in many cases at the whim of the commanding officer. In cases where the men appeal to the shipping master of the home port to arbitrate, that person usually is job conscious and gives his decisions accordingly.

A specific example of the treatment meted out to the men is found in the crew's complaint of conditions prevailing aboard the government boat Canadian Importer, commanded by Capt. C. Wallace. This vessel left Vancouver August 18, 1924, bound for Australia and arrived at the first port of call 31 days later, at Melbourne.

The Tailor Graft.

During the voyage the crew had worn out most of their "gear" and asked for an advance of money to refit themselves for the remainder of the voyage. The captain refused to allow the men any money advances, but told the crew that he would get them a tailor and they could buy their clothing thru him. The "tailor" graft, hoary with years, is still notorious aboard Canadian government vessels. Briefly it is this: this captain arranges with some cheap clothier in whatever port the vessel happens to be, to sell his crew slop clothing at tailored-to-measure prices. The clothier to placate the men usually advances them a few dollars and later collects this along with the exorbitant price of the goods he has sold from the crew's wages. The captain comes in for his rakeoff in the form of a commission.

Men Were Fined.

So bad were conditions aboard the Canadian Importer that two members of the crew deserted at Brisbane, Queensland, and when the captain attempted to put to sea shorthanded, five other members of the crew refused to go aboard the vessel until the full complement of men was obtained. They succeeded in forcing the captain to get the full crew, but afterwards were fined $11.25 each for having refused to sail shorthanded.

Returning to Vancouver the food ran short and for 10 days the crew were forced to work and subsist on mush three times a day with no sugar or tea. On arrival in Vancouver several members who complained were discharged and placed on the government's blacklist. The water the men were compelled to drink was putrid and the color of mud.

The secretary of the Federated Seafarers' Union of British Columbia, W. Donaldson, attempted to have it analyzed by the Vancouver city analyst, but that official refused to do this, giving as an excuse that there was not sufficient water to analyze, despite the fact that a large bottle full was submitted.

Break Agreement.

Similar conditions are reported aboard the Canadian Spinner and the Canadian Miller, where in addition to poor food the government officials lowered the wages of the ordinary seamen and deck boys below what they had signed articles for at Montreal. On the Canadian Traveller sometime ago an old stoker, 60 years old, was fined $80 from his wages because he fell sick as the result of the treatment he received aboard the vessel and was unable to work. The captain charged him with shirking his work. The aged worker appealed to the shipping office in vain.

CULTURAL LIFE AMONG WORKERS

papers took place recently in Leningrad; a similar contest in Moscow many months ago.

The living newspaper is another popular form of entertainment used in club work and evening programs. The central club of the Moscow unions maintains a group of workers which now give all their time to putting on such programs, in addition to the amateur programs organized by separate groups of workers themselves. A newspaper is acted out by living people in words and gestures. Cartoons and propaganda and important events are portrayed seriously or humorously.

As another instance of the vital cultural life among the workers of Russia, I notice that the Moscow trade unions last year had 4708 lectures, 8520 excursions carried on in 176 clubs and 209 red corners, the latter being a smaller social group which does not boast a building or establishment of its own.

Study Classes for Housewives.

In Leningrad, 57,000 working men and women are studying in classes for illiterates. An illiteracy census was made this fall and other classes are also planned. The largest number of illiterates are in textile workers, the next largest in the metal workers' union. The medical workers are liquidating illiteracy among the hospital servants. The first attempt to organize classes for housewives has also taken place in Leningrad, where 2000 are registered.

Restaurants and day nurseries and clubs are being opened now under cooperative homesocieties organized in the shop committees of Moscow. This also is spreading, as are other forms of co-operative house-building and house management.

Meantime the city-country connections are still a matter of close attention. There are societies all over the Soviet Union for the purpose of improving this connection. Leningrad has two hundred thousand members of such societies of whom more than ten thousand are active workers, going as volunteers to the rural districts to establish there cultural connections with the town. They have given special attention to the most backward parts of Leningrad province, which, being far north, has many extremely primitive districts. They have organized reading huts, co-operatives, peasants mutual aid, and have helped the village schools.

Rural School Improved.

As a result of their work the general condition of rural schools in the Leningrad district, is much improved. The fuel question has disappeared, the peasants having donated the necessary work for this, under stimulation of outside interests. The text book question is not so difficult any more as the various city groups acting as guardians send out quantities of books. There are now 1,000 special schools for reading and writing in Leningrad district for the purpose of teaching adult peasants.

These cultural guardianships by city groups take various forms. The all-Russian central executive committee is guardian for several rural districts and is electrifying them. In Shumsky district a special "Day of the Red Peasant" was organized, in which propaganda on new methods of agriculture was the order of the day. Groups of workers' correspondents assume guardianship of some village and send periodicals and books.

Rural Districts Get Newspapers

The newspaper is coming to the village at last. There are still relatively few villages which receive them regularly, on account of great distances and bad transport. But a postoffice near Leningrad is now making a special experiment opening 23 small rural stations for the special purpose of delivering newspapers which it guarantees to supply within a day of issue, to the farthest corners of its district.

Besides the movement which comes from the city to the village, there are plenty of movements among the peasants themselves. Independent Peasant congresses for the purpose of discussing local improvements are organized by local soviets. In one district with which I am familiar, 1500 peasant delegates attended for four days discussions; half of them were women. The move to bring women into active work in public life is increasing, and this in itself will cause great changes in the daily habits and life of Russia.

Daugherty Trusts Friend.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—Former Attorney General Harry Daugherty's report of March 5, 1924, containing the report of two trustees on the attempts made by the Chicago meat packers to obey the "consent decree" of the federal court is used in a circular issued by Armour & Co. in their press propaganda in the capital. The packers want to get rid of the decree under which they were required to stick to meat packing and certain related lines of business. The trustees claim that the Armour and Swift groups tried to sell their holdings in these other enterprises, as directed by the court. The sale was not made.

MORGAN RAISES BAN ON MADISON AVENUE BUILDING

Has Plenty Sunlight at Glen Cove

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—John Pierpont Morgan's power in the government of New York City has long been shown by his ability to prevent the intrusion of sky scrapers on Madison Ave., across from his old mansion on 36th St. In 1916, thru a residence zoning resolution put thru the board of estimate, he blocked the plans of the late Baron Astor to shut off some of his sunlight by a high building across the way.

J. P. Has Plenty Sun.

But times have changed. Morgan no longer needs the sunlight on Madison Ave. The old Morgan mansion is little more than a private museum. Madison Ave. is no longer an aristocratic neighborhood and the multi-millionaire banker is firmly established in his feudal estate at Glen Cove, Long Island. So the announcement comes that the Morgan interests have come to an agreement with a syndicate, headed by Robert M. Catts, which now controls the former Astor property, for a 25-story, $11,000,000 building across the way. And legal authority for the project comes by the decision of corporation counsel Nicholson ratifying an amendment to the zoning regulations.

The old Morgan mansion was the scene of some historic financial deals. Among the most celebrated of these deals consummated in this house was the great anthracite pool of March, 1886, when representatives of the railroads dominating the hard coal mines met there in conference with the elder J. P. and made a compact limiting anthracite production to a definite tonnage and penalizing any railroad that should exceed its quota.

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

WORKERS PARTY REPUDIATING FARMER-LABORISM

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER.

The results of the membership meetings held in five principal cities on Sunday, Dec. 14, show that our party is definitely emerging from its farmer-labor illusions. Six weeks ago practically the entire membership of the Workers (Communist) Party was profoundly convinced that it could very profitably use the slogan of the farmer-labor party. In spite of the tremendous obstacles that have had to be overcome, the inertia, the organised resistance to the discussion in some sections of the party, the smoke screens that have been thrown out by the minority to hide the real issue, the herrings that have been drawn across the trail—yet, after six weeks' discussion, the central executive committee can say that it has convinced a majority of the membership for the Communist policy laid down in its theses.

New York City and Chicago are the largest centers of our party, where party life is most intense and where, therefore, the discussion penetrated deepest among the members. The vote in these two cities is therefore most interesting.

Chicago, for example, had a membership meeting six weeks ago which was carried by the minority overwhelmingly—by a vote of 175 to 76. Even after the discussion in the party press for six weeks, the membership in Chicago was still largely in favor of the farmer-labor party. When the membership meeting, the largest in the party history, opened on Dec. 28, the farmer-labor advocates undoubtedly would have carried their proposition if a vote had been taken without discussion.

But when the minority, advocates of the farmer-labor party, were forced to defend their position in open debate, before the assembled membership, they collapsed entirely. During the actual progress of the debate, in the few hours between 3 o'clock and 11, the block of farmer-labor sentiment was shattered. When the smoke cleared away, the central executive committee had a clear majority of 299 against 262.

New York City showed us this process working even further than in Chicago. The farmer-labor advocates had banked upon New York. They exerted every effort to win it, and sent their star speaker there. The central executive committee not only won a majority there, completely overcoming the illusion that the farmer-labor slogan can be used to assemble masses under present conditions, but the majority vote was very decided, being 482 against 330. We can see that in New York it is a question of but a few weeks until the farmer-labor ghost will be laid to rest.

The twin cities meeting, Minneapolis and St. Paul, where the central executive committee gained a decided majority vote of the membership, is also interesting. There our party is actually faced with a functioning farmer-labor party, something that exists nowhere else in the United States. It might have been supposed that there, if anywhere, the membership of the Workers Party would be the most obsessed with the illusion of the farmer-labor slogan. But it seems that practical experience with the farmer-labor section of the LaFollette movement is also a help, as well as the party discussion, in overcoming the illusions of our farmer-labor Communism. The Minnesota cities cast their vote for the central executive committee thesis.

Detroit and Cleveland are just beginning the process of laying the farmer-labor ghosts. Unfortunately it has been impossible for the C. E. C. to give these cities much special attention during the discussion and these two cities could not reach the Bolshevist point of view so quickly as did New York, Chicago and the Twin Cities. But even in Detroit and Cleveland, where the farmer-labor minority in our party won the vote, we see that the farmer-labor illusion is speedily fading. Whereas six weeks ago the vote would have been almost unanimous for the farmer-labor party yet on last Sunday, it barely squeaked by. Give Detroit and Cleveland a little while more and they will redeem their record.

It is very illuminating, it is very educational, to see this tremendous reorientation taking place in our party with such rapidity—and it is not a matter of gratification to see how sound is the heart of our party, how readily it responds to the Communist line in political debate. Consider the tremendous difficulties that the central executive committee has been forced to struggle against. It went to a membership that was totally unprepared, with the proposal to change a basic policy, for which the entire party had been educating the movement for two years. As a consequence the C. E. C. had almost the entire party against it at first.

In addition were other obstacles. Certain language sections of our party have carried on no discussion whatever. Following an un-Bolshevist line, their officials decided to save their members from the disturbance of a discussion and, picking what looked like the easiest way, cast in their lot with the old slogan. In these sections it is only now, after six weeks, that the C. E. C. is finally penetrating with the discussion.

Other groups of the membership had been poisoned by the underground propaganda that has been carried on thruout the year by the minority national caucus, which brought many groups to the discussion caucus-bound, with the legend of the Lore affair, with wild tales of the "opportunist" sins of various members of the C. E. C. All of these things required the open discussion of the membership meetings to dispel.

In spite of all obstacles, however, and starting with the party almost entirely against it, the policy of the central executive committee in six short weeks won a majority of the membership. The farmer-labor advocates are making their last stand. The policy of the C. E. C. is sweeping the party, and in another month or so it will have the support of the overwhelming mass of the party. Everyone will soon be admitting that the farmer-labor ghost will quit walking before the party comes to its convention. That is the meaning of the vote taken by our members in New York, Chicago, the Twin Cities, Detroit and Cleveland on Dec. 28. The Workers Party is emerging from the farmer-labor illusion.

WHY NOT CHEAP MILK?

By MANUEL GOMEZ.

PARADOXES are often highly illuminating. Consider the astonishing paradox of our minority: farmer-labor Communists who insist that the idea of a mass farmer-labor party was a childish illusion from the start.

The comrades of the minority profess to be greatly amazed. They take their amusement seriously and the party should take it seriously too. It would seem that they have been suddenly struck by the "naive innocence" with which our party entered originally into the movement for a "broad, all-inclusive" labor party. Their present attitude—an attitude of ridicule toward the conception that there must be a broad mass base for any labor party agitation—is too important to let go by without analysis. It proves conclusively that the majority has been right in labeling the minority tendency opportunistic.

The labor party campaign was an application of the united front. But why do Communists go into united front campaigns? For the purpose of building the Communist Party. Of course, but that is not all. "It is question of going forward with the rising masses of the workers," said Comrade Zinoviev at the meeting of the enlarged E. C. of the Comintern, Dec. 4, 1921, when the united front policy was being formulated.

Independent of what organizational benefits may accrue to the Communist Party, a Communist united front campaign must be based upon an issue which in itself constitutes a forward movement for the work class. Every step of our policy must be rooted in the understanding that "the Communists have no interests separate and apart from the working class as a whole."

Consequently, when local farmer-labor parties were springing up on all sides—when great masses were responding to the farmer-labor slogan—when large numbers of workers were moving, apparently, for all their confusion and vacillations, in the right direction—the Workers Party threw itself into the campaign for a nation-wide farmer-labor party, based on the trade unions, organizations of poor farmers and working class political parties. We did this in an effort to win the leadership over the masses, to unmask the reactionary labor bureaucracy, and to gain influence and members for the Workers Party. But it was not just a trick to outwit the A. F. of L. fakirs, altho every one of them from Johnston to Fitzpatrick, tried to make the masses believe the whole business was nothing but a typical Communist maneuver. It was a sincere move on our part to participate in the creation of a federated party of workers and farmers—not an "all-inclusive" party necessarily, but one based on organized masses, in which the Workers Party would be a militant left wing.

Communists realize the shortcomings of a "farmer-labor party" and its creation is certainly not a matter of principle with us, but we were confronted with what might possibly have been a major historical development in the United States and we were obliged to take an attitude toward it. In any case, we held to the conception that a farmer-labor campaign must be considered objectively (from the point of view of the interests of the broad masses) as well as subjectively (from the point of view of the Workers Party as an organization).

Now the minority refers to this as our "illusion." Following upon the heels adventures in the field of farm-laborism, under the guiding star of Comrade Pepper, they have developed a penchant for farmer-laborism and farmer-labor slogans, under any and all circumstances, irrespective of the movement of the masses—in spite of the fact that the historical development in the United States may take an entirely different road from that of the farmer-labor party.

The following apology is from Comrade Bedacht, who has organized the deviations of the minority into a system of pseudo-Marxian deviation:

"The the campaign for a labor party may or may not result in the formation of such a party, yet, the process of the campaign itself, the maneuvers of the campaign, would bring us in contact with the masses, would strengthen our party numerically, would teach our party maneuvers and activities, and is bound to extend the influence of the party to greater numbers of workers and exploited farmers."

In this paragraph we have the whole secret of the errors of the minority. Here we have the idea of maneuvers without a practical goal (the minority comrades themselves speak of a broad labor party as an illusion). Maneuvers without any basis for the forward movement of the workers. Maneuvers for practice, maneuvers for the sake of experience, maneuvers for the purpose of making immediate contacts for the Workers Party. For this, Bedacht is willing to subordinate the masses to farmer-laborism, with the farmer-labor slogan, against their own ultimate class interests.

Now we are in a position to see why it is that the minority is constantly shouting for "action," "organization," without the slightest regard for the objective needs of the masses, and why they ridicule the majority for thinking in terms of the masses. The minority wants to "organize," "crystallize," "maneuver" everything in sight—or out of it. A half-dozen fake, camouflage farmer-labor parties (which could, no doubt, be "crystallized") would not help the working class onward, but would only confuse it. Nevertheless, we might get a few members for the Workers Party.

And we find ourselves in the comfortable paradise of the subjectivist. If it is good for us organizationally, it must be good!

Comrade Bedacht and his group have turned our revolutionary motto upside down. Instead of "The Communists have no interests separate and apart from the working class as a whole," we find the fatuous doctrine of "The working class has no interests separate and apart from the Communists."

A queer sort of Marxism this, which bases its policy on the Workers Party instead of on the working class as a whole! Such a policy logically translates itself into the slogan, anything to get members! Which is a slight variation of the old S. P. slogan of, anything to get votes! Our minority comrades are to be sharply differentiated from the opportunistic errors of the S. P., but that is where their tendency leads.

Eduard Bernstein, the father of revisionism, wrote in 1893: "The final aim is nothing, the movement is everything." This is the beginning and end of opportunism.

WHAT SORT OF AN ANIMAL IS A FARMER-LABOR PARTY ANYHOW?

R. BAKER.

THERE is a tremendous fear among the defenders of the minority thesis that if we make the farmer-labor party slogan, the farmer-labor party slogan, (and that is all that remains of this great mass-class movement) we will remain naked and isolated from the masses.

What do we mean by going to the masses? We mean fighting side by side with them on their many battle fronts to improve their living conditions, to ward off the attacks of the employers, rallying them for struggles against the misdeeds of the union, fighting the capitalist state and its tyranny, and, in these battles imbuing the workers with a revolutionary ideology.

A farmer-labor party, as we know it is an occasional conference of delegates from the unions, generally party members, but our real contact with the masses is made in the unions from which the delegates are sent to a F. L. P. conference.

Let us not forget that our past labor parties were successful only insofar as we had prestige, influence and leadership in the unions, and now that these labor parties disappeared in smoke, we still remain in the unions and our prestige and contact with the masses remains unchanged.

We have developed our leadership there, not by talking alone, (this is for the information of those comrades who carry no union cards) but, by participating in their strikes, and that means our strikes as well, by initiating movements to improve the unions as fighting organs of the class struggle, by discrediting the reactionary leadership; but, above all by fighting side by side with the organized workers when there we fighting to be done. That is how we did it, comrades, and not by talking about farmer-labor parties at a time when wages are being slashed right and left, at a time when unemployment is scourging the working class, at a time when vicious and concentrated efforts are being made to destroy what there is of the labor movement in America.

I have read plenty of arguments and heard them too, that you can safely talk about a farmer-labor party in a union, but, when you begin speaking about the Workers Party, then you get kicked out of the union. This may be true about those who go into the union just to talk. But we are still judged by what we do and not by what we say. We can't fool the workers into a farmer-labor party, in the unions we are known as Communists, and the workers know that when we organize a farmer-labor party, we are but organizing a poor imitation of the Workers Party.

Let me reiterate again; that the workers will follow us into any united front movement only insofar as they have confidence in us as Communists and by that time they are ready to follow us into the Workers Party or at least to support it.

Locally, we notice that those comrades who could not be reached by any means during the time we were building the Philadelphia farmer-labor party are now violently in favor of it. Comrades, where were you when we needed you; when we pleaded for your support; when we sent you mandatory letters calling for your support? And, if we start another F. L. P. where will you be? To you comrades, who are not in the unions, I am almost tempted to give you another one of these parties. Perhaps, you would take a little more interest in it, now that you are talking so much about it, there being, unfortunately, no samples left. If you could see one of these queer animals that we were building right and left only a few months ago, you wouldn't speak of it in strange comrades, how these massclass parties disappeared when we deserted them for just a few short months to carry on the Communist campaign?

It is interesting to analyze the line-up in this controversy; the comrades who claim to be the "theoreticians" of the "Marxian" of the party, with few exceptions, want a farmer-labor party "dead or alive," and the comrades fighting against it are the cruder or proletarian elements to whom the class struggle is a hard bitter fact, who bear the brunt of many battles against the bosses and the misleaders of labor, and incidently, the comrades who made possible the labor parties that we had. To those comrades of the minority who are in the unions, I desire to say: after reading all these articles take an evening off to visit your union and raise the question there, and you will discover that these strange people will not listen to you, they are too busy trying to prevent the impending wage cut, or planning an organization drive to strengthen the union or else discussing the problems of unemployment as they effect the local union.

Also, remember that the trade unions after all, (putting aside the sick and death benefit societies for a moment) are the basis, the raw material, from which any labor party is to be built. Let us not pay too much attention to the panicky fear of "isolation." A good percentage of our membership is in the unions, and we couldn't isolate them if we try.

We are a part of the masses, and we fought on the united fronts against the masters before the slogan was issued. This is the most hopeful sign in our party. It is the iron fist that will always guard our party from isolation. That will keep it healthy and in direct contact with the masses. And if our non-union comrades would utilize the splendid energies they are displaying in this discussion, towards organizing the workers in their trades, there would be no need for them to grow panic stricken about isolation.

We have a limited number of comrades in the unions, with a limited amount of time and energy at their disposal, and we want to utilize this most effectively by fighting for leadership as Communists on the burning issues confronting the workers now and not by yelling about artificial slogans and movements. As Communists we are fighting today and we will continue doing so and lead our followers into the political party we represent and typify, the Workers (Communist) Party.

Now I would like to put some of our college graduates into the unions for a while and make them fight there and just listen and watch us fight.

Our district organizer writes a brilliant article on "Words and Deeds" but for four months battles raged in his union on important issues and he could get neither words nor deeds from him, he sat quietly, philosophically observing our "syndicalists" carrying on the fight.

Go to the masses! We are there comrades, and we couldn't separate ourselves if we try, but we will lead the masses into our party. Philadelphia comrades should remember that during the four months of our local F. L. P. campaign we gained 27 new members and during the four months of the Workers Party campaign we gained 135 new members and four new branches, and above all, we mobilized our membership into action. We gained our comrades to fight for our party as never before, and during this same period the carmen had a splendid and successful campaign to help the Paterson strikers. Our comrades were responsible for more unions endorsing Foster and Gitlow than we could muster to the second conference of the local F. L. P. to hear the report of the delegates from St. Paul. Our comrades couldn't get enthused over a F. L. P. because they knew it to be a huge joke. We can learn several lessons from our local situation.

First, our party needs Bolshevization, lot of education and discipline. Second, our membership will much sooner fight for our party than for a diluted F. L. P. Third, that even if we decide for a F. L. P. we must decide on a basis for carrying it out with. Let us not fool ourselves, even our Workers Party campaign, which was about 400 per cent better and more effective than our F. L. P. campaign, it was conducted by a comparatively small percentage of our party members. If you don't believe it, ask the secretary of your branch to read the City Central committee minutes dealing with the reports of the campaign committee, or ask your delegates about it. Compared with what we had before the party campaign, we made great strides forward but there is much more to be done. Let us build our party for a while so that when we are fighting for it in the unions we will be conscious that we are fighting for a real Communist Party capable of participating in all united fronts.

In the meantime, this discussion does not stop us from carrying on the work in our unions today, even tho, we have to pause every now and then to answer an argument.

A FEW FACTS ABOUT MINNESOTA

By H. M. WICKS

SO desperate are the majority at their complete rout in the present party discussion that their sole remaining weapon of offense and defense is personal attacks. This desperation has permeated even the wind-swept plains of Minnesota, where Comrade Hathaway diverts attention from the facts of his great "united front" with Mahoney by charging that Wicks, while in Minnesota, evidently misunderstood the instruction of the C. E. C. and thought he was on a "vacation." He assails me on account of my article concerning Leninist leadership, but he does not reply to the article!

Hathaway says the "blood of the Minnesota comrades boils" when they read my article. I strongly suspect Comrade Hathaway presumes too much when the professes to speak for all Minnesota comrades. It seems rather strange that at this late time, in the period of party discussion their "blood" should "boil."

As to the part I took in Minnesota, as the representative of the then central committee, I will only call to mind Comrade Hathaway of the fact that the district committee in Minnesota, of which he was a member, unanimously adopted a resolution praising my work there, and sent it to the C. E. C. and a copy to me personally in New York which I have before me at this moment. Evidently my imperfections only became apparent to Comrade Hathaway in this month of December, 1924, but certainly not in September, 1923.

As the late unlamented Mr. Post, of Battle Greek, would say: "There's a Reason!"

I think this assault can be taken for what it is worth.

As to other Minnesota comrades, I am certain they will recall that there was never a meeting of our comrades that I did not attend. In addition to that I spoke at meetings of the defense society, Young Workers League celebrations, a picnic, lectured before branches, attended general membership meetings in both Minneapolis and St. Paul, wrote publicity daily for our press regarding the convention we were helping arrange, familiarized myself with the complicated election laws of the state, straightened out a fight in the Farmer-Labor party conferences with progressive labor people, wrote a constitution and by-law for the proposed organization, besides preparing exhaustive and detailed reports to the C. E. C. and writing articles for the DAILY WORKER in my capacity as one of its editors. Aside from these tasks that fell to me occupied from twelve to sixteen hours a day I devoted my time to "private" matters.

The one time I left a committee meeting before it was concluded, when there was nothing but formal routine to finish, I spent the evening at the home of Comrade R. C. Hedlund, who was not then a member of our party, but who was a supporter and whom Comrade Hathaway, personally, advised me to cultivate.

On the few occasions I did not spend the whole day at party headquarters, engaged in preparations for the convention, I attended the sessions of the convention of the American Bar Association and listened to Mr. Hughes dilate upon the Monroe Doctrine as applied to this stage of capitalist imperialism, Mr. Taft, John W. Davis and Lord Birkenhead of Britain. As one of the editors of the WORKER it was my obvious duty to cover such a gathering. Every important detail of this pow-wow was published in the WORKER and written by me. This may have been a purely "personal" matter, in the eyes of Comrade Hathaway. This meeting of the bar association was the only time I got near those who practice at the bar.

A Few Facts.

Just what was our strategy in Minnesota and how was it carried out in practice?

Our task there was to break away the farmers and workers from the leadership of the petty-bourgeois political machine that dominated the farmer-labor movement.

The former majority of the C. E. C. laid down three manouvers:

1. We were to endeavor to organize the delegates to the Minnesota convention into a bloc of the federated farmer-labor party. This was our major demand. (The present majority would have tried to organize them into the Workers Party.)

2. We were to yield a point and simply call the organization the Minnesota federated farmer-labor party, without affiliation with the national party organized at Chicago in July of that year, and send delegates to the January unity conference proposed by the federated party.

3. As a very last resort and as our minimum demand we were to elect delegates to the proposed unity conference. Failing this we were to withdraw.

We yielded the first two before the convention started and in spite of my instructions to the contrary, Hathaway and the steering committee refused to make a fight for the later.

Comrade Hathaway says I rushed up the aisle and told them to "split the goddam thing wide open." Possibly those were my words. Unquestionably they were my sentiments. I sat thru the whole convention, watched every move, and the last moment, late Sunday night, after we had successfully fought Van Lear and a railroad brotherhood faker, the critical moment arrived, and we, Communists, were to strive for our one and only demand from the convention. A certain Jules Anderson, editor of a labor sheet at Crookston, Minnesota (the delightful symbolism of the name of the town in which Anderson lives strikes one forcibly) made a vicious attack upon the Workers Party the federated party and the world Communist movement.

Then came a fraudulant point of order which Mahoney, with his customary trickery, sustained. Why did not our comrades at least appeal from Mahoney's decision and endeavor to defend us against this vile assault and I demanded they should?

I leave the answer to Hathaway, who was chairman of the steering committee.

This capitulation was the logical result of the whole policy pursued by Comrade Hathaway in Minnesota. It is of a piece with his lamentations over the fact that he failed to be elected secretary of the working people's political league at the Duluth convention of July 18, 1923, where someone "exposed" the fact that he was a member of the Workers Party and of the executive of the federated farmer-labor party. His exposure (?) as a Communist came quite by accident. It was no fault of his. No one would have ever suspected his affiliations from his actions.

In my humble opinion, had we challenged Mahoney's ruling at Minneapolis in the September convention, we could have carried our point. But we had no floor leadership. Hathaway, of of the majority's prize trade unionists, is helpless as a child on the floor of a convention. His forte is conducting diplomatic negotiations with gentlemen of the Mahoney caliber and preserving "unity" with them.

Even after the contemptible performance of Mahoney, Hathaway still sang peans to this fakir and knight of the double-cross!

In the report of the steering committee of this convention, signed by Hathaway, Comrade Otto Wangerin and J. O. Johnson, the statement is made that one of these comrades had been active in the railroad labor movement, but not in the political phase, and the other had consistently opposed political action and declared himself a syndicalist. So, our sole political expert was Comrade Hathaway. I am certain either Comrade Wangerin or Comrade Johnson could have done equally as well without the guidance of Comrade Hathaway.

When Hathaway stated that I left the building after the adjournment of the convention and before our party members met to review the devistation he is right. That was a strictly "private" matter, tho it might have had some effect upon the membership. I was so infuriated that I considered it inadvisable to vent my ire on many of our comrades who had done the best they could under the circumstances.

After I calmed down a bit I came to the meeting and endeavored to make the best of a bad situation, knowing that many of our comrades were inexperienced and that even Comrade Hathaway, despite his pose upon the Workers Party the federated party and the world Communist movement.

The school he is now following will not contribute to his political acumen, if his attempt to assail me with slander, instead of replying to my argument, is indicative of the direction of his development.

CANNON RECITES HISTORY

By ABRAHAM JAKIRA

THE right wing never has any courage to stand up and fight directly for its policy, but tries by devious ways, by indirection and by shifting issues, to advance its influence and smuggle in its policy, says Comrade Cannon in the DAILY WORKER of Dec. 11th. We are not going to discuss the validity of this statement, but will try to show that it applies to the majority fully one hundred per cent.

What Are the Issues?

The theses of both groups deal with several important issues. The farmer-labor party, undoubtedly, occupies the outstanding place among these, but each of the other issues are at least of sufficient importance as to be discussed by the party membership. We must not try to smuggle in these issues just because we are discussing the farmer-labor party. The issue of the Second-and-half International tendency was important enough to be seriously considered by the enlarged session of the Communist International last spring. So why all the exitement of Comrade Cannon when Comrade Ruthenberg raises "the issue of the opportunistic errors of Comrade Lore"? Before the discussion is over many other issues will undoubtedly be given consideration whether Comrade Cannon likes it or not.

What Is Not the Issue

The majority on the other hand raises quite a number of "shifting issues" which have little to do with the present discussion. An active comrade here suggested to me that an article be written entitled—"What is not the issue." This was after he participated in the discussion in one of the party branches where another comrade reported for the majority side. The majority spends considerable time to "prove" that the amalgamation slogan is good, that the trade unions are important factors in the class struggle, that there many issues which can serve as basis for our united front campaigns, etc. Are these the issues involved in the present discussion? And in order to further befog and confuse the issue the cry of "opportunism" and "right wing" is raised by the majority against the minority. "Stop Thief," Comrade Cannon, will not do at this later hour. It is the right wing that is resorting to shifting issues."

No Courage to Stand Up

Comrade Cannon tells us that it was not before "the August meeting of the C. E. C." that "Comrades Foster, Bittelman and myself began to ask a few questions." It was only after the August meeting that Comrade Foster "was beginning to assert his right and duty to participate actively in the party leadership." What does it mean! Does it mean that Comrade Foster while a leading member of the C. E. C. until August did not assert his right and duty as a member of the C. E. C? If so it means that he did not have the "courage to stand up and fight directly for his policies?"

History

Now, as to "history" quoted by Comrade Cannon. He rightly reminds us that the former C. E. C. was in disagreement with him on a number of occasions. We can add, we also opposed the expulsion of the "right wing" led by Comrade Olgin from the Jewish Federation despite of the bitter opposition of the Comrade Bittelman. But we also did something else. We split the "right wing" (and not the federation) of the Jewish federation, we broke the open alliance between Salutsky and Lore and between Lore and Cannon. For Comrade Cannon has always occupied the extreme side of the right wing in the party.

The present minority never had any illusions about Lore and if he "was carried around," to use Comrade Cannon's expression, it was just as a nurse carries around a sick child. (But the moment Comrade Lore made an effort to make the F. P. L. an individual membership organization he was called to order.) At the same time serious efforts were made to centralize both the party machinery and the party press and with considerable success. There was no danger of the right wing exerting his influence as long as the party was controlled by the left wing. The fight against the Second-and-half International tendency in the party becomes imperative when it is openly encouraged by the ruling centrist group of the C. E. C.

As to Comrade Foster. The present minority never had any illusions about

WORKING WOMEN HOLD MONSTER PROTEST MEET

Condemn Firetraps Used to House Workers

(Special to the Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 30.—All available standing room was utilized in the protest meeting against the fire-trap tenement conditions that was held in the hall at 64 East 104th St. under the joint auspices of the women's committee of the Workers Party and the united council of working class women.

The audience was a significant one from the fact that fully ninety per cent were plain people of the neighborhood who had no connection with either organization and were clearly not accustomed to attending such meetings.

The messages delivered by Sonya Diamond, chairman, Sadi Amter, Rose Nevin, Mrs. Fabricant, Kate Gitlow, Rose Pastor Stokes and A. Landy received hearty applause. A man who tried to disturb the meeting only helped to create greater enthusiasm for the meeting and resentment against himself. The full Communist message was delivered and not one of the crowd left the hall till after midnight. A batch of DAILY WORKERS was sold, fourteen women joined the united council of working class women, and a great many expressed a lively interest in the announcement that Tuesday evening, Dec. 30, in the same hall, a lecture would be delivered under the auspices of the U. C. W. W. and expressed their intention of coming and bringing their friends.

The following resolution was adopted unanimously by a standing vote:

WHEREAS, we working men and working women in mass meeting assembled recognize that not only the tenements that burn down but, also those we live in, are FIRE-TRAPS BECAUSE PROFITS ARE MORE PRECIOUS TO THE BOSSES AND LANDLORDS THAN ARE THE LIVES OF WORKERS and

WHEREAS, we are convinced that the city, state and national governments permit these fire-trap conditions to exist because the interests of bosses and landlords are more precious to a capitalist government than the interests of the men, women and children of the working class, and

WHEREAS, we realize that these terrible conditions will change ONLY WHEN THE WORKERS USE THEIR UNITED POWER TO CHANGE THEM, be it therefore

RESOLVED that we do now protest against the conditions in which we are forced to live; and that we furthermore pledge ourselves to organize workers and to work with determination for the establishment of a government of for and by workers and working farmers, to replace the present government of for and by bosses, landlords, speculators and their political lackeys.

RUSSIAN-UKRAINIAN CONCERT AND DANCE SUNDAY, JANUARY 11

The concert and dance which was announced by the Russian and Ukrainian branches of the Workers Party for Dec. 28, was postponed on account of the party membership meeting, to SUNDAY, JAN. 11, at the same hall, Schoenhoffen Hall, take care to Milwaukee and Ashland Aves. Tickets sold for Dec. 28 will be accepted on Jan. 11.

It is expected that the party membership and sympathizers will help to make the affair a success.

Y. W. L. Will Mobilize Youth Workers for Leibknecht Meeting

Carrying on as they do factory campaigns at almost a dozen of the largest factories employing youth labor, the Young Workers' League of Chicago, will mobilize all these young workers to celebrate with them the International Karl Leibknecht day, January 11, 8 p. m. in the Northwest Hall.

They have issued a number of demands which have been printed on the posters which will be put up around the factories where these campaigns are being carried on and will also appear on the leaflet which will be distributed a couple of days previous to the Leibknecht day.

The slogans are:

Against capitalist wars and militarism.

Against the enslavement of German workers thru the Dawes' plan.

For abolition of child labor.

For maintenance by the state of all school children of workers under sixteen years of age.

For a six-hour day and a five-day week for all youth labor with full pay.

And for a Workers' Republic!

The speakers who will give a brief biography of Karl Leibknecht, who will tell of his significance to the youth labor and who will touch upon every one of the slogans enumerated are: Alexander Bittelman of the central executive committee, Max Shachtman of the Young Workers' League, N. E. C. and Peter Herd of the Chicago League. There will also be a junior speaker who will give a talk on the "school" struggle.

Party branches, language as well as English, should support the International Karl Leibknecht day arranged by the Y. W. L.

BENEFIT BALL TO AID CLASS WAR PRISONERS

New York Workers Hold Jan. 11th Open!

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—Three thousand class war prisoners are rotting in the vile prisons of Rumania and Bessarbia.

Three thousand workers and peasants who are fighting against the impoverishment of the whole working population of that country have been imprisoned and given long sentences.

Political Prisoners Tortured.

Many more thousands have been shot down in cold blood by the brutal capitalist government. The prisoners are starving and shamefully mistreated and tortured. Many of them have been murdered in prison. Their families are starving and to give them relief is to expose them to arrest.

These brutal persecutions are only part of the general campaign thruout Europe against the labor movement. The Communists, who are the leaders in the struggle, are the worst sufferers from this campaign of fury. The Rumanian government is acting on the orders of the French government, who subsidizes them in keeping their army. But the world war left the country so deep in debt that the workers and poor peasants must now pay in blood and sweat for what the capitalists have gained.

The International Red Aid is conducting the relief of these brave revolutionaries and their families. The International Workers' Aid is doing the work in the United States. The Rumanian section of the International Workers' Aid has arranged a concert and ball on January 10, 8 p. m. at 1247 Boston Road, New York City, and calls upon all comrades friends and sympathizers to attend and make the affair a complete success.

The need is great. Comrades and friends, you must do your utmost to help these struggling workers and peasants and their families—to preserve them for the fight that is still to come.

Don't forget the place and date.

Notice to Denver Subscribers.

All branches of the Workers Party are co-operating with the American Lithuanian literary association in the grand ball which they are giving on New Years Eve, Dec. 31 at the Labor Lyceum on Julian St., near West Colfax Ave., for the benefit of the DAILY WORKER. All subscribers to Workers Party papers are urged to attend.

LaFOLLETTE BRINGS DONATION TO FREIHEIT AND DAILY WORKER

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 30.—The Milwaukee comrades have a keen sense of humor. It may have been developed by laughing so much at the mental gymnastics of Vic Berger and his LaFollette socialists but they certainly can appreciate a comic aspect.

At a masquerade given by the Workmen's Circle in this city, where a jolly time was had by all, Comrade Gus Shklar, city secretary for Milwaukee, appeared dressed as LaFollette in company with Ostra Sungail dressed as the socialist party, in celebration of the marriage of these two "working class" (?) parties.

The workers attending the dance appreciated the take-off that contributed to the fun of the evening by awarding the "working class" couple, LaFollette and Mrs. S. P., a prize of five dollars.

Comrades Shklar and Ostra Sungail got their money's worth in fun so they contributed the money won on a fifty-fifty basis to help the Freiheit in their present need and to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925.

We thank the socialist party and LaFollette for the donation.

WORKERS MONTHLY
Edited by Earl R. Browder.

Famous Painting

The splendid issue just off the press has on its cover a three color reproduction of a great painting, "Revolution Comes!" by N. Kravchenko —the most famous picture in the Revolutionary Museum in Moscow.

Important Articles

The issue contains the second installment of that revolutionary classic "The History of the Russian Communist Party" by Gregory Zinoviev; "The A. F. of L. and Trade Union Unity" by Wm. Z. Foster and Wm. F. Dunne—ten articles in all that form important contributions on many phases of Labor's problems.

Splendid Cartoons

Included in this issue are also ten cartoons (one of two pages) by such noted artists as Art Young, Adolph Dehn, William Gropper, Fred Ellis and Hay Bales.

Poems

Adding to the value of this well rounded issue are poems by such well known poets as Witter Bynner, Edwin Seaver, Sara Bard Field and others.

Largest of English Branches, District 2, For Majority Thesis

The Harlem English Branch in Dist. No. 2, the largest English branch in this district, by an overwhelming vote endorsed the thesis of the C. E. C. of the party. The thesis of the minority received 9 votes.

Jewish Downtown Branch, No. 1, N. Y. For Majority Thesis

At the last of the three meetings, where the theses of the party were discussed, the Jewish Downtown No. 1 branch of New York, the second largest Jewish branch in District No. 2 by majority vote endorsed the thesis of the C. E. C.

Douglas Park Jewish Branch of Chicago for Majority, 11 to 6

Dear Comrades:—I am happy to inform you that at our last meeting, after we had heard Comrades Bittelman and Engdahl, who presented the majority and minority theses, and after questions by the membership, mostly to the minority, we have voted 11 to 6 with the majority of the central executive committee.—Fraternally yours, Isadore Garelick, Recording Secretary.

Czecho-Slovak Branch Chicago, Endorses the Theses of Majority

The Czecho-Slovak branch of the Workers Party, Chicago by a vote of 14 to 2 endorsed the majority theses on the immediate tasks of the Workers Party as providing an effective program for building up the party into a mass Communist party in accord with the decisions of the Fifth Congress of the Communist International. The minority theses was condemned as opportunistic. The majority of the C. E. C. was represented by Comrade Martin Abern, and the opposition by Comrade R. Minor.

Coolidge's Law and Order Prevails in Nation's Capitol

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 30.—Detective Larry O'Dea has been given a clean bill of health for his assault upon workers who had come to the Typographical Temple, to hear Robert Minor speak April 9, 1923.

E. J. Irvine (ex-secretary of the Workers Party of Washington) Clarence Rosenberger, W. C. Smelcer, Comrades Louis Brown, and Jakison, along with twelve other workers were manhandled, and held incommunicado, (Irvine for 3 days) Comrade Irvine's apartment was broken into, and his mother insulted by O'Dea, who read her personal letters.

The relatives of other victims of the raid were also grossly mistreated.

The raid was in reality a catholic raid, O'Cullinane, and O'Dea being incensed by Comrade Irvine defending the execution of the priest Budkavitch thru the Washington papers.

Rosenberger of Ballston, Va. sued O'Dea for $25,000 but, today the jury refused damages.

Attorney Selig C. Brez, representing Rosenberger, will ask for a new trial. Attorney George F. Curtis appeared for the detective.

New York City West Side English Branch On Party Discussion

Whereas, party organizational work is being neglected, as is evidenced by the 100 turnover in membership, by the failure of the party to get its members into trade union work, by the disruption of the United Council of Working Class Women, and by the traditional neglect or makeshift character of educational work; and,

Whereas, the spoils system is being and has been used to turn out competent comrades doing responsible work despite the fact that as disciplined Communists they would faithfully carry out the mandates of a convention even tho they disagreed, and,

Whereas, the first principle of Bolshevizing the party; namely, no factions after a convention, has been repeatedly violated by both minority and majority; and,

Whereas, the present and increasingly bitter spirit of the factional fight indicates that whichever group wins, it will neglect the party work for which the opposing faction has stood,

Therefore, be it resolved by the West Side English Branch of New York City that, while it endorses the labor party policy of the united front, it demands that all important organizational work go on despite discussion and convention; that no conscientious and competent comrade be sacrificed to factionalism; that the perennial factionalism in the district executive committee, central executive committee, in Chicago; and that the party close ranks for real Communist work despite factionalism, job-seeking, personalities, charges of "menshevik," "opportunist," "liquidator," and the like.

Russian Branch in Connecticut for Minority Position

ANSONIA, Conn.—The Russian branch here indorsed the minority thesis of Ruthenberg, Lovestone, Bedacht, Engdahl and Gitlow, and called for a continuation of the use of the slogan for a class farmer-labor party as a means of building the Workers Party.

Chicago Lithuanian Branch Unanimous For Minority Thesis

The Chicago Lithuanian branch, No. 5, unanimously indorsed the minority thesis by a vote of 22 to 0 at their last meeting. A thoro discussion of both the majority and minority theses took place before the vote. No representative of the majority position was invited to attend the branch during the discussion.

Italian Westside Chicago Branch in Stand for Minority

The Italian West Side Branch, No. 2, unanimously indorsed the thesis of the minority, after a thoro discussion. The resolution declared in favor of continuation of the united front class farmer-labor party slogan as an effective means of building the Workers (Communist) Party. The branch members took out insurance policies to build the DAILY WORKER for the year 1925.

Grand Crossing Br. Is Unanimous for Minority Position

The minority thesis was unanimously indorsed by the Italian Grand Crossing branch. The branch voted that every member must take out an insurance policy to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925. No representative of the majority position was invited to attend the branch during the discussion.

Swabeck to Speak at North Side English Branch Next Monday

Open meeting of North Side English branch, Monday night, Jan. 5, at Imperial Hall, 2409 N. Halsted St.

Arne Swabeck will speak on: "Strategy and Tactics of the Communist International."

Norwegian Steamer Crew Rescued.

WALTON-ON-THE-NAZE, England Dec. 30.—The remainder of the crew of the Norwegian steamer, Atlantic which became water-logged in the violent storms Saturday were safe ashore here today. They were rescued by local sailors.

SOME FACTS FOR NEBR. WORKERS TO PONDER OVER

OMAHA, Nebr., Dec. 30.— "Last year, until November 8, business was slow," says a cockroach, "then it picked up and went double. This year it was slow, and since November has been much worse."

It is estimated that fifty per cent of the restaurants and pool halls will go out of business this winter in Omaha.

The harvester has come home broke. One man known to be a good worker and saving has just returned after his usual eight months on the road. Last year he had about $80.00; this year all he could save was $15.00.

Omaha workers are now leaving $2.50 and $3.00-a-week hotels, and 25-cent restaurants for 35-cent beds, or 15 cents for sitting up, and eating 15-cent meals at the "Workingmen's Friend."

One of these cheap restaurants, which serve three rolls and all the coffee you can drink for ten cents, resorts to a despicable fraud upon their patrons. A barrel is placed outside of the better restaurants for dumping used coffee, three dollars a barrel is paid for this, which is then dished up to the workers — all you can drink.

Last week the U. P. railroad laid off over 1,000 workers until after the holidays. No definite date has been set for their return and apparently the great majority will be disappointed.

Norfolk, Nebraska, another railroad division point, is reported having laid off 65 out of 150 employed in the shops there. Council Bluffs, Iowa, expects a lay off of about 75 in the shops this week. Two weeks ago 150 were laid off there.

The unemployed situation in Omaha is the worst in years. Over 100 families applied to the Omaha Welfare Board for food and fuel on Friday, December 19. This is just one day.

Armour Packers' "company union," known as the "Fifty-Fifty Club," held a Christmas party last Tuesday. Mayor Dahiman, Forst Crook military band and the Keno quartet produced the harmony. Two tons of candy and nuts and several thousand toys were made possible thru "donations" of one dollar by the majority of the plant employes, the company donating a like amount. Six thousand were expected to attend the affair at the City Auditorium.

Taxi Drivers Threaten Strike.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Dec. 30.—Union taxicab drivers in St. Louis are negotiating for an increase of wages, with indications of a strike. The drivers demand an increase of $4 a week over the present scale of $23.50. The employers offer a $25 a week guarantee and 5 per cent of receipts, which the union has voted down. Both sides are firm. The 600 organized chauffeurs say they will walk out January 1, when present agreements expire, unless the union demands are granted.

J. P. Cannon Recites History, Says Jakira

his Marxism. The open fight against him became necessary not when "he began to assert his right and duty," but when he began to show a complete misunderstanding of the united front tactic, and when he began to apply the united front in Chicago in the wrong way.

The Majority and Lore

Comrade Cannon denies that the majority had any alliance with any other group. I shall leave this to the C. E. C. members and to the comrades of New York to answer. Just a few facts about the last party convention. Comrade Cannon claims that his group had a clear cut majority at the last convention. The true of the matter is that the Foster-Cannon group had at most 20 delegates solidly on their side. The Finnish block of 13 and the Lore group had the balance of power which helped to elect the present C. E. C.

Since the convention the alliance continued both on the C. E. C. and way down the line and this helped not so much the Foster-Cannon group as it did the Lore group. Suffice it to point to New York City to show that since last convention the Lore group has grown in strength and in influence and now represents a real danger to the party.

We welcome any attempt to take up openly the issues involved instead of trying to invent "shifting issues" as the majority was doing up to now.

Capitalism's Chief Labor Lieutenant.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—Senator Stanley, of Kentucky, paying tribute to the memory of Samuel Gompers on the floor of the senate, said: "Mr. President, the late lamented Samuel Gompers, in his passing, will be regretted by capital and labor alike. He was a sincere patriot. He was the staying hand against the vagaries of socialism and Bolshevism, always sane, well pointed, clear of vision, firm of purpose."

The Bosses' Courts

Wisconsin has long been held up before the eyes of the American workers as the model state. There the capitalist ogre had to sing low! The terror of evil doers, Robert Marion LaFollette, had taken the wicked capitalists over his knee and punished them.

One of the accomplishments of Wisconsin "progressivism" was the miniumum wage law. Under its provisions employers could not exploit women at a rate less than 25 cents an hour. The employers, nothing daunted, flouted the law and went to the courts. After considerable humming and hawing the federal district court in Superior, Wis., handed down a decision declaring the law invalid as it applies to women. The court considers it a crime to prevent the employment of women in industry at less than 25 cents an hour.

The plaintiff held that the measure, forcing the employers to pay twenty-five cents an hour to women when the condition of the labor market permitted employment at a lower rate was a violation of the fourteenth amendment to the constitution, which prohibits the taking of property without due process of law and by interfering with the right of contract.

The courts are strong bulwarks of the capitalist system in every country. The workers who think they exist in order to dispense justice are laboring under a misapprehension. They exist to defend the capitalist legislatures that may for some reason or other pass a law which strikes at some basic principle of the robber system.

The capitalist rule by a dictatorship, either veiled or open. Where the system is strong the mailed fist is hidden by the silken glove. The average worker in the United States believes all are equal before the law. The Wisconsin decision on the minimum wage law proves otherwise. All the fine phrases of the capitalists about the "mothers of the race" only prove their hypocrisy, in face of this murder of a law that would throw some little protection around the women who are exploited in the slave pens of the nation.

Trying to reform capitalism is as useless as an attempt to change the tiger's nature by clipping his claws. The only way to remove the evils of capitalism is to abolish capitalism.

The whole left wing slate in the Minneapolis Painters' Union has been elected against the opposition of the Minnesota Daily Star and in spite of the fact that Cramer and McKillips of the Minneapolis Labor Review, renegade progressives, canvassed every member of the union on the night of election.

The Star ran articles for three successive days calling upon the members of the union to defeat the Communist menace and published the reactionary slate in a prominent position.

A significant feature of this victory is that the strongest reactionary candidate was unable to defeat the least known of the left wing candidates.

Among the new administration elected are a number of members of the Workers (Communist) Party.

The comrades in Minneapolis are to be congratulated on the good fight they have put up against the combined efforts of the A. F. of L. machine and the capitalist press. The Painters' Union is to be congratulated on the fighting workers it has elected to administer the affairs of the union for the next year.

They Want Their Price

The string of small nations, led by Roumania and Jugo-Slavia, that are under the political direction of the big capitalist powers, demand their share of the reparations under the Dawes plan. These little bankrupts are quite useful to the big powers in serving as bases for attacks against Soviet Russia. So they can name their price and act cocky.

The bandits interested in a division of the loot from the Dawes plan will meet in Paris on January 6, to reallot the German annuities. The little burglars, conscious of their usefulness to their superiors, have seized the occasion to put in a good word for themselves. They need the cash.

Every dollar that will be divided among the plunderers, big and small, comes out of the sweat and blood of the German workers. The German capitalists will not suffer for the necessities of life or for want of their accustomed luxuries. Only the workers pay in the real sense.

The Spanish forces are retreating from Morocco. All the efforts of Dictator Primo de Rivera to bolster up the waning power of Spain have proved abortive. Fascisti dictators are a drug on the market nowadays.

The Last Days of Congress

The sixty-eighth congress is now winding up its last days. No one expects any work to be done by the lame duck legislators. Of course, when we speak of work being done by congress, we do not have in mind the enactment of constructive measures in behalf of the working masses. When we speak of work by congress we have in mind the consideration and adoption of legislative proposals in behalf of a section or the entire employing class of the country.

In the eyes of the Coolidge administration the last days of the sixty-eighth congress are only a matter of formality, a matter of calender existence.

The sundry proposals that the administration has in mind will be given over to the incoming sixty-ninth congress which will be far more secure for the reactionary clique. The adherents of Coolidge do not believe in wasting talk with recalcitrant, discontented, so-called progressive legislators. The Coolidge crew can very well afford to wait a few months for the more favorable moment. There is every advantage for the ruling class in cultivating the impression of peace and harmony in Washington now that a "safe and sane" administration is in power.

It is in the interests of the capitalists to promote the belief amongst the masses that the source of their troubles is the "interference" with industry by legislators who do not exactly measure up to the line as marked out for them by exploiters. The strategy of the best brains of the employing class will be, therefore, to avoid even the slightest wrangle in congress and to come forth with their numerous plans as soon as the new congress opens. In the latter legislature they will be able, with greater likelihood, to put over all their schemes without much difficulty and therefore without any serious chances of disturbing this precious illusion that they are now fostering.

The sixty-eighth congress was not a progressive congress in the sense of taking steps to enhance the welfare of the masses. The sixty-eighth congress did not enact a single vital measure in behalf of the working class. At most the sixty-eighth congress did not operate smoothly for the biggest employing class interests. It reflected the class conflicts within the ranks of the exploiters—inner class divisions growing out of a serious industrial and agricultural derangement in the capitalist system of economy. We do not in the least mourn the sixty-eighth congress. We simply say that the advent of the sixty-ninth congress should prove a warning and danger signal to the working masses.

Crisis in Jugo-Slavia

The Jugo-Slavian government is not having smooth sailing with the campaign of suppression it has launched. Dispatches tell of enormous mass meetings of protest, fighting in the streets and a conference of leaders of a coalition against the imperialist controlled Jugo-Slavian regime.

The peasants are in revolt and the Communists have acquired much influence among them. The slogan of a federation of workers' and farmers' governments of the Balkans, raised by the Communists, has attracted great masses in all the Balkan nations and with the continued failure of the existing governments to improve the conditions of the masses or to even halt the economic decay, is proving a powerful force in the struggle between the puppet governments and the millions of oppressed workers and peasants.

The united front of reaction against Communism in the Balkans seems to have been impossible of accomplishment and the masses look more and more to Soviet Russia as their friend instead to the imperialist nations of western Europe.

The French Debt

The French government balances its recent budget by leaving out the $4,000,000,000 owed to American capitalists and discovers immediately that the American finance capitalists are not going to lose this sum without a struggle.

That the omission of the American debt from the budget was intended to be the first step in entire repudiation of the obligation is obvious. French finances are in a shape that can be described best by the word chaotic and only the fear of the wrecking of French exchange by the American financiers prevents the French government giving itself a receipt in full for the loans made during the war.

The attitude of the capitalist government of France is interesting inasmuch as one of the indictments hurled by it against the workers' and farmers' government of Russia is that it will not pay the debts contracted by the czar.

The mine operators of West Virginia are rushing hordes of evangelists into the heart of the coal fields in order to instill a trust in the coal operators' god into the hearts of the miners instead of in the strength of their unions.

Peace lies in the will of the people, declared Secretary of State Hughes, but of course the "people" must be properly reinforced by adequate armaments whenever one set of capitalists fails to agree over a division of the spoils with another group.

President Coolidge was recently presented with a pair of skis. The American workers will one day present him and the class he serves with a pair of skids.

MINERS PRODUCE MORE COAL BUT GET LESS PAY

They Dig Each Other Out of Jobs

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

If the average coal miner in the bituminous mines of the country had produced no more coal per day than the average miner in 1905 there would have been 33 per cent more work available. In other words, the tens of thousands of coal diggers who have been out of a job a good part of the year would have had employment and a considerable proportion of the part-time work could have been eliminated.

Latest official figures issued by the U. S. geological survey show that the production of coal per mine worker per day in 1922 was 4.25 tons. In 1905 the corresponding figure was 3.34 tons.

Machine Development.

This increase in per capita productivity appears from the figures to be due in large measure to the development of machine mining both in underground operations and in the strip pits. It is shown in the following figures of the per capita daily production of miners engaged in the various methods of production:

Method of mining	Per man per day
Mined by hand	3.6 tons
Shot from the solid	3.7 "
Mined by machine	4.4 "
Strip pits	8.0 "
Not classified	2.6 "

The census of mines for the year 1919 shows that 80 per cent of the bituminous coal produced in that year was turned out by enterprises using mining machines. Approximately 57 per cent of the production came from enterprises with an annual output of more than 200,000 tons. Such concerns generally have sufficient capital to install modern management methods and machinery. As a matter of fact 92½ per cent of their production was from mines using mining machines.

Carpenters' Local of Martin's Ferry Small But Choice

(Special to The Daily Worker)
MARTIN'S FERRY, Ohio, Dec. 30.—The carpenters of Martin's Ferry are not many but they are of good quality. In the union election they gave old King Hutcheson the go-by—he didn't get one vote. The faker, Brown, only got three and Rosen, the left wing candidate, got 14 votes.

THE MEANING OF JANUARY 15th

By JOHN WILLIAMSON.

THAT day stands out in history as a blood mark which the social-democrats of the world can never erase. On that day our leaders, Karl Leibknecht and Rosa Luxemberg were murdered. The week preceding it has been one of uprising and revolt of the workers. The German workers were in battle against the government and attempting to emulate their Russian comrades and inaugurate the Soviet Republic of Germany. In battles of this kind one would expect that working class leaders would run the danger of being shot and murdered by the capitalists. Not so in Germany, Karl Leibknecht and Rosa Luxemberg's blood soils not the hands of the capitalists, but of their henchmen, parading under the name of social-democrats. The socialist party of Germany, as in all other countries shot down these working class leaders who were fighting against the capitalist class.

Today in Germany, five years later, the white terror is still being conducted by the social-democrats. In 1919 it was the socialist Noske who murdered our comrades, today it is the socialist Severing, who imprisons them by the thousands. The spirit that will not killed by murdering our leaders in 1919. Since that time the Communist Party of Germany has built itself into a mass organization embracing hundreds of thousands of members. Today, the German working class has been disillusioned and no longer do they have confidence in the social-democrats. The Communists have become the leaders of the workers in their everyday struggles as well as in their attempts at overthrowing the German junkerdom with its socialist defenders.

Karl Leibknecht and Rosa Luxemberg were murdered on January 15, because they dared to challenge the capitalist dictatorship of Germany. These working class leaders were well-known for their constant and consistent struggle against capitalism during their lives. They had suffered at the hands of German capitalism, but it was left to the socialists of Germany to murder them. It was this type of fighter who founded the Communist Party of Germany. Today their comrades are still undergoing the same treatment. At this moment more than eight thousand of our leading German comrades are lying in jail.

Regardless of the persecution of the capitalist class with their hirelings the working class will mobilize its forces and avenge the death of the thousands of our martyrs—the victims of capitalist dictatorship.

The Young Communist International pays tribute to our working class leaders and especially to Leibknecht and Luxemberg on this day. The young Communists of the world call upon the youth of the world to mobilize their forces and rally around the slogans of the Communist Youth movement of the world.

Thruout the world special demonstrations and meetings will be held on January 15, to comemmorate the death of our two leaders—Leibknecht and Luxemberg.

In America the Young Workers' League is holding meetings on Sunday, January 11 in every city and town. Rally around the slogans of the Y. W. L.

Against capitalist wars and militarism.

Abolition of child labor.

Maintainence by the state of all social school children of workers under sixteen years of age.

Against the enslavement of German workers thru the Dawes' plan.

For a Workers' Republic!

Los Angeles Meets to Discuss Jewish Colony in Russia

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 30.—The relief committee to aid Jewish colonization in Soviet Russia is arranging a mass meeting and concert at Blanchard Hall on Sunday afternoon, Jan. 4. Mr. Hilkovitch, who has recently returned from a journey all over Russia, will relate about the efforts that Soviet Russia is making in helping to colonize the Jewish people on the farm.

Jan. 6 at Brooklyn Hall a mass meeting is called by the left wing committee of action of the Workmen's Circle to organize a mandolin orchestra of workers, which will be to the benefit of the labor movement in general. Comrade Kenzer, who is a member of the Mandolin Orchestra of New York, will be the instructor.

JUDGE GIVES FINK O'DAY HEAVY COAT OF WHITEWASH IN FAKE ARREST

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—After Judge Bailey in the supreme court of the District of Columbia had instructed the jury that there was no legal excuse for the arrest of the 21 Communists and sympathizers who were seized by police at Robert Minor's meeting in Typographical Temple, on April 9, 1923, the jury refused to find Lawrence O'Day, lieutenant of detectives, responsible in damages for the arrest of Clarence Rosenberger.

O'Day had been sued for $25,000 for false arrest. The jury let him off, on the technicality that he denied having arrested the plaintiff. Rosenberger was the only witness to his own arrest, which took place during the confusion of a sudden raid. O'Day admitted having arrested many of the other persons in the audience, but the statute of limitation for bringing suit had run against all of these victims.

Immediate notice of motion for a new trial was filed by Selig Brez, counsel for Rosenberger.

The Motion Picture in Politics

By WM. F. KRUSE

NOTE:—This is the second of a series of articles on the "Movies" by Comrade Kruse. The third will deal with "Movies in Church and School".

"Motion pictures are entertainment, not propaganda . . . any medium capable of reaching the millions who attend the motion picture theatres of this country, imposes upon those who regulate it a trust that is much too significant to be given over to political propaganda."

The speaker is Marcus Lowe, one of the biggest magnates in the film industry whose profits in a single year were boosted from sixteen to forty million dollars, and whose company projects the second largest item on the Pacific Coast production program.

"When propaganda creeps into entertainment," says Millionaire Lowe, "a divided audience will react accordingly, the status of the entertainment is bound to suffer in prestige, in dignity, and not the least of all, at the box office. We cannot afford to have motion pictures suffer from such a cause."

This shows where the shoe pinches—at the box office; the only argument the theater owner understands. This squawk indicates that the knd of propaganda which has been filtered into films of late has become so raw that theatre owners and producers themselves begin to fear its effect upon their profits.

Political Pictures

During the election campaign the lid was wide off on movie politics. Cautious Cal did not open his mouth very often for fear of betraying his ignorance, but the movie cameras did their utmost to keep him before the masses in every pose that could possibly strike a favorable chord with any section. Cal pitched hay (in the movies)—that was for the farmers. He went to church with his aged parents as the organ softly played "Nearer My Job to Thee;" he pitched a ball into a baseball diamond and the tune was changed to "Hail, Hail the Gang's All Here." In all history, there never was a more photographed candidate.

Of course Davis and LaFollette also came in for their share of pictures, laying corner stones and kissing babies, but the newsreel companies would not touch pictures of Workers Party candidate when we offered them for nothing. "No politics in the movies."

The more subtle and more dangerous kind of anti-working class propaganda is, of course, the kind not labelled as such. Picture after picture pours its poison into working class audiences, somehow or other the workers are always wrong, the rich always right. Take a recent Universal film, "The Tornado," as reviewed in the "Motion Picture News": "It features a strong silent man . . . who stands forth compellingly and colorfully. He is known as 'The Tornado' because of his vigorous personality and the fact that he is a stern taskmaster in his job of boss-foreman of the lumber camp . . . Indeed he humanizes the role. He punishes a group of labor agitators . . ." No politics in pictures? "Cue for the horse-laugh! Will "The Tornado" be shown in the Loewe theatres! You bet it will.

"Propaganda Trimmings"

Not only the pictures themselves but their whole setting reeks with pro-capitalist propaganda. The music, lights, and all the other features of up-to-date exhibition are calculated to shut out completely the world of reality and make the audience actually live in the screen and unquestioningly accept its illusions as reality. And even the exploitation, advertising and publicity given in advance of the showing, serve the same class ends, and enlist the aid of every capitalist institution, private and public.

A special advertising campaign on one film included the sending of 200 boxing telegrams for which the company charged only one cent each, 200 special letters to prominent Roman catholics from addresses furnished by the church; 400 advertising bookmarks distributed free by the public library, and an announcement by the principal in every public school classroom. The daily press gives space and praise in due proportion to the advertising contracts, especially when, as reported in a trade journal, "We doubted our space in the four daily papers, and in addition took space in an Italian paper, as well as an impressive display ad in a Klan paper." And when, as in the case of W. R. Hearst, the newspaper owner is directly interested in certain pictures, "If they packed the house at every show they could not pay out for the cost of the ads."

"Pay-triotic Holidays"

No politics in the movies?

Again quoting "The Film Daily:" "Recent holidays were used to good advantage around the Paramount Circuit. When Macon (Ga.) observed the Anniversary of the Battle of the Marne, Manager Coleman arranged a very attractive tableaux. The audience joined in the singing of patriotic songs and there were patriotic recitations from the stage."

"In Atlanta, the Howard played a prominent part in the celebration of national defense (goosestep) day. A new flint car was decorated with flags and shields . . . A young lady representing 'Miss Columbia' rode in the car . . . At the evening performance fifty members of the colonial guard wearing full uniform marched to the theatre in a body. Upon their arrival the orchestra played 'The Star Spangled Banner' which was acknowledged by the entire audience, whose applause climaxed in the arrival of the guard."

The Sense of Censorship.

A directly political weapon against labor films is, of course, the official political censorship. When the first International Workers Aid film, "Russia Thorugh the Shadows," was offered for censorship, it was rejected in toto by the Ohio censors, "Because it is harmful propaganda." This decision was lifted on appeal. The Pennsylvania censors at first rejected it and then insisted on a list of thirty-five "eliminations," most of them distinctly political. They objected to the statement that machinery was being sent "From the American Workers to the Russian Workers," to the name of the organization, to pictures of W. Z. Foster, and other similar subjects. The regulations set forth by the hundred and one censors, state and local, official and semi-official, make very interesting reading and leave no doubt as to their character as active class agencies. Lack of space prevents going into detail at this time.

"No politics in the movies" is, of course, the sheerest bunk. No ruling class would pass up the most effective means of moulding the thought of the "eye-minded" masses. What they really mean, as every class-conscious worker knows, is "NO LABOR politics in the movies." And they enforce this injunction first of all thru their almost complete financial control of the film production soufces, and secondly thru their political censorship.

But such a condition can only make the organized workers the more determined to evolve a screen of their own. We never expect the "Chicago Tribune" to espouse the workers' side of any question and we are never disappointed. Nor can we expect Paramount, Loewe, or other "Chicago Tribunes" of the movie field to act contrary their own interests. We must expect their poison propaganda, we must expose it, we must fight it with the only effective weapons, the labor film, even as we fight the capitalist press with the only effective answer, the labor press.

As to the various censor boards and other restrictive machinery, nothing could more clearly show up the class character of the state than their obvious discrimination against films which tell the truth about labor's cause. And nothing will make the workers so insistent upon seeing their own films as a hated petty tyrant. The approval of a labor film by the censors is a worse blow against its influence than is rejection. Anti-censorship fights raise a class issue against the capitalist state in a most popular and virile form.

The development of the labor film is a task parallel in importance and effectiveness to the development of the labor press.

Polikushka Coming to Roosevelt Road Movie House on Jan. 15th

When the "National Community Center Association" sought the advice of the "National Board of Reviewers as to a suitable picture for its annual meeting at Hull House Auditorium, Monday evening, Dec. 29, the recommendation was: "Polikushka." W. A. Barrett, executive secretary of the national board, in applying for the film, writes: "I have taken pains to impress upon them how appropriate it would be to show the picture in connection with their discussion on motion pictures."

That this picture is supremely appropriate to those who take the motion picture seriously cannot be denied. Made by the Moscow Art Theater, called by John Corbin in the "N. Y. Times," "the foremost company of artists in the world," from the story's immortal story of serfdom, it fully merits the high praise lavished on it by the critics. But thus far it has been a "critics' success." Professional theater managers and distributors say it is "too artistic," and except in a few big cities the workers have not realized that the tragedy of the irresponsible, shiftless, lovable serf is the living symbol of the suffering of exploited labor. Thus this film masterpiece is a great treat chiefly to the intelligent liberal and to the more advanced workers, as well as to those interested in Russian drama at its best.

The picture will be shown also under the auspices of the Society for Technical Aid, on January 15, at Gessner's "Independence Theater," Roosevelt Road near Independence Blvd., together with a Russian slapstick comedy and a Lenin memorial reel. The show will be continuous from 6:30 p. m. to 11.

The picture is also being shown in Rock, Mich., (Workers' Hall) Dec. 27; Dowell, Ill., Rex Theatre, Jan. 10; Pittsburgh, Pa., Carnegie Music Hall, Jan. 17; Los Angeles, Cal., Philharmonic Temple, Jan. 19.

KLAN WAR LOOMS IN CHICAGO

AS WE SEE IT
By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE capitalist powers would like to form a close and unbreakable alliance against Soviet Russia. They even go to the extent of trying occasionally. And the fact that they are unable to unite against such an obvious menace is strong proof of the weakness of the robber system. After a week of heavy headlines telling of country after country laying down the law to the hated Communists and after we had almost got ourselves into the frame of mind of believing that another world offensive of capitalism against Russia was on, we find France and the United States in each other's hair about the war debts.

IT is mighty hard for the capitalist powers to come to terms for even a short time. The bandits cannot agree over the division of the spoils. While their interests as against the interests of the workers as a whole are identical, they cannot stop robbing each other. England and France are bitter enemies. France now hates England as much as she hated Germany a few years ago. This means capitalist France, capitalist England and capitalist Germany. The workers of these countries have no reason to hate each other. But they are driven to war on each other by their own governments. This government loaned billions of dollars to France during the war. France does not relish the idea of paying it back. England has already began payment of its debt to the United States and is pressing Washington to force France to come across.

CAPITALISM is in a bad way in Europe. The various governments, those of England and France are in a serious situation and it looks none too good for France at this moment. The Herriot government is not destined to have a long and prosperous career and after it falls, things are bound to be more exciting. Mussolini is at the end of his rope politically and may find himself at the end of a rope literally within a short time. The blackshirt dictator of Spain is trying to salvage a badly battered army in Morocco, while King Alfonso is afflicted with bunions from dancing at French watering places. Germany does not know what to do and the small nations hardly know where the next meal is coming from.

UNDER these circumstances it is not surprising that the rulers should get excited. They fear the workers. Russia went red when the czar's government broke down and it played red. It is a simple matter for Austen Chamberlain to organize a Balkan alliance against Soviet Russia but the Communist International is organizing a Balkan federation against capitalism and it is meeting with success. There can be no peace in the Balkans until there is a federation of Soviet Republics instead of the present aggregation of capitalist governments ruled by bandits.

THE capitalist papers try to create an industrial revival in the mining regions. But the ghost refuses to walk. A news dispatch states that there is an upward trend in the central coal mining industry with hundreds of coal miners who were out of jobs for month getting back to work.

Mussolini in Desperate Move

Long Live the Armenian Soviet Republic!

The workers and farmers of Soviet Armenia recently celebrated the Fourth Year of their liberation from capitalist rule. Their final struggle was against Menshevik (Socialist) domination. The drawing reproduced above appeared in a special anniversary edition of "Chorurdajin Aiastan," official organ of the Armenian Soviet Republic and the Armenian Communist Party.

FASCISTI HEAD OPENS ATTACK ON OPPOSITION

Dictator Feels Self in Tight Hole

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Jan. 1.—Premier Mussolini suddenly descended on the opposition and in a series of raids seized opposition newspapers and searched the homes of former members of the fascisti and prominent republicans.

The action is looked upon here as proof that the black shirt dictator feels himself in a desperate situation and has decided to take the offensive.

For Interests of Mussolini.

The police excused themselves on the ground that their action was with the object of safeguarding the interests of the country.

One of the houses raided was that of former deputy Alfredo Misuri, dissident fascisti. Misuri in a letter to the press made a vicious attack on Mussolini and declared that the search for arms was only a subterfuge. "I have in my possession enough weapons to defend the safety of my person and the inviolability of my domicile" declared Misuri "unless the state cheka increases in number the executioners which they throw against me next time."

The paper which published Misuri's letter was suppressed.

British-American Imperialists Still Make Trouble in China

SHANGHAI, Jan. 1.—Fighting between troops of the revolting generals, Chenlo Hsan and Sun Chuang Fang, has become more serious, it was reported today. There were more than 100 casualties yesterday.

Chang Yuan Ming, military governor of Shanghai, sent 1,000 troops to assist Hsan and has surrounded Fang's supporters in the arsenal, it was said. The supposition is that British-American imperialists are bribing generals to stir up turmoil and justify armed intervention.

BIG BUGS OF BRITISH BANKS LAND SECRETLY TO MAKE QUIET DEALS

LONDON, Jan. 1.—Great Britain has not sent representatives to the United States to discuss inter-allied debts, the treasury department announced yesterday.

The Right Hon. Montague Collet Norman, governor of the Bank of England, and Sir Alan Garrett Anderson, a director of the same bank, are in America upon "purely banking business which has no connection with the government," it was stated. This is to be taken with a grain of salt, however, as routine banking business would be conducted by lesser lights.

The statement of the British treasury department followed the secret arrival of the two English bankers in New York late Tuesday. Their names did not appear on the passenger lists of the liner, Caronia. Other steps taken to shield their identity led to a report that they had come to discuss interallied debts. If so it will be done secretly.

LOSES TOOTH IN AMNESTY DISCUSSION WITH FRENCH COMMUNIST

PARIS, Jan. 1.—Fists flew in the chamber of deputies today during a discussion of the amnesty law. Deputy Balantant attacked Deputy Reynaud with his fists and knocked out one of Reynaud's teeth. Other deputies immediately separated the fighters.

The amnesty law has been made a political issue by the Communists in a nation-wide campaign.

WALL STREET PUTS SCREWS ON FRANCE

Bond Prices Fall and Loans Are Held Up

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—Administration officials were frankly hopeful today that out of the present flare-up in Washington and Paris over the status of the French war debt of nearly $4,000,000,000 will come some definite, concrete funding proposal from France that will end the controversy once for all.

The highest officials of the government characterized the debt controversy as a greatest menace to the cordiality of Franco-American relations than anything that has arisen between the two countries in modern times.

American Imperialism Punishes France.

Congress is openly threatening to take the bit in its teeth on the debt situation and even now it was pointed out, as a result of Clemenel's hints of repudiation, and the squabble that has ensued, French bonds are falling off, and a check has been put on the plans of some New York bankers for further French credits totalling around $200,000,000.

There is a unanimity of belief in congress and in all government circles that the time has come for a showdown on France's intentions.

Try This on Your Grocery Bill.

Members of the American debt funding commission have twice asked representatives of the French government to submit to Paris a settlement proposition based on a ten year moratorium and payments to run over a century, the whole proposition to carry a low rate of interest, lower, incidentally than the government is paying on the same obligations.

M. Jean Parmentier, who headed the French debt mission to this country two years ago and Ambassador Jusseran declined to even transmit such a proposition to Paris, saying they were unauthorized to do so.

These refusals, coupled with the Clemenzel report to the French parliament in which he flatly characterized the French war debt as "political" debt, operated to unite administration leaders here in the belief that the time has come for a showdown.

Herrick to "Talk Turkey."

At the state department a report was being awaited from Ambassador Herrick at Paris regarding his conferences with Premier Herriot and Finance Minister Clementel. Herrick requested these audiences on state department instructions.

Neither had any note from the French government been received at the department. Such a note was reported from Paris to be in transit.

K. K. K. MAKES THREAT; KEEPS PLANS SECRET

It Is Felt Dry Drive Is Only Camouflage

The announced intention of the Ku Klux Klan, of cleaning up Chicago, ridding the city of vice and booze, has been openly made.

Only the zero hour when the horde of raiders will be loosed by the invisible empire in all parts of the city remains a secret.

Plain Spy System.

An organization for carrying on the raids already has been perfected, according to C. D. Fithian, chief of staff of the grand dragon and attorney for the realm of Illinois. It has units in every block, Fithian says, and is organized by neighborhoods, and wards. Eventually, he said, it will be enlarged to cover the entire state and then the entire nation.

"We will carry on an espionage system so that none may escape," Fithian declared. "The bootleggers, gamblers and owners of disorderly resorts will not be able to guard against us because they will not know who are spies. We will obtain information and swear out warrants, have our members deputized and then make raids. We will have our organization so perfect that we can send word to all klansmen throughout the city in about an hour.

Gran Dragon Fithian, who made these announcements at the klan headquarters at 75 Monroe Street, stated that merely cleaning up booze is not the only purpose of the secret organization. He said, "That is not the only purpose of the organization. It will become a great political power, one that can change the complexion of elections in the matter of an hour or two."

CHARGE BRITAIN SEEKS TO KILL GERMAN TRADE

BERLIN, Jan. 1.—Gustav Stresemann was today the target of a broadside from George Bernard, chief editor of the Vossische Zeitung, who charged the former chancellor and present foreign minister with throwing in his lot "Anglophile" utterances

He pictured France as a friend of Germany, rather than the deadly enemy Stresemann pictured her.

"Stresemann would lead the German public to believe England 'innocent as a lamb' and France the incarnation of evil," Bernard said. "The contrary is the truth.

"The British controllers' complaints resulted in postponement of the evacuation of Cologne. British industries demanded the destruction of German industries, which are dangerous competitors.

"Stresemann's close relations with Britain personally probably are responsible for Germany's relapse into the old mistake of trying to profit by playing France against England."

OUR COMMUNIST DAILY IN MOSCOW PASSES THE HALF MILLION MARK AND ISSUES BIG SPECIAL EDITION

By ANISE.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

MOSCOW.—(By Mail.)—Few papers in the world have such a wide circulation as the Moscow Pravda (Truth), official organ of the Russian Communist Party, which is celebrating the passing of the half million mark.

A whole special edition is devoted to the history and growth of the newspaper, from the days when, back under czardom, little newsboys were secretly selling suppressed issues.

Old photographs now reproduced show the confiscation of early numbers. Photographs of the present year show whole groups of workers crowding around a comrade to listen to the reading of Pravda.

Show Circulation Growth.

Not only is the circulation one of the largest in the world, but probably each number is read by more people on the average than any paper outside Russia. Workers are still poor, and some cannot read, so that copies often do duty for entire groups. In the John Reed Children's Colony on the Volga, with whose life I am familiar, a single copy of Pravda is passed to all the teachers in turn. The same is true of thousands of reading homes in the rural districts.

A graphic chart shows the growth of circulation during 1924, starting at 89,663 in December 1923, passing the 100,000 mark the following month, reaching 422,000 in October, and in December going to 506,745. It is perhaps the most spectacular growth ever known by any newspaper in the world.

One reason for this growth has been the large number of contests carried on in the pages of Pravda, and touching the life of the remotest factory or village. These contests began more than a year ago on the subject of the Best Factory Manager. The success of this led to a contest on the Best School Teacher, the Best Sanitary Committee in factory or dwelling and several others, including at present the Best Reading-Hut.

Gets Many Letters.

The numbers of letters from worker and peasant correspondents has also grown spectacularly, partly stimulated by these contests. In January 1924, 690 such letters were published, in November 1108. During the year were published an average of nearly 30 a day.

Hundreds of greetings to Pravda have poured in from all over the Soviet Union as well as from Communist parties outside Russia. The tremendous growth is an indication, not only of increasingly good editing of Pravda, but of the general growth of reading habits and political interest thruout Russia. It is the organ of the central executive committee of the Russian Communist Party.

NORWAY PROSECUTES COMMUNISTS WHO STARTED REAL PARTY

OSLO (formerly Christiania), Jan. 1.—The royal prosecutor yesterday arraigned the Communists arrested last summer on charges of treason. Many Communists were taken, among them the leaders Eugene Olavson and Comrade Scheflo.

The arrests followed the split in the so-called "labor party," which was for some time affiliated to the Communist International, but which continually refused to abide by its decisions. The Communist International was finally forced to ask that Communists withdraw from the labor party. Those arrested were those who withdrew and formed the Communist Party of Norway.

MINERS DEMAND NEW ELECTION IN SO. ILLINOIS

Most Brazen Steal in History, Say Militants

ZIEGLER, Ill., Jan. 1.—The complete returns from the voting in Local No. 992 for international officers of the United Mine Workers of America, was: John L. Lewis, 214; George Voyzey, 634; Phil Murray; 225; Arley Staples, 587; Wm. Green, 303; Joseph Nearing, 514.

In Valier the voting was: 411 for Lewis and 672 for Voyzey, 387 for Murray and 556 for Arley Staples; 501 for Green and 312 for Joseph Nearing.

Break Open Doors.

"This was the crookedest election ever held here," declared a prominent coal digger to the DAILY WORKER correspondent. "The steal was bolder and more open than ever before. Farrington henchmen substituted 500 fake ballots in Buckner, where they took the door off the hinges and changed the votes. We are trying to get a special subdistrict convention and order a new election."

The vote for district president in Local 3613, Valier, was 372 for Farrington and 350 for Hindmarsh; 440 for Vice-President Fiswick and 465 for Howlett; Secretary-Treasurer Nesbit 333 against 405 for Louis J. Conturiou.

Dick Swift, recording secretary of the local, received 850 votes for the office of auditor, the highest vote cast by the local.

In Livingston.

LIVINGSTON, Ill., Jan. 1.—John L. Lewis ran a poor second to George Voyzey, his progressive opponent, in the voting for officials of the miners' union for the next term of office.

Lewis only received 127 votes against 422 for Voyzey. Phil Murray, reactionary candidate for vice-president, got 124 to 424 for Arley Staples. William Green polled 200 to 343 for Joseph Nearing.

OVERGAARD TELLS OF LEFT WING SLATE IN MACHINISTS' UNION AND STRUGGLE AGAINST BUREAUCRACY

By ANDREW A. OVERGAARD.

During the month of January nominations of candidates for administrative offices in the International Association of Machinists will take place.

The left wing has issued a complete slate and is the only force which comes out with a definite and constructive program of action covering every phase of the struggle of the machinists in this country.

This program calls for a real militant campaign for amalgamation, for the development of shop committees, for an extensive organizational drive to bring the unorganized machinists into the union. It calls for independent political action on the basis of the class struggle, as against the class collaboration policies of the Johnston machine, both on the political field and against the infamous "B. & O." plan with the railroad companies. The program points out the necessity of opening the organization for the colored workers and ending the stupid race discrimination against the Negroes.

The left wing candidates take a determined stand against the policies of the Johnston-Davidson bureaucracy of expelling or suspending some of the best fighters in the organization, when they challenged this reactionary leadership on the basis of policy, or for belonging to a political party and an educational organization, as happens in the Toledo case. Complete freedom of expression must exist in the International Association of Machinists or the union will gradually lose its fighting morale as these revolu-

CARPENTERS OF HIBBING, MINN., VOTE FOR COMMUNIST CANDIDATE

(Special to the DAILY WORKER)

HIBBING, Minn., Jan. 1.—The carpenters local here voted one hundred per cent for the Communist candidate for president of the International Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, giving 18 votes to Morris Rosen, member of the Workers Party and two zeros to Hutcheson, the arch faker, and to Brown of Peoria, Ill., the stalking horse, who was put up by the fakers to fool the radicals.

CLEMENTEL SAYS HE DIDN'T MEAN TO "REPUDIATE"

Cites Tariff Wall Bar to Payment

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Jan. 1.—France's debt to America will not be discussed at the inter-allied financial conference in Paris in January, but it will be taken up in Washington, Minister of Finance Clementel told American newspaper correspondents today.

"I cannot tell you now just how it will be taken up in Washington," M. Clementel said in answer to a question.

Tariff Wall—A Capitalist Contradiction.

Prohibition in America and its high protective tariff both were made elements of Clementel's discussion, and both he said were handicapping France in paying off its debt to America.

The big question now to be decided by both countries, Clementel declared, was just how the debt could be discharged.

"Payments to America are a question of method and transfer," said the finance minister. "America must tell us how values are going to be transferred, especially with American prohibition and its high protective tariff shutting out such European products.

"The British government has fully agreed that France shall take up its American debt directly and independently with Washington," he added.

On Quoting Excerpts.

Clementel said he did not see how his reports to the chamber of deputies had come to be misunderstood in America. He quoted a French philosopher as saying, "I could hang anyone by taking his separate sentences without the entire text."

He then reiterated his declaration that he had "never for a moment considered that France would repudiate its debt."

Clementel made it plain that France will never submit to the humiliation of a control commission such as the Dawes plan prescribes for Germany.

JOINT MEMORIAL HONORS GOMPERS AND MILLIONAIRE

Natl. Civic Federation Mourns Its Losses

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—At a meeting of the National Civic Federation, the leading organization in America in the field of propaganda for class collaboration, called especially for commemorating Samuel Gompers and Major August Belmont, many of the country's leading big capitalists spoke and President Coolidge sent a message embodying encomiums of Mr. Gompers.

Gompers Over-Shadows Belmont.

August Belmont,' the multimillionaire traction and race horse magnate was quite put into the shadow by the outpourings in praise of Gompers. Belmont was president of the National Civic Federation at his death, just as Gompers was vice-president of the same organization, but Gompers received far more plaudits from the assembly composed chiefly of big bankers, large industrialists, corporation lawyers and government officials.

The meeting was addressed by Elihu Root, Matthew Woll of the A. F. of L. executive council, Vevert Macy, Marcus M. Marks, Alton B. Parker, John Hays Hammond of the imperialist group, Rev. Ernest M. Stiers and others.

H. Snowden Marshall, United States prosecuting attorney in New York during the war, praised Gompers for his patriotism. He alleged that Gompers refused large sums German sources offered if he would stop munition manufacture and shipment. Gompers' desire for victory by the allies over Germany was "so great, he said, to permit him to yield to any offer to align himself with the cause of peace.

Coolidge's Tribute to Sammy.

Messages were received at the meeting from President Coolidge, Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, and Secretary of State Hughes. The message of Coolidge read in part, as follows:

"I wish that I might join with you in the memorial services to August Belmont and Samuel Gompers, but unfortunately, my duties do not permit me to leave Washington."

Elihu Root in his address described Gompers and Belmont as "men typical of the best citizenship."

German Communists Expose Ebert's Treason at Mass Meetings

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Germany, Jan. 1. — The Communists have held a series of mass meetings throuot Germany, at which President Ebert was condemned for choking off the munitions workers' strike in 1918.

Patriotic organizations, however, are praising Ebert's treason to the workers during and after the war.

MICHIGAN SUPREME COURT RULES RUTHENBERG MUST APPEAR FOR SENTENCE AT ST. JOSEPH, MONDAY

LANSING, Mich., Jan. 1.—The supreme court of the state of Michigan yesterday refused to withdraw its mandate directing Judge Charles E. White to sentence C. E. Ruthenberg for violation of the Michigan criminal syndicalist law, in order to permit the defense to appeal for a re-hearing before the court.

Ruthenberg must therefore appear before Judge White next Monday at St. Joseph for sentence. Under the peculiar procedure of the Michigan courts it will be necessary for Ir-E. Ferguson, attorney for Ruthenberg, to go before the Michigan supreme court once more with a writ of error and have the court pass upon it before an appeal can be made to the United States supreme court.

Whether Ruthenberg will be granted bail by the Michigan courts during the period in which the way is cleared for the appeal to the United States supreme court is doubtful, and Ruthenberg may be imprisoned until the case can be brought before the United States supreme court and bail is allowed by that court.

WAGENKNECHT TOUR FOR DAILY BRINGS RESULTS

Comrades in Canton and Akron Promise Aid

Full realization of the importance of the campaign to INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925 was shown by the members in Canton and Akron, Ohio, who gathered to hear Alfred Wagenknecht talk upon the part which our English daily plays today and will play in the future in the struggles of the workers for power.

The Canton comrades accepted the quota of three dollars per member assigned them, and intend making the gathering of the total sum which Canton is to contribute to the $50,000 found one of the main tasks of the local.

In Akron Comrade Wagenknech spoke at some length upon "China, Oil and the Next World War," relating the next world war, whether it occurs in the occident or the orient, with the need of a powerful English Communist daily, which will not only keep the party membership informed upon the day to day development of the imperialist conflict, but which will also gather around it tens of thousands of workers, leading these into the struggle upon the side of the proletarian revolution.

A good deal of time was given in Akron upon the building of an English movement in this large industrial city. It was generally recognized that a large subscription list to the DAILY WORKER is a first essential. The membership meeting passed a resolution calling upon the Akron C. C. C. to at once take steps, firstly to reach and beat, if possible, its quota in the drive to make the DAILY WORKER safe, and second, to plan for an increase in the DAILY WORKER readers for Akron. The builders intend building the daily in the rubber town, and 500 subscribers was the number of subscribers mentioned as the goal. Comrade Sells in a short talk, also insisted upon more activity in securing readers of the organ of the T. W. I.

The comrades of both Canton and Akron send the DAILY WORKER their promise of immediate application to the work of helping all in their power. In both cities it was resolved that every branch would remit for insurance policies before January 8th, so that the names of all Canton and Akron branches would appear upon the militant page of the anniversary issue of the daily.

Insure The Daily Worker for 1925

DAILY WORKER BUILDERS HAVE OFFICIAL ORGAN

The DAILY WORKER, organized less than one year ago, has now an official organ of its own. The Builder has made its appearance. It is snappy, almost as snappy as the DAILY WORKER.

The Builder is the mouthpiece of the DAILY WORKER Builders—that army of militants that is carrying the message of Communism to people who could not be reached for many years thru the ordinary means of propaganda.

They Have Ideas.

The DAILY WORKER Builders are working like beavers to give our Communist daily the widest possible distribution. Every one of them has original ideas as to how best do the job. So each month this little paper comes forth with a flood of suggestions. District and city committees, branches and branch members are expected to do their duty. The Builders will see that the job is done.

It Gives Us Great Pleasure.

The Builder introduced the heads of the business department, Moritz J. Loeb, Archie Henderson, Walt Carmon and Sam Hammersmark. There is not a whisper about the editorial staff, but we get a paper out every day and think nothing of it.

Outside of that, trifling omission the editors of The Builders are to be congratulated on turning out a nice little paper, which will help to solidify the DAILY WORKER Builders and give them new enthusiasm for their work.

COURT DECIDES LEN SMALL MUST DISGORGE DOUGH

Another milestone in the suit brought by the Illinois prosecuting attorney against Len Small, was reached on Tuesday, when Judge F. W. Burton of Sangamon County circuit court held the governor liable for interest paid by Chicago packers on state funds loaned to them by Small, while he occupied the position of state treasurer.

An Original Scheme.

The manner in which Small was able to indulge in this scheme was original. With the aid of other associates he set up a fake bank in which the state funds were deposited at the usual 2 per cent rate.

The money was loaned to the packers at 8 per cent. Two per cent was turned over to the state and the six per cent was unaccounted for by Small.

A Lot of Money.

The amount now due the state is estimated at nearly one million dollars.

Small has appealed to the supreme court and if that court sustains the ruling of judge Burton it is quite possible an appeal to the United State supreme court will be resorted to.

MOSCOW LAWYERS GREET SACCO AND VANZETTI BY CABLE TO INTERNATIONAL WORKERS' AID

Once again the spirit of international class solidarity with the two American workers, Sacco and Vanzetti, is manifested by Soviet Russia. This time it is in a cable addressed to the International Workers' Aid committee by a group of Moscow lawyers affiliated with the International Red Aid. The cable read as follows:

RUSSIA DEEPLY INTERESTED.

Moscow File 1250 December 25, 1924.
International Workers' Aid,
19 South Lincoln Street, Chicago, Ill.

GENERAL MEETING MOSCOW LAWYERS PRESIDIUM GREETS DEFENSE COMMITTEE SACCO AND VANZETTI FOR STEADINESS AND ENERGIES DEFENDING THIS JUST CAUSE. WE URGE THAT YOU PERSISTENTLY CONTINUE FIGHT FOR SAVE THEIR LIVES. WE REQUEST YOU TO SEND US ALL MATERIAL CONCERNING CASE TO INFORM RUSSIAN PUBLIC SHOWING GREAT INTEREST.

PRESIDIUM MOSCOW LAWYERS,
Moschovia 16,
International Red Aid.

CAMPAIGN TO RAISE FUNDS.

Rose Karsner, national secretary of the International Workers' Aid committee, states that the I. W. A. has requested the Labor Defense Council and the Prison Comfort Club to join the I. W. A. in a combined action for the raising of funds for the defense of Sacco and Vanzetti. This action Comrade Karsner declares is an answer to the call of the Workers Party for a united front of all workers' organizations for the defense of these two persecuted American workers.

PROFESSORS IN HOT DEBATE ON SOVIET RUSSIA

Yale Man Nails Lies of Counter-Revolutionist

A young professor of sociology at Yale University, Jerome Davis, defended Soviet Russia from a stupid attack by Pitirim Sorokin, of the university of Minnesota, at the final session of the American Sociological Society at the Auditorium Hotel. One thousand college professors heard Davis blast Sorokin's lies with a concise statement of the actual facts.

Professors Get a Jolt.

Davis was not expected to take up the cudgels for Soviet Russia. He was listed on the program under the heading of "Discussion," and it was expected that he would perform the usual duty of throwing bouquets at the sleepy-eyed professors who had preceded him. Davis, however, told how he had been in Russia, and threw a bombshell into the dry as dust theoretically minded body of professors by taking some pages out of actual life.

"It is quite plain why Professor Sorokin gives a one-sided view of the international relations of Soviet Russia," said Professor Davis. "Sorokin was deported from Soviet Russia for counter-revolutionary activity, and it was only the action of Lenin himself which saved Sorokin from being shot. Professor Sorokin freely admits in his book, 'Leaves from a Russian Diary,' that he was actively engaged in plotting against the Bolshevik government. He says, 'My neutrality was purely ficticious. My walks, my picnics, my visits to the theater, were in reality meetings where I plotted the downfall of the Soviet government.'"

Exposes Plots Against Russia.

Davis, who all spent a year in Russia for the United States government, branded as untrue Sorokin's statement that Russia had bought recognition from foreign countries by giving each country granting recognition, millions of dollars in gold. "Sorokin's argument that the Soviet government has been too generous seems strange when we think of the agitation of other European countries calling upon Russia to pay the czarist foreign debts," he said.

"True, as Professor Sorokin says, the Communist International is plotting the overthrow of capitalism, but it is equally true that capitalism is plotting the overthrow of the Communist International. It is a battle to the death between two forms of industry. The Soviet government is trying to build an industrial system which is owned and controlled by the people."

Russian Revolution Brot Progress.

Davis declared that the "good effects of the Russian revolution outweighed the bad" and that, "the phenomena of the Russian revolution may well be found to be the outstanding event of the twentieth century." One of the good effects of the Bolshevik regime, Davis declared, was the German revolution, which was brought about by Soviet propaganda. "I was in Russia at the time, and the Bolshevik authorities allowed me to pass a million copies of Wilson's fourteen points thru the lines into Germany," Davis states. Another good effect of Soviet rule was the publication of secret treaties, Davis said.

The biggest problem faced by the Soviet government is that of adequate economic production, and Soviet Russia is now trading with foreign countries, Davis said.

Davis told a friend after his speech that "Russia is a dangerous subject to tackle. It is difficult to write all the facts and still keep away from dangerous ground."

LABOR DEFENSE COUNCIL SOUNDS WARNING NOTE

The Labor Defense Council issued the following statement today upon getting news that the Michigan supreme court turned down the appeal of C. E. Ruthenberg, whom they say must now be sentenced to prison:

"We are not surprised at this action of a capitalist government court. When the Michigan supreme court upheld the trial court it was just one more example of the class nature of the courts which discriminate against workers and working class organizations, and railroad their militant leaders to jail.

"We must be and are prepared to wage a great fight to save Ruthenberg, Foster, Dunne and others who may now be brought to trial, from prison. We must carry on a battle for free speech for Communists and all those who fight the battles of the workers. We must hold off the enemy. Let us carry on an aggressive defense NOW. Remember, the workers of Europe are faced with white terror.

"Our immediate task is to appeal Ruthenberg's case to the United States supreme court, to make a drive against all of the unconstitutional state criminal syndicalism laws. We call upon all workers and working class organizations for their full support and for the funds necessary to wage the legal battle."

Our Russian Communist Daily Sets the Pace for Daily Worker Builders

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the news comes of the triumphant celebration by our Moscow Communist daily, Pravda, of the increase of its circulation to the half-million mark.

This is one of the great achievements of the Russian Bolshevik revolution. The fact that 500,000 copies of the official organ of the Russian Communist Party pours daily into the eager hands of Soviet Russia's great producing masses, helps insure the stability of the revolution.

* * * *

"Pravda," which means "The Truth," doesn't publish pages of comics like the subscription-hungry American capitalist dailies. Instead, it gives over its column to rich material that educates and improves rather than poisons the mind of the reader.

The first page, instead of carrying the sordid details of some murder or divorce scandal, as is the American custom, usually features some enlightening article by a prominent Russian Communist, Stalin, Zinoviev or Bucharin.

There are capitalist newspapers in the United States, Great Britain and France, that have circulations that mount up into the millions. But these leave their readers steeped in ignorance. It soddens them.

The Communist "Pravda," successor to the underground Bolshevik newspapers of the days of illegal existence under the czarist regime, has won its half million circulation thru an appeal to the minds of the liberated workers and peasants of Soviet Russia. The masses of reading and earnestly thinking workers and peasants of the First Workers' Republic have been growing rapidly in volume since the Bolshevik Revolution of Nov. 7, 1917, and will continue to grow. The circulation and influence of "Pravda" will follow in the wake of this growth.

* * * *

In Soviet Russia, the "Pravda" is not bought, glanced at and then thrown away; the fate of a copy of any American capitalist daily. It is estimated that "Pravda" has a larger number of readers per copy than any other daily newspaper in the world. One copy goes the rounds in a school, a library, a reading hut, a factory, shop or mine, in a unit of the Red Army, or the Red Fleet.

"Pravda" made its greatest gains during the past year. The circulation last January stood at only 126,000. By March the circulation had gone up to 170,445; then to 307,443 in June; to 379,135 in September, with the final leap over the half-million mark, to 507,546 in December.

This great achievement of our Russian Communist daily should be an inspiration to every reader of the DAILY WORKER.

It should not only be an urge in the drive to "Insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925" and to win a great circulation for "Our Daily," but it should also arouse all Communists and sympathizers to the effective methods used by our Russian Communist press.

It is estimated that there are now 50,000 worker-correspondents thruout Soviet Russia, developing contacts between the Communist press and the workers and peasants.

Our DAILY WORKER must also have thousands of worker-correspondents in all sections of the nation. Thru building these vital contacts with the masses, not only the life and the effectiveness of "Our Daily" becomes assured, but the whole working class, under the leadership of its Communist vanguard, will make more rapid forward strides.

Hail the achievements of our Russian Communist daily, the "Pravda." Hail the greater struggles of America's working masses to profit by this inspiration thru building their Communist spokesman, the DAILY WORKER.

GARY EMPLOYS RADICAL BAITING PRIEST, FATHER De VILLE, TO KEEP STEEL TRUST SLAVES CONTENTED

GARY, Ind., Jan. 1.—Father John De Ville, head of the Gary Aldering settlement house, feels assured that he will receive from the United States Steel corporation a great deal of support for his efforts to keep the steel trust slaves contented thru the "social work" of his settlement house.

Father John who has a nice eye for the social graces when they will help him hold down his fat job, sent to Judge Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the U. S. Steel corporation and to James A. Farrell and to George K. Leet secretary of the same outfit very nice Christmas presents. In order not to slight anyone of importance who could be of help to himself and to his job he included one for F. M. Waterman treasurer of the steel trust. As if not to overlook the importance of trifles and underdogs who have a little influence with the great ones who toss out the fact donations he included a present to the secretaries of each of these gentlemen.

To the scores of stupid dupes who work hard in the Gary Aldering settlement trying to bring a little "sweetness and light" into the lives of the slaves of Gary Padre John sent a Christmas card reminding them that Jesus died for them and that they would get pie in the sky in due time.

DeVille is the chief labor and radical baiter in this town where the gentleman of God fall over each other for a chance to serve the steel trust. He was the close friend and intimate of Bishop Aldering who recently died and who was Gary's most useful religious handy man. It is generally understood here that DeVille got his present soft snap of a job thru the good offices of Aldering who assured the steel trust that he was perfectly safe and could be relied on.

Printers' Protest Shows the Postal Workers Underpaid

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 1.—Postal workers are greatly underpaid, a statement issued by the International Typographical Union asserts. "The $62,000,000 or so needed to cover the proposed wage increase would be money well spent," says the union's statement. "We are in complete sympathy with the postal workers in their struggle to obtain living wages."

The union's statement, however, places most of its emphasis on praise of the kept press and the newspaper publishers, who have forced the pressmen to strike in Seattle and New York in recent months in order to obtain living wages. "We believe it is bad social policy to place this load on the nation's newspapers and magazines. The printed matter, carried in second class mail, constitutes the greatest educational force in the country."

The union's statement, protests against the increase in newspaper postal rates more stronger than it advocates raise in wages for postal employes, demonstrating the class collaboration policy of the Typographical Union. The union takes sides with the kept press, which fights the unions in strikes, and which employs the typographical union's members.

LOSING MEMBERS WORRIES GREEN LITTLE—MAYBE

But He Pledges to Follow Reaction

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 1.—William Green, successor to Sam Gompers as president of the American Federation of Labor, announced today in his first press interview that there will be no change in the policy of the federation under his regime.

Intimating that he is feeling the left wing criticism of the falling off in membership, however, Green said, "We expect to carry forward the work of organization and education among the unorganized and to contend in a most vigorous fashion for a speedy realization and enjoyment on the part of working men and women of all the rights and privileges to which they are justly entitled."

If this more or less cryptic utterance means anything it promises a drive for organization of the unorganized, who need attention from the federation just as the federation needs to avoid competition with unorganized millions. The reference to working women implies that Green possibly recognizes that wage-working women remaining unorganized are a threat against wage and hour standards of the unions.

Asked about the attitude of his regime toward the recognition of Soviet Russia, Gregon retreated to the El Paso convention resolution which was antagonistic to any recognition. This has been the policy of Gompers and Secretary Hughes and will, therefore, be the policy of Green, it is intimated.

Aside from the remark on organization, Green's utternaces were of the usual platitudinous kind of labor fakers about "opposing wrong" and fighting for "the right," our "just due" and the "fuller and freer life."

FASCIST DEPUTY ATTACKS BLACK SHIRT LEADER

ROME, Jan. 1—Strong concentration of fascisti militia are gathered at Florence from other Italian cities, including Turin and Milan, to attend the funeral of fascisti who were killed when Communists repulsed a fascisti attack. More violence is feared.

Confusion in the ranks of the fascisti continues to grow. The fascisti deputy, Curzio Suckert, utters extreme threats against Mussolini and the fascist government unless the demands of the provincial fascisti are met. These demands are that the fascisti leaders share the responsibility for all fascisti acts of violence. The fascist paper, Popolo di Tallo Stato, is printing attacks on Mussolini.

Deputy Farinacci is threatening the opposition leaders with further violence. "It was only our generosity which prevented us from shooting you all two years ago. Remember we are still in time to do now what we did not do then," says Farinacci.

The two liberal ministers, Sarrocchi and Casati, have agreed, temporarily to continue in the Mussolini cabinet. Large posters bearing the head of Mussolini with little "chief," were smeared with red ink during the night, giving the impression that Mussolini was smeared with blood. The posters were all taken from the walls before noon.

THE November issue of The Golden Age, organ of the bible students' association, has an editorial entitled "Religious Persecution in Russia." This is an excerpt: "Mr. Wilbur K. Thomas, who was head of the Quaker relief commission to Russia says the government officials have gone around and gathered up the sacred bones of John the Baptist and St. James; and that when they had finished the job they had enough bones to make two hundred men. This has hurt the religious trade seriously; for the common people had been previously taught that the bones were genuine."

COMRADE McCARTHY, former circulation manager of the DAILY WORKER, writing from the west of Ireland tells a story which proves that superstition has still a very strong hold on the Irish peasantry. In a fishing village off the west coast he said were raising the deuce with the fish and destroying the fishermen's nets. One of the fishermen got an idea into his head that if the priest could be induced to sprinkle some holy water in the sea, that the fish would stay away. The priest consented to do this for a consideration but the only seal that appeared to be affected by the priestly mummery was the one killed by McCarthy and his brother. The rest kept on eating the fish and destroying the nets just as if the catholic priest was only a follower of Martin Luther.

MEAT PACKERS SKIN LABOR AS WELL AS CATTLE

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press Industrial Editor.)

A 50 per cent increase in wages could have been given the underpaid employes of the slaughtering and meatpacking industry in 1922, without adding a cent to the price of the average cut of meat, according to census figures by the U. S. department of commerce.

The report shows that out of every $1 paid for meat products at the wholesale prices prevailing in that year labor received 6½ cents.

Workers at Lowest Level.

The meager 6½ cents out of the wholesale dollar meant average annual earnings of about $1,262 per employe which represents just about the lowest level at which a family can subsist without serious physical deterioration. It provides nothing in the way of comforts necessary to living as a modern human being.

An increase of at least 50 per cent in these wages would barely bring them within speaking distance of the minimum of health and decency which budgeters term the American standard.

The important figures at two-year intervals since the war are shown in the following table. In the case of the figures for total wages, cost of materials, value of products and value added in the manufacturing process the last three ciphers are omitted:

Packing Industry	1919	1921	1923
No. wage earners	160,956	117,012	132,702
Total wages	$ 209,489	$ 167,580	$ 207,675
Cost of materials	3,728,930	2,174,356	2,585,504
Value of products	4,346,291	2,900,918	3,868,198
Value added in mfr.	463,361	312,741	1,282,694
Average wage	1,300	1,307	1,575
Per cent value added	10.7	10.8	33.2
Per capita value mfg.	2,877	2,813	5,098
Pct. wages to value prod.	4.9	4.9	4.5
Pct. wages to value of mfg.	45.4	46.0	10.5

These figures show that wages in the packing houses have fallen considerably below the depression year of 1921, at the same time that the value to the employer of each wage earners' labor has increased. In 1921 the average worker received $1,307 for turning out a product worth $18,810. The work he performed in turning live animals into edible meat products was worth $2,842. In 1923 this same worker received $1,262 for turning out work worth $3,098 and making available for consumption a product worth $19,470.

This means that in two years the average pay fell about 3½ per cent while the value of the service rendered increased approximately 9 per cent.

Live Stock Raisers Also Hit.

The figures also reflect the drastic inflation suffered by livestock producers on the farms in 1920 and 1921. The cost of material which bulks so large in the total value produced by the industry is largely the amount paid farmers for the cattle, sheep and hogs. In the two years 1919 to 1921 this amount was more than cut in half, dropping from $3,782,930,000 to $1,868,198,000. This threw thousands of livestock raisers into debt and enabled the big cattle companies to continue the consolidation of livestock production on a capitalist basis.

COMMUNISTS BEAT REACTIONARIES IN CARPENTERS' UNION ELECTION

By CARL SKOGLUND.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 1.—An election was held Saturday, Dec. 27, for officers of Painters' Union, No. 186, for the coming year. In spite of the attacks made by the Daily Star, the professed progressive daily paper, and the Labor Review, previous to the election, these papers carried articles urging the workers to elect the reactionaries and defeat the Communists.

But in spite of these attacks, Dan W. Stevens, Communist, was running for president and polled 223 votes against his reactionary opponents 131. W. F. Bennett, Communist, running for business agent, polled 283 against 93. All of the candidates running on the progressive ticket won out by a big majority. All delegates to the Minneapolis Trades and Labor Assembly running on the progressive ticket were also elected.

MASS. BANKING FIRM SMASHES OTHER BURGLAR

Court Finds Kidder Co. Owes Lots of Cash

BOSTON, Jan. 1. — Kidder, Peabody Co., the leading banking interest of New England, and master of a string of great industrial enterprises are filing an appeal against a $10,534,109 verdict rendered against them and associates in the superior court at Dedham, Mass., in behalf of George F. Willett and business colleagues who lost control of the American Felt Co. and other properties thru a conspiracy of the defendants.

Ruined Competitor.

This is the largest damage verdict ever rendered in New England. The trial lasted 13 months and attracted great attention. The banking group, consisting of Kidder, Peabody Co.; F. S. Moseley Co., and Roger F. Herrick, was shown to have ruined Willett and his friends by the simple process of refusing to loan them money on good security, and preventing them —thru arrangement with New York bankers—from gaining the loans elsewhere. As a result of the cutting off of credit the Willet properties were taken over by the bankers.

They Were All Scabs.

Included in the American Felt group is the Roxbury Carpet Co. against which the United Textile Workers conducted several months' strike following a wage cut. Wage cuts are an almost invariable sequence of Kidder, Peabody Co. control as is shown also at Waltham, where the watchmakers are striking against the bankers' manager, and at Manchester, N. H., where a nine months' strike took place two years ago and a strike this year was averted only thru a compliant company union.

Former Dist. Atty. Frederick Katzman, who engineered the conviction of Sacco and Vanzetti, was one of the 30 lawyers drawing pay from the Kidder Peabody interests during the long trial.

American Fascists To Hold Their 7th Annual Convention

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 1.—Appointment of members of the national committees of the American legion and fixing of dates for the seventh annual convention to be held in Omaha, Neb., will come before the legion national executive committee at its meeting here January 12 and 13, national adjutant Creviston announced today.

Is An Engineer Capable?

A business man or a lawyer will decide on the price to be paid by the city for the traction lines, it now appears. The committee on transportation of the city council had agreed to appoint an engineer to act for the city. This engineer was to meet with an engineer representing the present owners of the traction lines, who were to select a third, "impartial" engineer. The three men were then to make a survey and determine the price which the city must pay.

Now, however, one of the engineers advises that "When it comes to matters we cannot agree on, we think a lawyer, merchant or some other capable person could decide the point."

CANUCK PLUTES TURN DOWN VETS FOR SCAB LABOR

Heroes Apply for Jobs; Given the Air

VANCOUVER, B. C., Jan. 1. — The blacklist department of the Canadian government merchant marine is being applied to many ex-service men, who, because of their activities as union men in demanding decent conditions aboard the Canadian government's vessels, are being refused jobs and their names blacklisted.

Under the present arrangement neither engineers nor mates are allowed to hire their crews. They are allowed to select men whom they deem capable of filling jobs but the final signing on the ship is left entirely to the local officials, many of whom have had little or no actual sea experience and who judge all men seeking work on the government vessels by the subservience and in some cases by the applicant's willingness to part with a few dollars to secure the job.

No Use for "Heroes."

Recently two ex-service men, J. Barrington, No. 463244, who was overseas with the 62nd and 29th Canadian battalions from 1915 to 1919, and Gordon Music, an ex-service man from the R. N. C. R. from the 27th of August, 1914, to the 19th of June, 1919, applied for work aboard Canadian government vessels. They were selected by the second engineer and told to report to the shipping office, but in each case when they appeared to sign the articles, they were rejected with evasive excuses.

The men are appealing to their organizations to deal with the matter.

Bosses Import Finks and Gunmen to Break 'Frisco Molders' Strike

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 1.—The struggle between the Molders' Union and the non-union iron companies continues, with violence charged by both sides. The San Francisco Labor Council in an open letter charges the industrial association with having imported gunmen and private detectives and while posing as an impartial organization having assisted the open-shop companies in their fight on organized labor.

Latest victims in the war between the Molders' Union and openshop plants, J. E. Parente and J. M. Lambert, union members, were set upon in the street and badly beaten. Parente staggered bleeding into the lobby of the fashionable Fairmont hotel, causing a near riot among the society ladies who had never before beheld a live molder, particularly one dripping blood from an attack by hired gunmen of the employers. He had been taken to hospital where it is feared he has internal injuries.

Lambert was kidnaped in the assailants' automobile and taken to Golden Gate park, where he was again beaten up, suffering a dislocated shoulder and two broken ribs. He finally escaped when another automobile scared off his attackers. He is chairman of the executive committee of the union.

Must Have Time to Think.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—Decision in the free speech trial of Roger Baldwin, director American Civil Liberties Union, fired his part in the Paterson silk strike meeting of Oct. 6 will not be given by Judge Joseph A. Delaney in the court of special sessions, Paterson, N. J., until after the first of the year.

Baldwin's case will determine those of Ferris Dreyka, George Cabbizzi, Basil Effsa, Kerrill Konofer and Brafeo Natale, all silk workers who were on strike with the Associated Silk Workers at the time. Chief of Police John Tracey closed the strikers' hall and Baldwin made a test case of free speech by calling a meeting on the city hall steps. Police interfered and used their clubs freely. Defense counsel maintained that the meeting was orderly until the police came and that the officers should be indicted instead of Baldwin and the strikers.

GOVERNOR HART BRAZENLY AIDS RICH KILLERS

Frames Up I. W. W. to Jail Them

CENTRALIA, Wash., January 1. — There has seldom been a better demonstration of the capitalist judicial policy, one law for the rich, another for the poor, than that given by Louis F. Hart, whose second four-year term of office expires Dec. 31.

Frame-up Attack on I. W. W.

In Centralia, Wash., on Nov. 11, 1919, a military parade and demonstration was staged by the American Legion. Unknown to many, an attack on the I. W. W. hall had been planned. The I. W. W. members resisted and four legion members were shot while trying to break into the hall. That night prominent business men broke into the jail, took Wesley Everest, an ex-soldier, and lynched him. These men are still prominent and respectable citizens and lodge members of Centralia, known to all, but unpunished.

The men who had dared organize the lumber workers and resist the mob, were tried at Montesano, in a county absolutely bossed by the lumber trust. The presiding judge, John M. Wilson, ruler out all favorable evidence to the defense, all evidence showing that the raid was part of a premeditated plot. Gov. Hart sent state troops who camped about the courthouse, nominally to protect the prisoners, actually that the jury might be intimidated. The majority of the jorymen have since made affidavits that their verdict was biased as a result of this intimidation.

Hart Serves Masters Well.

Since then repeated efforts have been made to persuade Gov. Hart to pardon these men, who were given sentences of from 25 to 40 years for defending their constitutional rights. But these men are workers. They have no rich friends with money to hire lawyers, and spend in other ways. The governor has no mercy on the victims of one of the rottenest frame-ups in history.

The Centralia victims are still in prison and will be for at least four more years. The new governor, Col. Roland Hartley of Everett, is the willing servant of the lumber trust. He has often expressed his hatred of the labor organizations, particularly of the I. W. W. He has stated that regardless of all evidence he believes the wobblies deserve to be in prison, not because they committed any crime, but because they are I. W. W. He believes the radicals should be suppressed, whether by legal or illegal methods gives no matter.

Kept Press Serves Same Master.

The labor press—both the I. W. W. and the Communists—and the liberal weeklies have told the truth about the Centralia case. But the capitalist press has lied from then until now. It always states that the shoting was unprovoked and unjustified. And these lies of the local capitalist press are broadcasted over the world. Many people do not know the truth.

There have been several pardon scandals in the past few years. Every time the governor left the state the lieutenant governor would pardon someone.

Trial "Custom Made" For Rich.

Three and a half years ago four soldiers deserted from Camp Lewis and came to Tacoma. Here they hired a taxicab to take them to Seattle, intending to kill the driver and steal the taxi. A few miles out of town one of these soldiers hit the driver on the head with a rock. The body was thrown out. Later the soldiers were caught. Edward F. Fillon of Windsor, Ont., was granted a separate trial. He had rich relatives. All four were given life sentences and special recommendations were made that they be kept there for life and never be paroled.

On Dec. 6 Gov. Hart paroled Fillon, over the protest of the parole board. The governor cannot remember why he granted the parole or any circumstances of the case. Wonderfully short memory he has. When this pardon became known, it stirred up a great furore. But Fillon is free. His three partners in crime are poor men and will remain in prison.

Wealthy Murderer Shielded.

After hearing protests from all over the state, Gov. Hart promptly expressed his opinion of the laws and of the people. He granted an executive parole to another rich man, John Soudas, nominally that he might be deported. Soudas murdered a woman in Seattle in 1915 and cut her to pieces. He was convicted of first degree murder. He escaped from the Seattle jail by taking with him two other murderers and two burglars. He was recaptured and had been in prison sixteen months. If he is deported he will arrive in Greece rich and free.

It was not long ago that Owen Baker of Seattle, an ex-policeman, was convicted of hijacking (holding up booze runners). Hart pardoned him before he had served one day of his sentence. Now Baker is wanted for murder.

Those who have followed Hart's career, have little doubt as to the real reason why he pardoned these men who have money.

tionary and progressive elements constitute the backbone of any organization.

The left wing candidates also propose to carry on the struggle for biannual conventions as against the four-year policy. The arguments of the Johnston crowd that it is too expensive is pure nonsense. If there would have been a convention in 1922 it would have helped tremendously to carry the shopmen's strike to a successful conclusion. If the arguments of the present bureaucracy are taken seriously we should never have a convention on the ground of expense. The danger of that policy is that we may have nothing left after four years but a mere shadow of our once powerful organization.

The left wing has forced the machine to adopt resolution after resolution in conventions for the recognition of Soviet Russia, but nothing has been done by our own officials to carry out the instructions. They keep silent in the American Federation of Labor conventions when the resolution is buried in that old graveyard. The left wing candidates stand for a real campaign to make the United States government recognize the first workers' and farmers' government in the world.

The left wing also takes cognisance of the present movement in Europe for trade union unity and proposes that the International Association of Machinists participate in this movement and fight for the admission of all the revolutionary unions into the Berne International and make it a real international instrument of struggle against capitalism.

The left wing is the only group offering a real program of struggle The Johnston machine as usual have nothing to offer but the "B. & O." plan, yet insurance schemes, banking and other measures of class collaboration with the bosses. This policy of our union bureaucrats can only result in making the union into an auxiliary of the bosses and will destroy is ability as a fighting organ of struggle against the bosses.

The so-called Anderson group has failed so far to come out and tell the membership what they stand for, nor have they presented a program of action, altho the left wing group has made all efforts to establish a united front against the present administration upon the basis of a fighting program. It is not enough to issue a slate and plead for a change of administration. A change of administration does not solve the problems of the machinists. A fundamental change in policy is necessary to insure the growth of the organization and the so-called Anderson-Hannon group fails to show where their policy is any different from the present administration. No declaration on such an important issue as the "B. & O." plan. No declaration for a campaign to bring about amalgamation. No declaration for a struggle against the present policy of expulsion and suspension of members for their political beliefs. Nothing said about the political class collaboration policy of the present administration. Nothing said about the methods of the Johnston-Davidson combine in their dirty attempts at times to assassinate the personal character of loyal members of the union in order to discredit them in the eyes of the membership, especially when these members are in disagreement with the policies of the administration.

The left wing candidates should be supported by all militants in the organization as they are the only force that offers a real program in the interest of the rank and file. Also most of them are fresh from the workshops and are known for their past activities in the class struggle. We shall take up the personnel of the left wing slate in the next issue of the DAILY WORKER. In the meantime, get busy, militants, and see to it that your local union nominates and supports the left wing slate.

MINIMUM WAGE LAW SMASHED IN WISCONSIN

May Hire Women for Less Than 25c an Hour

SUPERIOR, Wis., January 1.—In a final decree handed down by Judge C. Z. Luse of federal district court here, the Wisconsin minimum wage law as it applies to adult women, is invalid. The ruling does not affect the law in its application to minors. By provision of the decree the state industrial commission is restrained from enforcing the clause cited.

The court ruled that Wisconsin employers may hire adult women at less than 25 cents an hour. The decree was given following action brought by the Folding Furniture company of Stevens Point last August. The company asked that the industrial commission be restrained from enforcing a minimum wage of 25 cents an hour for adult women as set by the law.

The plaintiff held that the measure, by forcing the wage schedule of 25 cents an hour for adult women when it, the plaintiff, could hire women for less, was in effect a violation of the fourteenth amendment in that the minimum wage law provided for the taking of property without due process of law and by interfering with the free right of contract.

Business Men Kidnap Wobbly Organizers; Latter Again on Job

FORT BRAGG, Cal., Jan. 1.—Angered at organization work among the lumber workers by the I. W. W., and unwilling to undergo the expense of a criminal syndicalism trial, a group of 30 business men of Fort Bragg kidnaped J. F. Campbell, Joe Smith, F. C. Watkins and John Stahl from a hotel lobby, and took them to the railroad station, where they bought railroad tickets and ordered the first three on to the train, commanding them never to return to Mendocino county. Stahl they then took in an automobile and left him in the rain at 1 a. m. 20 miles from a town, after threatening him with injury and death. All four men are now in Eureka continuing their organization work among the lumberjacks.

RADICAL BAITING SOCIETY PASSES HAT FOR DOUGH

Makes Plea for Funds to Fight Communists

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—The American defense society is again hard up for funds. It is again at its old game of squeezing cash out of its supporters. Its latest appeal is based on the notoriously radical baiting and Soviet Russia hating, capitalist sheet, the New York Herald-Tribune. No doubt they aren't inspired it themselves. Anyone can send a story to this capitalist sheet telling about enormous sums of money spent by Soviet Russia in America to take the bankers' government away from them and get it published. So what should prevent the American defense society from doing it? And especially just before Christmas too!

The society's Red baiting officials bought a truck load of Herald-Tribunes and sent a clipping with a form letter to every banker in the country. They even sent one to the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Bank of Chicago. We print the letter in full:

Dear Sir: The enclosed clipping is from the New York Herald-Tribune of Dec. 2. From it you will note that the Soviet government has just appropriated $100,000,000 for propaganda in foreign countries including the United States. The American defense society is the only oustanding agency in the United States which has been active in apprising the citizens of the radical activities here. Yet because of the lethargy of the public generally, we are forced to appeal again and again for funds with which to carry on our work.

Despite our reduced finances we have been able to wage a warfare but we would be much more effective if you will give us the funds with which to fight. Will you not give us ammunition to meet the activities in America of Zinoviev? It will be an investment on your part in patrotism and defense.

Your very truly,

The splendid issue just off the press has on its cover a three color reproduction of a great painting, "Revolution Comes!" by N. Kravchenko —the most famous picture in the Revolutionary Museum in Moscow.
The issue contains the second installment of that revolutionary classic "The History of the Russian Communist Party" by Gregory Zinoviev; "The A. F. of L. and Trade Union Unity" by Wm. Z. Foster and Wm. F. Dunne—ten articles in all that form important contributions on many phases of Labor's problems.
Included in this issue are also ten cartoons (one of two pages) by such noted artists as Art Young, Adolph Dehn, William Gropper, Fred Ellis and Hay Bales.
Adding to the value of this well rounded issue are poems by such well known poets as Witter Bynner, Edwin Seaver, Sara Bard Field and others.
A story by Jack Wilgus you will enjoy. An International Review section gives the world Labor situation in a nut-shell. Editorials bring to your attention important points of interest to Labor.

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

Menshevik Conception of the Minority

By EARL R. BROWDER.

A CHARACTERISTIC feature of menshevism is its mechanical conception of the collapse of capitalism. It is the completely false idea that capitalism will be destroyed, not by the action of the revolutionary working class, but by a "dying out," or an automatic falling to pieces, or a walking over a precipice—after which the working class will joyfully enter into their own. Such conceptions prevent the working class from entering the struggle, from steeling themselves for the fierce class war, from throwing themselves whole-heartedly into the building up of the revolutionary party which alone can lead the necessary struggle for power.

Our minority in the present party discussion has a tendency in this direction that is very pronounced. A striking example is found in the DAILY WORKER of Dec. 30, in the cartoon by Comrade Minor, one of the prominent leaders of the minority.

Comrade Minor's cartoon shows capitalism as a decrepit old man wandering alone down the path of time with the years 1914 and 1918 marked in bold letters. The present, the year 1925, on this path of capitalism, ends abruptly at a deep precipice, and the feeble old capitalist system is blindly shaking its walking stick over the precipice, preparatory to stepping into space.

The imagination of the backward workers looking at this picture will doubtless picture the next step—capitalism over the precipice—without any act on the part of the working class, which is not in the picture. And if they do supply something to fill in the blank, something to give the final push to capitalism, they will perhaps be inclined to agree with the minority, that a nice little "class" farmer-labor party will be strong enough with its little finger to give capitalism its coup de grace.

This is a menshevist cartoon, the significance of which is heightened by the fact that it was drawn right at this time, when the party is concentrating its attention upon just such theoretical deviations, which find their theoretical expression in the thesis of the minority.

Dialectic Materialism vs. Metaphysics

By SID. A. BUSH

NOW that open discussion on immediate party tasks is carried on in the press and all party units for a period of several weeks, the overwhelming majority of the membership, no doubt has a clear conception of the different points of view held by the leading comrades of the party on the subject of carrying on a campaign for a "class farmer-labor party."

From the point of view of sheer polemics the controversy over the slogan "for a class farmer-labor party" and the carrying on of a major campaign for it at this time, resolves itself into a discussion between dialectic materialists on the one hand, and metaphysicians on the other hand.

Those who reason from the point of view of dialectic materialism survey the world of phenomena, analyze their component parts, objective and subjective; discover the changes that have taken place, detect the new events, and trends, and the directions of the various tendencies, which are being propelled by the new conditions; and, knowing their goal the dialectic materialists form policies, lay down rules, initiate maneuvers to counteract those tendencies which are obnoxious, and try to accelerate others which are favorable towards the realization of the goal. And here let us remember that the goal is the principle, the fundamental law, which is not being altered to conform to a changed condition. Only the maneuvers, the policies, that is, the strategy and tactics are being changed because of changed conditions.

The metaphysicians, on the other hand, once they grasp a fact at a certain time, they hold on to it most tenaciously. They cannot believe that the facts they grasped and saw so clearly could disappear. They cannot conceive that new conditions have arisen which demand a revaluation of previous conceptions, and the present demands the setting into motion such organs of action that must of necessity be different from those hitherto used. To the metaphysicians things appear more or less static, therefore, they cling to the old, outworn and obsolete formula. That is the method of the minority.

The thesis of the majority of the central executive committee states:

"Three years ago our party adopted the position that a labor party policy was the only way of applying the tactics of the united front to the political conditions of America. To this decision our party was moved by the following considerations; The existence of the strong mass movement in the direction of a farmer-labor party as evidenced by a large number of local and state farmer-labor parties, and also by the formation of the Conference for Progressive Political Action, which we interpreted as the result of this same mass pressure towards independent political action."

Since that time, however, these farmer-labor parties, this mass movement was absorbed by the LaFollette movement. And what is this LaFollette movement? The majority thesis states:—

"The LaFollette combination is socially and politically a bourgeois MOVEMENT hostile and antagonistic to the proletarian class struggle and to the political independence of the oppressed and toiling masses."

But, as this movement, as has been demonstrated by the last elections, has the support of those elements among the workers and poor farmers who have been the backbone of the erstwhile mass movement for a farmer-labor party, the majority thesis proposes to carry out the following united front tactics:—

"Exposure of the bourgeois nature of LaFolletteism. This becomes the central problem of our agitation and propaganda. It must be carried on along the following lines: a) Formulate concrete political demands based on immediate burning needs of the masses; b) consolidate these demands among the masses; c) call upon the rank and file in the shops, unions, among the unemployed, to address resolution, petitions, and to hold mass meetings demanding that the "labor" wing in the LaFollette combination and the LaFollette group in congress propose legislation along the lines of the demands of the masses, at the same time creating the necessary united front rank and file organization for the struggle; d) by these campaigns unmask the bourgeois nature of LaFolletism and the labor lieutenants of the LaFollette movement, expose the futility of democratic-pacifist parliamentarism and demonstrate the necessity of following the leadership of the only class political party, the Workers Party; . . . as against the LaFollette party the Workers Party, . . . as against the futility of LaFollette's parliamentary reformism the use of the organized mass power of the workers for political ends under the leadership of the revolutionary working class political party, the Workers Party."

Then, when the class struggle gains momentum the thesis proposes;

"As the working masses gain militancy and agressiveness the situation will become ripe and the necessity urgent for a general mobilization of all forces (that is, on the industrial economic and political fields, etc.,) of labor for a concerted struggle against the triumphant capitalist reaction." The concerted action to be directed by "a general labor congress elected by the rank and file of labor. . . . "

Thus the analysis of economic and political conditions in the majority thesis and the few examples herein quoted shows the following: The majority of the central executive committee after analyzing the world of phenomena nothing changes of conditions, ascertaining the direction the new events are taking, outlines a policy demanded by the new situation confronting the party.

Thus the present strategy regarding the farmer-labor question is "exposure of the bourgeois nature of LaFolletteism" because "at the present the main strength of LaFolletiism and consequently the main danger to the class struggle, comes from the ideological hegemony of LaFolletteism over the minds of large sections of workers and poor farmers." The strategy is in accord with Lenin's teachings that the Communist Party of England that as long as the masses are under the influence of the British labor party and as long as the latter has not shown its true colors, that is, its petty bourgeois face, the Communist Party cannot split those masses away and gain leadership over them until the labor party is exposed as an enemy of the workers. To expose it was the duty of the Communist Party of Britain.

The tactics proposed by the majority as stated above aim at the awakening of the masses, intensification of the class struggle and gaining of leadership over the exploited masses thru a united front of the Communists, under the banner of the Workers (Communist) Party with the rank and file, thru making the party a mass Communist Party. The strategy, tactics and aims are all directed towards the goal—overthrow of capitalism. The majority thesis is, therefore, a thesis of dialetic materialists.

The thesis of the metaphysicians of our party, the minority states:

"The slogan 'for a farmer-labor party' remains our most effective means of agitation for political action on a class basis by the workers and poor farmers."

And why? Section four reads:—

"For our party the application of this tactics was a success."

That means that because at one time it was successful, in a measure, we must continue using it regardless of the change of conditions. According to this metaphysical method of reasoning, because "war Communism" was successful in Russia at a particular period of struggle, the Russian Communist Party committed an error for abandoning it. Because the Friends of Soviet Russia was a tremendous success, we should have continued it regardless of the changed conditions. These examples can be multiplied by the thousands. Yet, the reasoning of the minority has been so blunted by reasons better known to those who support that thesis, that the comrades cannot see the obsurdity of it.

The minority thesis, admits that conditions have changed, it states:

"The development of this movement (of the workers and farmers) side by side with the petty bourgeois progressive movement led inevitably to a struggle on the part of the petty bourgeoisie to impose its leadership on it and to split it."

Yes, the LaFollette movement absorbed what the Workers Party has built, according to Comrade Manley, at a cost of $50,000, and at the expense of the energy of the best forces of our party, which if used to a better advantage would have brought the Communist movement better results than the campaigning for and building of petty bourgeois reformist farmer-labor parties. The minority admits that conditions have changed, yet it desires to keep on the old tracks not matter how decayed they are.

The methaphysical conception has brough Comrade Kaplan into a fury. He rages at the majority for having abandoned their previous ideas. He says:—

"In the last election campaign the central executive committee of the Workers Party promised the workers and exploited farmers of this country in the party platform that: 'The Workers Party declares its purpose to continue the struggle to mobilize the workers and exploited farmers for independent political action thru a mass farmer-labor party' . . . 'After the election" he continues "the same central executive committee declares; 'Our chief task in the immediate future is not the building of such a farmer-labor party but the strengthening and developing of the Workers Party itself as the practical leader of the masses and as the only party that represent the working class interests and fights for them.'"

Comrade Kaplan thinks that this is an unpardonable change of front on the part of the majority of the C. E. C. When Lenin insisted upon the signing of the Brest Litovsk Treaty he was approached by some of the Russian Communist Party for changing his slogans and formulas almost overnight. Lenin called those comrades "HENS." The substance of his reply was as follows:

"When you draw a cicle with a piece of chalk around a hen she will walk around and around the line and fear to jump over. But in the case of the hen it is more pardonable than with you for the hen did not draw the line. When you yourselves draw up formulas and slogans to fit a certain occasion you also can do away with them. And why, because conditions demand it."

The lessons should be studied by the comrades of the minority.

Comrade Lovestone, altho one of the authors of the minority thesis, which states that the farmer-labor movement was absorbed by LaFollettism, nevertheless, true to his methaphysical conception, still maintains in DAILY WORKER of December 18th that there is a demand on the part of the masses for a farmer-labor party. Comrade Lovestone being in charge of the research department, and therefore a faithful reader of many dozens of journals sees RED in every American little guandist, who happens to mumble the phrase "farmer-labor party." On the strength of such information he is constructing a theory to prove the contention of the minority. But by the time Comrade Lovestone finishes he will find out that he built a castle which has not air for its foundation. Because—and if he is not too busy writing he probably will be found out that—Comrade Hathaway's report, Comrade Manley's and Comrade Cannon's articles punctured, demolished and blown to tit-bits the foundation upon which he built his theory consisting of five points.

According to Comrade Kaplan political action means nothing else than campaigning for a petty bourgeois reformist farmer-labor party. He says "What will the workers eventually say of the Communist movement of America if we desert the united front on the political field now?" . . . And he says: "We must according to the majority leave the workers and poor farmers entirel to LaFollette on the political field." It is really a pity to find that there are members of the party whose knowledge of what constitutes political action in the Communist sense is so abridged. The educational department must get busy. In the mean time it would be advisable that the comrades supporting the minority thesis study carefully the thesis of the majority there they will learn that constitutes political action.

Comrade Ruthenberg says: (DAILY WORKER December 1st.) "The majority jumps to a conclusion in direct conflict with the analysis it submits"

THE RESULTS OF THE FIRST MEMBERSHIP MEETINGS

By C. E. RUTHENBERG.

THE central executive committee majority in the discussion before the membership has made the basis of its case a sectarian appeal. In place of discussing the question, "Thru what policy can we get best results in building the Workers Party into a mass Communist Party," which is the issue before the party, the C. E. C. majority has dodged the issue by answering arguments as to the policy thru which that end could be attained with the slogan "Build the Workers Party."

It is much simpler and easier to advocate a general slogan such as "Build the Workers Party" than to formulate and defend policies which will build the Workers Party, as has been done in the thesis of the minority of the C. E. C. The C. E. C. majority has taken full advantage of this situation. It has raised the sectarian slogan "Build the Workers Party" against policies proposed for the building of the Workers Party in an effort to confuse the issue and create the impression that the minority thesis had some other purpose than the building of the Workers Party. As a consequence the minority has found itself in the position of being obliged to educate the membership to an understanding of a Bolshevist policy, while the majority was able to rely upon the natural appeal of the mere slogan "Build the Workers Party," without pointing out the way to the accomplishment of this desirable end.

In arranging the membership meetings at which the question of the party policy was to be voted upon the C. E. C. majority so scheduled those meetings that the cities in which the C. E. C. majority was in a position of advantage held their meetings first.

The C. E. C majority also took full advantage of the opportunity given it by control of the party machinery. A lecture routing for Comrade Lovestone was cancelled and Comrade Carlson sent out to fill the dates. Comrade Cannon was sent to New York three weeks ago, ostensibly for "educational work" but actually to build the fences of the C. E. C. majority in the party fight. Comrade Manley was transferred to New York as eastern T. U. E. L. organizer in order to strengthen the C. E. C. majority in the New York district. Comrade Harry Whitsky was put in the DAILY WORKER pay roll as part of the campaign to insure The Daily" but devoted most of his time to spreading malicious rumors in support of the majority. Comrade Carlson was sent to Philadelphia as educational circuit lecturer weeks before the educational circuit was organized, acting as the majority representative in the Philadelphia district

In spite of the natural appeal of the slogan "Build the Workers Party" even when no statement of policy to attain that result is attached to it, in spite of the C. E. C. majority selecting the most favorable fighting ground for the first test of strength, in spite of the mobilization of the party machinery in support of the C. E. C. majority, it was able only to secure the slim majority of 111 votes in the five districts in which membership meetings were held last Sunday, and two of these districts went on record for the minority thesis.

Another factor which entered into the results last Sunday was the eleventh hour change in the rules covering the meetings, which denied members not attached to the city central committees in the cities in which the meetings were held the right to vote.

This rule, disfranchising the party members from nearby cities, was made in order to cut down the strength of the minority, particularly in the Chicago meetings. In Chicago even the members living in Pullman, which is industrially and geographically a part of Chicago, who were overwhelmingly for the minority position, were denied the right to vote in the Chicago membership meeting. The votes of the Pullman comrades alone would have changed the result in the Chicago meeting.

The New York "Victory."

The vote in New York City is of great importance to our party. It is the final fact in the development of a new grouping in the party. The New York "victory" is the seal on the consolidation of the Foster and Lore groups in the party.

The fact that Comrade Lore cast his vote for the Foster thesis and has written an article in support of that thesis, is not a matter of chance Comrade Lore can vote for the Foster thesis because thru the Foster thesis the C. E. C. majority has taken great strides toward the sectarian policy of the Lore group.

The Foster-Cannon group in the party stood between the Marxian group and the Lore right wing of the party. The Communist International in its decision last May urged that it co-operate with the Ruthenberg group and carry on a struggle against the Lore group. In place of that it is now in the process of consolidation with the Lore group and the new alignment in the party will be a Foster-Lore group against the present C. E. C. minority.

Next Sunday's Meetings.

When the vote is in after next Sunday's meetings in Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Buffalo the present slim majority for the C. E. C. majority thesis will have been converted into a majority for the minority thesis. The retreat toward sectarianism and the Foster-Lore alliance will have been repudiated.

But this vote of the members in the larger cities of the country will not settle the issue. Our party was dragged out of the mire of sectarianism thru years of struggle. It was only thru tremendous effort that the party was taught that sectarian propaganda alone will not build a party which can be the leader in the struggle for the proletarian revolution. Once the party repudiated sectarianism it began to make progress and grow. It is not sufficient that 60 per cent of the party repudiate the retreat to sectarianism which is innate in the policies of the C. E. C. majority. The work of educating the party to a clear understanding of the issues must go on. We must carry on the fight until th overwhelming bulk of our membership understands that a sectarian phrase cannot take the place of a Bolshevik policy in building the Communist Party in this country—the Workers Party.

LaFOLLETTE COMMUNISTS AT WORK IN MINNESOTA

By LESLIE R. HURT

LOST: Somewhere, between the time following the recent national elections and the present date, one perfectly good demand for a class farmer-labor party. Its loss is causing its former owners great worry. If this demand is found a suitable reward will be paid for its immediate return to the present majority of the Communist party. No questions will be asked. The finder, or finders, may apply direct to Comrades Foster, Cannon, or Bittelman, care of: The Workers Party, Chicago, Illinois.

LaFolette Communists To The Fore

The deep and mysterious circumstances surrounding the absolute "disappearance" of the demand for a class farmer-labor party in this country is now occupying the attention of every thinking member of the Workers (Communist) Party and the Young Workers League. The Foster-Cannon-Bittelman group say they have dispatched several scouting expeditions in an endeavor to locate the missing demand, but, according to their findings reported each day thru the discussions in the DAILY WORKER, "there aint no sich animule." Some of the majority adherents, the "LaFollette Communists," advance the opinion that LaFolette, himself, swallowed up the demand.

Foster, Cannon, Bittelman, Hathaway, and others of the present C. E. C. majority of the Workers Party, admit that the unemployment situation is becoming more and more intense each day,—that thousands upon thousands of poor farmers are giving up the land to come into the industrial centers as competitors against the city wage slaves for jobs,—and that the child labor campaign demands immediate attention. But then they go on to say that there is no demand for a class farmer-labor party.

Where We Are At!

The theory is advanced that the only solution is the separate maintainance of a Workers (Communist) Party. Does the majority think for one minute that the workers are now ready waiting only for the call, to dash into the Communist ranks? Is it a fact that the farmers have assimilated so such revolutionary education that they will climb over one another in the stampede to get into the Workers Party?

If that be true then the time is, indeed, ripe for the overthrow of capitalism. In listening to the arguments put forth by majority followers in Minneapolis, one would naturally feel that this group desired that they be set up as "all-seeing gods,"—as "virgin Communists." They tell us that a terrible danger lurks within any movement that has for its establishment a class farmer-labor party.—frankly admit that "LaFollette Communists" are unable to cope with the enemies of the Workers Party on the political field.

Foster-Cannon Group's United Front.

After their "hobnobbing" with such fakers as LaFollette, Mahoney, Cramer, Wiggins, and others of the same caliber, the majority has arrived at the conclusion that any attempt to form a class alliance of exploited farmers and wage earners would be disastrous to the Communist movement. Because they falled in their endeavor by ignoring the rank and file and working only in conjunction with labor fakers and political shysters,—it naturally follows, so they say, that any future attempt is bound to fall down in a like manner, regardless as to whether the movement begins by working "from the bottom."

They, these pure and virgin Communists, shout, "No compromise with the petty bourgeoisie." What are the sentiments of others regarding small compromises with the petty bourgeoisie? Speaking in the Presidium of the E. C. of the C. I. on May 20, 1924, Comrade Zinoviev said, "We must support the movement for an Independent Labor party. It is our task to direct the river into its own course. The second question is a question of the petty bourgeoisie. Comrade Martynov has quoted what Lenin said many times. The petty bourgeoisie we can support. The petty bourgeoisie has no goal. The support of the Bolshevik is directed in driving the petty bourgeoisie on, in giving its blows, in showing up its limitations to the masses, in going ahead of the petty bourgeoisie. That is supporting it also. As revolutionaries we can support the petty bourgeoisie in driving it forward."

Going on still further, he says, "Our task consists of starting an independent movement. I do not wish that the opinion should be formed in the minds of the comrades that we underestimate the work among the farmers. That was an important chapter in the work of our party and should be continued."

Frowning At the C. I.

It may be that the majority group takes the same attitude regarding advice from recognized Russian comrades as was assumed by a certain member of the Minneapolis English branch, Thursday, Dec. 18. Among other things this comrade said, in effect, this, "it is my opinion that we look too much to Moscow for advice and instructions. Aren't the American comrades capable of judging conditions in their own country? Must we send cablegrams every time we think something had ought to be done here in America,—asking the Russian soviet's permission?" In his mind no centralized authority is necessary,—no disciplinary, executive committee should be consulted in matters involving the success of the Communist movement in this country. And since the majority group headed by Comrades Foster, Cannon, and Bittelman, are disposed to listen to advice from members of the E. C. of the C. I. they place themselves in the same category.

Who Are the Social Democarts?

The minority comrades are being constantly accused of displaying social-democratic tendencies. Such a charge is ridiculously untrue,—a stupid, ignorant assertion. Comrade Jay Lovestone, by his several articles in the DAILY WORKER, has pointed out just who the social-democrats in the Workers (Communist) Party really are. His recap to date shows that on twenty-nine different counts the Foster-Cannon group's political policies received the vote of Lore.

Speaking of Lore in the Presidium of the E. C. of the C. I. on May 20 1924, Comrade Radek had this to say of the comrade; "In conclusion something about the Lore group. I believe that we are not dealing with the personal lapses of Comrade Lore. He has written articles in which he presents the history of the Communist International completely in the spirit of the Second-and-a-Half International." Radek further continues, "For that reason I believe that the C. E. C. acted incorrectly when it regarded the lapses of Lore as lapses of a peculiar fellow. This is a centristic tendency in the party against which the C. E. C. must fight. The comrades must oppose Lore in the press, they must attack him."

The writer heard Comrade C. A. Hathaway make the remark at the Dec. 18th meeting of the Minneapolis English branch of the Workers Party that is was the minority group that had worked with and received the support of the Lorelites. Hathaway claimed that the present majority desired to carry on an educational campaign against Lorelism, but that the minority insisted on persecuting Lore. He explains that is the reason why Comrade Lore consistently votes with and supports the majority group. A very weak and unsatisfactory answer, but seemingly it is the best excuse that the majority adherents are able to put forth.

A New Brand of Communism—On Wheels

The good virtuous Communists espousing the majority group loudly shout. "The Workers Party must purge itself of this dangerous element that infests the organization with its idea of a class F.-L. party." Speaking of "dangerous elements,"—who are they? During the time when the DAILY WORKER, the only Communist daily in this country, printed in the English language, was appealing, yea, almost begging, for the members of the party to get out and secure subscriptions for the publication,—what was happening in the city of Minneapolis?

Comrades C. A. Hathaway, Carl Skogland, and E. S. Youngdahl, as well as others of the majority, were "breaking their necks" in the campaign put on by the Farmer-Labor Advocate to build up their subscription lists. The Farmer-Labor Advocate, edited jointly by Wm. Mahoney and Ralph Harmon, is published at St. Paul and represents the greatest concentration of LaFollette fakers and political microbes ever banded together. The reward offered by this publication was not "a mere enlightened working class," but a beautiful automobile to be given as a prize to the person securing the greatest number of subscriptions. A capitalistic "catch-penny" affair designed to perpetuate the "pie cards" of a couple of labor fakers.

Comrade Walter Frank, who was then DAILY WORKER agent, pointed out to both Comrades Hathaway and Skogland that if they would devote the time spent on building the F.-L. Advocate to securing subscriptions for the DAILY WORKER many new readers to our publication could be obtained. Both Hathawny and Skogland, however contended that if the automobile was won by a party member the district would be materially benefitted.

In conclusion,—the majority insists there shall be no class F.-L. party in any way supported by the Workers Party. Like the S. L. P. and the proletarian party we are to our way alone. Just imagine, comrades, the thousands upon thousands of workers who will dash into our party the minute we abandon the idea of a class F.-L. P. Just stop to consider the great strides the S. L. P. and P. P. have made in the matter of building up their their membership,—they, no doubt, will be overthrow of capitalism in the palms of their hands by virue of the fact that they have such a huge number of followers in their camps.

Because the present majority were "doubled-crossed" and given the "Judas kiss" by fakers of the LaFollette, Cramer, and Wiggins stamp, men who had been pointed out as not being dependable, the idea of a class farmer-labor party must be thrown to the four winds. The writer says, let us begin from the bottom to form such a party. By this method, by going into the political arena again and exposing who the real fakers are we will rally around the Workers Party those worth-while farmers and workers who really desire to achieve the overthrow of capitalism.

The minority are being charged with about everything "under the sun" in that their idea is so busy, however, concentrating their efforts of fighting the enemy within the party, that little time can be alloted to wage a struggle against the capitalists and their lackeys. As Comrade Frank, the DAILY WORKER agent, says, "the district organizer of district number one, Comrade C. A. Hathaway, and his immediate majority group followers were so busy gathering subscriptions for the reactionary Farmer-Labor Advocate that they couldn't be bothered about our own DAILY WORKER." It remained for Comrade Frank, of the minority, to conduct the D. W. subscription campaign almost unaided in this city. Yes, the minority group is a "dangerous element" all right,—all right. Now in spite of the inactivity of Comrade Skogland in the D. W. drive, the majority has initiated a move locally to make Skogland paid agent for the publication. Consistency,—thou art a "pippin."

CZARIST FINK ON WITNESS STAND AGAINST HIBBEN

Does Not Like to be Dubbed Stoolpigeon

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.— The has-been duchess got away just in time. Her husband's secret agent in the United States has uncovered himself in a way that might embarrass her czarinish highness.

Boris Brasol, who admits that he is "the Grand Duke Cyril's representative in America," was the final witness in the army trial of Capt. Paxton Hibben. His admissions under cross-examination would have increased the disfavor with which Cyril's wife, Victoria Feodorovna, was looked upon by the American workers who saw money-royalty bending the knee to the pretenders of Russia.

Brasol, formerly of the Russian imperial guards, admitted he was guilty of working to overthrow a government with which the United States is not at war, technically liable therefore to deportation. He said he had been a member of the Russian national society, which favors overthrow of the Russian government by force and violence. He said the organization had ceased to exist. Brasol claimed that as a Russian lawyer he did not know American law and that he was unaware of deportation possibilities.

Stool Eats His Words.

During the war Brasol was employed by the United States government and reported activities of Russians to the military intelligence department but he would not call himself a spy. Brasol was forced to retract his statement that Maxim Litvinov was president of the Russian Red Cross in 1922, altho he had sworn it previously. He was shown a photograph of Capt. Hibben under microscope and admitted that his former testimony that Hibben wore the Russian five-pointed star was wrong and that he had N. E. R. (Near East Relief) insignia on his uniform. Brasol had to admit that he knew nothing actually about relief work despite his earlier charges that relief supplies sent by Quakers, Nansen relief, British Save the Children Fund and all others except Hoover's went to Russian Soviet authorities and the red army.

Argument of the counsel for defense of Capt. Hibben will be heard at the end of the month. The board of inquiry will decide whether formal charges should be made of disloyalty against Hibben.

RUSSIAN "JOURNALIST" VLADIMIR VORONTZOFSKY IS EXPOSED AS SPY AND AGENT PROVOCATEUR

About half a year ago the central bureau of the Russian section of the Workers Party of America published a statement concerning the expulsion of a member of the Russian branch of the Workers Party in San Francisco, V. Vorontzofsky. The central bureau labelled his actions as unworthy of a Communist, "a former member of the Russian Communist Party," which he claimed to be. The central bureau in its statement warned the workers and workers' organizations against persons of such type. Novy Mir also published a resolution adopted by the Russian branch of the Workers Party in San Francisco from which it is clear that Vorontzofsky, besides his other exploits, has distinguished himself by absconding with the funds of the branch.

At that time the central bureau was not in a position to give information concerning the activities of V. Vorontzofsky in Soviet Russia. Now this information is at hand. It is contained in a letter from the editor of the newspaper, "The Red Banner," of Vladivostok, a member of the Russian Communist Party, Nicholas Novitsky. This letter is printed below.

It is clear from this letter that Vladimir Vorontzofsky has acted as a spy provocateur in the employ of the Markuloff government in Siberia, and the authorities of the Soviet government are still looking for him for a theft which he committed in Siberia.

All this shows that in the person of Vladimir Vorontzofsky we deal not only with a degenerate, as was supposed by the central bureau, but also with a rascal and traitor who is in the service of the enemies of the working class.

He is now continuing his "laudable" activities in New York, having connected himself with a circle of "proletarian" writers and participating in the publication of a Russian literary journal. Whether he continues during his time left free from his poetical inspiration to serve the cause of counter-revolution is not known, but it would not be surprising if he does.

Such types cannot be tolerated, not only among revolutionists, but not even among sincere and honest people of any type. They should be immediately exposed and driven out. To work with Vladimir Vorontzofsky is to cover oneself with the same shame with which this spy provocateur is stamped.

For our party, the Vorontzofsky affair is a hard but valuable experience which must firmly impress upon our consciousness the necessity of being very careful as to whom we accept into our party.

We request other newspapers to republish this statement and the letter of Comrade Nicholas Novitsky.

Novitsky's Letter Regarding Vladimir Vorontzofsky.

"Having learned from Comrade Gurman, who in turn has received a communication from San Francisco, that Vorontzofsky, who arrived in America from Shanghai, has joined there the Communist Party and advertises himself as a 'Communist' and gives false information concerning his past, thereby misleading people with whom he comes in contact, I deem it necessary to give that information in regards to this rascal which he himself conceals and which will help the comrades to give the correct valuation to this rascal.

"Vorontzofsky has in fact, worked during 1918, in West Siberia, under the Soviet government, but is even up to the present sought by the authorities of the criminal department for the theft of money which was entrusted to him. During the time of the Markuloff regime he actually spent three weeks in jail in Vladivostok, being planted among the arrested workers by the Markuloff intelligence office, as a spy provocateur. Having accomplished this duty, Vorontzofsky was freed and upon his liberation he printed in the Markuloff official organ a letter of thanks to the Markuloff authorities. In his letter, this rascal ridiculed Soviet Russia and testified concerning the 'excellent treatment' given to the arrested Bolsheviks by the followers of Markuloff and in a mocking manner assured his readers that the inhabitants of Soviet Russia would be happy if they received the same nourishment which the arrested received in the Markuloff prison.

"In Shanghai, Vorontzofsky made an attempt, by underhand methods, to become connected with the newspaper "Shanghai Life," which was edited by me and which was pro-Soviet, but he was not accepted by me because of the information which was received concerning him on the day following his first appearance in the editorial office with a request for employment.

"After this failure, Vorontzofsky threw off all pretenses. He openly entered the white guard ranks, worked on the paper of the black hundreds, 'Russian Echo,' and in that drunken criminal gang which grouped itself around this paper and around the former Russian consulate and international intelligence offices he was a figure of no little importance.

"His statement that he worked on the paper of the black hundreds on instructions from the Russian Communist Party is a stupid and deliberate lie. The Russian Communist Party never, for any purposes, utilizes such despicable creatures as white guard provocateurs, and what sense would there be in such utilization?

"Another deliberate lie, calculated to appeal to uninformed bourgeois and to the childish craving of naive people for Pinkertonian stories is the rumor which he spreads now in America that he received from the Bolshevik $50 for propaganda purposes. It is quite possible that this is the trick of a provocateur for some special purpose.

"I state categorically that Vorontzofsky is an extremely base and dangerous individual for uninformed people to come in contact with. He should be immediately exposed and not be tolerated by any one."

(Seal of The Red Banner)

DETROIT T. U. E. L. PLANS MEET WITH A GOOD PROGRAM

Gathering to Be Held This Sunday

DETROIT, MICH., Jan. 1. — The regular meting of the T. U. E. L. of Detroit, will be held at the House of the Masses, St. Aubin and Gratiot, on Saturday, January 3rd, 8 P. M.

The speakers will be comrades Bud Reynolds, and Goetz. Reynolds will speak on the infamous attempt of the reactionary machine of President Hutchinson to expel Local 1191 of the Carpenters Union of Detroit. Local 1191 is one of the strongest and most militant locals in the Detroit Carpenters Union, and Hutcheson and company wish to expel this local because their machine was defeated in the recent election by the vote of Local 1911. Comrade Reynolds is vice pres of the Carpenters District Council, and a very active member of the T.U.E.L. and his talk is certain to be of great importance.

Comrade Goetz will speak on the forthcoming election of international officers of the Machinists' Union. The T. U. E. L., after a futile attempt to get together with the "would be progressives" lined up behind Anderson, decided to put an entire left-wing ticket in to the field. With the aid of their fighting program the Metal Trades Section of the T. U. E. L. ought to make a whirlwind campaign for the endorsement of their ticket.

These subjects are of great importance to every trade union militant and they should make every effort to attend this meeting.

Membership Votes in Los Angeles 94 to 14 For Majority Theses

By a vote of 94 to 14 the Los Angeles local of the Workers Party at a general membership meeting, held on December 28, went on record for the majority thesis on the immediate tasks of the party. The meeting also voted unanimously for the demand of the Foster-Cannon majority calling for a national convention of the Workers Party.

Hungarian Branch In New York for Minority Theses

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—The Hungarian downtown branch at its last meeting after having heard both representatives of the majority and minority thesis and a thoro discussion on the theses by the membership endorsed the minority theses by a vote of 24 for the minority and 4 for the majority.

The motion declared the slogan for a united front class farmer-labor party an effective means for permeating the masses with our Communist propaganda and for building the workers (Communist) Party. It further declared it is our Communist duty to make use of this slogan to expose the false leadership of the LaFollettes, the yellow socialists and the fake labor leaders.

CLEVELAND T. U. E. L. HOLDS ITS MONTHLY MEETING ON SUNDAY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Jan. 1.—The monthly meeting of the Trade Union Educational League will take place Sunday, Jan. 4, at 10 a. m. sharp, at the headquarters of the Workers Party, 5927 Euclid Ave., Room 13. A program has been prepared which will include reports from the various trade union groups on conditions in their industries, which promises to be very interesting owing to recent developments in the trade union movement in Cleveland. Max Sillinsky will also talk on the American Federation of Labor convention just held at El Paso, to which he was a delegate. All members of the Workers Party who belong to trade unions must attend this meeting.

Pullman Membership Meeting Votes for the Minority, 38 to 5

An overwhelming vote for the minority position in the present party discussion was cast at the Pullman membership meeting. The vote was 38 in favor and only five opposed to the theses of Ruthenberg, Lovestone, Bedacht, Engdahl and Gitlow. Thomas J. O'Flaherty spoke for the C. E. C. majority, with the minority position being presented by Robert Minor.

Distress Among the Miners

The prospects confronting the American working class during the coming year are decidedly bright, according to a statement made by William Green, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America and successor to Sam Gompers as president of the American Federation of Labor. Green's statement appeared in the capitalist press. He did not utter a word on the burning question of unemployment which is raising so much havoc in the ranks of his own organization.

While the faker Green was spouting his optimism and verbally bolstering up the capitalist system, Arley Staples, of Christopher, Illinois, candidate for vice-president of the United Mine Workers of America in the recent elections against Philip Murray, was busy organizing unemployment councils in southern Illinois. Staples is a Communist.

On last Sunday a big mass meeting of miners was held in Christopher, at which it was decided to begin the formation of unemployment councils. The first one will be organized at Sessor, where the mines have been closed down for one year. There are two thousand miners idle in Franklin county alone.

The unemployed miners of southern Illinois have until now managed to live on their savings and on the credit extended to them by shopkeepers. But they are at the end of their resources and only collective action can prevent the most terrible suffering during the cold season. The reactionary officials at the head of the Illinois Miners' Union have ignored the unemployment problem. Only the radicals under the leadership of the Workers (Communist) Party take the initiative in organizing the miners for action.

One of the resolutions adopted by the Christopher conference demanded work or compensation, and pointed out that the government ordered them to work or fight during the war. The miners are now determined to fight for themselves.

Explaining the Donkey Disaster

The other day the senate witnessed a clash between Senators Bruce, of Maryland, and Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, over the causes of the overwhelming defeat suffered by the democratic party in the recent elections. The two stalwart democrats were at odds as to who was deserving of most of the blame for the disaster that befell the donkey party.

There is a very instructive side to this controversy. Pat Harrison, who served as the democratic spellbinder in the New York convention, denounced Bruce for lining up with the republicans on sundry senate questions. The Maryland senator retorted rather sharply that the democratic party as now organized and managed had "discarded its ancient American ideals."

In a measure both senators were right in their explanation of the democratic disaster. Undoubtedly acts of the type performed by Bruce helped bring about the republican victory. Likewise the confused policy of the democratic solons dominating the party went a long way towards insuring its defeat in November. Bruce was, of course, correct when he stated that it is the Negro, exploited and oppressed by the southern aristocracy, that keeps the south solid for the democratic party. It is the tyranny of the southern capitalists and land owners over the great Negro masses that is the source of the democratic party strength in the southern tier of states.

But neither senator really touched on the vital cause responsible for the democratic smashup. The fact of the matter is that the democratic party today no longer represents homogeneity, organic unity of class interests. In the democratic fold there are still found certain sections of the petty bourgeoisie who at times challenge, most often uselessly of course, the upper crust of the capitalist class. Besides even in the ranks of the upper crust of capital in the democratic party there is a conflict of sectional interests which is economic in foundation.

Facing this strife-torn party was the unified, strongly centralized, splendidly financed republican party. It is true both parties loyally represent the interests of big capital, but in the democratic party the handling of small capital interests now and then represents itself as a serious problem. It is for this reason that sooner rather than later the democratic party with its present confused policy, with its vacillation and weakness, will have to turn over a new leaf or make its exit from American politics.

They Cut Melons

A genuine holiday spirit has pervaded the ranks of the biggest industrial and financial interests. Fabulous dividends are being declared. This is the season for joy amongst the exploiters who are now cashing in on the most profitable industry in the United States—coupon clipping.

An outstanding example of gigantic melon cuttings is at hand in the announcement by the General Electric company that its Christmas melons for the bosses will be around $100,000,000.

No wonder the biggest exploiters of the country as well as those who do not understand the mechanism of American capitalism are talking about the high tide of prosperity. While the wealthy stockholders are corraling huge profits, the workers in industry after industry are experiencing painful wage slashes. Every melon cut by the capitalists in the Christmas season translates itself into a New Year wage cut for the workers.

It is no accident that the General Electric company should be the one to cut so big a melon. The General Electric company is an international corporation typifying in the worst sense the growth and character of American imperialism. In France, in Germany, in Italy, in Japan, in the Near East, in the African jungles we find huge investments of the General Electric company or one of its camouflaged subsidiaries.

The chairman of this gigantic Yankee imperialist monster is Owen D. Young, the real father of the vicious Dawes scheme. The General Electric corporation is notorious for its hostility to organized labor. The profits of the General Electric company are monuments to the snuffed out lives of the thousands of exploited workers at some time or other on the payroll of this company.

The working masses of this country had better ponder seriously before rejoicing in these holidays. The huge melons cut by their bosses are nothing but ill omens of what lies before them immediately. Already there is considerable noise about the need for "readjustments" in industry. The only readjustments the employing class knows is the slashing of wages to the marrow. The General Electric company melon should prove a factor signalizing the dangers that the working class of this country is face to face with on the threshold of the new year.

The $25,000 Peace Maker

Viscount Cecil is the British "gentleman" who was rewarded $25,000 for his services in behalf of peace.

This same "gentleman" has just delivered an address at a dinner commemorating the sixty-eighth anniversary of the day on which Woodrow Wilson was born. The theme of Cecil's address was a laudation of the league of nations as a force for international peace.

The speechmaker, the speech, the occasion for the address and the atmosphere pervading the whole situation indicate very clearly the character of capitalist peacemakers. The league of nations is a travesty and mockery on its very name. It has been serving only as an agency of powerful imperialist interests to crush the weaker, the economically underdeveloped countries. The last peacemaking effort of the league of nations was brought to light in all its brutal ugliness by the Egyptian incident.

Nor was it out of place for such a high capitalist peacemaker to show his wares at such an occasion. The commemoration of the birthday of Woodrow Wilson, one of the dynamic forces of the great imperialist war, in which so many millions lost their lives, is certainly a fitting time for bringing into the public eye those capitalist lackeys posing as angels of peace.

Cecil is as much a peacemaker as Woodrow Wilson was. Cecil thinks of world peace in the terms of British imperialist supremacy. Woodrow Wilson thought of world peace in the terms of American imperialist supremacy. They both held the view that world peace was very desirable when enforced by the power of their respective national capitalist cliques.

These are the capitalist peacemakers. Every employing class peacemaker is only an imperialist agent masking behind meaningless abstractions.

Another Myth Fades

The myth, widely spread by the 100 per cent American societies, that the foreign-born population is responsible for most of the crime is badly shattered by the report of the warden of the Cook county jail for 1924.

Out of 11,484 persons incarcerated in the Cook county jail during the year, 9,553 were native-born. Of the balance, 1,653 had been in this country over five years and can therefore be classified as Americanized. Only 257 of the total number had been in America less than five years.

It is thus seen that Americans are in fact superior to the foreign-born even in the field of crime. We submit the above data to the Ku Klux Klan and Secretary of Labor Davis with the comment that Chicago and Cook county has as large a percentage of foreign-born as any city outside of New York and is therefore as good a location as could have been picked to demonstrate the innate moral superiority of the native-born American.

This type has, however, failed his boosters in a disgraceful manner.

Long may the flag of 100 per cent American superiority wave—in the Cook county jail.

WALES MINERS ARE REBELLIOUS AGAINST BOSSES

Young Worker Predicts Class Civil War

By A. L. CONRAD.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

CARDIFF, Wales, January 1.—The coal districts of Great Britain have no more important center than this Welsh district surrounding Cardiff, which employs more than 250,000 miners. The country is composed of great hills and small narrow valleys, and a century ago must have been picturesque and beautiful, with its streams and woodlands. Today it is a black waste, without a vestige of green anywhere. The little valleys are, many of them, almost closed up with waste, from the mines, but there is always room left for a railroad track along which constantly roll trains loaded with coal for the export trade.

22 War Millionaires.

During the world war Cardiff produced 22 brand new millionaires. The houses of the miners perch unsteadily on the black hillsides, the smoke from the great chimneys below pouring over them and in at their narrow windows.

In the Rhonda valley there are 45,000 men at work and 12,000 unemployed. Most of those still working are on part time.

In spite of the efforts of the British conservative party to convince the workers of this Welsh district that it is their appointed place in life to create wealth for others, there is a strong rebellious feeling among the miners. It cannot be called revolutionary. Very few of these men have any plans for altering the system that has debased them, but they are waking up to the fact that clubhouses and restaurants and reading rooms and churches do not compensate them sufficiently for the hours they spend underground nor for the miserable homes they occupy.

Good Position for Defense.

Many of them refer to the strike of 1921, with Lloyd George's threat to starve the workers out by preventing food from coming in. A number of the secret passages which enabled the miners to obtain their fuel during that strike are still guarded by the workers and have not yet been discovered by the authorities and bosses. One young man pointed to an easily defended hill with the comment—"a good place to occupy in the civil war that's coming."

The Welsh miners in the Cardiff district are not satisfied with the conditions under which they are working. The next strike may take more than police to suppress.

Continuous Rains Frighten Londoners

LONDON, Jan. 1.—Riverside inhabitants continued their flight before the rising waters of the Thames and other rivers of England today. A week of almost continuous rains has resulted in record high water stages.

MUSIC -:- By Alfred V. Frankenstein

AS soon as the curtain went up on the opera "Tannhauesr" at the Chicago Auditorium last Sunday afternoon one could tell that an uncommonly fine production was forthcoming. For the ballet, in some previous performances so disappointing, was not the disgrace that it has been. Given a difficult scene to do, the supposedly obscene revels of the followers of Venus, Mr. Oukrainsky developed an artistic and worthwhile scene.

"Tannhauesr," Richard Wagner's third completed opera, is significant among the German master's works as marking the end of his early period of imitation and the beginning of his individual style. The two preceding operas, "Rienzi" and "The Flying Dutchman" are conceived along the traditional German lines developed by Weber. "Tannhauesr," tho it has many of the set melodic scenes of the older style, shows the beginning of the use of declamation instead of arias that is typical of the fully developed Wagnerian style.

The plot of the opera is interesting as showing the fusion of the pagan Germanic religion with christianity. Near Eisenach is a mountain known as the Hoerselberg. Legend has it that Horsa, the pagan goddess of spring, retired to a subterranean cave in this mountain when the christian religion came in. She was later confused with the Greek Venus.

In the first act of the opera the knight, Heinrich Tannhauesr, one of the followers of Venus, sickens of her realm and goes back to the outside world. He returns to the castle of the Wartburg and enters in a singing contest, the reward of which is Elizabeth, daughter of the duke of Thueringia. The contestants are commanded to improvise a song describing love. Wolfram von Eschenbach does so. Tannhauesr disagrees with the knight's idealistic conception, and in the course of his song reveals the fact of his life in the Venusberg. He is commanded to go to Rome to seek the forgiveness of the pope. In the last act Elizabeth is seen praying for the success of Tannhauesr's pilgrimage. Tannhauesr returns, and tells Wolfram that the pope refused his request. The representative of the god of love on earth declares it is no more possible for Tannhauesr to be forgiven than it is for his staff to put forth leaves.

A funeral procession comes into view. Elizabeth is dead. Tannhauesr kneels at her coffin and dies. Then comes a band of pilgrims with the news that the pope's staff has flowered, and Tanunhauesr is forgiven.

Except for the overture and the march of the second act, it is the last act which contains the musical hits. In it occur the world famous "Ode to the Evening Star," the prayer of Elizabeth and the pilgrim's chorus. The whole score is brilliant and alive. There is not a superfluous note. There are none of the extended, actionless scenes that occur thruout Wagner's later work, that are so tedious to the initiated. It is for this reason that "Tannhauesr" vies with "Lohengrin" as Wagner's most popular work. And the very fact that the Chicago Civic Opera company put it on at all proves its popularity.

The opera was adequately cast, and well staged. Probably the most effective work of the afternoon was done by Joseph Schwartz, who played Wolfram. He has a rich, full baritone voice, and he can act. To sing the evening star song in an original way is a feat. He accomplished it.

Forrest Lamont seems to be the company's only Wagnerian tenor. His voice lacks some of the heavy quality of the ideal Wagnerian tenor, but his acting makes up for that lack. He was especially good in the song contest scene.

Olga Forral played and sang Elizabeth, who is a sort of emaciated saint, with considerably more of life than the ordinary.

In fact the only inadequate performance was that of Cyrena Van Gordon as Venus. She made the lady a virago stay away from. And that was surprising, for Miss Van Gordon is one of the biggest artists of the company.

MILLIONAIRE BOOTLEG KILLER SAVES NECK BY INJECTING RACE PREJUDICE AND ABUSING NEGROES

(Special to the Daily Worker)

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 1.—Negroes here are angered at the methods used by southern lawyers which led to the acquital of Lem Motlow, millionaire Tennessee bootleg king, because a Negro and a Jew testified against him. Race prejudice saved Motlow's neck. Motlow murdered Clarence Pullis, Pullman car conductor, but was found not guilty by the southern jury after he explained that he "aimed at Wallace the Negro porter and hit Pullis by mistake."

Evidently the southern courts consider it no crime to kill a Negro, for Motlow has not been punished for attempting to kill the Negro porter. Wallace has sued Motlow for $50.000 in an effort to establish race equality but the law of "white supremacy" which dictates that a Negro has no rights has so far prevailed in Motlow's case.

Attorneys for Motlow played on the southern prejudices of the jury, singling out the one Negro witness, and heaping abuse upon him. Wallace was called an "impertinent nigger, the bad kind who have ambitions for race equality, who would intermarry with the whites and who resent being shown their place." The south loves the Negroes who know their place," said Motlow's lawyer.

The defense called Wallace a "liar," and secured his acquittal, the only evidence in Motlow's favor being that a Negro testified against him, and that he is a millionaire. The testimony of another witness, Joseph Brodia, who saw the murder, was assailed by Motlow's lawyers "because Brodia is a Russian Jew." The Negro press is denouncing the dragging of race prejudice into the millionaire's trial.

DAVIS EXPECTED TO RESIGN FROM JOB NEXT MARCH

John L. Lewis Wants the Job Very Badly

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1. The question of whether Secretary of Labor James J. Davis will retire from the cabinet next March, as has been expected, was raised here today following the secretary's return from a 52-day tour of South America.

Davis declined to confirm or deny that he would relinquish his post, and indicated he would talk the matter over with President Coolidge before deciding.

The first intimation that Davis would retire came from the White House itself. In reply to a question some time ago concerning possible cabinet vacancies, it was announced that Secretary Davis had indicated a desire to retire on March 4.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, has been mentioned as Davis' successor. It was with this appointment in mind that Lewis' friends attribute his non-elevation to the presidency of the A. F. of L.

Views of Our Readers

Set for Six Months.

To the DAILY WORKER: Enclosed find $2.00 for a three months subscription to the DAILY WORKER. Here's how I got the money. My neighbor's cow died and he gave me the calf as I had a fresh cow. I fed the calf for six weeks, using about $5.00 worth of milk and finally selling the calf to a stock buyer for $7.00.

I have been selling apples, fine ones too, for $1.00 a bushel. The storekeepers retail them for $2.00. The producers certainly get it in the neck, both industrial and agrarian. We are up against an unbeatable game as long as the capitalist system lasts. The capitalists sure know how to train us, so that we think everything is O. K.

The DAILY WORKER is fine for me. I don't know what I would do without it. I'm stuck here among a lot of ignoramuses who don't know anything about history, geography, economics or the solar system. I am sitting pretty for three months now. I'll know what's going on with the workers and capitalists outside of Lexington.—(Signed) Charles Mills, Lexington, Mo.

He was supposed to represent the POOR man. He was supposed to see that we got a SQUARE deal.

Many times his decisions were alleged to be unjust. It may be possible that he acquired some of his wealth by selling the workers out.

Anyway, he as a representative of the workers many times has double crossed them, and today, we see the only hope for humanity in the union of the Soviet Republics, and in the great Third International of Moscow.

Today, we see people lacking bread, and others gouging themselves, yet we can do nothing. This is America, and the motto of our masters, is "to hell with the laws." Until the workers wake up and unite, and stop chasing shadows, they will have the same things happen as with Gompers, they will see their labor bosses laying up big stacks of kale, and the laborers going hungry, and they will see the capitalists bribing them, as that is the way things are put over in this wonderful land.—D. Yorkstone Hogg.

BIG STORE IN OMAHA GIVES UP 'THE GHOST'

Over 600 Workers Swell Ranks of Unemployed

OMAHA, Nebr., Jan. 1.—Burgess-Nash company, one of Omaha's largest department stores, closed its doors Saturday night for the last time. Over 600 employes have joined the ranks of the unemployed Monday morning. The manager, T. P. Redmond, goes to the Brandeis Stores as superintendent, the Brandeis Stores having bought the stock and fixtures of the defunct company.

"Where Do We Go From Here?"

After the farewell speech by the manager the reporter heard the varied comments of the employes. Many, especially among the older women, were visibly affected. Others took the closing in a matter-of-fact way.

"Where do we go from here?" hummed several girl clerks. "Oh hell!" sighed another so loudly that all within ten feet of her could hear.

The Burgess-Nash store was the second largest department store in Omaha, the Brandeis Stores being the largest. This store had been doing an apparently flourishing business for eleven years.

Twenty Years and No Pension.

Over 100 of the discharged employes had been with the company since it was organized. Many others had service ranging from twelve to twenty-three years. In the store, having worked for previous owners of the store. Many of those are beyond the age limit and will fail to find employment at that which they have spent all of their useful life.

THE WARS OF THE CAPITALISTS

War! We mean capitalist wars.

How do capitalist wars happen?

In the first place a capitalist society lives by robbing workers. Capitalists put workers to work and give them only a small share of what they earn. So workers can buy back only hat small share. But they produce very much more.

The capitalists must find some way of using up all these surplus goods that remain unsold. Otherwise they would not be worth anything. So they look around for new customers.

The capitalists go after territory where capitalism has not yet developed. Usually capitalists of other countries desire that same territory for purposes of exploitation. That brings about a war.

How do they get a war started? The schools fall in line because the capitalists own the government; the newspapers fall in line; the priests fall in line because they own the churches. All these agencies start at once preaching against the enemy country. They say everything bad about it. They say we must as "decent" "fair-minded" people save the people of that country. They say we must defend "democracy." Beautiful clothes to dress up their lies!

In a capitalist country the schools, churches and newspapers are used to spread lies. That is one reason why it is so hard to get workers to understand Communism. They are blinded to the truth by the lies with which their heads have been filled; by the schools when they were children; by the churches all the time and by the newspapers when they grow up. But its our job as Communists to use every method we can to show up these lies.

We Juniors of course understand the capitalists' game. So we Juniors will pave the way for understanding for all workers.

We Juniors are against war but we know as long as capitalism exists there will be wars whether we like them or not.

We know that since there are two classes, those who work and those who rob, we must wipe out the robber class.

We know that then there will be no more wars.

That is why the Communist revolution is entirely different from capitalist wars.

In the Communist revolution one worker will not fight another worker, his friend, but all workers will fight their biggest enemy, the capitalists.

It will not be a war to gain money for capitalists but a war to gain freedom for the whole working class, the farmers and workers.

After the revolution the workers and farmers will build their own government, a workers' and farmers' government.

There will gradually develop the Communist society based on one class, the producing class—everyone will live by working—no one will live by robbing.

U. -MEXICAN REACTION GETS BUSY

AS WE SE...

By T. J. O'FLAHER...

VICTOR BERGER cannot be terrorized by one of his readers. As is his custom he recently borrowed a column full of comment on prohibition from that admirer of luxury, H. L. Mencken's fulsome praise was the Mencken's fulsome praise was the once popular saloon Berger's correspondent must be an enemy of beer taverns. She objected to a defense of the outlawed, the far from dead institution.

THE socialist, Berger, far from being dismayed by such castigation in reply to the reader's protest, ran the remainder of Mencken's comment in his column (it saved him a lot of trouble) and wound up by attributing the alleged progressivism of Milwaukee, St. Louis, Toledo, Cleveland and other cities where the old German saloon flourished to such cities as Philadelphia and Boston were blue noses were more characteristic than red noses.

THE London Daily Herald regrets that secret diplomacy is again in the saddle in Britain since the tories kicked the laborites out of office. What the laborites were concerned most about was "democracy," not the emancipation of the workers. Had they been revolutionists they would have done what the Russian Communists did when they overthrew the Kerensky government, they would have opened up the archives and told the world the secrets contained therein. The MacDonald government government did nothing of the kind. It was as much concerned about protecting the robber empire as any of its predecessors. Now it is out in the cold, whining like a hungry whelp.

J. H. Thomas, former colonial minister and leading British labor faker in a recent speech, declared that there was no class war in the army. But a soldier writing in the Daily Herald takes issue with him. The soldier declares that officers were known to have nine course dinners in the trenches, while the fellows who did the fighting, the rank and file, were lucky to get a pan of stinking porter between them. And, continued the soldier, "I have seen lads limited to one water-bottle of water for a day and they had to put a drop in a vaseline tin lid to shave with, too, and could not brew a drop of tea, while officers could get a bowl of water at any time they liked." This was democracy in the war for democracy.

THE Chicago Journal admits that unemployment is one of the biggest single drains on industry and is the cause of more hardship than any other single factor, but it seems to be blissfully ignorant of the causes of the plangue. "There is something wrong when a man who wishes to work must remain idle in a community which would be glad to use the product of his labor," declares the Journal. Quite so. Quite so. The Communists have a cure for this "wrong" but they are rewarded for their pains by those who own the manger papers like the Journal and other capitalistic institutions with jails

THERE will be unemployment until the means of wealth production, owned by a few, are owned by the workers who now operate them and until wealth is produced for use and not for profit. So long as wealth producing machinery is privately owned it is inconceivable that the owners will allow that machinery to be operated only when such operation brings them profits. Thus we have shoemakers without shoes, tailors without decent clothes, and building workers without houses tho they are perfectly willing to work. Temporary remedies to relieve unemployment will be tried, when the workless army grows to large proportions but these makeshifts do not remove the cause. Only the overthrow of capitalism can do that.

LABOR LURED TO MINES BY LURID LIES OF SHARKS

Eastern Ky. Operators Fool Workers

By ALONZO WALTERS.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BLACKEY, Ky., Jan. 2.—Many of the miners working in the seven coal camps surrounding this town were lured to the Eastern Kentucky coal fields by labor agents and employment sharks in Alabama, Tennessee and other southern states, who said that miners were being paid 80 cents a ton for mining coal.

As a matter of fact the Roekhouse Coal Co., Elk Creek Co., Ulvah Co. Maison Co., John P. Gorman and Bertha Coal companies pay 45 cents per ton for digging and loading coal with an average height of 40 inches from which eight inches of "jack rock" must be removed without extra pay.

Rope Them In with Lies.

Many of the men are induced to come to this coal field by the deliberate lies, exaggerations and misrepresentations of southern labor sharks. One of the stories these labor sharks tell their victims is that eastern Ky. is solidly organized. A coal dealer in Chattanooga, Tennessee is excusing himself for charging exhorbitant prices for coal by telling his customers that the miners in eastern Ky. are paid $1.50 to $2.00 per ton for digging coal.

One miner here told me he worked eleven days for the Bertha Coal Co. and his total earnings for the eleven days were only $22.00. Out of this he had to pay for the cost of his powder, fuse, shooting paper, and assessments for doctor and blacksmithing upkeep.

The coal operators zealously guard the miners and prevent agitation which might lead to a higher standard of living. The mine superintendent of the Roekhouse Coal Co. drove an old man out of the coal camps who was distributing leaflets for a political candidate to whom the operators were opposed.

Wages Miserably Low.

The day rate in the coal mines is from $2.00 to $4.50 per day. The wages of other labor are down to the same miserable level. Construction laborers working on the new state highway are paid 30 cents per hour. Laborers working on the water line of Blackey are paid $2.40 per day Women work in the laundries for $1.50 per day.

Blackey is a little mining town in Letcher county 21 miles south of Hazard, the center of this field. The coal miners in every camp I have visited are strongly in favor of organization, but the United Mine Workers of American tunr a deaf ear to all their pleas.

REPARATIONS NOW WANTED BY AMERICA; CONTESTED BY ENGLAND

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Great Britain's note to the United States contesting the right of this government to share in the proceeds of reparations secured from Germany under the Dawes plan, was received at the state department today.

It was in reply to a note recently sent by Secretary Hughes, claiming the right in equity for America to share in these payments in satisfaction or American claims against Germany.

While the British reply was not made public, it is understood to be conciliatory in tone.

LET US DO UNTO FRANCE AS WE ALL DO UNTO GERMANY

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 2.—Considerable interest attached here to the suggestions of Finance Minister Clementel of France that the "Dawes plan" be applied to France's debts, i. e., they be figured on a basis of France's ability to pay.

Some administration officials take the view that France is entirely able to pay her debt if she would balance her budget, apply economy in government rigidly and cease spending huge sums on military and naval armaments. And they countered the "Dawes plan" suggestion today with sarcastic inquiries as to whether France would be willing to have an international control commission go into France and do these things, as the control commission under the Dawes plan is now supervising Germany's railroads and public utilities.

The French and other war debts are due for further discussion in the senate when it reconvenes after the holiday.

U. S. FINANCIAL POWER HOPEFUL OF WORLD RULE

France and Britain Being Conquered

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2. — While administration officials choose to throw an atmosphere of secrecy around the numerous "conversations" and undercover diplomatic moves now going on in London, Paris and Washington anent the whole foreign debt problem, there appears to be in official quarters here today more optimism that out of this activity American financial power will emerge victorious over European capitalists.

One-Half of One Per Cent!

The terms reported to have been suggested by Chairman Clementel, the French finance minister, are a 10-year moratorium on the French debt of $4,000,000,000 with an interest rate of one-half of one per cent, and all payments to be made within 90 years, did not strike a very responsive chord among officials here, but the opinion was expressed that they at least offer a basis or negotiation.

France, it is believed, is desirous of funding her American and British debts simultaneously and on the same terms, on the theory that by so doing the enormity of her obligation will be more impressive to the financial world and work ultimately to her obtaining more advantageous terms than if she dealt with Britain and the United States separately.

"Me Too," Says John Bull.

It is known, too, that Great Britain favors a three-cornered agreement, for the spectacle of France paying the United States first has aroused the British taxpayer to an extent that has made the British government extremely desirous of obtaining some sort of immediate settlement.

Whether the United States will consent to a triple-headed discussion of the French debt remains for the time being problematical. Officials here point blank refused to comment on this phase of the matter.

Scientists Tell of Damages Wrought by Tornadoes in 8 Years

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Tornadoes did more than $67,000,000 worth of property damage in the United States over the eight year period from 1916 to 1923 and resulted in the loss of 1,929 lives, Herbert C. Hunter, of the United States weather bureau, told the American association for the advancement of science, here today.

Arkansas, Dr. Hunter said, was the most frequent sufferer from such storms. Mississippi, however, paid a greater toll in lives lost with 257 while Illinois had the highest aggregate property loss totaling $7,500,000.

The only tornado during the period to take in excess of 100 lives swept over Indiana and Illinois.

Die Stealing Ride.

Sealed in a fruit car, the bodies of two youths, aged about 18, were found today when the car reached Chicago from Virginia. Fumes from a coke heater in the car are believed to have caused the deaths.

LIBERALS TELL BOSSES HOW TO SWEAT WORKERS

Economists Show Their Color at Convention

The convention of college professors, belonging to the American Economic Association, the American Statistical Association, the American Farm Economic Association, and the American Association for Labor Legislation, has adjourned after listening to some two hundred speeches by financial, labor, agricultural, and statistical "experts."

The professors, including a sprinkling of former members of the socialist party and followers of the LaFollette third party movement, discussed such subjects as how to get the most work out of the laborers at the least cost, how to prevent strikes, and how the employers can increase profits and reduce wages.

Class Collaboration in Action.

The packing trust was well represented in the convention, as were other powerful financial interests. C. H. Crennan, of the Continental and Commercial National Bank, was in charge of the publicity of the convention. L. D. H. Weld, of Swift and Co., was chairman of the committee on arrangements. The City Club, the Gordon Club and the Woman's City Club co-operated in the handling of the convention, and J. F. Bowman represented the association of commerce.

Victor A. Olander, secretary of the Illinois Federation of Labor, rubbed shoulders with the directors of large corprations, speaking before the American Association for Labor Legislation, which prevents all labor legislation it possibly can, on the subject, "Obstacles to Protective Labor Organization." Ernest G. Draper, treasurer of Hills Brothers Co., of New York, was chairman of the session at which Olander spoke.

Liberals, socialists and former socialists, LaFollette followers, and large employers formed a united front at this convention of bourgeois and petty bourgeois intellectuals which discussed the "problems of labor," only as they related to the interests of the exploiters and employers. Paul T. Cherington, of the J. Walter Thompson Advertising Co., of New York, spoke on "Advertising," and during the same session Howard Wesbster, of the University of Washington, formerly a member of the socialist party, disscussed "The Limit of American Population."

Olander, Florence Kelley, the former socialist, now in respectable company, and Elizabeth Christman, secretary of the Women's Trade Union League, spoke side by side with Thomas I. Parkinson, listed as "first official draughtsman of the U. S. Senate," and Columbia professor. Warren H. Wilson, of the Presbyterian board heuno missions, Burchard, "educational publicity specialist" of Chicago, and T. N. Carver, at present on Coolidge's agricultural commission which is telling the farmers that they are prosperous, joined with A. A. Goldenweiser, of the socialist party, in discussing how economics, agriculture and culture can be taught in the colleges so as to best please the employers and confuse the workers.

H. Parker Willis, of Columbia University, who writes articles for the largest Wall Street journals and John R. Commons, the "liberal," LaFollettes mainstay in Wisconsin and formerly a member of Frank P. Walsh's commission on industrial relations, in the common cause with the capitalists of this convention.

Piece Work Sweats Worker Better.

An example of the gush that was spilled by these "learned" professors at the convention is seen in the speech of Elliot Dunlap Smith of the Dennison Tag Manufacturing Co. Smith admitted that piece work is used solely to get the maximum production out of employes, and that "profit sharing" and "employe representation" are thrown to employes as sops to secure "increasing richness of voluntary effort in addition to the forced efforts of our workers," in a speech before the American Economic Association.

WOLL'S 'MONROE DOCTRINE' OPENS WAR ON RADICALS

Mexico Scene of Attack on Communists

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 2.—The treachery of the American Federation of Labor as exemplified by the remark of Matthew Woll of the executive council at the El Paso convention, that the unity established between the labor fakers of the American Federation and those of the Mexican Federation meant "the Monroe Doctrine of Labor," is bearing fruit in the vicious war upon Communist opposers of American imperialism in Mexico.

It was announced today that Morones, president of the Mexican Federation of Labor (C. R. O. M.) and a member of the cabinet of Calles, is filing formal protest with the Mexican government against the "presence" in Mexico of Communists.

"Says Morones to Morones."

Mr. Morones, the labor faker, files charges with Mr. Morones the government official against the "presence" of these Communists! Undoubtedly, after listening with judicial mein to the complaints of Mr. Morones the labor faker, Mr. Morones the government official will decide that the complaint is justified and recommend to President Calles that the "undesirables" be at once deported without further trial, as is possible under the Mexican constitution.

The leader of the Mexican federation have become the creatures of American imperialism jointly with the whole Mexican government under Calles. The bondage of the Mexican labor unions to the industrial and financial interests of Wall street was sealed by the subservience shown Gompers and company by the Mexican federation at El Paso and Juarez.

The "Pan-American" Labor.

Following that, the farcical convention of the Pan-American Federation of Labor was held at Mexico City, a "convention" of "Pan-American" labor, which united only these two organizations with one mythical labor body in Santo Domago, the entire continent of South America being conspicuous by its absence.

But in this convention also, the subjugation of Mexico, and—through the C. R. O. M.—of Mexican labor unions to the financial imperialism of the United States, was the most outstanding feature of the whole gathering.

Morones' Threat of Murder.

At this meeting of the labor fakers of Mexico and the United States, Morones made two speeches, both devoted to attacks on Communists in the labor unions, one speech threatening that he, Morones, would "stop at nothing" to oust the Communists, who oppose the betrayal of labor to its capitalist-imperialist enemies, from positions of influence in the unions. He even then intimated that violence and murder if necessary would be used to crush the Communist Party of Mexico.

The present action in beginning a war of deportations against the Communists, is, therefore, but the start of a bitter contest which Morones hopes will leave the workers of Mexico without revolutionary leaders or program to oppose his treachery.

Fears Anti-Imperialist League.

Particularly is the Morones gang in fear of the new Pan-American Anti-Imperialist League, which is organized to expose this "Monroe Doctrine of labor" and to rally—not two or three federations, but all—of the workers of ALL America, North, Central and South, to break the power of imperialist exploitation over the oppressed working classes of Latin America. This fight will not be won in a day, and Morones' early victories mean only the beginning of a long struggle.

SO HE ISN'T EITHER IN JAIL OR IN EXILE, BUT MERELY IN BED

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Jan. 2.—Leon Trotsky, Soviet commissar for war, still is in Moscow, a despatch to the Daily Express today declared. Health Commissar Semiashko told the Express correspondent that Trotsky was confined to his bed in his apartment in Moscow, suffering from catarrhal trouble, but that he was improving, said the despatch.

THREE MINERS KILLED IN BLAST AS TENNESSEE STARTS OFF THE NEW YEAR WITH FIRST MINE DISASTER

VASPER, Tenn., Jan. 2.—Three men were dead here today, the result of a gas explosion at the Vasper Coal company's mine.

The dead: Clayton Miller, 20; Tom Sims, 42; and Charles Woods, 55. The mine had been idle for several days and gas apparently had accumulated. It is thought a spark from the telephone battery caused the explosion.

We Must Get Behind Our Communist Fighters!

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—The state supreme court of Michigan has sustained the verdict against Charles E. Ruthenberg, secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, who was convicted not for his principles, but for attending a convention of the former Communist Party, which has been dissolved.

Comrade Ruthenberg's case will be appealed to the United States supreme court.

Our Comrades Are In Danger

John Lassen, editor of the Ujlore, the Hungarian revolutionary workers paper, stands before the capitalist court charged with "incitement to violence."

Thirty-two other revolutionaries in this country have been indicted for attending the same convention as Comrade Ruthenberg. Deportation warrants hang over the head of a large number of revolutionary workers who have valiantly fought in the class struggle of this country.

Hundreds of thousands of revolutionary workers and peasants are imprisoned in the capitalist dungeons of Europe and Asia. Their families are being persecuted—they face hunger and destruction.

The duty of every revolutionist and sympathiser with the revolutionary movement is clear: HELP must be provided for these fighters. FUNDS must be raised without delay.

Labor Defense Bazaar

The INTERNATIONAL WORKERS AID and the LABOR DEFENSE COUNCIL have arranged a Joint Bazaar to raise funds. This Bazaar will take place on February 13 to 14 at the Lyceum, 66th St. and 3rd Ave., New York city. There will be national folk dances and evenings, orchestras, sinking societies—refreshments galore.

Don't forget the date and place. You must attend and bring your friends along.

STRANGER DISCOVERS DAILY WORKER BUSY; AND HE GIVES A LIFT

The DAILY WORKER business office was busy—as usual.

And the DAILY WORKER business manager was the same—as usual.

Katherine, the doughty bookkeeper, was on the job.

Enter a large, black-mustached man, with a black fur collar bristling from his big overcoat.

"I want to see the manager," said he.

"The manager is very busy," vouchsafed Katherine from behind the switchboard.

"Just for a minute," he pleaded, opening the gate.

Katherine left her chair reluctantly to peek around the edge of the inner office door, which bore a villainous-looking black sign: "ONE WAS KILLED HERE."

She tiptoed back, whispering decisively over the fur collar, "The manager is engaged—he's having a conference!"

The tall stranger smiled sadly, but nonetheless waved Katherine aside and approached the menacing door, remarking: "I won't detain him long."

A minute later he emerged and was pleasantly bowed out by Business Manager Loeb himself.

Loeb then turned smilingly to Katherine, holding out a note, "Look what he brought!"

The note read: "Please accept the enclosed $10.00 to help insure the DAILY WORKER, our best fighting newspaper. With best wishes for a successful new year, from a freind of the cause."

"I guess he knows even more about our fighting," gasped Katherine. "I fought to keep him out."

JUNIORS, ATTENTION!

"SUPPOSE WE SPLIT WHATEVER FRANCE PAYS," SAYS BRITAIN

LONDON, Jan. 2.—Great Britain has no intention of encroaching on "the United States in the matter of Franco-American debt." The British foreign office made this quick and sharp reply today to a despatch from Washington which appeared in the Morning Post.

Great Britain made a "generous offer" to the United States saying it did not object to the United States granting a moratorium to France or a lower rate of interest than England was paying, the despatch recited. Great Britain would, tho, the despatch said, be agreeable to a plan whereby the United States would share with Great Britain all payments made by France.

"The treasury has made no such offer and we are not aware of any such offer being made to the United States," the foreign office declared.

It was added that such an offer undoubtedly would be "offensive" to the United States.

MINER TELLS OF SUFFERING THRU UNEMPLOYMENT

Thanks Daily Worker for Assistance

The distress among the miners of southern Illinois as a result of unemployment is graphically told in the following letetr received by Comrade Walt Carmon, circulation manager of The DAILY WORKER, from Ross White, president of Local Union, No. 3160, Sessor, Ill.:

"December, 26, 1924.

"Dear Comrade: I am in receipt of your letter of Dec. 23 in which you state that you are withholding shipments of some bundles, waiting for a reply from me. In answer I will say that I am still working as a relief committee for the needy miners here, and will say that I am very thankful to the DAILY WORKER and its readers for the many donations they have made to assist us here in our battle to try and keep the miners' children in clothing sufficient to go to school, which has been a great burden.

"I explain the necessities at the present time: I will say that the necessities are beyond my ability to explain, for there has been no work here for about a year and we have about 400 men who have been unable to find work any where.

"But the greatest need we find anywhere here is clothing for the children between the ages of 6 to 12 years and our greatest trouble is to keep them supplied with shoes and stockings, and overalls for the boys, for the mothers have managed pretty well so far to keep the girls supplied with dresses by cutting down the dresses of women which have been sent in the donation bundles.

"I will close by thanking you for the donations you have made to help us in this very distressing time and will thank in advance for anything you may do to help us in the future.

"Your Comrade, Ross White."

DISCARD POSTAL RATES ADVISED BY COOLIDGE

Suspended Men Deny New's Charge

WASHINGTON, D. C. Jan. 2.—The senate postoffice committee today adopted a new postal rate schedule, sharply reducing the Coolidge administration's recommended increase in second class mailing rates. The Steck-ing Bill, which embodied recommendations of Postmaster General New that postal rates charged to newspapers be greatly increased to pay for the increase in postal employes wages, is thus shelved. The vote will now be made on the postal increase bill, unless Coolidge is able to forestall consideration of the bill he voted by some new manuever.

The suspension of six postal supervisors by Postmaster General New, on the charge that they used money improperly in connection with the impending bill, is being made political capital in an effort to defeat the wage increase to the postal employes. E. H. McDermott, assistant secretary of the senate postoffice committee, is charged with accepting the money in return for his help in putting thru the bill. The men accused denied the charge, and declare they will fight for reinstatement.

Receiver for Traction Co.

ANDERSON, Ind., Jan. 2.—The Union Traction Co., of Indiana, operating 454 miles of interurban and city electric lines in the east, north and central parts of the state, was in the hands of a receiver today on petition of the Westinghouse Electric & manufacturing Co., which asserted the traction system was indebted to it in the sum of $74,192.09.

FASCIST DEFEAT IN PARLIAMENT EXPECTED TODAY

Corks Pop As Usual in American Colony

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Italy, Jan. 2.— Resentment against Mussolini's policy of suppressing opposition newspapers is growing, and a move to force Mussolini's resignation will be made when the chamber of deputies meets Saturday. Even newspapers in which no political articles have been printed have been seized and suppressed.

Hospitals Filled With Wounded.

Disorders continued in Florence. The hospitals there are filled with wounded following riots. The fascist bands which congregated in Florence from many surrounding towns burned the railroad station, and destroyed eight million dollars' worth of property. The masonic headquarters and the offices and printing plant of the newspaper Nuovo Giorgnale have also been burned, as well as the home of the lawyer Consoli. The fascisti have been unable to enter the prison and liberate fascist prisoners convicted of crimes. Many were killed in the fighting.

In the town of Prato, the fascisti succeeded in capturing the jail and liberating the fascist convicts. Deputy Farinacci, the fascist leader of Cremona has advised the fascisti to shoot down all members of the opposition. The government has completely lost control of the situation.

Impossible to Get News.

Rumors were being circulated that Rome is in a state of seige, but, the suppression of the opposition papers made it impossible to get authentic news. Those opposed to the fascisti were boycotting the fascist newspapers, which were the only ones printed.

Police are continuing their seizure of newspapres thruout the country. Homes of well-known leaders of the opposition are being searched. Soldiers are being given a free hand.

Fearing that the borders of the country are now against him, Mussolini has ordered the removal of nineteen prefects stationed at points along the border, and has substituted followers with whom he is personally acquainted.

An attempt will be made to form a new government when parliament meets tomorrow, with former premier Giolitti at its head.

The New Year's celebration was marred by the political disturbances, but in the American colony, corks popped as freely as usual.

Salandra Quits Committee.

ROME, Italy, Jan. 2.— Ex-Premier Antonio Salandra has resigned from the parliamentary finance committee, his action being regarded as indication that the liberals of the right have withdrawn their support from Mussolini.

A meeting of 20,000 Tuscan fascisti addressed by Deputy Ricci, demanded that Mussolini take "decisive governmental action, by dictatorial means if necessary, to crush the opposition." Ricci told the audience that obedience to Mussolini is conditional on how he carries out this demand.

The newspaper La Stampa, of Turin, the mouthpiece of ex-premier Giolitti, calls on all independent newspapers to go on a strike until the freedom of the press is again established.

MORE LIVES LOST IN THE CAUSE OF ECONOMY FOR RAILROAD MAGNATES

ROCKFORD, Ill., Jan. 5—One woman was killed, another was probably fatally burned, a man was seriously injured and a score of persons narrowly escaped today when an interurban electric crashed into an automobile hurling it into a waiting room which was fired by the blazing gasoline in the machine.

The dead woman was Miss Della Studebaker, 44. The injured are: Miss June Scott, 24, thrown clear of the wreckage into the flames, and Oscar Hultberg, secretary and treasurer of the Forest City Metal and Heating Co., driver of the car.

HOW TO PAY? THAT IS ONE BIG QUESTION

Commodity Pay Means Unemployment Here

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—A mystery which has cloaked the more or less secret arival in this country of Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, and Sir Alan Anderson, a director of the same bank, was further deepened today by the conflict ing reports bearing upon the purpose of their visit.

The rumors narrowed down to the following:

1. That they had come to discuss with American officials the problem of inter-allied debts.

2. That they would arrange in New York to float a big loan for Germany

3. That they were concerned only with putting England back on a gold basis.

The English bankers were not accessible today. Nobody seemed to know what had become of them after they had stepped down from the gangplank of the liner Caronia late Tuesday afternoon.

The most reasonable explation which was accepted by Wall Street was that Norman and Anderson would arrange for future payments of interest on Britain's debt to America to be paid, if possible, in some new way.

Heretofore it has been the custom to pay the interest in American securities, but this has been having the tendency to depress the market by dumping such large quantities. If paid in manufactured goods, American workers will soon be suffering great unemployment and the employers seize the opportunity for a new open shop drive.

Kansas City South-Slavic Branch Votes For Minority Thesis

KANSAS CITY, KANS.—The thesis of minority of the central executive committee was indorsed unanimously by the South Slavic branch of Kansas City, Kans., after thoro and careful discussion. The resolution declared:

"The South Slavic branch of Kansas City, Kans., indorsed the tactic of the use of the class farmer-labor party slogan, as a correct united front maneuver on the political field to build a mass Communist party.

"We urge the comrades thruout the country, to study the thesis of both sides, and make your own careful judgment on the same."

The branch put all its strength into selling the policies they have on hand to "Insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925." We have already sold $45.00 worth.—Organizer, S. B. Bross; secretary, Mike Sarar.

Easton, Pa., C. C. C. Votes Unanimously For Minority Position

EASTON, Pa.—At the last meeting of the city central committee held Dec. 28, after a thoro discussion on the thesis of the majority and minority, the minority theses were approved by a unanimous vote.

At the same meeting a decision was adopted making it compulsory for every member to buy a DAILY WORKER POLICY.

Philadelphia Hungarian Branch Unanimous for Minority.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—The Hungarian branch of this city unanimously endorsed the minority theses after a thorough discussion.

PIONEER IN RADIUM RESEARCH DIED AS MARTYR TO SCIENCE

BORDEAUX, Jan. 2.—Professor Emile Bergonie died today, a martyr to science. He was a pioneer in radium research and recognized for his work with an award of the grand cross of the legion of honor.

His experiments with the dangerous element necessitated first the amputation of fingers, then both his hands, then both his arms. He refused to abandon his work and was engaged in directing radium research up to the time of his death.

Another Year Must See Progress Toward Real "Peace in Industry" Here

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

TODAY, the kept press gives space and prominence to the views of the banker head of the department of labor at Washington, James J. Davis, of Pittsburgh, on the outlook for "Peace in Industry" during 1925.

This is part of the great flood of hokum with which the nation's subsidized sheets have been regaling their unthinking readers with the beginning of the new year.

Davis says: "We approach the new year with confidence and gratitude."

Which is true! The election of the two strikebreakers, Coolidge and Dawes, keeps the capitalist state intact. Green succeeds Gompers as head of the American Federation of Labor, and big business is assured that labor's officialdom will make no militant drive against it. "We"—the capitalists—are confident of their position.

• • • •

Which, of course, is a lie. The past year has seen, and the coming year will see a growing jobless army. It is estimated that at least 10,000,000 workers suffered part time unemployment during 1924. The close of the year saw the jobless on the march in several of the larger cities.

• • • •

Davis says: "The conciliation service of the department of labor is being used more and more toward the prevention of strikes and lockouts."

Which is true! But this service is always used on the side of the employing interests. Strikers always learn that the agents of the government, brought in during strikes, turn out to be the best supporters of the interests of their exploiters. They will learn that this is true because the government is a capitalist government. It is the government of labor's class enemy.

• • • •

Davis says: "The immigration policy of the country is being placed on a workable selective basis."

That is also very true from the employer's standpoint. Workers are being selected in other countries, who will best serve the interests of the American open shoppers, and brought here. They are taught to become "good citizens," which means obedient slaves to scab employers. Davis again urges legislation for enrolling "the aliens who are in our country," which is his old scheme to maintain an espionage system over foreign-born workers. Davis isn't sure even of his "selective" system. Even the most brainnumbed workers may rebel under the tyranny of the American industrial machine, he fears.

Davis says: "We should also try in the coming year to make industry less dangerous to the life and limb of the worker."

Which is ghastly humor! The new year starts with the first fatal mine blast in the non-union coal field of Tennessee. Others will occur with certain regularity during the whole year, just as last year, because capitalism is in the saddle, confident of its position. Human life is cheap.

• • • •

The whole working class must turn the tables on the American ruling class this new year. "Peace in industry," on New Year's Day, 1926, must not mean the degrading peace of capitalist industrial bandits, inflicted on labor at the price of labor's wellnigh complete submission. Another new year's day will arrive too soon to find the real "Peace in Industry" that will come with the complete victory of labor, but great strides can and must be made in the days, the weeks and months ahead before another year dawns.

That progress can only be made by struggling under Communist standards for the working class principles that will ultimately emancipate labor.

REACTION RAISES ITS FIST AGAIN IN THE UNITED STATES

NEW YORK, January 2.—The confirmation of the sentence upon Comrade Ruthenberg, secretary of the Workers Party, with the threatened reopening of the case of Comrade Foster, chairman of the Workers Party, indicate that the arrest of Comrade Lassen, editor of the Uj Elore, is not an isolated fact. Many revolutionary workers in the United States have deportation warrants hanging over their heads. Secretary of Labor Davis wishes to put the foreign workers in the United States under the control of the police department, which could recommend deportation at once, in case the conduct of these workers does not please the capitalist government. Even if these workers have become citizens, their naturalization papers can be canceled and they may be deported.

May Remove 5-Year Limitation.

The latest proposition is that of Representative Johnson to remove the five-year limitation upon the right to deport foreign workers. Thus it is evident that a concerted plan to destroy the militant revolutionary labor movement is under way. This is only part of the general attack that the capitalists of this country are soon going to launch against the organized labor movement.

The arrest of Comrade Lassen is one of the links in the chain of facts. Comrade Lassen, who did trojan work in the revolutionary movement of Hungary and fled from that country to the United States to get out of the clutches of the white terror, has been arrested by the United States government, charged with "inciting violence." The United States government is greatly interested in the Horthy government of Hungary, a ward of the league of nations.

Only a short time ago, Hungary was granted a loan of $5,000,000 by American bankers. The masses of Hungary, both workers and peasants, are in a state of revolt. Even the social-democrats, who have been staunch supporters of the Horthy government, are going into the opposition. Scandalous scenes have taken place in the Hungarian parliament, resulting in the ejection and arrest of social-democrats.

Only One Hungarian Communist Paper

The Uj Elore is the only revolutionary paper that the workers of Hungary have been able to read, for all revolutionary papers in Hungary have been suppressed by the bloody Horthy regime. The American government, working hand in hand with the vile Horthy government, is now attempting to cripple the Uj Elore, by the arrest of its editor.

If the workers of this country do not protest against these plans of the capitalists and the capitalist government, the general offensive of the bosses against the workers will be successful.

Lassen must be freed from the grip of the capitalist law! Horthy and Coolidge must not be allowed to claim another victim! This means that every militant class-conscious worker must be mobilized to the defense of Comrade Lassen. This means that all sympathizers must be brought together to support the defense of Comrade Lassen!

This battle must be first fought out in the capitalist court. It will cost a large sum of money—and only the workers will furnish it.

Every Revolutionist Must Help.

It is your revolutionary duty to do your utmost at this time. Show your solidarity by contributing as only proletarians will contribute, when a fellow worker is attacked. Get your friends and sympathizers with the proletarian movement to contribute.

The Labor Defense Council, New York Division, 208 East 12th St., New York City, appeals to all workers to send in their checks as soon as possible, in order that the defense may not be crippled for funds.

ANISE TELLS HOW RUSSIA SETTLES LABOR DISPUTES

Capitalist Causes for Strikes Are Absent

By ANISE.

(Federated Press Staff Cor.)

MOSCOW, Dec. 22—How are labor disputes settled in Russia? The recent report of the All-Russian Central Council of Labor Unions gives interesting information on this point. Strikes take place occasionally, tho not nearly so often as in other countries. They are usually settled in favor of the workers.

Disputes Come Before Committee.

When disputes arise they are first considered by the committee on rates and conflicts, with equal representation on both sides. When the dispute cannot be settled the unions usually demand arbitration before the courts of the department of labor.

Managers Removed.

The policy of the unions regarding strikes in governmental establishments is based on the principle that in a workers' country, strikes cannot be considered a normal method of settling disputes, and should be resorted to only against bureaucratic distortion of government functions, in which case the strike should end not only with the settlement of the matter in dispute, but with the removal of the managers responsible for the bad conditions. Only in a small number of cases, 11 strikes, involving small establishments, were the unions forced to use the strike. In the other cases of dispute they called the management before the arbitration courts.

The usual causes of strikes in capitalist countries, number of hours, recognition of the union, working conditions, are absent in Russia, where union recognition is a matter of course and hours are fixed by law. Delay in payment of wages has been the chief cause of strikes in government establishments.

Strikes in private establishments have had a different character, occasionally concerning questions of work-ers' rights and working conditions. But private industrial establishments are few in number and do not employ many men.

Labor Fakers Work for Bosses.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 2.—Proposal for an increase in second-class postal rates, to provide for an increase in wages of postal workers, will be opposed by the International Typographical Union, it was announced by President James M. Lynch at the union headquarters here. The union's executive council authorized letters to members of congress, appraising them of the union's attitude.

Liberals Tell the Bosses How to Sweat the Working Class

"In order to secure the maximum of effort all manufacturing concerns rely to some degree upon the compulsion which they are able to exercise thru the power of discharge," Smith stated. "But in most large concerns the watchers themselves are employes, and it is usually found that the watcher needs watching. In the large concerns, therefore, more attention is being paid to schemes which seek to compel effort impersonally. Piece work and accurate measurement of production bring in large returns above the amount of effort personal supervision is able to secure. The introduction of piece work rates in one form or other invariably has brought about a substantial increase in production, often reaching as high as 50 to 100 per cent."

Company Unions Defined.

Smith then spoke of the latest attempt of the employers to increase production, which he termed "The winning of voluntary effort from labor." "Various methods have been tried to bring this about," said the tag manufacturer. "Among them being profit sharing and employe representation."

The "economists" gathered at the convention of the American Economic Association, have thrown off the mask of "trying to aid the workers," and have openly revealed that the much advertised company unions, welfare associations and profit sharing plans are devised solely to increase the profits of the employers. The American Economic Association is a bosses' organization, which has its roots in the colleges, and which helps the employers in their problems of keeping labor quiet and of securing an adequate supply of cheap wage slaves.

ALBERT THOMAS MET WITH SCORN IN JUGO-SLAVIA

Greeted With: "To Hell With Traitors"

By M. ROHAN.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

AGRAM, Jugo-Slavia, Jan. 2.—Albert Thomas, head of the labor department of the capitalist league of nations, was here visiting his friends and cousins of the second (socialist) international. Everywhere he was greeted with coldness and contempt by the rank and file workers.

When Mr. Thomas stopped at the front of the syndicalist building on the 55 Jellica, there were no parades for him. There was no reception committee to meet him, excepting for himself and a few other traitors of Jugo-Slav workers. When he walked out from his automobile he did surely hear the mighty voice of the Agram workers when they resounded: "Down with the social patriots! Down with the agents of the bourgeoisie! Down with the traitors! To hell with capitalists! To hell with Mr. Thomas and the Amstedam International. Long live Moscow! Long live the Third International!"

We wonder that Mr. Thomas who is president of the international labor bureau and the best agent of the bourgeoisie, should venture to come here. Thomas during the "war for democracy" was the president and minister of munitions in the French government and faithfully served the international slaughter of workers the world over.

With that reputation gained for his services to the bosses he is busy visiting here to plant the seed of pacifism. But he is wasting his time for the seed of pacifism will not grow here. The workers are preparing themselves for a class war against their enemy. No Thomas, Hasenbach or Vandervelde will succeed in pacifying the rank and file in the Communist organization.

Mr. Thomas, it would be much better for you to go right into Pashich's office and shake hands with him because your hands are equally damp with the hard blood of the European workers. You know that there is nothing for you in Agram or anywhere where the workers are getting together and preparing for the bitter struggle against the tyranny of this century.

"The American Boom Is at an End . . ."

Says Prof. E. Varga in his "The Decline of Capitalism," a pamphlet just received from Europe. Also: "Will not the militaristic-imperialist policy of Poincare gain the upper hand, which fact would lead to a new catastrophe of the mark, since the Rentenmark, an artificial creation, would by no means be able to withstand such a blow?" KENTUCKY COAL MINERS GET THREE WAGE CUTS IN YEAR, BUT BOSSES RAISE FOOD PRICES AND RENTS

Editor's Note.—The following is another article on the working conditions that prevail in the non-union coal mining fields of eastern Kentucky. Alonzo Walters, a native of this region, is now touring the coal fields and will send in the DAILY WORKER exclusive reports on conditions now in existence. In a previous article the DAILY WORKER told how William Green, now president of the American Federation of Labor, ignored appeals of these miners for an organizational drive, when Green was acting as secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers.

The following article, as told to the DAILY WORKER by Alonzo Walters, deals with conditions in the Hazard, Kentucky, coal fields.

HAZARD, Ky., Jan. 2.—The coal miners in this field have received three wage cuts in the past year, altho the prices for goods which the men are forced to purchase in the company stores have remained the same, and even increased for some articles of food and clothing.

Hazard, Kentucky, is the center of what is known as the Hazard coal field—one of the richest undeveloped coal fields in the world.

It includes all the mountainous country lying along the banks of the north and middle forks of the Kentucky river. The field is in the infancy of its development. The first railroad, a branch line of the Louisville and Nashville, was built in this region in 1912. Coal mining is the only industry of importance and thousand of wage-workers are absolutely at the mercy of the men who own the mines. The coal operators are in a position which enables them to fix wages at their own figure as well as the prices of the necessaries of life which the miners are forced to buy at the company stores. The miners are also forced to live in company houses and pay rent to the coal operators, who frequently raise the rents.

The coal operators fix all the conditions under which the miners work and whenever a miner complains about this condition he is marked as an "agitator," fired, evicted and blacklisted thruout the entire field. The wages are so low that none of the miners, many of whom have large families, are enabled to leave the coal fields. Most of them, therefore, are careful about incurring the wrath of their masters.

The coal camps which Walters visited this week pay starvation wages. The Algoma Block Coal company of Lothair, Ky., pays coal loaders 40 cents per ton; the Columbus Mining Co., of Allais, Ky., pays 43 cents per ton. The coal seam of the latter is only 40 inches high. In two of the coal seams, No. 6 and No. 7, which are located half way up, and at the top of Hazard mountain range, respectively, the companies pay 50 cents per ton.

One of the most vicious practices of the coal companies in the Hazard field is that which compels the men to do "pillar work." This work is extremely dangerous and takes numerous lives every year. The miners must, for the same wages as ordinary work, dig and load the pillars of coal which are left to support the top of the shaft after the rest of the coal has been dug out of the "mine entry." The hill often falls in behind the pillar diggers, after these pillars have been removed.

In addition to digging and loading the coal the miner has to dig out 18 inches of "jack rock," and much overhead slate, for which the company pays absolutely no compensation. Very often the slate falls on the coal miner and kills him before he has had time to remove it.

Out of the meager wages mentioned above, the miner must pay from his salary every month, numerous charges and "grafts," insisted upon by the company. The miner must pay 50 cents every month for blacksmithing charges, $1.00 per month for the doctor bill, $2.25 per keg for blasting powder, eighty cents per roll for fuse, ten cents per pound for carbide and ten cents for a paper of cartridges.

The officials of the company further rob hundreds of dollars from the miners' pay-roll by the use of inaccurate scales in weighing up the coal mined by the men. It is common knowledge that the miners must load 3,300 pounds of coal before they are credited with a ton by the company.

Wages for day-men range from $2.60 to $4.50 per day, the latter figure being paid only to the most highly skilled workers such as motormen, wiremen, trackmen and blacksmiths.

The company store, at which the miners must buy, charges exhorbitant prices for the bare necessities of life. A pair of light overalls costs the miner $2.50; canvass gloves, 50c; flour, $1.50 per 24 lbs. sack; coffee, 60c per lb.; ham, 50c per lb.; sugar, 15c per lb.; breakfast bacon, 50c per lb. Independent stores near the Allais coal camp sell the above articles from 20 to 40 per cent cheaper, but declare they have no coal miners for customers because as soon as the miners begin digging at the company store they are fired. The miners are almost all so heavily in debt to the company store that they are practically slaves to the coal operators.

Lothair and Allais once had large, strong local unions, but both were allowed to go to pieces for lack of protection from the district officials of the United Mine Workers of America.

NEW CALENDAR IS URGED WITH THIRTEEN MONTHS; 28 DAYS EACH

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—The resolution of the economic and political science section of the American association for the advancement of science advocating a new calendar year was approved by the general council of the association today.

The changes proposed in the resolution would create 13 months of 28 days each, making the first of each month fall on Sunday. The last day of each year would be known as "year day" and would be added to the last week as an eighth day.

The general council also approved the program of oceonographic research work mapped out by the navy department to be conducted during peace time. The new month would be named "Sol."

Jail Communists in Norway for Urging Soviet

CHRISTIANA, Norway, Jan. 2.—Three of the leading Communists of Norway have been arrested, charged with "high treason" for expressing their opinions in leaflets issued during the recent Norwegian elections.

The government objects to statements that the Proletarian must crush the constitution and replace it with a Soviet government." The state solicitor is endeavoring to induce the court to rule that mere membership in the Communist Party is treason.

VAN LEAR AND CRAMER WAR ON COMMUNISTS

The Latter Win Election Against Fakers

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 2.—The bitter fight waged against the Communist by the slimy fakers in the Twin Cities can be seen by an article that appeared in the Daily Star, Van Lear's discredited rag, in which the reactionaries were urged to combine and defeat the Communists in the elections for officers in the painters union.

The campaign of the fakers and their pen prostitutes was a total fizzle. The Minneapolis Labor Review edited by that cheap hireling Robly D. Cramer, who is now licking the boots of the labor crooks, and getting stepped on by both sides, joined with Van Lear's paper in denouncing the Communists. The Communists won the fight. The whole left wing slate was elected, filling every office in the union."

This is what Van Lear's subsidized organ had to say:

Progressive members of Painter's union No. 186 hope to wrest control from the Communists and return to the ideals of the American Federation of Labor as expressed by the late Samuel Gompers, at their annual election Saturday night.

In opposition to the Communist slate, the progressives have nominated a ticket headed by Sherman Stought for business agent. Mr. Stought was business agent of the union for three years and built it up from 500 to 1,700 membership. The issue will be fought out Saturday at the union headquarters in the old Daily News building, Sixth street and Fourth avenue S., where the polls will open from 1 to 8 p. m.

Progressive members of the painters' union affirm that since Mr. Stought's post went to two successive Communists, the union membership has dwindled to 600 and that the employers as well as the painters refuse to recognize the present communist officials. The progressive nominees have agreed to run the union along the lines laid down by the American Federation of Labor to the Minneapolis Trades and Labor assembly.

In addition to Mr. Stought for business agent, the progressive ticket carries the names of H. M. Peterson for president, E. G. Bartlett for recording secretary; Carl Erickson for treasurer, D. M. Renner for vice-president, and D. M. Renner, Dan Duncan, H. M. Peterson, Oscar Gunderson and W. Skelton for the executive board.

CO-OPERATIVE GROCERIES IN BITTER FIGHT

WASHINGTON. — Whether the neighborhood grocers who are now organizing their own purchasing societies in order to compete with the wholesale departments of the chain grocery stores will be able to survive is a problem.

In a recent decision on wholesale prices made by a cracker factory to the chain stores, the commission held that it can't protect the co-operative buying concern formed by the little grocers in getting as low a price as the factory gives to the chain stores.

Few of the consumers who patronize grocers in a typical American city know of this development. When the chain store corporation can buy the whole output of factory after factory, and when the factory is compelled to choose between a guaranty of full-time operation at a set price and a chance of production at only part time, while selling goods slightly higher to independent jobbers or grocery stores, he gives a low price to the chain store concern.

The corner grocer then federates with scores or hundreds of others of his kind, and tries to make the jobber and factory manager see that dealing with the chain store is not his only salvation. It is thru the formation of these wholesales among grocers that the show-window competitions and general toning-up of independent grocery houses has been forced during the past two years. They are fighting in many cities for their lives.

In Memoriam—Lenin

On the 21st of January the workers the world over will hold memorial meetings for Nicolai Lenin, the leader and fighter for the liberation of the laboring masses. In connection with these memorial meetings, on Thursday, Jan. 15, a moving picture, "In Memoriam—Lenin," will be shown in the Gartner's Independent Theatre, 3725 Roosevelt Road. Two other pictures will also be shown: "Potikushka," and "Soldier Ivan's Miracle."

Admission will be 50c. Tickets are for sale now at Russian Technical School, 1902 W. Division St., Russian Co-operative Restaurants, 1734 W. Division St. and 760 Milwaukee Ave., at 166 W. Washington St., Room 307, at the DAILY WORKER, 1113 W. Washington Blvd., and by all members of the Technical Aid Society, U. S. S. R.

Movies for Workers

Big Towns Schedule Movie Shows.

While the educational value of working class movies is equally great wherever they may be shown to working class audiences, their financial basis is to be found in the larger cities, where, with but slightly smaller expense the greatly increased crowds turn in much heavier cash returns. During the coming months several of the most important of these "basic" shows are being held and all members and sympathizers of the Workers Party as well as all supporters of the International Workers' Aid, should make it a point not only to attend themselves but to bring as many of their shopmates and friends as possible. No other working class affairs are scheduled to conflict with these dates at which "The Beauty and the Bolshevik" and "Russia in Overalls" will be shown.

Omaha, Nebr.

Alhambra Theater, Jan. 12, an active and experienced Workers Party committee on the job.

Cleveland, Ohio.

Every past movie venture in this city has been a success and this time the committee expects to break all records. The show will be held, as usual, in Engineers Auditorium, St. Clair and Ontario streets, Saturday, Jan. 17. Matinee and evening and again on Sunday, Jan. 18, evening only. Admission is 50c.

Boston, Mass.

Another unbroken line of success will be added to by the showing at Symphony Hall, Jan. 16. Everyone knows that these Symphony Hall movies are the classic radical event of the season.

Cincinnati, Ohio.

Labor Temple, 1318 Walnut St., will again be the scene of a workers' film show on Jan. 12.

Chicago, Ill.

The long awaited Chicago showing of "Beauty and Bolshevik" will take place Feb. 5 at Ashland (Carmen's) Auditorium, continuous 5 to 11, admission 50c, joint auspices I. W. A. and DAILY WORKER.

"THE MEN WHO OWN AMERICA," FORUM LECTURE

Leland Olds to Speak on Sunday Evening

An old saying has it that "He who plays the fiddler calls the tune." But it is even more true to say that those who own control. This being the case, it would be interesting, wouldn't it, to know who owns America?

That ownership and control must go together becomes self-evident with anyone who gives the subect a moment's thought. But who are they who own America? Is it that mythical entity called the public? Is it Rockefeller? The Wall Street financial kings? And how much do they own of America?

The age of monoply has played strange tricks with government. It might be thought that if those who own America control America, then those who are rich and control 65 per cent, let us say, of all property in America have only 45 per cent of the social control, the power to order the machinery of government according to their will. But the power of monopoly is greater than its proportion of ownership—much as that is.

It is a very interesting subject, and if you want to hear it explained in detail by one who knows what he is talking about, come to the open forum of the Workers Party at the lodge room of the Ashland Auditorium next Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. Leland Olds, economic expert of the Federated Press will speak on "The Men Who Own America."

Take surface cars to Ashland and Van Buren, or Metropolitan "L" to Marshfield station. Come early and be sure to bring your friends.

The Monroe Doctrine at Work

"The Monroe Doctrine of labor," voiced by Matthew Woll at El Paso, is already going into action in Mexico with the proposed expulsion of Communists.

The Communist Party of Mexico has an influence among the Mexican workers far out of proportion to its membership. The Communists were the first to arm against the reactionary de la Huerta and dozens of them gave their lives for the Mexican republic. They organized the workers and peasants for resistance to the landlord and oil magnate financed uprising. Among their dead are many members of the Young Communist League.

The Mexican Federation of Labor has been captured by the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor. It is part of the machinery of the imperialist domination of Mexico and it follows therefore the same anti-Communist policy that the American Federation of Labor adopted by orders from the House of Morgan.

The foreign-born Communists in Mexico are few in number. The party is a native party. It has grown out of the struggles of the Mexican workers and peasants. It is a part of the Third International as are all Communist parties. It has no interests apart from those of the masses of Mexican workers and altho the few foreign-born members of the party may be deported, Communism will remain and so will the party.

The complete surrender of the Calles government to American imperialism is shown in this latest announcement and its meaning for the Mexican masses will be understood by them.

What better proof do we need that the Communist slogan of a united front of workers and peasants against imperialist robbers is the thing that modern capitalism fears most of all?

Unity from below against oppression from above the answer of the parties of the Communist International to the murderous game that imperialism plays with the lives of millions as its toys.

Unity of the American and Mexican workers against imperialism and its "labor" lackeys is the answer of the American and Mexican parties to the latest outburst of reaction.

Dangerous Comedy

The French Minister of Finance Clementel replies to the protest aroused in American financial circles by the elimination of the war debts from the budget by a request for a Dawes plan for France.

The Dawes plan, being based theoretically on the ability of Germany to pay certain specified amounts, the French minister declares that this same principle—the ability to pay—be applied to France and all other nations owing money to the House of Morgan. He is careful to state, however, that the system of control installed in Germany, is not included in his Dawes scheme for France, because, he says, "France is not a refractory debtor."

Caught in the act of repudiation it seems to us that the French capitalists are just about as refractory a class of debtors as has come within our ken. It happens tho that they were on the winning side in the world war, that they are assiduous hunters of the Bolshevik and are never backward in reminding our native babbittry of the debt they owe to Lafayette. For any or all of these reasons they have not been subjected to the pressure put upon the German businessbund nor have they had war waged upon them as has the Soviet government of Russia which openly repudiated the debts incurred by the late czar, for which the lives of the workers and peasants of Russia were security.

The exchange of notes now going on between the American government of the House of Morgan—which wants money—and the French government—which want to keep it—is one of the high comedy features of international diplomacy.

It is comedy, however, with more than a spice of danger. Were it not for the tremendously complicated and shaky condition of capitalism the world over the threat of war in this debate, which has all the high moral tone of collection agency literature, would be too grave to be laughed at.

As it is, the controversy with France is merely one of the many factors indicating that the House of Morgan, with its far-flung financial lines, will sooner or later find war necessary to whip its debtors into line.

Against that time, ont far off because of the intensive expansion of American imperialism, the Workers (Communist) Party of America urges the working class of America to prepare.

Child Labor and Communism

A new plot of the Communists has been unearthed and every organ of reaction in the nation is clamoring for the defeat of the child labor amendment. The Communists are the staunchest fighters in the struggle to free the child slaves, ergo, it is a Communist plot to break up the home—by depriving parents of the power to exploit the labor of their children or to sell their labor power to more efficient exploiters.

The Insurance Field, a publication devoted to the interests of the insurance companies, in a recent issue, publishes the following editorial comment:

> If the United States is to be made a Communist republic this twentieth amendment is a forward step toward it. Government as father and mother to children instead of their natural parents would be exchanging bonds of human love for political slavery. With government control come government schools and government employment. The largest number of children under the age of 18 need practical education in self-support more than book education of which they were usually incapable.
> Let the government keep out of the family as well as out of business. When a people are not capable of family responsibility they are not deserving of existence. No Communism!

The above editorial is proof that in certain instances the interests of a capitalist class as a whole triumph over those of its respective sections. The prevention of child labor would redound to the profit of insurance companies by lessening the risks of life as well as property, but the desire for unlicensed exploitation by the whole capitalist class is stronger than the group interest.

The demand for full government maintenance of school children put forward by the Workers (Communist) Party of America as the only method under capitalism of overcoming the pressure of poverty that drives children of workers into industry is responsible for the new outbursts of rage in the capitalist press like that quoted above.

The Communists, with their customary disregard of niceties of ethics displayed by the labor fakers and liberal sentimentalists in their class collaboration schemes, have put some punch into the agitation for abolition of child labor. They have forced a lot of slobbering "saviors" of children to either get behind a genuine slogan or to get out of the campaign altogether and acknowledge that they were against child labor because it was good advertising.

Whoever is against full government maintenance of the children of workers and farmers while they are of school age is against the abolition of child labor and on the side of the child robbers for whom the poverty of working class parents is a source of joy and profit.

Oil and Art

A writer who styles himself a revolutionist wrote an article recently under a fictitious 100 per cent American cognomen, in which he paid a tribute to the death of a bourgeois art collector. This hare-brained radical justified his eulogy on the theory that "all lovers of art are friends."

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is a lover of art. He proves it by giving one million dollars to the New York Metropolitan Museum of Art. The gift was in oil stock and the yearly income from the gift will approximate $32,000.

J. P. Morgan is an art collector and a generous donor to art museums. The same is true of most of the millionaires who grind their slaves under the iron heel in order to wring more profits out of their toil, so that the exploiters can enjoy all the luxuries they and their wives and affinities crave for and still have plenty left over to gratify their desires to pose in public as benefactors and supporters of the arts and sciences.

The workers are art lovers, or if not could be, provided they had the necessary knowledge to appreciate true art. But those of them who have the knowledge have not the leisure to enjoy art. They have more than enough to do trying to sustain life. Art is not for the working class under the capitalist system.

Only when the workers become the ruling class and begin the task of abolishing all classes by abolishing capitalism will those who carry the burdens of the world on their back be able to enjoy the work of artists which is now the luxury of the parasitical class.

Are Facts Doomed?

A British scientist is responsible for the remarkable statement that in the near future the world will come to a realization of the fact that there is no such thing as a fact. He says: "Belief in definite facts has been a hindrance to the development and realization that there are no facts. Thru this understanding we will be led to more rapid progress in wireless, radio science and atomic knowledge."

The Briton made other statements, but none so interesting as the above. Until the arrival of the cross word puzzle the most puzzling problem in life was to distinguish between a fact and an alleged fact. Figures and facts were the playthings of liars and the masses were obliged to take what they got or live in a vacuum.

But in the event of the British scientist's prediction being fulfilled, the world can breathe easier and the millions of people who live by collecting facts of doubtful parentage may stop breathing.

Thesis on Reorganization of Party on Basis of Shop Nuclei

Adopted Unahimously by the Centra Executive Committee, Workers Party

1. The Fifth Congress of the Communist International declared that one of the conditions for Bolshevization of the existing Communist parties in every country, thus making it possible to become and to function as mass Communist parties, was their reorganization on the basis of shop nuclei. All parties of the Comintern were instructed to begin the work of reorganization on that basis so that as soon as possible the shop nuclei or shop nuclei branch may become the basic party unit.

2. The Third National Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party endorsed the proposal for reorganization to make the shop nucleus the basis of our organization and instructed the central executive committee to develop detailed plans for carrying out this decision at the earliest possible time. While the convention of our party decided that for the immediate future, dues should be continued thru the branch, the Communist International stated that dues must be paid thru the shop nuclei, and these instructions are therefore being carried out. Steps have already been taken, in a few instances, as experiments, in actual organization of shop nuclei, and these have worked out in actual practice quite well to demonstrate the superiority of the shop nuclei over the present branch form of organization.

3. The central executive committee of the party realizes, however, that the reorganization of the party on the shop nuclei basis in its entirity, is of such a nature that it has to progress carefully in order not to break up prematurely or endanger the existing party structure to such an extent as to make it incapable to carry on the necessary work of the party. The party recognizes that our membership is made up of workers speaking different languages, not all of them also speaking the common language, English, well. The reorganization will be started first in the most favorable industries where the workers, to some extent, exercise shop control, as in the coal mining, needle trades and a few other industries, and on the basis of experience gained in these industries proceed to the others.

WHY WE MUST ORGANIZE ON THE BASIS OF SHOP NUCLEI.

1. A Communist party must have its roots deep among the masses of the workers and particularly among those workers who because of their relation to capitalism and their experiences under the capitalist system will be the first to revolt against capitalism. These are the workers employed in the basic industries, in the shops, mines, mills and factories. Thru the shop nuclei as the basic party unit, the party is always in the closest contact with the workers.

2. It is the workers in the shops who must be moved into action against capitalism under the leadership of the Communist Party. Thru the organization of shop nuclei, we create the conscious feelers which enable us day by day to reach and have contact with those workers whom we must bring to the support of our movement.

3. The shop nuclei will also serve as a medium to draw new members to the party from the ranks of industrial workers who must be the backbone of a Communist party.

4. Thru the shop nuclei form of organization our party will be more secure against the attack of our enemies. Shop nuclei branches cannot easily be destroyed and driven apart. The members meet day by day in the shops and factories, they can continue their work and retain their organization as long as they work in the shop and be in a very strong position to frustrate all efforts to destroy the Communist movement. When the shop nuclei form of organization is fully established, our party will become a manifold stronger factor in the labor movement, than under the present territorial organization form, which is an inheritance from the social-democratic parties.

HOW TO PROCEED TO ORGANIZE SHOP NUCLEI.

1. District organizations, city central committees and branches, shall take up the question of the organization of shop nuclei. Where city central committees exist, the work must be under the guidance and direction of the city central committees which should create special committees to direct this work.

2. The industrial registration of the party, which is just being completed will serve as the foundation for the work of organizing shop nuclei. Committees in charge of the work must make a survey of the industrial registration for its territory for shop nuclei possibilities. No exact number has been fixed for the organization of shop nuclei; three or more members working together in a shop can organize into a shop nucleus.

3. When the committee in charge of shop nuclei organization finds that there are three or more members working in the same shop or factory a meeting of these members shall be called and measures taken for organization of shop nucleus. It does not matter if those members belong to different language branches. If they work in the same shop and conditions make it possible, they will be organized into a shop nucleus. The committee in charge will determine possibilities for shop nuclei organization.

4. At all times, comrades working in the shops should organize or make arrangements to carry on propaganda in the shop and prepare themselves to be able to function as a regular shop nucleus in the future.

DUTIES AND POWERS OF THE SHOP NUCLEUS.

1. The shop nucleus, when organized and functioning satisfactorily for two months becomes the basic unit of the party with all the powers of the present party branches and shall receive a charter from the national organization. During this period, the nuclei members shall have the right of voice and vote in the branch, having the same status as exempt members. But the shop nuclei members shall, from the inception of the shop nucleus, including the intermediary period, pay their dues to the shop nucleus financial secretary and receive stamps from him.

2. Shop nuclei organized of workers not members of any territorial branch may be chartered at once as the basic party unit, with full party powers.

3. Where there are city central committees, the shop nuclei send delegates direct to the city central committee. When the shop nucleus is chartered as a regular party unit, such delegate shall be seated with the same rights as other delegates. During the intermediate stage of its organization, such delegates shall have a voice but no vote.

4. When the shop nucleus has been chartered, its members have the right of voting on the party questions in their shop nucleus in the same manner as formerly in the party branches. They then of course no longer have powers in the branch except as mentioned.

5. The shop nucleus makes the shop in which it is organized the field of its agitation and propaganda, distributes and sells literature, circulates subscription lists for funds, carries on the trade union, industrial and political work of the party, and in all other ways supports the party work.

LANGUAGE BRANCH MEMEBRS AND THE SHOP NUCLEUS.

1. The language branch members who are transfered to membership in the shop nucleus, retain, at the same time, their membership and rights in their present language branches insofar as the questions of their language sections are concerned. They have the right to vote on all questions affecting the language sections in their language branch. Since, however, they vote on party questions in the shop nucleus they have no vote on party questions in their language branch.

2. A record shall be kept of language branch members transferred to shop nuclei and paying their dues thru the shop nuclei and shall be reported thru the regular party units to the national office on report systems provided therefor. The national office shall at the end of each month report to the respective language section bureaus the amount of dues received from such members and pay the share of dues collected to the respective language section bureaus.

3. At a later stage of development of the shop nuclei organization, when a sufficient number of shop nuclei are organized and functioning in the shops and factories in a certain district, these shop nuclei shall be combined into a shop nuclei branch. This shop nuclei branch will consist of all the members of the shop nuclei within a designated territory and of isolated members employed in that particular territory. When such shop nuclei branches are formed, they become the unit which sends delegates to the city central committee.

The Fourth National Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party of America adopts the above plan of organization of shop nuclei and instructs the incoming central executive committee and all other subordinate party units to carry on an extensive propaganda and education among the party membership so that they will become acquainted with this plan of organization and understand why the reorganization of the party on the shop nuclei basis is necessary, and thus make it possible that it becomes an accomplished fact on the largest possible scale in the near future. The central executive committee shall, however, exercise good judgement and caution in proceeding with the reorganization plan so that the party units and the party as a whole will not suffer but benefit from the reorganization of the shop nuclei basis.

YOUNG WORKERS DEMONSTRATE ON INTERNATIONAL LIEBKNECHT DAY

Commemoration meetings and demonstrations will be held in every city and town thruout the country on International Liebknecht Day, Sunday, Jan. 11, under the auspices of the Young Workers League.

Elaborate advertising has been conducted by the league and it is expected that the meetings this year will far exceed those of previous years.

The following are only a few of the many meetings that have been arranged. Future items will give a complete list of meetings:

CHICAGO, ILL.—Northwest Hall, Jan. 11, 8 p. m. Speakers: Max Shachtman, Alexander Bittelman and Peter Herd.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Eagle Temple, Broad and Spring Garden, Jan. 10, 8 p. m. Speakers: Oliver Carlson, H. M. Wicks and Ludwig Lore.

DETROIT, MICH.—Jan. 11, 8 p. m. Speaker: John Williamson.

CLEVELAND, O.—Jan. 11, 8 p. m. Speakers: Nat Kaplan and Oliver Carlson.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Star Casino, Jan. 11, 2 p. m.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—Jan. 11. Speaker: John Edwards.

PITTSBURG, PA.—Jan. 11. Speaker: Max Salzman and others.

SOUTH BEND, IND.—Jan. 11, 2:30 p. m., Workers' Hall, 1216 W. Colfax Ave. Speaker: Harry Gannes.

GARDNER, MASS.—Jan. 11. Speakers: Sid. Bloomfield and others.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., AND ERIE, PA., RECOGNIZE THE IMPORTANCE OF SUPPORTING "DAILY" TO THE LIMIT

(Special to the DAILY WORKER)

The meetings in Rochester, N. Y., and Erie, Pa., addressed by Alfred Wagenknecht, insurance campaign director for the DAILY WORKER, took on added interest because the membership present clearly understood that the building of the party, especially the English speaking membership of the party, depended to a very large extent upon the building of a large DAILY WORKER circulation in these cities.

In Erie the comrades were interested firstly in completing their quota in the drive to make the daily safe for 1925. Policies were sold at the meeting and branch members promised to carry the message left with them by the speaker back to their branches. Secondly, the members present wanted to know what methods were the surest in getting new subscribers for the daily. And then also, interest was displayed in securing the more active support of the local members in all tasks of the party.

The discussion eventually resulted in a full realization that an alive local, an active membership, increases members, is to a very great extent based upon firstly, having a powerful well edited English daily, and secondly, in securing a wide circulation for it. That supporting the DAILY WORKER with finances at once, and then making a conscientious effort to secure at least 500 subscribers in Erie was an immediate and most important task of the Erie comrades was agreed upon.

In Rochester the situation is very similar to that in Erie. The Rochester local accepted the selling of insurance policies for the DAILY WORKER and the increase of circulation for the city, as an immediate and necessary task. Insurance policies were sold at the meeting and a report of the branch members present showed that the Russian, Lithuanian, Ukrainian and English branches had already sold about $100 worth of DAILY WORKER insurance. Here the membership and the speaker also engaged in a short discussion upon the question of increasing the activity of the local comrades. And as in Erie, building the DAILY WORKER was pointed out as one of the best antidotes for inactivity.

Sixth All-Russian Trade Union Congress

Comrade Zinoviev's Speech. Delivered at the Sixth All-Russian Trade Union Congress.

COMRADES, all of us are still under the impression of the celebration of the seventh anniversary of our revolution. One naturally recalls some of the events at the beginning of the revolution, particularly the first All-Russian Trade Union Congress held between January 7-14, 1918, which too, I addressed on behalf of the central committee of our party. Everybody was then drunk with the recent victory. But at the same time all the delegates of the congress were full of alarm and uncertainty as to the next day. At the congress itself we had to struggle against the mensheviks and social revolutionists who were still holding some important positions in our trade union movement.

One naturally feels like contrasting the present situation with that of the past. Of the alarm, uncertainty, and fear for the next day not a trace is left. The trade union movement of our country, which has passed thru several difficult stages during these years, has finally entered on a wide road, has finally assumed its proper place in the system of organizations effecting the proletarian dictatorship, has completely finished with the hesitation of menshevist and social revolutionary character, has grown and matured to an unusual degree. If we compare the present situation not only with that of the first congress, but even with the situation at the fifth congress, which took place two years ago, we see confident and comparatively rapid progress. At the fifth congress we were all pleased to assert that our state industries were producing 25-27 per cent of the pre-war amount. We noted this as the first relatively important success. Now at the sixth congress, our state industries have reached 50 per cent and in some places have even moved beyond this limit. For the first time at the thirteenth congress of our party we were able to state that it was time to think of leaving the pre-war level behind.

A the fifth congress the wage question was one of the most troubling questions. The mensheviks and their sympathizers were moving about and around this question on tiptoe, hoping that the trade union movement of our country would be tripped up on this question. This is still a very delicate question; two years ago it stood out very sharply. Our trade union movement has marched past these difficulties in a large measure, and has overcome the fundamental obstacles. Our formula at the fifth congress was slow, but sure and steady raises of wages. During the past two years the trade unions have worked in line with this formula, and now the entire mass organized in trade unions can see that it did not remain merely on paper.

The autumn of 1924 was the first autumn in our history without any economic conflicts even of a local nature. This is of tremendous significance to the destinies of our country, and it is one of the fundamental and most significant proofs that the trade unions have worked well, that the party directing the Communist activities of the trade unions was following the true course. Since February, 1923, the trade unions have changed to voluntary membership. The party and the non-partisan trade unionists have put into this campaign all the energy and all the enthusiasm that was necessary for a solution of these problems.

I heard some statements to the effect that the present congress is not face to face with any serious questions of principle. This is both true and untrue. There are no serious questions of principle in the sense that we do not have to discuss anew the role and importance of the trade unions. The place of our trade unions in history has been fixed and verified by the experience and collective wisdom of the advanced section of the working class. But this does not in the least mean that the present congress is not faced with a large number of extremely important questions of principle. I shall take the liberty of touching upon some of them.

I think that the most important of these questions is primarily the question of international unity in the trade union movement. This question is most intimately inter-linked with the present international situation, and vitally affects the working class of our country. We have all of us become convinced, during the last few years, that international matters cannot be considered as luxuries, third courses, as questions that ought to interest only the heads. Not a bit. Every rank and file worker sees that the international labor movement has entered such a stage that where the events taking place in one country most vitally affect the interests and struggle of the workers of the other countries. That is why to us the international unity of the trade union movement is not a desert or a question within the jurisdiction only of the leading heads. No! This is one of the fundamental questions most closely related to the everyday problems of the workers' life and to the basic questions of the trade union struggle.

What we are going thru now is the beginning of a new phase of world bourgeois reaction. Only very recently the fifth congress of the Comintern produced an exact photographic picture of the period that has been dubbed as the "democratic-pacifist era." MacDonald was in power in England, Herriot in France; Vandervelde was expected to assume power in Belgium, and Davidovitch in Jugo-Slavia. Similar changes appeared to be imminent in a number of other countries. The Comintern was right when it stated that that was the beginning of a certain democratic pacifist wave. However, the fifth congress did not stop there, but prophecied that this "era" is nothing but a historic masquerade of the bourgeoisie that stakes its money one day on the social democrats and the next day on the fascists, with equal success. Some of us were tripped up by this "democratic-pacifist era," taking it for something genuine and imagining that we would have to change the tactic of the international labor movement. Now the facts have decidedly overthrown their point of view.

What has taken place during the last few days is the beginning of a new wave, this time not of pacifism, not of democracy, but of the blackest bourgeois reaction. If only several months ago the bourgeoisie was playing pink, it has now again changed to black. The victory of the black hundred republican party in America headed by Coolidge, the victory of the black hundred conservative tories in England, headed by Baldwin, represent the beginning of a new chapter of the blackest world reaction. There is not the least doubt that we will see similar things taking place in other countries as well in the nearest future. One need not be a prophet to foresee that Herriot's star in France is already setting and things will happen this way: either he himself will turn black (laughter) which is quite possible, or some black little fellow will be moved to his place. The first is more probable.

We see similar processes in the small states. There are a number of countries representing the vassals of the big capitalist powers. They want to be in everything like their masters. Especially characteristic in this respect is Jugo-Slavia. You remember that as soon as the democratic-pacifist wave was victorious in France and England, it was effected in Jugo-Slavia by the advent of the more or less democratic Davidovitch ministry. Now the reverse is true. The bosses had hardly come to power, hardly put their stake upon black, when a black hundred government, headed by Paschish, appeared in Jugo-Slavia. We observe the same in a number of the central European states which live by the reflection of the big imperialist powers.

We are thus facing the beginning of a new phase of world politics, of the darkest imperialist reaction. Yesterday the capitalists put their stake upon the social democrats and mensheviks, today they are again staking upon the blacks, which will not prevent them, of course, from staking again upon pink-yellow or yellow-pink, or some similar color (laughter). This shows the serious instability of the capitalist regime. It is no longer what it used to be before the war, when one and the same capitalist party ruled for decades, and when what is now considered a storm in a tea cup, a change of liberals by conservatives, or vice versa, was considered an event of tremendous moment.

The characteristic feature of the present phase consists of the fact that the bourgeoisie of the most respectable countries, such as England, are forced to rule by such extremes; today they stake upon pink, tomorrow upon yellow; today they admit to power mensheviks, almost workers, tomorrow the most inveterate tories. This, doubtless, is a symptom of degeneration, of the instability of the capitalist system. All these changes in policy do not, of course, pass with impunity to the bourgeoisie, the outwardly things appear rather smooth. See how "easily" MacDonald was superseded by Baldwin. At 4 p. m. MacDonald was invited to Buckingham Palace and he personally announced to the king that now that the elections are taking place he resigns. The king said: "Alright, your resignation is accepted." (Laughter) At 5 p. m. Baldwin was invited and asked whether he would not agree to form a new government. He kindly agreed. "Alright, I'll form a new government." (Laughter).

The change of government passed painlessly for the bourgeoisie, but among the people all these perturbations pass very far from painlessly or tracelessly. The workers took it all very seriously, and have developed a real appetite for power. We see how the English workers behaved during the election campaign. True, they have not yet got used to Russian methods (applause), but I hope they will get used to them (applause). However, they behaved, to tell the truth, not quite like gentlemen as is the custom in England; at some meetings the workers were putting their fists before the lords, expressing quite an unambiguous desire to make some corrections in their physiognomies. (Applause, laughter). This is something new in British history, and it shows that not only in the election campaigns are the broad working masses becoming imbued with strong passions, and that among them events do not pass off so smoothly as in Buckingham Palace.

The richest bourgeoisie in the world, that of Great Britain, finds it impossible to rule any longer by the old methods. Our business, the business of the leaders of the working class, is to watch these episodes, to watch how the bourgeoisie passed from one extreme to another, and to take corresponding measures.

The diplomats of the Second International have often tried to stir up distrust for the Russian trade unions and for our party. They ask why do the Russian Communists and trade unions all of a sudden evince a desire for the unity of the world trade union movement. Comrades, I think that were there even no other reasons, the one that I have mentioned at least exists. The new phase of the blackest world reaction is a sufficient reason why every honest working class militant should say that under this situation international unity of the trade union movement is as necessary as the air that we breathe. If from America and England, from these mighty imperialist countries, a new eruption of reactionary lava is bursting forth, if there the masks have been removed, if the masquerade with the "labor government" has come to an end, and black clouds are directly moving upon us, is it not natural that the advanced elements of the working class respond to it, first of all by a hearty, fiery desire to unite the entire world proletariat on a minimum program, in order to have a united international trade union movement and be prepared to put up the united front against the world bourgeois reaction? The riddle is easily solved. For us the tactic of the world labor movement is determined first of all by the class struggle. We did not for a moment believe in democratic-pacifism, that has become a favorite in some circles. In the midst of this "era" we said: "Comrades, see they are presenting you with a cake, only in order to replace it with a whip. They show you pink today, but tomorrow they will show you the blackest reaction." We know that this democratic pacifism is a brief episode, we know that the bourgeoisie would show its teeth, and this has now taken place. And now, our militant cry to all the honest workers, irrespective of views and tendencies, to all the devoted sons of our class, is: Let us unite, in order to fight this black reaction, to meet this pressure, to break the black line, to deal a blow into the heart of the enemy, and to make the greatest strides along the path which in our opinion would unite the workers of the world. (Applause). This is our answer to the question why we are so powerfully stressing the slogan of international labor unity, that has so unequivocally been formulated by the Comintern and by the recent congress of the R. I. L. U. I hope that it will meet with the same mighty response at your congress as was evoked from the best workers of the entire world (applause).

It appears to me that the biggest obstacle in the way of international unity is represented by the social democratic leaders of the German trade unions, the most inveterate trade union bureaucrats of Germany. In them lies the chief obstacle. Of course, there are plenty of secondary obstacles. M. Jouhaux is not one whit better than the German bureaucrats; still the main group that knows just what it is doing, that knows for what object it is splitting the international trade union movement, that does not act blindly, but pursues deliberately the tactic of the bourgeoisie, are the leaders of the German trade unions. And we address the British workers in the first place, in order that they might know that if any one prevents international unity, that if anyone represents the chief obstacle, it is the German social democrats, the bureaucrats of the German labor movement, who are ready to do anything and everything

Shop Committee Movement in the Needle Trades

By JOSEPH ZACK.

THE deeper we get into work amongst the masses of the proletariat, the more able are we to perceive the shortcomings of former methods and forms of organization. We are now entering upon the most important phase of transforming our organizations from social-democratic forms, inherited from social democracy and developed in the era of capitalist expansion and social reformism into those fit for the era of decay of the capitalist system, our era, where capitalism cannot any longer give the reforms and concessions it could easily give during its period of health, and whence as a result the workers can maintain their standards and progress only thru merciless sharp class struggle.

This sharpening of the struggle, which is the breath and life of our movement, needs new forms of organization and mobilization of the proletariat en masse just as it requires different tactics. Hence, the need of a party based on factory nuclei, and industrial organizations based on shop committees, which is in line to fit the proletariat organizationally for the seizure of power and the overthrow of capitalism.

The world's trade union bureaucracy have long ago realized the meaning of rank and file organization of workers to their fortunes and future. It is no wonder that whenever the workers made an attempt in that direction it is bitterly fought by the bureaucracy. It arose in various forms in a number of countries and under different names, such as shop stewards, shop delegates, factory councils, Betriebstrate, et. It was as a rule an attempt by the rank and file to hit at their exploiters, to defend themselves over the heads and despite the reactionary leadership. It arose as a spontaneous resistance to the class collaboration and selling out tactics of labor's business men, and not having a firm, clear force like the Communist Party behind it, decentralized and undisciplined as it usually was, it was overcome or petered out. Nevertheless, it was the natural form of organization of resistance against the bureaucracy and the exploiters, organized at the place of work. Amongst the labor organizations in the United States, the needle trades witnessed probably the greatest agitation and experience along this line. And the militants of the needle industry have undoubtedly developed the clearest conception of this form of organization, altho they conceived of it mainly as a union reform affair and not as a means to organize the unorganized. The Bolshevik revolution in Russia, which had a tremendous effect upon the needle workers, gave the shop delegate movement in the needle trades a tremendous impetus. The biggest local of the I. L. G. W. U., the old Waist and Dressmakers' Local 25 with 22,000 members, actually attempted to put it into practice (shop delegate system) and participation at the shop delegates' council meetings and enthusiasm ran high. This shop delegates' council, which was sanctioned by the officials under pressure as an advisory body, naturally assumed more and more power for itself so that the bureaucrats forced their dissolution with the present president, M. Sigman, as the executioner. The agitation for the shop delegates' system (which advocated organization in the shop in the form of a shop committee and shop delegates from all shops to form a central body of the trade to manage the union) continued unabated until the T. U. E. L. took the field, when the capturing of executive boards and local offices became the main objective in the first flush of victories. A mild form of shop organization, such as shop chairmen, occasional shop chairmen meetings, price committees, etc., has been officially practiced in the needle trades for many years. The bureaucrats were, however, careful not to let it go beyond that. The program of the Needle Trades Section of the T. U. E. L. adopted three years ago gives an interesting picture as to how the unions' management could be conducted under the shop delegate form of organization and why it is necessary and advantageous from a union point of view. It gives a precise and simple idea as to how a centrilized union can function with a shop committee system as its basis.

"The sharpening of the struggle between the workers and the employers necessitates a much broader participation, a more intense activity on the part of the masses in behalf of the union. With the present small number of active members it is not only difficult to maintain what we have, but well nigh impossible to make progress for the future. The number of conscious active workers must be increased many times the present number. This can, however, not be accomplished without reforming considerably the present bureaucratic system of management and leadership of our organizations. This system must give way to one that will make mass interest and mass activity on the part of our membership possible. The structure, the internal machinery of our unions must be changed to establish the broadest contact with the masses in the shops. We must strive by all means in our power to eliminate all the artificial devices set up by the present bureaucratic system for the purpose of breaking and counteracting the will of the membership.

"In order to accomplish this, our form of organization must be changed so as to make the shop the basic unit of our unions. The present form of our organization of local unions as the basic unit has definitely outlived its effectiveness, and cannot longer serve the purposes of militant unionism.

Remnants of Craft Divisions.

"The craft local as a basic unit of organization may have served a useful purpose when the unions were first organized and the membership small. It may have filled the need at the time when craft unionism was the dominant form of organization in the needle industry. Now it is a remnant of the days that shall never come back, days when craft locals were autonomous with power to negotiate wages and working conditions, separate and irrespective of the other locals in the trade.

"Our industry has outgrown this stage long ago. And our unions have been forced to abandon the old divisions into innumerable powerless craft locals when making agreements with the employers. Changed conditions in the industry has made it necessary to act along trade lines instead of craft, the result was the creation of joint boards which act for all the workers in the trade. The creation of these joint boards, however, has deprived the locals of many of their powers and made them more dependent upon the higher bureaucracy. The membership in the locals being far removed thru the innumerable subdivisions, craft locals, sections, etc., from the present main body of the union, the joint board, and hence unable to directly influence it, is little interested in the impotent quibbles that take place at the local union meetings. The result is an irrepressible lack of interest in the affairs of the union. Usually a local can boast of no better attendance than 5 to 10 per cent of its membership. To the average worker today, the union is an unwieldy machine far removed from his daily life in the shops. He considers it as merely an office where he pays compulsory weekly dues, the interests of the shop appear to him separate and distinct from the interests of the union. Due to these state of affairs within our own organizations it has become possible for the paid officers to usurp much power. In order to establish a closer bond between the shop and the union, to arouse the initiative and individual activity of the rank and file in behalf of the union, to enable the workers to have a more direct influence upon the affairs of the union, to abolish the fruitless organizational craft divisions and do away with the numerous useless craft locals, to truly make effective the principle of 'one shop, one union' the militants will fight for the introduction of the shop delegate system.

What is the Shop Delegates System?

"The shop delegate system will do away gradually with the craft local as the basic unit of organization and substitute in its stead the shop. The workers in the shop being then the basic unit of the organization of the union will then take up all matters pertaining to the union at their regular shop meetings, and thru their delegates to the shop delegates council will be able to bring their wishes directly to the assembled delegates of all the other shops in the trade. The shop delegates' council elected on a proportional basis representing all the workers in the shops of that trade will have full power over all questions of the trade and the management of all union affairs in the trade, acting for all the workers in the trade. The workers in the shops thru their delegates will have the possibility to directly influence and to be represented in this important union body, instead as now being forced to accept the rulings of unrepresentative and often manipulated joint boards which they have no means to influence nor to participate in its deliberations. The executive board and its officers elected by the shop delegates' council will run the machinery of the union, receiving dues, complaints, handle business agents, etc., under the direct supervision of the shop delegates' council.

"Delegates to national conventions of the unions will be elected on a proportional basis by delegates from the shops elected for that purpose, and convening in a city convention of a trade. This simple machinery will not only arouse the interest of the thousands of workers in union affairs but will enable the workers to exert a greater and a more direct control over the affairs of the union. It is a reform that will invigorate our unions and make them more efficient bodies in dealing with the problems faced by the workers in the shops."

We in the needle trades perceived even then that were we placed tomorrow into complete control of the bureaucratic apparatus of the unions as constituted, the first thing we would have to do is to bring about amalgamation at the bottom, in the shops, thru shop committees, and thru them to abolish bureaucratic machinery completely and create one from the bottom up that is fit for the modern struggle in modern industry. If amalgamation from the top would be effected tomorrow with the present bureaucratic apparatus remaining at the bottom, it would be a structure built upon sand. The machinery of the labor lieutenants of capitalism conceived by the needs of the past, maintained for the purpose of choking the fighting spirit, of putting a damper on the class struggle, of faking and manipulating the masses much the same as other bourgeois "democratic" methods, cannot serve the purpose of militant struggle against exploitation.

The shop delegate system, as above indicated, proposes a method of shop organization by each craft or division of a factory proportionately electing its representatives to a committee of the shop (factory), shop committee, Betriebsrate, to represent the workers in all affairs in the shop, as well as in the general shop delegate body controlling the union (shop delegates' council). It proposes to substitute completely the present bureaucratic apparatus of union management and control, which so wonderfully serves the purposes of the bourgeois union bureaucracy, and which, while appearing democratic, like bourgeois democracy can easily enough at any time be legally or illegally transformed into a dictatorship over the workers, as experience has already amply demonstrated, and substitute for it a rank and file system from the bottom.

To us in the United States, where the little that is organized is in the dead grip of the blackest bureaucracy on earth, ideologically bankrupt, organizationally stagnant, and in the process of decay, the problem of organizing the many millions of unorganized is our major problem, this we can only solve if we have a machinery at our disposal not dependent upon the whims and dictates of the bureaucracy, a machinery effective in the places of work. Therefore, the problem of shop committees in unorganized territory or industries is of primary concern to us. Moreover, our policy of entrenchment in the existing unions has reached a degree where its further progress depends upon an even much stronger entrenchment in the factories, mills and unions. We have shown results in agitation, but now, at the pain of stagnation, we must have a machinery under our influence in unorganized and organized industries that will make it possible to press forward to leadership in economic struggles, strikes, etc., linking our efforts and organization in unorganized as well as organized trades in a new, direct, and even more powerful effort on the economic field to break the stagnation and reactionary leadership in the American labor movement. I am firmly convinced that it can be done. If with such a handful of party members (not more than 10 per cent of the party membership even now) participating in our union work we could create, under the auspicces of the T. U. E. L., such results, how much can we do by putting all our members in unorganized industries to the task with the whole party and T. U. E. L. strength behind it on the basis of the shop nuclei. It goes without saying that the party shop nuclei must be the heart and basis of the shop committee movement in the unorganized as well as organized industries. Shop nuclei and shop committees go hand in hand, one without the other is unthinkable. Therefore, the problem of shop committees hinges upon the reorganization of the party on the basis of shop nuclei.

It is neither necessary nor advisable to go into details as to how the shop committee machinery should be linked up or function. Suffice it to say at this time that it is practically the same problem as the one to be solved by the shop nuclei, which will be the basis and parallel to it. The form of organization will have to be adjusted in each case to the peculiarities of the industry and methods of production, but in all industries, including the building trades as well as railroads, the shop committee system can be applied effectively. Most of the committees, especially in the unorganized industries must in the preparatory stages of their activity do their work semi-secretly until the situation is ripe in each instance either for strikes, organization campaigns, etc.

For the needle trades industry, where our movement at present is infected by puny local union politics ad nauseum, the shop committee movement will revive and regain its old militancy as soon as the party gets into action along these lines.

Let me say in conclusion, that shop committees are the road to the organization of the unorganized, the most effective weapon against the bureaucracy—it marks the transition from a policy of propaganda to one of action. It is amalgamation from the bottom. It is the weapon for direct action, class struggle, and victory. That's the meaning of shop committees.

GITLOW IS NOT A LIAR

By ALEXANDER BITTELMAN

I AM not going to call Gitlow a liar. Why? Because the case of the majority does not need to resort to "proof" of this kind. Poor Gitlow is perfectly welcome to the use of all the epithets he can lay his hands on. They will avail him little. Our membership is already beginning to open their eyes to the menace of "farmer-labor Communism." The party will not be fooled into a policy of opportunism. And no amount of mud-slinging and billingsgate will deter us one iota from telling the party exactly what we think of our farmer-laborites.

What Happened at the Hungarian Convention?

Gitlow says Bittelman plainly lied about what happened at the Hungarian convention. A serious charge—isn't it?—expressed in rather strong language. But what was it that happened at the Hungarian convention? The Hungarian convention accepted the position of the minority. This is what I reported to the C. E. C. on the Hungarian convention. It is a lie? No, of course not. Gitlow will be the last man in the world to deny it. Then, what else did I say? I said that by accepting the position of our farmer-laboristic minority, the Hungarian convention proved that it is in captivity by the farmer-labor ideas. I said that the Hungarian convention was so obsessed with farmer-laborism that it could not imagine the further development of our movement without this slogan.

This is what actually took place. Does Gitlow disprove it? Of course not. How could he? To disprove this would mean to deny the fact that the Hungarian convention accepted the minority position. All I said in my published report was that by accepting Comrade Gitlow's "Communism" the Hungarian convention went wrong. It went opportunistic. The fact that Gitlow "captured" the convention means that the convention was captured by farmer-laborism. Isn't that so? And that was all I said.

Quite naturally this does not please Gitlow. But, then, permit me to ask a question: Is it my duty to please Gitlow, or to tell the party the truth?

My Second "Lie".

In my report to the C. E. C., I said that in order to disprove my charge of opportunism Gitlow asked the Hungarian convention to examine the personnel of the majority and minority. He attempted to prove that because some of the leaders of the minority, at one time or another, went to jail for their activities in the movement, therefore, they are not opportunists.

Gitlow calls this a lie. And how does he prove it? Read the following portion of his article;

"What I said was in answer to the charge that the majority calls the minority liquidators. In reference to this I asked the delegates to examine the personnel of the minority and their service in the Communist movement to determine whether or not the minority is made up of comrades who want to liquidate the Communist Party. I pointed out that the minority was composed of members who had been active in the left wing of the socialist party and in the organization of the Communist Party of the country. I stated further that these comrades had fought for the party, defended it in all kinds of situations, and had gone to jail for it. These are facts. Bittelman and the whole majority cannot deny them. As a further example let us take Comrade Ruthenberg. Comrade Ruthenberg is of the minority. The majority brands him as a liquidator. Yet, after having spent three years in prison for the Communist Party he is again, as a result of the Bridgeman trilas, facing a ten year sentence for his loyalty to the party."

Did you read the above carefully? What is its meaning? It is this: Because the minority were active in the left-wing, because they were active in the organization of the Communist Party, and, finally, because they had gone to jail, therefore they cannot be charged with opportunism and liquidation.

Now, comrades, what do you think of that? I address myself now particularly to those of you who have seen jails, the exile, the torture, and have looked death into the face not once but many times—what do you think of this sort of an argument? I ask our Russian comrades, the Polish, Jewish, Lithuanian, Letts, and all those who received their revolutionary baptism not in the socialist party of Hillquit and Berger, not in the state legislature at Albany, N. Y., but in the revolutionary struggles of the proletariat of Russia between the years of 1903 and 1911—what do you think of a Communist who undertakes to defend his policies by reference to his jail record and to the sacrifices that he brought for the movement? Did Lenin do it? Did you ever hear such arguments from Zinoviev, Stalin, Kamenev, etc?

Why, my dear Gitlow, if it is a matter of jail records, we can give you all you want, only we want to be sure that you will honor jail records under the czar as highly as you honor some jail records under President Wilson. Also that you will give us credit for exile into the "cold" portions of Russia, and for participation in armed struggles against czarism, and its agents. And mind you, we were doing all this as proletarians, as workingmen, as members of the Social-Democratic Labor Party of Russia, of which, Lenin, Stalin, and Kamenev were members and leaders.

The reason it never occured to us to refer to our jail records as proof of the correctness of our policy, is because we do not believe in this kind of bunk, which is cheap self-advertisement, and smacks of the methods of bourgeois salesmanship. we thought we were members of a Communist Party and not traveling salesmen to advertise chewing gum.

My Third "Lie".

I reported Gitlow as saying, in substance, that because the Russian Communist Party initiated the movement for and participated the building of Soviets, although the Soviets were non-partisan, non-Communist political organizations, therefore, the American Communist Party may also initiate a movement for and participate in the building of . . . a farmer-labor party which is also a non-partisan, non-Communist, political organization.

Gitlow does not like the way I reported his argument at this point. He dislikes it so much that he calls it a lie, and he proceeds to tell, in his own words, what he really said. Read it:

"The above is a complete falsification of what I said. When the political secretary of a Communist Party resorts to such deliberate methods of misrepresentation in the furtherance of factionalism, the party is bound to suffer severely. Now what did I say on the question of Soviets? I said that the Russian Communist Party participated in the Soviets even though the Soviets were not Communist bodies and even though they were not integral parts of the Bolshevik Party. That did not stop the Russian Bolshevik party from raising the slogan of all power to the Soviets thereby through the revolutionary struggle that ensued making the Soviets the instruments of state power and the basis of the dictatorship of the proletariat. I used this argument to counteract the sectarian poison that is being injected into our party by the majority that maintains that only through its own organization can the party wage a Communist political struggle, and that it is opportunism for the party to wage political struggles thru the instrumentality of other organizations. The farmer-labor party I therefore contended could be made an instrument of our political struggle even though it is not a Communist body."

The comrades will pardon me for imposing upon their patience with these long quotations from Gitlow. But it can't be helped. The interests of the party demand that we all know that because the Russian Party participated in Soviets, therefore, the American party must participate in the farmer-labor movement. This is the new Marxism and Communism of our farmer-laboristic minority. I am leaving aside, for the moment, the fact that it is not the question now of participating in but of initiating and creating a farmer-labor party. Gitlow has either entirely misunderstood the discussion, or he is consciously twisting the issue when he represents the thing as though it were a question of our party participating in a movement that already exists. There is no such thing. The question is: Shall the Workers Party create a substitute for itself in the shape of a farmer-labor party? This is the issue.

I am willing to assume that Gitlow did not understand what our controversy was all about. He may have sincerely believed that the whole fight is about participating in an already existing movement. That's why he has written the above lines to the effect that since the Russian Party participated in Soviets, the Workers Party may participate in a farmer-labor party. He is pitifully wrong, just the same. But where is my "lie"?

As to Factionalism.

Some day there will be written the history of our party, and then we shall know which faction or tendency in our movement contributed most to the development of our party. We may be compelled to begin writing history much sooner than would be necessary otherwise. If the salesmen of the minority (a la Gitlow) will continue the way they started, we may find it advisable and for the good of the party to start writing history immediately. But one fact must be established right here. It is the fact that never in the history of our party did a minority opposition defy so flagrantly and brazenly the fundamentals of organization of the Comintern, as did the present minority. The caucus is everything, the party is nothing—this is the motto of the present minority.

But we shall leave this aside for the moment. We want the party first to realize the menacing nature of the policies of the minority, and then we will speak in more detail about their practices of organization. Our main task now is to have the party repudiate definitely and completely the right-wing farmer-labor opportunism of the minority. In pursuing this task, we shall speak to the party as plainly and frankly as is possible, and will leave to the minority all the privileges and all the rights of advertising their virtues and of calling us names.

MINORITY DID NOT PROVE THEIR CASE

By MORRIS KUSHINSKY

THE nearer the discussion of our party's immediate tasks approaches its conclusion, the more it becomes evident that the minority has a very poor case in justification of their proposed policy. Of all the arguments advanced by the minority all through the discussion none were of any strikingly convincing nature.

In my opinion the minority has still got to prove that there is NOW in existence a mass sentiment on the part of the American workers for a farmer-labor party. Those of us who are actively engaged in the everyday work of the American labor unions, know the facts that point to the contrary.

As a matter of fact we see that ever since the presidential election the issue of a labor party, as far as the majority of the labor movement is concerned is dead and buried. Those elements in the labor unions who demonstrated any kind of a sentiment for independent political action, and who were willing to do anything in order to put this sentiment into action, are now either altogether indifferent to the issue or satisfied with their conviction that what was accomplished by the LaFollette movement was all that they wanted.

For us to come out now in the labor unions with the slogan, "For a farmer-labor party" would mean at best talking to stone walls.

On theother hand we must not forget that ever since the Bridgeman arrest and the consequent discussions in the capitalist press of what the Communist Party was and our appeals to the American workers for the defence of those arrested, brought about a situation whereby many thousands of American workers became very much interested in knowing what the Communists really stood for.

Then again in the last pre-election campaign, hundreds of thousands of American workers listened with great interest to our speakers who came out on the streets and in halls explaining the true meaning of Communism and its objects. Also, in the last campaign, as the politicians of the capitalist parties and of the LaFollette movement besieged the labor unions for their endorsement and support of their candidates, we, the Communists, have learned the means of effectively combatting this custom, and have gained a great deal in the way of showing to great masses of workers that the Communists are the only real friends of the working class. In short, the late developments in the American labor movement and the activity of our comrades therein have removed many barriers which were in the way of our propagation of the class struggle from a Communist point of view and to show to the workers that the only political party worthy of their support is the Workers (Communist) Party.

Now, after all the experience we have gained and after the many hardships we have overcome, for us to come again before the American workers and try to raise the slogan of a farmer-labor party, would amount to as much as to try to inject new life into a dead corpse. At the same time, to talk now to the American workers, of a mysterious "class farmer-labor party," would mean to be "hiding behind the bush" for the simple reason that we might just as well and with just as much advantage come right out clearly and unhesitatingly with the propaganda for the Workers (Communist) Party.

To my mind the proposed policy of the minority means retreat from gained positions. It means retreat that is not warranted by actual conditions in the labor movement at the present time. This proposed tactic of the minority if accepted would mean a step backward that would create a situation whereby we would have to play a hide and seek game. This would not mean a retreat whereby we could strengthen our position for a new attack upon our enemy, but one that would tend to destroy our gained influence and prestige in the labor movement. This is an out and out un-Leninist, un-Bolshevik tactic.

In conclusion let me say that we, the Communists, active in the labor movement, have greater and more important tasks to perform than to force upon the American workers

The Discussion on Party Tasks

CONTRIBUTIONS FROM A RANK AND FILER FOR MAJORITY THESIS

By ETHEL SHOR

WHAT did Lenin say about slogans? He said that slogans are to be used only to mobilize large masses of workers, or call them to action—not simply slogan for slogan's sake.

The minority fail to prove that there is a demand for a labor party apart and distinct from the LaFollette movement, and when they cannot prove that, on what argument do they fall back—they say "if there is no sentiment for a farmer-labor party we must create one; we must build a farmer-labor party"—and they quote the C. I's instructions to the British Communist Party that they should join the British labor party.

We advocated a labor party for the past two and one half years not because we thought the labor party to be a necessary, preliminary step for the workers, but because such sentiment existed, and it was our duty to participate in that movement of the workers. This is the reason the C. I. instructed the British Communists to seek admission in the British labor party. The comrades have yet to prove that the labor party is an inevitable step the workers will have to go through.

The comrades of the minority say "the labor party will disillusion the workers the sooner." Yes, but must we build such an instrument? According to this, we should propagate and fight for WAR for surely war disillusions the workers more than any number of labor parties.

The minority says "No, we will not build a farmer-labor party now, but simply advocate it, talk about it, pleasantly and nicely" but what do their articles read (Askenuzie, Dec. 17)—"we will propagate for one actively, make it the center of our campaigns, unemployment, union activities, etc. Make it the MAJOR issue around which will center all our party activities."

Consistency—that is one of the jewels the minority does not posses.

The minority makes the labor party the only means of political action for the workers. I would like to ask the minority since when are strikes, especially those which bring the workers into the direct conflict with the capitalist state (injunctions, etc.) not political struggles. Truly, they are the "Marxists"!!

The minority asks us how and where have the conditions changed. The subjective conditions have changed and they admit that in their thesis when they admit the "temporary" strength of LaFollette. Two years ago the sentiment of the masses was not clear, not crystalized, either for a revolutionary mass class farmer-labor party, mass class farmer-labor party, class farmer labor party, simply farmer-labor party, or the LaFollette movement. Their interest in political action was aroused by the fact of the coming elections, bringing their customary illusion of a change being brought by the ballot. Now this sentiment is crystalized, has its haven in the LaFollette movement. The masses have not yet been disillusioned by LaFollette. Whether the disillusionment stream will turn into a farmer labor party movement is yet a question. We will then consider it. But if that will be, the turn it will take is yet questionable. Yes, we must be the vanguard of the proletariat, but let us use reason and sense. Know where and how to apply it. We have only a certain amount of party energy and funds and must use them to the very best advantage. Not shouting for shouting's sake. Let us not make the words "vanguard of the proletariat" a fetish to be applied hit or miss. Otherwise, we should at all times in little local strikes, elections, etc. preach only the dictatorship and the Soviets. This is running ahead still further.

Comrade Siminoff renders a huge cry (December 17)—a pre-LaFollette man came to him with the terrible plaint—he (the LaFollette man) is disgusted with LaFollette, only a labor party will smash the capitalist machine. Surely, if I were Comrade Simonoff, I would know what to answer. When a person speaks of smashing the capitalist machine, he is material for the Workers Party and does not have to go thru another disillusionment and get disgusted with all political parties.

The comrades want a mass Communist Party. So do I. All agree on this point. But what is the quicker and more effective means. For example—in the United Council of Working Class Women after working and organizing (and contributing) collections for the Paterson strikers, is it better to take one person aside and whisper, "shy, shy—I am also a Communist, I also help the Paterson strikes," or the Workers Party as an organization helped the Paterson strikes? We have no desire to be modest violets.

As to Comrade Lore, if anyone has added prestige to Comrade Lore it has been the minorty. What did the C. I. say? Kick him out or fight ideologically? The C. I. said—fight him ideologically. . . . The way the minority have fought Comrade Lore, however, and the issues they have fought him on have made him appear as a martyr before the comrades. Talk to the rank and filers, and what do they say. "Yes, I admit Comrade Lore is wrong on many things, but he is being persecuted, attacked in petty and forced situations. He has been treated unfairly." The fight should be waged ideologically, take the wind out of Lore's sails, by making him admit his mistakes thereby breaking his false prestige.

Comrade Jakira and the comrades of the minority say: "We, the Marxists!! therefore, we are right!!!" To me, merely a rank and filer, the test of a Communist is not one who has only "studied" Marx and can recite him by rote, but one who participates in the struggles of the workers, leads them in accordance with the theory of Marx. He should be one who can shape policies in line with Marxian truth. Otherwise, we should invite Hillquit in America and Kautsky in Germany to lead us, for surely they have "studied" Marx, perhaps much more than some of the minority.

dead issues such as the one, "For a labor party." We can not afford to waste our energy and hard earned money for the organization of bogus farmer-labor parties just in order to give activity and exitement to some of our good comrades of the minority who have otherwise nothing to do with their time. Instead of this let us make a real effort to build our Workers (Communist) Party. Let us raise the real live slogans that will put our party in the forefront as the leader of, and fighter for, the interests of the working masses. Let us build the united front of the rank and file on the slogans of unemployment, child labor, organization of the unorganized, recognition of Soviet Russia, opposition to class collaboration on the part of the trade union bureaucracy, etc., etc.

Great numbers of American workers are ready to listen to us and as we develop these campaigns still greater masses will rally around our slogans and by carrying on a militant fight for them we will gain the leadership of these masses and finally achieve the goal of making the Workers (Communist) Party the mass Communist Party of the American working class and thus lead them into the revolutionary class struggle for the final battle to capture all power for the workers.

ILLUSIONS OR REALITY?

By JACK PROKOP,
Eastern Organizer Czecho-Slovak Federation.

AFTER both sides, the majority and the minority of the C. E. C. had presented their arguments as to the chief tasks, timely slogans, and immediate necessary operations, let us examine the nature of the tasks, the timeliness of the slogans, and the necessity of their operations. As Communists, we must deal in this examination only with facts, real things, that is, objective and subjective conditions, which alone serve as the determining factors in analysis of a situation. Thus objectively examining, we find that:

1. The federated farmer-labor party was a forcible amputation from the "real trend toward a third party" and therefore dissolved under the breath of LaFollette.

2. The majority of the C. E. C. has been seduced by the minority to exaggerate and misrepresent the strength of the F. L. movement before the membership of the W. P.

3. Besides the "trend for a third party" there is among the farmers neither a tendency to oppose its organization or under-rate its effectiveness, nor the much sought tendency for a farmer-labor party, all mythical proofs to the contrary having been exaporated under the x-rays of Foster's and Manley's illumination.

4. The trend to organization and growth of the third party is insured by the actions of the C. P. P. A., and all its affiliated organizations of craft and industrial unions, as well as the debris from the F. L. and co-operative movements of the farmers, whom LaFollette alone is able to "stick together" and lead, altho to disillusionment.

5. When in the past year or two, two million bankrupt farmers left and dispersed in the cities and industrial centers, it was not a proof of an impending crisis and revolt and reorientation of the farmers' political conception and policy foutside the trend for a third party) but on the contrary, it was a proof of an unparalelled elasticity of the capitalist system in the U. S. A. and its enormous capacity to absorb (temporarily at least) the victim of its exploitation and dump them in other spheres . . . disarmed. Disarmed, because they ceased to be a factor in the farmers' movement the moment they emigrated into the cities. The possibilities for the bankrupt farmers to earn their living in the cities, and further, the alleviation (altho small) which the remaining farmers felt thru the disappearence of 2,000,000 competitors, rather dampened than intensified the (imaginary) revolutionary tendency of the farmers, at the same time restoring to a great extent . . . faith in institutions of existing order, restoring faith in their improvement, by the policies of LaFollette and his program for the third party.

Altho it would be folly, for Communists, who base their calculations of directives and policies on fundamental laws of history, economics, politics and sociology . . . to believe that capitalists will stop the expropriation of farmers, and their forcible emigration into cities, or to believe in the much blazened Foolidge or Coolidge prosperity, unless a market is found on the moon, Venus or Mars, the fact remains that, during this period of artificial prosperity accompanied by the "election shock" and its resulting confusion among the farmers (and workers), and before the effects of "the crisis to come" can be appreciably felt, a slogan . . . "for a farmer-labor party" would be like a cry in the wilderness, without any effect.

Throwing aside all past mistakes of the majority, out of which the minority wants to draw capital for its "superior mistakes" we come to the Recapitulation.

There being no immediate tendency or demand for a farmer-labor party, among the farmers or industrial workers . . . but there being "a political orphanage of the LaFollette clique" concrete organizations (C. P. P. A.) and tendencies for the creation of a third party, . . . the slogan for a farmer-labor party is neither timely nor necessary, but rather injurious, constituting nothing but a waste of valuable energy, and the chief task of the party logically must be the strengthening and expansion of the party in all its units and all its institutions, thru education of its membership and sympathizers, thru propaganda and organization in the shops, unions, fraternal organizations, etc., of the workers and farmers, in order to prove there our ability "to lead" our willingness to work. The ability to lead is not proven by the creation of untimely slogans, imaginary parties, or by the changes of names of parties or other imitations of the labor fakers, not even by efforts of faking the fakers by "superior imitations" or conferences with them, as our great Napoleons from the minority imagine. On the contrary. The ability to lead will be demonstrated only and solely in the "real fighting units of the working class" such as the shops, factories, mines, union locals, international unions, fraternal organizations unemployed councils, etc., in their daily struggle for work, wages, control of locals, unions, fight for their political affiliations and representation, etc., etc., and the mustering out and incorporation of ripe elements into the Workers Party.

Only this sort of "ability to lead" and not the "Napoleonic ability" of the minority that dwelleth high in the clouds, and enable us to fight exclusively the prospective third party and gradually destroy the illusions created in the minds of the farmers and workers about improving institutions of capitalist order and deriving benefit from it. Only this sort of ability to lead will rectify the psychology of the poor, mislead farmers and workers, and bring them into the fold of the only "one proletarian class party" in the U. S. A.—the Workers Party.

The insignificant nucleus, which the minority pretends we have, will serve the purpose equally, and group itself around and be directed by a weekly "Farmers' Critical Review" edited by us, and given away if necessary. It will still cost us less than all the proposed empty maneuvers and save us from the reputation of "very unstable policies." The C. I. reversed the slogan on time, and wisely so.

In the U. S. A. the development of political consciousness of the masses is marching thru the third party. The heterogeneous element composing it, the adversity of their various interests, is the best guarantee for a redivision and reclassification of its elements. Then our harvest will begin in full measure. As soon as our campaign-predictions of crisis will begin to materialize we will repeat (what we should have said): "After Coolidge—the deluge!" and quit LaFollette's farcical deceptive banner; join the class-party with sickle and hammer.

The Discussion on Party Tasks

A Marxian Book and Its Un-Marxian Critics

By MAX BEDACHT.

THE ideological and political bankruptcy of the majority of the central executive committee was crowned by the "great sensation" it had prepared for the membership meetings. This C. E. C. majority was not satisfied with its unenviable record of poverty of ideas set up in the party discussion and poorly covered with threadbare slogans of liquidators, opportunists, et. Our C. E. C. majority insisted to set up another record—a record of demagogy.

I once watched a prosecutor in a capitalist court walking up and down before the jury trying to incite the jury against us Communists, before the bar, by waving a red flag before their eyes, by throwing it on the floor, by jumping on it and by other such convincing arguments against the Communists.

Expert Demagogues at Work.

Our central executive committee majority seems to have gone to school to that gentleman. Comrade Foster pulled the same trick in the Chicago general membership last Sunday. But his performance was even surpassed by Cannon in New York. But then Cannon is unsurpassable when it comes to such "arguments."

A book made its appearance at these membership meetings. This book was denounced; it was flung around in well feigned disgust; it was condemned as menshevism incarnate. And all this comedy was enacted to get a verdict against the author of the book—not on the book itself, because hardly a line was read out of the book, but on the question now at issue before the party.

The book is "The Government—Strikebreaker" and its author is Jay Lovestone.

If anything were needed to show that our majority does not give a damn about our party and is interested solely and exclusively in the central executive committee majority this latest "sensation" would supply proof.

A few facts about the book will suffice to show up the majority and to condemn it for what it is: a group of unprincipled demagogues or a group of totally un-Marxian Marxians.

Foster-Lore Group Loses Its Head.

The subject, plan and the very method of the book as well as the author were suggested by Comrade Brooks, the representative of the Comintern at the Bridgeman convention of the Communist Party of America. The book was written at a time when the Workers Party, altho already a few months old, still had not overcome the handicap of the primogeniture of its older brother, the C. P. of A. Only about six months later at the time when this book was published, in May, 1923, the Workers Party began to function formally as the Communist Party and what is more important began to function as a political party.

What was the purpose of the book? Was it to be a history of the Workers Party? No. Was it to be a history of the achievements of the Workers Party? No. Was it to be a propaganda book pure and simple for the Workers Party No. Great strikes had taken place in the years just past. The steel workers, the miners, the railroad workers, the textile workers had gone thru mass struggles against their exploiters.

During the war compulsory arbitration by government agency was established, ostensibly as a measure of war against Germany. But now, in the post-war struggles of the workers this war measure, "against Germany," was shown up in its true character as a war measure against the workers. The official leadership of the organized workers in most cases made itself rather an instrument of this so-called government arbitration instead of leading the workers into struggles against this fraud.

Here was a chance for the revolutionists; to show up the character and role of the government as an agency of capitalism and the capitalists; to show the close connection, yea, even the identity of government and "big business"; to fight the contention of Gompersism of "our" government as something above classes.

This could be done only by a truly Marxian analysis of all the facts connected with the struggles of the past year. To give such an analysis on the basis of the facts was the task of the writer. The book represents the accomplishment of that task.

What the C. I. Says of "The Government—Strikebreaker."

Referring to this book and other publications of the Workers Party written mainly by Comrades Lovestone and Pepper, the executive committee of the Communist International in its report to the Fifth Congress declares: "The party has also issued Marxist literature, not only on general Communist questions but also on concrete conditions of America, and thus they made good that which the social-democrats of the Second International neglected to do for decades."

The book is a Marxian one. It breathes Marxism in its analytical method as well as in its revolutionary conclusions.

To be sure—our central executive committee does not know that. It does not and cannot recognize Marxian methods. As "true" believers they can only worship before the shrine of unmistakable phrases. If Marxism does not present itself to them in these phrases then our central executive committee majority finds itself compelled to disown it.

And why should it not?

Samples of Foster's Communism.

Comrade Foster, the leader of the majority, wrote only two years before "The Government—Strikebreaker" was published: "Apparently it is thru the old unions that the workers will eventually achieve industrial freedom." To this gem of "Marxism" we could add an indefinite number of others out of the same book, "The Great Steel Strike and Its Lessons." For instance, on page 260: "In what I have called the left wing of the movement there are large and ever-increasing numbers of workers and sympathizers who refuse to face the prospect of a society forever based upon the wage system. They demand an organization that is making for its abolition and the substitution therefore of a system of industrial justice. IF THEY WERE TO LOOK SHARPLY THEY WOULD SEE THAT THE TRADE UNION MOVEMENT IS TRAVELING FASTER THAN ANY OTHER BODY TOWARD THE END THEY WISH TO REACH." (Our emphasis.)

Yes, the chief arbiter of pure Communism of 1924 was so much a stranger to Marxism, to Communism in 1920 that he seems entitled to a pardon for not recognizing Marx except in his beard. The comrade who could write only four years ago, that "the big question is whether or not they (the trade unions) will be able to develop enough power to stop this exploitation altogether. As for me, I am convinced that they will," should be a little more careful in his judgment about the Marxian qualities of other writers. His "Marxism," rank industrialism, can be traced in his writings down to this very day. Why then should a comrade who displayed such misconceptions of the character of the proletarian revolution, nearly three years after the Bolshevik revolution in Russia, be able today to find any trace of Marxism in the "Government—Strikebreaker?"

Foster Refutes Foster.

But our arbiters of pure Communism have detected the shortcomings of "The Government—Strikebreaker" only since the toga of the saviors of the Workers Party fell upon their shoulders. Before this critical moment arrived they appreciated "The Government—Strikebreaker." COMRADE FOSTER WROTE IN THE ISSUE OF THE LABOR HERALD OF JULY, 1923: "HERE IS A BOOK WHICH FILLS A GAP IN THE LITERATURE OF THE LABOR MOVEMENT. DEALING ENTIRELY WITH THE AMERICAN QUESTION, IT TAKES UP, PHASE AFTER PHASE, THE ROLE OF THE GOVERNMENT IN THE STRUGGLE BETWEEN THE WORKERS AND THEIR EXPLOITERS. THE TOO FAMILIAR STYLE OF PAMPHLETEERING, CONSISTING OF GENERALIZATIONS AND SENTIMENTALITIES IS ENTIRELY ABSENT IN LOVESTONE'S WORK. CONCISELY, AND STEP BY STEP, HE HAS BUILT UP HIS ARGUMENT AND EXPOSITION FROM OFFICIAL DOCUMENT AND AUTHORITATIVE STATEMENTS. NO POINT IS LEFT UNSUPPORTED BY CITATION TO ORIGINAL SOURCES, AND THE WHOLE IS BROUGHT TOGETHER INTO THE MOST COMPLETE PICTURE YET DRAWN OF THE GOVERNMENT IN ITS CLASSIC ROLE OF STRIKEBREAKER. LOVESTONE HAS MADE A PERMANENT CONTRIBUTION TO THE LIBRARY OF THE STUDENT OF THE TRADE UNION MOVEMENT."

Dunne and Olgin Answer Cannon.

Comrade Dunne, another one of the present day guardians of Marxism against the danger of opportunism, wrote about the book: "I am very much pleased with 'The Government—Strikebreaker,' and consider it a distinctive contribution to American labor literature."

And Comrade Olgin, a late addition to the army of fighters of pure Communism against right wing deviations, wrote about the book: "It is a review of the class struggle of the American proletariat for the last three years. It is a cross cut thru the class composition of American society and exposition of the government's role in the momentous social conflicts. . . . The book, as a whole, may serve for the workers as an excellent weapon and this is the main thing. It is a reliable book. It is an American book. It is a book astir with the problems of today. AND IT IS A COMMUNIST BOOK IN THE BEST SENSE OF THE WORD. THERE HAVE BEEN NO SUCH BOOKS IN THE WORKING CLASS LITERATURE IN THIS COUNTRY. LOVESTONE OUGHT TO BE COMMENDED FOR WRITING AND THE WORKERS PARTY FOR PUBLISHING 'THE GOVERNMENT—STRIKEBREAKER.' No English reading worker should fail to acquire the book and study it thoroly."

A Marxian Book.

The book deals with the great post-war struggles of labor in the United States. In many of its portions it deals with events of periods in which the Workers Party had no physical existence as yet. In the whole period treated in the book the Workers Party had no political existence, while the Communist Party led an underground existence.

The book opens to the proletarian reader an understanding of the connections between the boss he is striking against and the policeman who prevents him from picketing.

But, say our arbiters of Marxism, where is Marx, M-A-R-X?

The book opens to the proletarian reader the revolutionary perspectives of the class struggle

But, say our guardians of pure Communism, where is Communism, C-o-m-m-u-n-i-s-m?

The book instills the proletarian reader with a clear concept of the oppressive functions of the capitalist state and of the necessity of organizing and fighting against the state.

But, say our "Bolshevized" majority, where is Bolshevism, B-o-l-s-h-e-v-i-s-m?

Profintern Translates Lovestone Book.

The Red International of Labor Unions in Moscow translated the book for publication in Soviet Russia.

But, say our new converts to revolutionary political action, what does the Profintern know about Communism? Just think of it, the poor and misled Profintern even asked the chief arbiter of pure Communism in America, Comrade Foster, to write a preface to the Russian edition Judging by Comrade Foster's willingness to comply with instructions from higher units of our international party we presume that he complied with this request, and wrote a Communist preface to the Russian edition of Lovestone's "non-Communist book."

Cannon's Sudden Conversion to Communism.

Eighteen months have passed since the Workers Party has published this book. Only praise was heard from the members of the central executive committee majority about the book. The Communist International read the book. The Profintern read it and ordered its translation into Russian. The book was reviewed favorably in numerous publications of the Communist International. No fundamental criticism was made anywhere. Only now since our present central executive committee majority was condemned by fate to "save" Communism and incidentally to save it own hide has this majority discovered its revolutionary Marxian soul.

Only in this moment of desperation has it mustered enough courage to throw all caution to the winds and reveal itself as a group of pseudo-Marxians charlatans, trying to retain control of the party by the cheapest demagogy that has ever disgraced the activities of any group within any Communist Party anywhere in the world.

A MAJOR QUESTION OF COMMUNIST STRATEGY—A MENACE OF DEFEATISM

By SAMUEL SKLAROFF

THE present majority have up-to date furnished no convincing proof that the movement for independent political action is dead. Their idea of proof is constant repetition of a few stereotyped phrases which, when analyzed in the light of actual conditions are revealed as total absurdities.

The idea that LaFollette has swallowed the farmer-labor movement belongs to the same class of pseudo-history exemplified by the story of the whale swallowing Jonah. Just as there are many people credulous enough to swallow both Jonah and the whale, so, unfortunately, there are many comrades unreflecting enough to swallow without examination this latest bit of majority pseudo-history.

A Burning Issue Before The Workers

If the LaFollette crowd have swallowed the farmer-labor movement, neither the swallowers nor the swallowed, at the present writing, appear to know it.

Even Morris Hilquit, the leader of the defunct S. P., seems to know better than that. In an article on "Let Us Use Our Opportunity," in the New Leader of Dec. 20, he writes the following:—"The LaFollette campaign was a sort of partnership between the C. P. P. A. and the National LaFollette Club. This later group served as a cloak for many elements, who, for various reasons were for LaFollette for president.

"Now that partnership is all off. The coming convention will be held under the rules of representation as provided in the constitution of the C. P. P. A."

Under these rules all the unions in the country will soon be invited to send delegates to the convention to be held in Chicago on Feb. 25, 1925, for the purpose of establishing a third party. National, state and local central bodies will be entitled to representation.

The Discussion on Party Tasks

This issue of independent political action which is declared "dead" by the present majority will soon be discussed by every labor union from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the Artic to the Gulf.

Relying on Demagogy

It is admited by both the minority and majority that our farmer-labor policy for the past two and a half years was SUBSTANTIALLY correct. It has more than any other single factor contributed to the growth of our party. It has placed the Workers Party on the political map of America.

And now the majority of the C. E. C. pose before the membership as the party builders. With characteristic demagogy they proclaim that while they want to build the Workers Party the other group propose to build something else.

At this point I want to ask: What did they think they were doing by means of the farmer-labor slogan for the past two years and a half? Building the Workers Party or something else? Their present arguments would seem to indicate that they had in view something else which did not materialize.

Let us put the burning question before our party in this manner:—If our manoeuvers on the united political front have in the past brought to the Workers Party certain indubitable gains, gains which if continued would put it on the road to becoming a mass Communist Party, cannot these gains be continued in the future by a correct application of the same policy modified only in so far as to meet changing conditions?

Let us analyze the situation correctly.

The Present Situation

The LaFollette campaign did not as yet produce a third party. It was conducted by an election alliance which is now dissolved. This alliance consisted of many different and divergent elements. Shall we now by rasing appropriate slogans emphasize these differences and sharpen these divergencies, or ignore the whole thing?

In the last election campaign there were in the LaFollette camp hundreds of thousands of workers because they labored under the illusion that it represented the beginning of a party of exploited industrial and agricultural workers. These masses are now fast becoming disillusioned. The action of the El Paso convention of the A. F. of L. abandoning the experiment of independent political action is an attempt to lead the masses back to the fold of the old parties. This will be resented by hundreds of thousands of workers who, while they are not yet ready for Communism, are definitely turning away from capitalism.

What We Must Do

Shall we adopt a purist attitude and tell these masses that we will have nothing to do with them until they accept the complete Communist program? Or shall we hasten this process of disillusionment, separate the potential revolutionists among the masses from reactionary leadership, and while advocating independent political action at the same time lay the foundation of a powerful mass Communist Party in America?

The present majority refuses squarely to meet these issues. They raise instead many other irrelevant and inconsequent issues, and prate volubly about the united front from below and above while showing no Marxian understanding of the united front at all.

Would not a campaign to establish a class farmer-labor pary, (even if its sole immediate achievement may be only the formation of a left farmer-labor bloc within the general movement) involve the application of the united front from below by an appeal to the rank and file of the labor unions against the opposition of the reactionary officialdom?

But the majority of the C. E. C. propose a policy of folding hands, A POLICY OF DEFEAT AND SURRENDER WITHOUT A STRUGGLE, and dare to pose before the membership as a Communist leadership!

As against purist dogmatism the minority proposes a vigorous campaign along both the political and industrial united fronts. As against a policy leading to sectarianism—the building of a mass Communist Party in this country.

Party would be affiliated. This campaign has been the major political campaign of our party.

"We have during this campaign advanced the cause of independent working class action and made the farmer-labor party an issue in the American labor movement. We can also say, without danger of the statement being challenged, that our party has the greatest gains for itself thru this campaign for the labor party. It is thru this farmer-labor party campaign that our party has established itself as a political force in the United States. It is thru this campaign that it has established its prestige and its leadership among the masses of workers and farmers. Nothing has contributed so much to develop our party from a sectarian group to a recognized political force in the life of the labor movement of this country than our maneuvers in relation to the farmer-labor party.

"The central executive committee declares that the campaign for a farmer-labor party was a correct estimation of the situation in the United States. It declares further that the campaign for a farmer-labor party must be continued and will be a major campaign of the party in the future."

Why the Sudden "Discovery"?

This was presented to the membership late in July. The LaFollette boom was at its height. Our central executive committee adopted the complete program unanimously When did the majority discover the basis for their present position? Comrade Foster in an article some time since said the fact that the farmer-labor party was dead came to him wrile sitting in the gallery of the July conference for progressive political action. Then, why the unanimous decision on the program of action? Where did this tremendous sentiment disappear in such a short space of time?

Alas! Poor Bittelman.

And Comrade Bittelman, majority standpatter, has this to say later in the campaign: "Shall the workers and poor farmers have a political party of their own, a farmer-labor party?" Answering for the Workers Party, Comrade Bittelman says, "Yes, by all means. Without a party of their own, politics for the workers becomes a farce. It means helping other classes—big, medium and small capital—to fasten ever tighter their grip over the working masses. If the small capitalists and rich farmers want their own party, let them go to it. But the workers and poor farmers have no business in such a combination. They have their own interests to defend, which are antagonistic to the interests of all capitalist groups, big, medium, and little. Therefore, let us have a farmer-labor party." (Pamphlet: "Parties and Issues in the Election Campaign.")

The minority thesis is a correct Communist thesis. To repudiate the farmer-labor party slogan at this time means that we will drink from the cup of sectarianism, and the aftermath is obvious: political isolation and oblivion. ALL POWER TO THE MINORITY!

ALL POWER TO THE MINORITY

By PAT H. TOOHEY.

FROM the writings of the C. E. C. majority followers the impression is left that there is no sentiment for a farmer-labor party. Altho not a theoretician, not being able to quote Marx and others, I certainly can see the political childishness of this. Might I ask if it is our function, as Communists, the revolutionary vanguard of the exploited masses to sit idly by and wait for the workers to raise hell orer some issue or another and then we, as the hero of old, step in, take the leadship and—etc., etc.

Was this—the policy pursued by our party on the foreign exception laws? Was there widespread agitation and sentiment against this bill, or did our party take the initiative and create the sentiment and agitation? Why agitate for a "labor congress" (brain child of the majority hash-slingers). Why drop the F. L. for it? Was there any great amount of sentiment in 1922, as much as in 1924? What caused this tremendous sentiment which existed, as the majority would tell us, up to June of this year? Was it brought about by the ceaseless agitation of our party? Did this sentiment exist when the policy was first adopted, or did the party have to crystallize a germ to mould that sentiment? If so, then it has been very profitable for the party. But when the majority tells us there is no sentiment for this slogan one is forcibly reminded of the fool who stood by a river bank waiting until the water flowed away before trying to cross.

Sentiment for a farmer-labor party exists in Washington county today. To Comrade Blankenstein I would say, go among the workers, associate with them, talk with them, stay among them, suffer with them, work with them, and then you certainly will be in a position to write, or to speak authoritively of the "sentiments" and the "pulse" and the "political tendencies" of the working class. That cannot be done by holding down a swivel chair daily in Pittsburgh.

What C. E. C. Told Us.

The LaFollette movement, or boom, was at its height when the C. E. C. drafted the program of action, or a manifesto dealing with the immediate tasks of the party. Our majority leaders, apparently, did not discover what they now claim annihilation of the farmer-labor party by the LaFollette movement, until recently, for in this program of action, adopted unanimously by the C. E. C., we find the following:

"In June, 1922, our party declared in a manifesto dealing with the application of the united front policy in the United States, that the problem of the united front politically was the problem of the formation of a labor party. Since that time the party has carried on a consistent united front campaign with the end in view of uniting those workers and farmers who were ready to break with the capitalist parties in a mass farmer-labor party with which the Workers

THEY ARE MAKING IT UNANIMOUS

By ISRAEL AMTER.

"WITH less than 5,000,000 votes conceded to LaFollette and Wheeler, the most important fact that the election returns teach us is that there is no labor party in sight. The American Federation of Labor, in their annual convention at El Paso, Texas, have read aright the verdict of the American workers and farmers, and make haste to announce their opposition to a labor party and to reaffirm their time-worn policy of non-partisan political action, or, as sometimes otherwise stated, 'no politics in the union.'

"Another fact from which we should draw a lesson is that the farmer-labor party is dead. It sang its swang-song in the recent election.

"Indeed, such a 'labor party' would have no use other than to do that which the LaFollette supporters so plainly sought to do during the 1924 campaign, i. e., swallow it up, absorb its organization ability, and kill its educational value and its political prestige with the working class."

How familiar these words sound! In the majority thesis, in the numerous articles by Comrades Foster, Dunne, Browder, Cannon and Bittelman, they have been repeated over and over again. They should at least be accepted as truisms, when our Bolsheviks assert them with such assurance.

But strange as it may appear, the above paragraphs were not written either by Foster, Dunne, Browder, Cannon or Bittelman. No, others with as little perception, with as little understanding of Marxian-Leninistic methods, voice the same sentiments.

No, comrades, the above does not come from the brain of Foster, Dunne, Browder, Cannon or Bittelman. They emanate from the brain of a socialist, Emil Herman, who sings the same song of woe as the majority of the central executive committee, in the issue of the New Leader, the socialist party organ, of Dec. 20.

They are making it unanimous—from Keating to Herman to Foster. But what did Zinoviev say in the Presidium of the Communist International? "I believe that if we study everything we will say that, in the year 1924, things are not so elementary that we . . . cannot propagate the idea of an independent—labor party. We must dare to put forth this idea and it must be realized, namely, a separate labor party. It is our main duty to set this in motion. . . . We are at the beginning of a mass labor movement which will be independent—the idea of an independent labor party will be realized. Our task consists in starting an independent movement."

Well, it is Herman against Zinoviev. We of the minority have more faith in the understanding of Zinoviev.

Is Unity of the International Trade Union Movement Possible?

By A. LOZOVSKY

THAT unity is a very beautiful thing and therefore desirable is not disputed for a moment by the bitterest disrupters. We are not faced with the question of unity "in general," or of unity in "principle" or of unity in a very remote future, but with the question whether at the present time, in view of the actual international situation, of the existence of divided, parallel organizations, etc. it is possible to attain unity and how it is to be brought about.

We must remark at the outset that the split does not exist in every country. In many countries the followers of the R. I. L. U. are within the organizations affiliated to Amsterdam. In these countries the followers of the R. I. L. U. and the followers of the Amsterdam International are organizatorily united. On the other hand there are a number of countries where parallel organizations exist, and finally, a fairly large number of countries, the trade union movements of which are wholly affiliated to the Red International of Labor Unions.

What obstacles stand in the way of unity? These obstacles can be divided into two groups: 1. Organizatory; 2. political obstacles. The existence of parallel organizations inevitably leads to organizatory conservatism and to the effort to retain at all costs the existing forms of organizations. The reformist trade union movement clings with great tenacity to the old traditions and only adapts itself very painfully to the new forms of the class struggle. In the reformist trade union movement the narrow craft interests come before the interests of the workers of the country as a whole and the interests of the fatherland come before the interests of the international proletariat. It would, however, be a mistake to assume that organizatory conservatism is only confined to the reformists. There are revolutionary workers who suffer from organizatory conservatism and believe that it is best to follow the old road, not to make any sharp turns, not to unite the workers of different tendencies, as this could destroy the organizatory structure.

The organizatory obstacles are, of course, of secondary importance in comparison with the political obstacles. Many comrades ask: "Can we unite with the reformists when they are even against the class struggle?" These comrades desire to lay down conditions regarding unity (break with the bourgeois coalition, fight against the Dawes plan, etc.) To demand from the reformists that they abandon the coalition with the bourgeoisie is to demand the impossible. To make unity dependent upon this implies a breach of unity, for the abandonment of the coalition with the bourgeoisie means the end of reformism.

On the other hand, the most bitter opponents of unity on the side of the reformists submit their conditions to the left wing of the trade union movement. This specially applies to the "Vorwaerts," the organ of the German social-fascists. The "Vorwaerts" spits poison and gall against unity. It is of course in favor of unity, but desires that the Communists shall not organize any nuclei, that they shall not incite the workers against the leaders of the trade union movement, that they shall not "caluminate," but faithfully carry out the policy of the black hundred which is conducted by the German social-democracy along with the German Gengral Federation of Trade Unions). In this respect the "Vorwaerts" fully reflects the view regarding unity which exists in the right wing of the Amsterdam International.

The meaning of all this talk over this theme is that they turn to us and say: "Become reformists and then we shall unite with you!" This astute solution of the problem of unity is typical of the Second International, which leads, ideologically and politically, the reactionary portion of the Amsterdam International. It must be said that all this kind of talk is mere waste of time. The Communists have not the lest reason for transforming themselves into reformist corpses, and whoever believes that the Communists will deviate even a hair's breath from their principles in arriving at unity does not understand anything of Communism or of the problem of unity.

If, however, the reformists maintain their position and the Communists their, then the unity of the trade union movement is impossible!—the reader will say. No, his would be a thoroughly erroneous conclusion. In fact we do not submit demands to the reformists in order that they shall become Communists, and we do not propose to the reformists that they shall occupy themselves with the futile task of debolshevizing the Bolsheviki. The revolutionary trade unions of all countries which are in the R. I. L. U. propose, in full agreement with the Communist International, a way which is acceptable to the most bitter opponents of Communism in the Amsterdam International, if they only adopt a somewhat conscientious attitude regarding the interests of the working class.

"We will not submit conditions to one another" says the R. I. L. U. "We will convene a conference of representatives of both Internationals, we will jointly decide the time and place of the International Unity Congress, at which the organizations affiliated to the R. I. L. U. and to the Amsterdam International, as well as those trade union organizations which are outside both Internationals, shall be represented. We will discuss at the international congress the concrete tasks of the struggle against the capitalist offensive and against the fascist reaction. At this congress we will create the United Trade Union International.

Whoever has the majority at this congress will carry through their resolutions and will have the majority on the executive body. The constitution of the new international will be in accordance with the standpoint of the majority. At this unity congress the Red International of Labor Unions and the Amsterdam International will declare that they dissolve their organizations and enter into the United International.' We Communists and revolutionary workers of all countries declare through the Communist International and the R. I. L. U. that if we find ourselves in a minority, that we shall remain in the new international and submit to the discipline of the movement, whilst we shall carry on our fight for influence among the masses. If the opponents of Communism make a similar declaration the question will be quite clear.

Let the masses of workers pronounce judgment as to whose tactics—those of the Communists or those of the reformists—are more consistent with the interests of the working class. We are not afraid of bringing our tactics before the court of the many millions of proletarians. May the opponents of Communism come forward in an equally open manner as the followers of the R. I. L. U. do and will continue to do.

We ask, what is there in the proposal which can be unacceptable for an honest proletarian, no matter to what tendency he may belong? If the leaders of the Amsterdam International are convinced that they have behind them the overwhelming majority, why are they afraid to attend a congress of this sort? The majority will be with them, and the will of the majority of the congress will decide the political line of the United International. Everything is clear regarding this proposal. We propose to those who everywhere make a great cry over their democratic principles, the most democratic way conceivable for uniting the divided international trade union movement. Meanwhile however, the opponents of the R. I. L. U. do not desire this proletarian-democratic solution of the question and hide their fear of proletarian democracy by means of the great outcry over the craftiness of the Communists.

To mobilize the masses for unity is the most important task at the present moment. The majority of the leaders of the Amsterdam International believe that they will be able to evade this problem and to patch up the growing fissure in their own ranks which is consequent upon the inexorable radicalization of the working masses. If the Amsterdam International does not meet the wish of the majority of its own members it will simply collapse and unity will be restored over the heads of the present leaders. This is the reason why we, although we are quite aware of the enormous difficulties which are lying in our path, reply to the question, whether the unity of the international trade union movement is possible: yes, it is possible and inevitable. Together with the leaders or without the leaders, the divided international trade union movement will in any event be welded together into a powerful anti-capitalist bloc.

COMRADE RUTHENBERG'S ESTIMATES

By ARNE SWABECK.

In yesterday's issue of the DAILY WORKER, under the caption "The results of the first membership meetings," Comrade Ruthenberg has the following to say:

"Another factor which entered into the results last Sunday was the eleventh hour change in the rules covering the meetings, which denied members not attached to the city central committees in the cities in which the meetings were held the right to vote. This rule, disfranchising the party members from nearby cities was made in order to cut down the strength of the minority, particularly in the Chicago meetings. In Chicago even the members living in Pullman, which is industrially and geographically a part of Chicago, who were overwhelmingly for the minority position, were denied the right to vote in the Chicago membership meeting. The votes of the Pullman comrades alone would have changed the result in the Chicago meeting."

This may look quite convincing on paper, but what are the actual facts?

First, the central executive committee confining the vote at each meeting to the members actually attached to the respective city central committees seems to have been a very appropriate one, at least as far as the Chicago meeting was concerned, in order to avoid duplication of the Pullman membership vote which already on December 26 recorded itself 38 to 5 for the minority position. Secondly it will be noted that this vote already previously recorded in the DAILY WORKER, gives the lie to the contention of disfranchisement of party members. Thirdly, although Pullman is industrially and geographically a part of Chicago our membership there has for the last two years functioned thru their own separate C. C. C.

The Chicago party membership is overwhelmingly for the majority position and the vote recorded at the membership meeting of 399 to 362 is by no means an accurate proportion. Out of eight English branches with a total membership of 244 the minority has been able to carry one of the smaller branches while the number of the total who have expressed themselves for the minority position amounts to 46—Quite significant. Isn't it?

Of the total number of language federation branches, the Italian, Lettish, Lithuanian and South Slavic were practically unanimous for the minority, some of their bureaus having been extremely active in lining up the membership even to the extent of furnishing loads of resolutions favoring that position to their branches. In most of these branches it has not been possible to gain admittance for a majority representative during the party discussion, in others little or no discussion took place as it seems they were too preoccupied in preparing to bring out all members for the membership meeting to record their vote and these particular branches were represented about 100 per cent. The minority vote was furnished almost wholly by these four big blocks. The other language federation branches except a small Hungarian branch are overwhelmingly for the majority position but they did not attend the meeting quite so well.

NEW YORK WORKERS' SCHOOL

Class in "A B C of Communism" at Workers' School.

In response to the demand for more classes in the "A B C of Communism," the Workers' School in New York City now offers such a course at its own headquarters, 208 E. 12th street.

The classes will be conducted by Comrade J. C. Oblans, for many years an active party worker, and will meet every Thursday night, from 8 to 10 p. m.

The first session will be held Thursday, Jan. 8. Comrades in lower Manhattan particularly are urged to register and to get sympathizers also to enroll.

• • • •

Educational Directors Meet Monday, Jan. 19.

A special meeting of branch educational directors will be held on Monday, Jan. 19, at the headquarters of the Workers' School, 208 E. 12th street, New York City, at 8 p. m.

Branches which have not yet elected their educational director should do so at once, and send name and address to the secretary of the Workers' School.

All educational directors should take careful note of the date, Jan. 19, and make no other arrangements for that evening.

LIEBKNECHT MEMORIAL AND DAILY WORKER JUBILEE

ON Sunday, Jan. 11, the New York district of the Workers Party and the Young Workers League will join in an afternoon and evening affair at New Star Casino, Park Ave. and 107th St. The afternoon program will be under the special auspices of the Young Workers League in memory of the revolutionary hero, Karl Liebknecht. In the evening the first anniversary of the DAILY WORKER will be celebrated with a concert and dance. A joint ticket is issued at 50c which admits to either affair and is good for both if 25c extra is paid at the door.

to prevent the working class from uniting.

Germany is shortly to go thru the reichstag elections. Black reaction is impending there. Following America and England, the conservative groups are marching to power there too, and the social democrats must, of course, know this. What do they do, how did they build up their front? In what direction is it faced in this election campaign? Against the blacks? Nothing of the sort; they are building their entire front against the reds, against the Communist workers. They are helping the bourgeoisie to enact slavery elections. They have thrown practically the entire staff of the Communist Party into jail. The entire cream, the heads of the German workers, have been taken off with their aid. They are preparing for black reaction. Like the flunkeys that they are, they are serving the bourgeoisie the best heads of the German workers, the German Communists. These leaders of the German trade union movement are busy splitting the international labor movement, or to be more exact, preventing it from establishing unity.

The workers of a number of countries have reformist prejudices, and do not understand our aims; we still see among them an honest class intuition which does not find at once the true path, but which desires to find this path. Such a situation exists in England, for instance. In Germany things are quite different. There, during the last 25 years, the bourgeoisie has trained, welded, bred and fostered a staff of social democrats, beginning with Noske and ending with the trade unionist Dissman, a staff of dignitaries, ready at any moment to betray the working class. The German bourgeoisie has taken decades to train them, to destroy and disorganize the labor movement and serve as splitters in it. It is this group more than any other that stands in the way. There are comrades who frequently ask how do you think will international unity of the trade union movement evor be established? Give us an answer. My answer is as follows: In my opinion unity will doubtlessly be established and I think that international labor unity will be established in a relatively short time. I think that not more than a year or two will pass before it is actually established (applause). I think, comrades, that the seventh congress of our trade unions will be held after unity will have been established (applause), in spite of all the obstacles put up by our enemies.

We have patience and strong nerves (applause). We must have perseverance, we must know, comrades, that in fighting for the unity of the world trade union movement we are at the foreposts of the world revolution, and that everything that is perfidious and dishonest in the international labor movement, everything that is iniquitous and hateful of the red flag, is grouped against us in order to prevent the unity, to break the ranks before they are thoroly welded.

Let us be frank. We have a number of differences with the British trade union movement. They do not adhere to a Marxian platform, they have various prejudices, but we see there something different from the bourgeois-trained yellow social democracy, and we think that the experiment recently carried out in England will be very useful to many and many a worker. It cannot but be useful to the British workers. What did we have in England during the course of years and decades? We had there invariably two bourgeois parties taking each others' place in the government of the country. This was a two-party system, conservatives and liberals. After the war the historic scene was mounted by the labor party representing a mass force, tho paying ample tribute to reformism, and still remaining under its charm. Now we have a three party system: conservatives, liberals and labor. What did the experiment of the MacDonald system lead to: Undoubtedly, to the imminent destruction of liberalism. Liberalism has already been ground up between the two millstones, and will shortly be absorbed by conservatism and labor. Hepceforth two big parties will fight for power; on the one side the bourgeoisie, on the other the labor reformists; the third is only appearing on the horizon. It is the Communist Party, which will doubtless eventually unite the best elements of the British labor movement. (Applause).

We were told that the MacDonald experiment would lead to a softening of the class struggle. The reverse was the case. It led to a sharpening of the class struggle in England. They wanted to go thru one door, but strayed into another (applause). Therein lies their misfortune. They wanted to show the world how they put an end to the class struggle, how almost painlessly the bourgeois corn can be cut, so that the bourgeoisie would not feel it. But the result was a class struggle intensified to an unusual degree. Of course, a differentiation in the British labor movement is now inevitable and unavoidable, and MacDonald and his friends will not be able to escape this. Do they think that this show with the notorious Zinoviev letter will pass without any injury to them? (Laughter, applause). Comrades, personally we have no reasons to resent this incident (laughter). Just the contrary, we have grounds to be well satisfied with this incident, because MacDonald and Co. gave quite an unusual advertisement to the Communist International. Many thousands of workers in England do not know the meaning of a nucleus in the army, navy or even in the factory. Our press there is weak. Now thanks to this letter, even tho it is forged, they all learned the meaning of a nucleus (laughter, applause). So that, comrades, we are not moved by any resentment against their forgery. We have become perfectly used to forgeries, but what a rag MacDonald has made of himself in all this affair. Wherein lay the crux of this matter? MacDonald tried to sit on both sides of the fence. He knew that thousands of workers in England were sympathizing with the Soviet Union, and he therefore, conducted his election campaign in favor of a union with us; but then after all, he is a menshevik, and a leader of the Second International. He knew that it is inconvenient to sit on one chair, and he must sit between two chairs (laughter). He therefore, decided to secure the sympathies also of those who were against the Soviet Union; this way it would be safer (laughter). He therefore, made use of the forged letter. You know what pitiful blabbing he used to justify himself. He himself admitted that he knew about this letter ever since October 10th. His game fell thru entirely. I heard from a number of comrades well acquainted with life in England and with MacDonald's moods that this incident of the alleged letter cost the labor party perhaps a million votes. If we were to take this million from the conservatives and add it to the labor party, we would have a difference of two millions, that might have decided the election. That is what the typical pitiful shameful policy of MacDonald has led to, and I hope that it cannot fail to arouse the protest of the masses of British trade unionists.

They could not even end this affair with a dignified front. MacDonald appointed a commission. The commission said that it had no time to finish. MacDonald then resigned without waiting for the commission to complete its work and so they all finished by stating that no one saw the original of the letter but that they saw only a copy composed by some unknown person. One of the papers, I think it was "The Times," was sharp witted enough to subsequently write: "It makes no difference whether the letter is a forgery or not, it is no secret that Zinoviev is an enemy of the British nation" (laughter). No, dear gentleman, it is we who are the genuine friends of the British people, of the British toilers and working class. In our opinion the enemies of the British people are Baldwin and Co. Of course, there are some among them who do not know which camp to choose, labor or the bourgeoisie. We are deeply convinced that in the British trade unions and labor party a strong protest is developing in this connection.

You know that we have proposed to the general council of the British trade unions to investigate whether this letter was written by us or not. I hope that the comrades who have come here from England have brought us some answer to this question, and will give us their opinion. They are not bound by any formalities and they should tell the British working class how it is being doped. They must tell the truth and nothing but the truth. This is a splendid lesson to the British on the essence of democracy and of the freedom of press. We are being reproved for having no freedom of press. For the "Times" and the bourgeoisie we have no freedom of press and will have none (applause).

The history of this letter is a classic example of the alleged freedom of press in the capitalist countries. A few days before the elections, a crude forgery is let loose upon the world in order to frighten all the Henry Dubbs, the entire swamp, and persuade it to vote in favor of reaction. They do not leave time for a denial and even if they do so, they do it at the last moment, when everything has been prepared and the ballots issued. The entire press utilizes their freedom to fool the people in a most shameless manner, and later when the cabinet has been formed and the power passes into the hands of the blackest of the black hundreds, they say after all, it is of little importance, perhaps it was a forged document (laughter). Is not this a most obvious example of how the freedom of press, the hundreds of newspapers with circulations of many millions, the printeries and everything else, serve the bourgeoisie?

We say to the British people: "Yes, we are barbarians, we have a cruel dictatorship, you will make it much softer" (applause, laughter). We wish you, from our very heart, that you exploit your bourgeoisie in such a way that no one would notice it, and that the bourgeoisie would think it pleasant (applause). But remember the lesson received by your country. Does it not show that the bourgeois must be deprived of the freedom of press, by which it dopes the masses, dopes the working class, dopes the toilers? And remember, this takes place in England, and not in some remote country. Is it not clear to everyone that such a freedom of press is only a weapon in the hands of the bourgeoisie against the working class? That is why this incident is of no mean significance, and I think that it will be a good lesson to the British workers. What has taken place should be useful to them.

The British labor party has already gained a million and a quarter new votes, the appetite for power among the British workers has been aroused and the new black hundred government will strengthen it. The day will yet come in England when a labor government will again be in power, but it will be a different labor government from that we have seen now (laughter). True, it will not be a Soviet, Communist government, but only a transitional one, but it will not be a labor government that takes offices from the British king and feel glad about it, offices that we call "housekeepers' offices," the office of counting the shirts of the British king. Yes, the offices of manager of the king's kitchen, MacDonald appointed the prominent leaders of the British labor movement. It is time to put an end to this (applause).

The British workers deserved a much better fate than to count the kings' underwear. They deserve to have a true labor government, a true labor power, instead of an "ersatz" labor government. Of course, not after the Russian example, we do not in the least lay claims to this. Please have your English examples (applause).

Thus, comrades our congress is faced with the question of international labor unity in a situation that is extremely interesting and peculiar. For the last several months we have seen a practically complete change of scenery on the world arena. The pink-yellow color has been replaced by black; the class forces are reorganizing and most serious changes are taking place within the working class. Many of the Amsterdam leaders feel that they have no tomorrow, no future.

The international labor movement is making its way towards unity, and we are saying to the entire world: On our side the workers of the world will meet with sincere proletarian support, with a sincere desire of the workers to join their ranks. We do not for a moment abandon our views (no one will ask us to do that), we have celebrated the seventh anniversary of a truly labor instead of a royal revolution. We have been and are today true pupils of Lenin, members of the Communist International. We firmly adhere to our positions. The workers of the world will come to us. And remaining at our fighting posts, without any diplomacy, we extend a helping hand to the organized trade union movement of the world and say: "Let us unite on elementary principles, on the A. B. C. of the struggle against the bourgeoisie that is advancing with such unheard of insolence and unanimously." We must unite against this threat, and we are confident that all those who were against us will now agree with us. Yes, without fear of being mistaken, we say: "The time will come when, in spite of everything we shall form a united international of trade unions, and the British workers will not be among the last of those who together with us will map out the course of final emancipation and freedom for the workers of the world." (Stormy applause.) (Continued next Sat.)

THE WORKERS MONTHLY FOR JANUARY

THE WORKERS MONTHLY has started the New Year right by surpassing any of the other three numbers, excellent though they were. The DAILY WORKER plant deserves compliments for the superior workmanship displayed in its typographical makeup, and the contents are interesting and instructive.

The leading article is by Alexander Bittelman on "Lenin, Leader and Comrade." It is an easily read and easily understood article; plenty of meat and paucity of empty phraseology.

"Lenin is not dead" begins Bittelman. He then proceeds to prove that Lenin lives in the hearts of the class conscious workers of the world and that Lenin leads the world revolution today thru his teachings and the organization he fashioned. Hundreds of books have been written about Lenin since his death, thousands more will be written.

There is a keen analysis of the American Federation of Labor convention by William Z. Foster, an article by Anna Louise Strong, entitled "At the 'Red October' Candy Factory." There is another installment of the "History of the Russian Communist Party," by Gregory Zinoviev. "Notes on Shop Nuclei," by Martin Abern, a joint article by William Z. Foster and William F. Dunne, on "The A. F. of L. and Trade Union Unity," and several other articles, besides an excellent short story woven around the struggle in the coal mines.

Fred Ellis, the noted revolutionary artist, has two good cartoons. There are amusing and effective caricatures on the bourgeoisie by Art Young and pictures of life in Soviet Russia.

This number of the Workers Monthly is the "best yet." The article on Lenin will give Communists an appetite for more material on the life of the world's greatest revolutionist and the articles by Foster and Dugne on the trade union movement should strengthen the knowledge of the union militants and assist them in fighting the revolutionaries.

JOHN SPARGO, writing in look, declares that socia obsolete. Spargo made his li many years telling quite the r but the outbreak of the European war aroused his John Bull spirit and he became one of the champions of democracy, represented by the British Empire. John had his price of course. He was on the payroll of the British government before the United States entered the war and no doubt he drew more than one salary from then on.

SPARGO'S article shows light on the insincerity of socialist parties. He tells of his visit to Sweden in 1920. While in that country he asked Premier Branting, socialist, what he intended to do to realize the socialist ideal. "Nothing at all" replied Branting. That gentleman favored a program of maintaining the Swedish rate of exchange and in general a program that any white guard would support willingly. In fact the king was one of Branting's strongest supporters, a fact which was taken by prominent leaders of the American socialist party as an indication that there was a split in the ranks of European monarchy, a goodly number of them being ready to join the social democracy.

IT is undoubtedly true that Branting and every other socialist premier who succeded in gaining power in Europe since the war did nothing to advance the socialist ideal. On the contrary they were the most willing agents of capitalism. Witness Ramsay MacDonald in England and the Polish, Austrain and Czecho-Slovak socialists. But Spargo does not mention Russia where the workers have ruled for over seven years and where the ground work for a Communist society is being built. And should some one say that Communism has been a failure in Russia, we reply that Communism never existed in Russia, but that the workers have all power in their hands and are advancing toward the Communist goal ideologically as well as industrially.

SOCIALIST parties are obsolete but not socialism. It may seem like a paradox, yet it is true that socialist parties have tried to play the role of executioners of socialism, while the Communist parties who are successfully playing the role of the executioners of socialist parties are the deliverers of socialism. The capitalist system in Europe is bankrupt and could not maintain itself in power but for the assistance rendered to it by the socialist parties of Europe and the American capitalists. Spargo may console himself with the thot that socialism will not be realized in America before his carcass is turned into dust. In the meantime he intends to live the life of a prostitute.

J. A. LOCHRAY, editor of the Mid West News, and a former booster for a farmer-labor party, later a La-Follette booster and still later a Calvin Coolidge booster, (he can't sink any lower) is now trying to terrorize the capitalists into believing that they are confronted with an immediate danger which must be met by an appropriate expenditure of cash given to worthy perverts like the aforesaid Lochray. This faker has turned his rag into a red baiting sheet almost exclusively. So far he has not prospered by the change. Formerly the Mid-West News came out weekly; now it hurts the eye only once a month. Let us hope he makes it a yearly.

THE CINCINNATI INQUIRER recently published a dispatch from the Chicago Tribune's correspondent, which states that the Communist International has ordered a revolution to take place in the Balkans in the month of March. The story does not give the exact hour or minute on which the onslaught is to be made but it got very close to it. It will take place in the second or third week in March. It is also interesting to note that the main object of the revolt is to "heal the breach between Trotzky and former chiefs." The assumption is that Trotzky is addicted to sulky

MINERS URGE SUPPORT FOR LABOR DEFENSE

Protest Michigan Rule As Suppression

That the white terror of the capitalist dictatorship is rousing the workers to a realization of the threat against every worker existing in the "criminal syndicalist" laws, is seen by the first resolutions beginning to come in protesting against the action of the Michigan state supreme court in sustaining the conviction of C. E. Ruthenberg and opening the way for imprisonment of William Z. Foster, William F. Dunne and the other Michigan defendants.

Illustrative of the rising protest is the resolution, printed below, from the United Mine Workers of America, Local No. 2376, at Christopher, Illinois. It is to be noticed that these coal miners call upon labor to support the Labor Defense Council, 166 West Washington street, Chicago, Illinois, in the fight against the capitalist persecution. The resolution is as follows:

Resolution Against "Criminal Syndicalism Laws."

WHEREAS, the many state "criminal syndicalism" laws and "sedition acts" are unconstitutional and instruments of employing class tyranny over the workers and their organizations, and

WHEREAS, the state supreme court of Michigan has upheld the conviction of C. E. Ruthenberg for "assembling with" the Communists in an opinion which calls for the punishment of ideas and the denial of free speech and assemblage, and which evades the issue by ignoring the fact that, as the defense showed, there was not even a violation of the state law since nothing was done in Michigan by the defendant in the way of any overt act or advocacy, and

WHEREAS, Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Brockwalter and others of his class insist on a maximum sentence of ten years' imprisonment and $10,000 fine, for this "crime" of holding an opinion counter to their own rather than on the law and the constitution, and

WHEREAS, the sustaining of Ruthenberg's conviction by the United States supreme court will mean also the railroading to long terms in prison of William Z. Foster, Wm. F. Dunne and 29 other well-known fighters in the ranks of the labor movement, and would also encourage high-handed suppression by the capitalist controlled government of all and any working class organizations which darer opose their open shop rule, and

WHEREAS, the solidarity of the entire working class is essential to its welfare, and requires that those in the forefront of the struggle must especially have the support of all workers, therefore be it

RESOLVED, That we protest against and condemn the action o the Michigan supremes court, record ourselves as in support of the Labor Defense Council in this case and call upon all labor bodies and working class bodies to take the same stand. That we petition the governor of the state of Michigan to pardon the defendant in the event that the United States supreme court sustains the conviction, it being our view that such action on the part of the federal supreme court would be a nullification of the constitution in the interest of instruments of capitalist suppression of the workers, and be it further

RESOLVED, That copies of this resolution be sent to the governor of the state of Michigan and the labor press.

Leon Gremling, President,
Ed Johnson, Recording Secretary.

SOUTH BEND, IND.—By mistake the Workers Party of South Bend, Ind., called a meeting of the City Central Committee instead of a general membership meeting. But after listening to Comrade Minor speak for the minority and Comrade Swabeck for the majority, the City Central Committee voted unanimously, eight to nothing, to support the majority. The committee met January 2.

"WORK OR PAY!"

MINERS DIE IN BLOW UP OF UNSAFE POCKET

Coal Mine Was Old and Gaseous

(Special to the Daily Worker)

W. FRANKFORT, Ill., Jan. 4.—One coal miner is dead, another is dying, and several were severely injured here when a fall of coal in some old and unsafe workings of Mine No. 19 of the Industrial Coal company caused an explosion.

The workings of the mine were filled with gas. The safety laws were directly violated when the men were allowed to work in a mine in which there was danger of the coal falling at any time.

Falling Coal Releases Gas.

The falling coal released a pocket of gas, which rushed into the entry where the men were on their way to work, being ignited when it came into contact with the lamps of the miners.

Beveridge McKeever, a lad of 21 years of age, was badly burned and died yesterday in the hospital here. Ben Polinski is not expected to live. Two other victims, N. W. Malone and W. T. Wade, were so badly burned about the face and head that they will be disfigured for life.

The Illinois laws require that the mine be thoroly inspected before the men are allowed to enter, and if gas is found in the mine, the men must be kept out of the workings. This law was evidently violated, according to the news dispatches.

The United States department of labor, in a recently issued report, declares that many of these accidents are avoidable, if the coal operators would use the most scientific methods of laying excessive coal dust and of reinforcing the sides of the entries so that the coal will not fall. This the operators have not done, the department of labor admits, and hence avoidable mine accidents greatly increased in 1924.

NEW GERMAN CABINET TO BE DICTATORSHIP

Von Seeckt Is Hope of Reactionaries

BERLIN, Jan. 4.—The social democratic party which ruled Germany after the revolution that sent the Kaiser scurrying to Holland no longer cuts any figure in the Reich government. It is true Ebert still remains, but he is indeed the Last of the Mohicans.

The the yellows polled over 7,000,000 votes in the last elections, when Ebert called on Mark to form a cabinet he picked the most conservative collection that appeared on any government slate since the flight of the Kaiser.

The new cabinet formed by Marx is a non party affair and because of its inability to secure a parliamentary majority it is proposed to equip it with dictatorial powers.

SAN FRANCISCO POLICE FORCED TO FREE 2 MEMBERS MOONEY'S UNION

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 4.— Unable to secure any evidence to connect them with the attempted shooting of W. H. Jamison, open shop iron works owner, the police have released Earl Parente and Hubert Hansen of the molders' union. Parente was recently beaten up in the street by unknown assailants, supposed to be gunmen hired by the open shop employers, against whom the molders' union has declared a strike.

'NATIONALIZATION OF CHILDREN' AND BOLSHEVISM, TOO!

Capitalist Arguments on 20th Amendment

NEW YORK.—Child marriages and child labor held the floor at the public hearing of the New York state commission to examine laws relating to child welfare. Sen. Benjamin Antin, who has been quoted in favor of the federal amendment on child labor, presided.

The old arguments for and against the amendment were dragged out with the familiar cry of Bolshevism. James P. Holland, president New York State Federation of Labor, and John P. Coughlin, secretary New York City Central Trades and Labor Assembly, spoke for the amendment.

Charges that even worse results than the 18th amendment brought would result from the 20th, were made by William McCarroll, a director of the New York board of trade and transportation. Mrs. E. S. Shumway of the New York committee for protection of our homes and children agreed with McCarroll that the amendment would mean "nationalization" of children.

Limitation of immigration will increase the number of child workers according to George W. Alger, chairman New York child labor committee, who argued against McCarroll. Already, he claimed, reports from 39 cities show an increase of 20 per cent in child labor and nine cities report an increase of 50 per cent. He said it was ridiculous to claim that a measure endorsed by Pres. Coolidge, Harding and Lodge could be in any way Bolshevistic. Mrs. F. Louis Slade, president New York state league of women voters, said opponents of the child labor amendment were moved by business considerations.

A hasty marriage bill which would make five days' delay after obtaining license compulsory is proposed to combat the child marriages permissible in New York. Those favoring the bill say that children are married under 16 in the state to enable them to quit school and go to work.

FRENCH BID ON DEBT NOT ACCEPTABLE

Infinitesmal Interest and 90 Years to Pay

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Administration officials today envisioned a long and tedious period of negotiation over the funding of the $4,000,000,000 French war debt.

If the Clementel note, now reported enroute to Washington, bears out the summaries of it that have been cabled in press dispatches from Paris, it is considered a foregone conclusion here that the terms proposed by France will prove wholly unacceptable to the United States. These terms are understood to be:

1. A moratorium of ten years.
2. An interest rate of one-half of one per cent.
3. Payments to be made over a period of 90 years.

Such terms would mark a radical departure from the basic agreements provided in other debt settlements, and undoubtedly would lead to much opposition in congress, which must, in the end, approve any bargain made by the American debt funding commission.

The state department announced today that at the meeting of the allied finance ministers at Paris next Tuesday, the United States would be represented by Ambassador Frank B. Kellogg, at London; Ambassador Myron T. Herrick at Paris, in addition to Col. James A. Logan, the customary "unofficial observer" at European gatherings.

Lest the presence of three such distinguished American diplomats at the conference be misinterpreted, officials at the department reiterated that under no circumstances would they engage in a discussion of American war debts.

PETTY BOURGEOIS FIGHT FOR PLACE WITH PLUTES ON NEW GERMAN CABINET

BERLIN, Jan. 4.—Germany on Monday will have a new legislative body in session without a cabinet to direct the government's policies.

This situation was made evident when Chancellor Marx again reported to President Ebert that he could not form a new cabinet. The reason, he said, was that the centrist party is insisting on a coalition which would include the social democrats. The German peoples' party, Marx said, refused to listen to any coalition plan. Marx has announced the plan to make the new cabinet even more conservative than the old.

Your Policy Must Be — Buy a Policy

GERMAN 'DEMOCRACY' IN LAST PHASE; 22 PARTIES CONTESTED RECENT ELECTION; END IN SIGHT

BERLIN, Dec. 16 (By Mail.)—The elections are over. The old cabinet has gone. Today or tomorrow the social-democratic president of the bourgeois republic will ask Marx (clerical center) or Stresemann (people's party), or some other agent of the heavy industry, to form a new cabinet. The triumphant tones of the social-democratic party have vanished. Sobriety has returned. The Communist Party is still in existence—to the poignant disappointment of the whole bourgeoisie, but particularly of the social-democracy. 2,750,000 workers and peasants voted for the Communist Party and its open revolutionary program.

The Communist Party will live and grow; it cannot be crushed—not even by a white terror as it is at present raging in Germany. The 30 million voters who went to the polls have received another valuable lesson in bourgeois democracy. The "stabilized" German republic is still writhing in agony. No problem has been solved by this election, no contradiction eliminated.

Twenty-two Parties.

Twenty-two (22) "parties" participated in the parliamentary burlesque. One of these "parties" has received 190 votes, another 160. Surely this must be the last, the "highest" phase of bourgeois parliamentarism! What specialization, what differentiation! Are you a vegetarian? Then form a party! Are you a commercial phrenologist? Then form a party and enter into the parliamentary struggle. Are you a general who sent millions of workers to the grave?—quick, get a party and come into the "House of the People." There is room for everybody; come all of you—while there is still a chance!

But what are the concrete results of these elections! The Communist Party has lost one million votes. The social-democrats have temporarily succeeded in fooling a section of the proletariat with the Dawes promises, the prospects of American gold, "stabilization," paradise itself. With these promises they gained thirty seats in the reichstag. The clerical center and the democrats have made but slight gains. The two parties of heavy in-

DELEGATES FIGHT UNSEATING REDS IN FEDERATION

Military Training Camps Are Denounced

The mere talk of expelling Communists from the Chicago Federation of Labor met quick and severe opposition in the federation meeting yesterday. Only one delegate, who started the discussion, had the temerity to mention it, and he was talked down by every one else who spoke. Likewise the support of the citizens military training camps given by the federation's delegate to the A. F. of L. convention was hotly denounced by a great many delegates, among them ex-service men in the delegate body.

Upon the report of the executive council, Delegate Swabeck of the Painters' union spoke in vigorous protest of the action of the federation's delegate to the El Paso convention of the A. F. of L., particularly in his support of the resolution making the labor unoin officials recruiting agents for the citizens' military training camps.

Denounces Union Recruiting for Army

Swabeck denounced the leaders of the A. F. of L. as the willing hand maidens of capitalist imperialism helping the capitalists prepare for an other world war. We face, he declared, another great war or profound business depression, and the leaders of the American Federation were busy collaborating with the capitalists to lead the workers again into the trenches, instead of building up the membership of the unions which were wasting away.

He cited the fizzle of the so-called "steel campaign" where tens of thousands of dollars had been spent with no organization to show for it.

Delegate Arnold, also from the Painters' Union, expressed surprise that Thomas S. Kennedy, the delegate from the Chicago federation to the El Paso convention, had dared to support a scheme of making the unions recruiting grounds and the union officers recruiting agents of the war department in view of the pronounc

RUTH FISCHER IS ARRESTED IN AUSTRIA

At the Instigation of the British Government

BERLIN, Jan. 4.—Ruth Fischer, leading figure in the German Communist Party, was arrested in Vienna on Saturday morning on a charge of crossing into Austria on a false passport and of registering under a fictitious name.

Comrade Fischer is a native of Austria and has made frequent trips to her native country previously without molestation. It is freely stated here that the arrest was made at the instigation of the British government which has an economic stranglehold on Austria and is now busy perfecting a cordon of Balkan states for hostile action against Soviet Russia.

The proposed Balkan Federation of Soviet Republics as against the present governmental satrapies of the big capitalist powers has also a strong hold in the Balkans and England has taken the lead in organizing the bourgeoisie to resist the Sovietization of the witches' cauldron of Europe.

Using the Pope.

It is now admitted for the first time that the Vatican has been dragged into the anti-Soviet plot. The pope is instructed by the protestant British government to use its influence among the catholic populations and keep their minds inflammed against Communism. In view of the pope's alliance with the tumbling fascist regime in Italy he must take England's orders regardless of the consequences. He is between the devil and the deep sea.

France has promised Britain support against Russia but the former is conducting negotiations with Kemalism and the French have more to fear in the immediate future from Britain than from Soviet Russia. Capitalist nations cannot afford to take a long and altruistic view of things, owing to the keen competition between them.

Progress in China.

Soviet diplomacy has made tremendous progress in China and it is confidently expected that Sun Yat Sen, the revolutionary Chinese leader, will be the next president of that country. Japan and Russia have not yet signed treaties but Japan needs the oil on Saghalien Island for the use of her navy, and for her relations with the western powers excluding France are none too friendly. One of the principal specific reasons for the revival of hostility to the Soviet government is the defeat of the capitalist powers' intrigues in China by Soviet diplomacy.

LISBON, Portugal, Jan. 4.—The cabinet has decided formally to recognize Russia as a Soviet republic.

FRENCH REFUSE TO TALK CASH; ASKS QUESTION

U. S. Demands Return of Blood Money

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Jan. 4.—The French government will never pay a franc of its war debt to the United States if it can possibly avoid doing so.

This is the only conclusion to be drawn from the statement of a high official of the French foreign office when he declared that he did not see any reason why France should pay the bills for a "common war." But France must pay, at least if England is successful in her present intrigues at Washington.

It appears that France has made an offer to liquidate its debt to the United States. But considering the condition of capitalism in Europe, the offer is tantamount to repudiation. First, France wants ten years' moratorium, a rather lengthy breathing spell during which anything is liable to happen in France.

Light Payments.

Secondly the payments would be spread over an eighty year period, the first payments being rather light, a sum of $20,000,000 annually during the first twenty years.

U. S. Ambassador Herrick would not admit that official overtures were made by France to the United States. Neither would the French government.

May Turn Over Territory.

Washington knows quite well that France cannot pay and the present instance is with the object of forcing the French government to mention territorial concessions in lieu of cash. France has some islands in the western hemisphere that the United States would like to lay hands on. It is also not beyond the range of probability that England may consent to turn over some real estate rather than continue paying several millions of pounds yearly as interest on her war debt.

COOLIDGE AGAIN CHANGES MIND ON POSTAL BILL

Submits Compromise for Sterling Bill

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 5.— A substitute for the Sterling bill providing for sharply increased mailing rates charged newspapers has been approved by Coolidge. The new bill, presented by Senator Moses, is considered a compromise affair, as it increases postal rates, but not as much as the bill formerly backed by Coolidge.

The new bill, drafted by the joint postal committee of congress is looked on in some quarters as a graceful withdrawal by Coolidge of his opposition to the bill for the increase in the wages of the postal employes, vetoed by Coolidge during the last session of congress. However, if strenuous objection is raised in the senate to the substitute bill, it is taken for franted that Coolidge senators will prolong discussion until congress adjourns, if possible.

The substitute bill was presented by the Coolidge senators after the newspapers had raised a storm of protest against increase in their mailing rates. The Moses bill spreads the increase over several classes of mail instead of confining it to the newspapers.

Fifteen Injured When Syracuse Car Turns Turtle

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Jan. 4—Fifteen persons were reported to have been injured when a Solvay car, Syracuse bound, ran wild and tipped over today. A general ambulance call was issued by police.

The car, almost filled with Saturday shoppers, was on a turn when the accident occurred. The exact cause is unknown. The trucks left the track and the car tipped over. Many of the passengers were women and children.

RAIL UNIONS BACK OUT OF THIRD PARTY MOVEMENT AND ADVOCATE ANCIENT "REWARD AND PUNISH"

By LAURENCE TODD
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Recommendations that the 16 associated railroad labor organizations refuse to take part in the convention called by the conference for progressive political action for Feb. 21 in Chicago to consider a new political party have been forwarded to the presidents of these organizations by their spokesmen at the meeting of the national committee of the C. P. P. A. held in Washington Dec. 12. Johnston of the Machinists dissents.

Signed by Officials.

The report is signed by H. E. Wills of the Locomotive Engineers, Edward Keating, manager of Labor, their weekly national paper, and B. M. Jewell, president railway employes department of the American Federation of Labor.

After reviewing the action of the national committee on Dec. 12, when 13 votes were cast against the convention, the report recites a long list of arguments used against action. Among them were: "That the so called mandate of July 4 was not the action of a convention, but was the expression of opinion of those who attended the conference; that the railroad labor organizations as such could not and would not become parties to the formation of a political party; that therefore it was clearly the duty of the committee, inasmuch as these organizations were the backbone of this conference, and had contributed most to its support, to exercise good judgment and avoid unnecessary expenditure of money, time and energy."

Claim Release from Pledges.

The report states that the rail labor group—except Johnston—did not attend the final session of the committee which drafted the call, "and we hold that by refraining from attending any further meetings we have released our organizations of any and all obligations to participate in the convention to be called to finance it, or to be in any manner obligated by its actions. Sen. LaFollette was represented in the conference on Dec. 12 by his son, but the senator's position regarding the questions above discussed was not stated."

"Labor" Makes Threat.

The report suggests that if the rail labor chiefs approve the action of their spokesmen in Washington, Labor will launch an educational campaign "wherein we will frankly and freely discuss with our membership the reasons why our associated labor organizations take the above position."

They suggest also that the chiefs likewise issue letters to their organizations, explaining why the organization "cannot and will not become a party to the formation of a political party," and why the funds of the organizations, local or general, cannot be expended to send delegates to the convention; but it is to be made clear that each member may attend the convention as a delegate, provided he is not a delegate of his labor organization.

To Keep C. P. P. A.

Finally, the report urges that the C. P. P. A. be maintained; "that labor organizations remain free to determine for themselves and by them selves their own political policy, and to support their friends and reelect them—and to oppose their enemies and if possible defeat them."

This report dated Dec. 3 has not hitherto come into print. The call for the convention, which will be held in the Lexington hotel in Chicago, Feb. 21, has been issued to the labor, farmer and progressive political groups represented in the C. P. P. A.

Coolidge to Be Eased Into White House by Banker

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 4.—A banker will have charge of the arrangements of President Coolidge's inaugural parade on March 4, it was announced today. William T. Galliher, Washington banker, has been appointed by Coolidge as chairman of the inaugural committee, in complete charge of all inaugural arrangements apart from the official ceremonies at the capitol. Coolidge has followed his usual policy of catering to wealth in this appointment.

In Memoriam—Lenin

On the 21st of January the workers the world over will hold memorial meetings for Nicolai Lenin, the leader and fighter for the liberation of the laboring masses. In connection with these memorial meetings, on Thursday, Jan. 15, a moving picture, "In Memoriam—Lenin," will be shown in the Gartner's Independent Theatre, 3725 Roosevelt Road. Two other pictures will also be shown: "Polikushka," and "Soldier Ivan's Miracle."

Admission will be 50c. Tickets are for sale now at Russian Technical School, 1902 W. Division St., Russian Co-operative Restaurants, 1734 W. Division St. and 760 Milwaukee Ave., at 166 W. If the revolution does not take place at the specified time by the Chicago Tribune correspondent and doubt is cast on the authenticity of his information, he may come back like the official of the British foreign office by saying: "Well, even if such instructions were not sent out by Zinoviev, it is just like what he would write, had he written them." What are you going to do about it?

HOWEVER it is not likely that the papers will become dull thru lack of exciting news from Europe in the next few months. We note that Mussolini is finding it harder to maintain the fiction that he is the greatest ruler since the days of Julius Caesar and the angel guardian of capitalism. His murder crew is now squealing on him and it looks as if his neck would soon make the acquaintance of a rope, or a sharp knife. Those who see a similarity between the black shirt dictatorship in Italy and the proletarian dictatorship in Russia should note the difference between a dictatorship of the majority, as in Russia and a dictatorship of the minority over the majority is the case in Italy. The Russian workers have majority rule in the real sense. The workers and peasants rule and nobody will question the fact that they are the majority.

CHICAGO PARTY ACTIVITIES

Workers Party branches have been assigned to aid in the campaign in various wards in which candidates, members of the Workers Party are running in the aldermanic elections on Feb. 24, 1925. Branches have been assigned to the ten wards in which our candidates are running according to the locations of the branch. The Young Workers' League Working Area branches are also rendering aid.

The following are the branches and their assignments to wards:

Ward No. 24—H. Epstein, candidate; Wm. Kruse, captain. Branches working in this ward are: Douglas Park English, Italian W. S. No. 2, and Young Workers' League Area Branch No. 1.

Ward No. 31—Candidate not yet selected, captain, L. Candella. Branches working in this ward are: Italian 31st ward, Hungarian, Greek, Italian No. 1 Y. W. L. No. 2, Spanish, Bulgarian, and Mid City English.

Ward No. 32—Candidate not yet selected. M. Stolar, captain. Branches working in this ward are: Ukrainian No. 1, Polish North Side, Russian and Young Workers' League Area Branch No. 5.

Ward No. 28—Candidate, N. Dozenberg, captain, W. Ozol. Branches working in this ward are: Lettish and West Side Scandinavian.

Ward No. 3—Candidate, E. L. Doty captains, Minor and Gordon Owens. Branches working in this ward are: South Side English, Englewood English, South Side Scandinavian, Polish South Side.

Ward No. 11—Candidate, Victor Zokaitis, manager, M. Manus. Branches working in this ward are: Lithuanian No. 5, South Slav No. 1, Ukrainian No. 5 and Y. W. L. No. 7.

Ward No. 22—Candidate, L. Cejka; captain, A. Overgaard. Branches working in this ward are: Czecho-Slovak No. 1, Czecho-Slovak No. 3, Lithuanian No. 2, Y. W. L. No. 4, Lithuanian No. 77 and the Douglas Park Jewish.

Ward No. 34—Harry Brooker, candidate; I. L. Davidson, captain. Branches working in this ward are: Northwest Jewish, Italian Terra Cot ta, Y. W. L. No. 6 and the Roumanian Branch.

Ward No. 35—J. L. Engdahl, candidate; N. J. Christensen, capain. Northwest English, Karl Marx, Scandinavian, Armenian.

Ward No. 44—J. W. Johnstone, candidate; Walt Carmon, captain. Finnish, Lakeview Scandinavian, North Side English, German Young Workers' League No. 1.

Petitions are already out and comrades are expected to get on the job at once to get the necessary signatures to place our candidates on the ballot. All petitions must be in at the local office by Jan. 23.

Branch secretaries are instructed to call meetings immediately of their branch executive committee and elect a branch elections committee to get in touch with the ward captain. Do not wait for a branch meeting. Time is brief. Get busy. As soon as the branch elections committee meets with the ward captain a ward committee will be elected. Branches will then also be assigned to a section of the ward in which they are to work.

The DAILY WORKER will be a feature of this campaign. Every member of the party or league going out to secure signatures on petitions is to take the DAILY WORKER and leave the copy at each place he visits. Further, these comrades are to try to get subscriptions for the DAILY WORKER thru the special DAILY WORKER subscription cards. The details on this program will be given in the next issue of the DAILY WORKER.

HOPE OF FREEDOM FOR RUSSIAN SOLDIER WHO QUIT WILSON'S WAR

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—War department officials are understood ready to recommend release of Anton Karachun, Russian citizen, serving a long sentence at McNeil's Island prison for desertion from the American forces in Siberia in 1919, if Karachun will return to Russia. Karachun enlisted without suspecting that he would be ordered to fight his fellow-Russians.

Armour & Co. and Other Corporations Use Monroe Doctrine

RIO DE JANIERO, Jan. 4—The encroaching clutches of Wall street imperialism upon the countries of South America, the basis of the new and aggressive interpretation of the Monroe Doctrine, is seen again illustrated in the decree signed yesterday by President Bernardes of Brazil, granting business concessions to Armour and Company, the Parke-Davis drug company, and the International Machine company.

ARNOLD SOMMERLING

JOINED the underground Communist Party of Esthonia, in 1920. Elected secretary of the Longshoremen's Union in Reval. Began to organize the union of Young Proletarians.

On the 15th of April, 1921, the police raided this union, arrested the majority of the C. E. C., the union was dissolved, Sommerling becoming "illegal" and going underground. He did not cease his activities, and on the third week after the raid, he was arrested. In 1922, in the case of the 115, he was sentenced to 10 years of hard labor. He was exchanged by the Soviet government for some white guard spies. He then became active among the youth of Leningrad. After Jan Tomp was murdered by the Esthonian government, Sommerling went back to Esthonia, participating actively in the building of barricades, but was again forced underground. Together with two othe' comrades, Alikon and Krustik, he stayed in a small village—Ero, ten miles from Reval. The Reval secret service found out about it and five secret service men came to take him. They were forced to call out a whole company, and after a nine-hou' battle, from 10 p. m. to 7 a. m., Comrade Sommerling, leader of the young Esthonian Communists, together with his comrades, were dead.

"Labor Lieutenant" of Bosses Helps Create Chaos Among Workers

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the anti-Communist, William Green, the new head of the American Federation of Labor, joins the camp followers of the war on child labor. Green is no more than a camp follower in this great struggle. He is even the brand of camp follower ready to desert to the enemy when occasion demands.

* * * *

Green belongs to the democratic party of the southern chattel owners, before the Civil War, and now the party of the southern cotton mill owners, the worst exploiters of child labor.

Green is now the head of the American Federation of Labor, just as he was formerly secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America. But he was never a leader of the working class. He always trailed in the rear. He was dragged into championing whatever labor measures he supported thru the pressure from the masses from underneath. That kind of a champion always deserts at the first opportunity.

That kind of a misleader, a "labor lieutenant" of the capitalist class, always fight the militants, the class conscious workers. Green is one of the worst red baiters in the whole labor movement. He makes war on the Communists, who alone wage a real war against child labor; not only for immediate relief, but for its complete extinction thru the abolition of capitalism.

The big business exploiters of children are not worried much by Green's opposition. Only the fight of the Communists rouses them.

Now the state legislatures are meeting over the country to consider the child labor amendment to the constitution—the proposed 20th amendment—the propagandists of the the enemy are more active than ever.

Tons of literature, urging the exploitation of children, are being sent out, for instance, by the National Committee for the Rejection of the 20th Amendment.

It is significant that one of the special letters mailed out contains two pieces of propaganda.

One of these is a reproduction of an editorial from the subservient spokesman of the capitalist class, the New York Evening Post. It is an argument for child labor.

The other reproduces not only the top of our first page of Monday, Dec. 1, with its headline, "Communists Fight Child Labor," but also the entire article appearing in that issue under the sub-head, "United Front Call Issued by Workers Party—Big War on Exploitation of Children Starts." Ours is the fight they fear.

This National Committee for Rejection of the 20th Amendment recognizes its class foe in the Communists, with their party, the Workers (Communist) Party, and their daily, the DAILY WORKER.

This "Committee," in pitting the propaganda for child labor in the New York Evening Post against the propaganda against child labor in the DAILY WORKER, shows the class conscious working class position of the Communist movement.

* * * *

Green recognizes no classes. For him there is no working class; no capitalist class. The new A. F. of L. head epitomizes the position of the class collaborationist, when he says:

"That children are employed in industry and commerce . . . is a challenge to the ideals of our republic and to the humanitarian spirit of our nation."

Child slavery is but part of the greater problem of wage slavery that holds the working class in its shackles. Children in industry is not a challenge to Green's "republic," which is the republic of the owning class. It is a challenge to the whole oppressed working class. This nation, Green's nation, ruled by Wall Street, will never make a place for "the spirit of humanity" until Soviet Rule displaces its Dollar Rule.

Green may speak against child labor. But his collaboration with the capitalist class only helps to cripple the working class in its struggle to abolish the slavery of children.

Thus do all the "labor lieutenants" of capitalism try to bring confusion into the ranks of the workers struggling for their own liberation from capitalism.

BOSTON Y. W. L. FIVE TO ONE FOR MAJORITY THESIS AFTER HEARING LOVESTONE, BALLAM FOR MINORITY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 4.—At a membership meeting of the Young Workers League held here, to discuss the theses of the C. E. C. and its minority, Comrades Jay Lovestone and John J. Ballam, district organizer of the party, presented the position of the minority, with Comrade Barney Mass, of the Young Workers League, speaking for the majority of the league and party. After a thoro discussion, the vote resulted in 20 voting for the majority thesis and 4 for the minority. This puts the Boston Young Workers League clearly on record in favor of the position of the national executive committee of the league and the central executive committee of the party.

CIRCULATION OF 500,000 SHOWS PRAVDA'S GROWTH

Go Forward with Slogan "Into the Masses!"

By ERIC VERNEY.

MOSCOW, Jan. 4.—On December 2 the circulation of Pravda reached 506,546 copies.

This record-breaking achievement is a landmark in the history of the world revolutionary press, especially as the circulation last January stood at not more than 126,000.

During the current year, daily sales reached the following figures:

January	126,334
March	170,445
June	307,443
September	379,135
December	507,546

These remarkable figures speak for themselves.

Pravda in 1912.

We can only realize the full significance of these figures when we compare them with those of 1912, when the Pravda, following in the wake of the illegal Bolshevik organs Vperod (Forward) and Proletary, first saw light as a mass workers' daily. Twelve years ago the circulation of Pravda was about 30,000 copies. But in spite of this comparatively moderate figure, it had already become a mass paper, serving the wide interests of the workers. Copies were often passed on from hand to hand until but a tattered remnant was left.

During the Pravda's legal period from 1912-15, the paper was directed by Lenin in exile abroad, and produced and distributed by the comrades in Russia under most difficult conditions. Nevertheless it steadily increased its influence among the revolutionary working masses. In those days Pravda

KLUXER TERROR DRIVE IN CITY MAKES ITS BOW

First Victim of Putsch Was Happy Lover

Following the threat made by the ku klux klan officials in Chicago that the inviable empire had arranged for a campaign of terror and violence in the city, beginning in the near future and on a date kept secret for tactical reasons, it was discovered on last Saturday, that Mr. P. Gartner, manager of a shoe store in the loop, was kidnapped on November 3, by four members of the klan and saved from possible murder by two West Park policemen.

One of the kidnappers, Howard Hansen, is said to be a kleagle of the klan. It appears that Gartner had committed the offense of calling on a young woman, who is employed by Montgomery Ward & Co., without securing the permission of the officers of the hooded order.

It was during the course of one of those visits that Gartner was grabbed by four men, hustled into a waiting automobile and driven west on Washington Blvd. His shouts attracted the policemen.

Judge Hayes ordered the cases referred to the grand jury for indictment on charges of kidnapping.

EMPLOYMENT SHARKS MUST QUIT CHARGING DOUBLE FEES FOR JOBS

SACRAMENTO, Cal.—Attorney General Webb has announced that the practice of California private employment agencies of charging an additional fee when a temporary position is made permanent, is illegal. Hitherto workers were charged one fee for the temporary job, and then another if they were kept permanently.

MAKE OUR DAILY SAFE FOR 1925

By ABRAM JAKIRA,
District Organizer, District Three.

UNEMPLOYMENT is rapidly spreading thruout the country. Wages are being reduced. The Coolidge victory has helped to encourage the ruling class to start an aggressive offensive campaign against the workers and their organizations. The employing class is now solidifying its forces for the coming smashing drive against labor.

The situation in Europe is even more acute. We may expect important developments during the coming year.

During the short period of its existence, the DAILY WORKER has rendered a tremendous service to the labor movement. Every important battle, whether political or economic of the year past found the DAILY WORKER on the job, leading the workers in the fight against their exploiters. The militants in the labor movement who have had the opportunity to see their DAILY WORKER in action during the year past must be the first ones to realize that during the coming year the DAILY WORKER will be needed more than ever before. They must be the first ones to get busy at once and help to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925. Buy a policy yourself and make it your policy to sell as many policies as you can to your fellow workers and friends!

ed stand the Chicago federation had always taken against war.

Wants Communists Expelled.

A peculiar reason was then advanced by another delegate that the resolution regarding the class collaboration in recruiting cannon fodder was all right, because "it took the military training camps out of the hands of the militarists." How this magic trick was accomplished without the militarists knowing it, he failed to state, nor did he make clear why trade unionists should be more willing to be led into the trenches by their officials than by militarists, as long as they get killed for imperialism in either case.

But this delegate held a bad opinion of Communists. He wanted them expelled. "They ought to be kicked out," he shouted. The El Paso convention was a fine, peaceful convention. There were no Communists there.

Victor Koehler, delegate from the Photo Engravers, took a decidedly different view of Communists than Delegate Diehl. The Communists had as much right as anyone to express their opinions in the unions. Furthermore, they told the truth.

Delegates Praise Communists.

Jack Johnstone, so Koehler declared, had taken the floor many times and told the truth. He had stuck by Johnstone and would stick by him. Communists are constructive, and those who want to throw them out are the destructive element, he asserted.

Ed Nockels made a wandering speech, the general impression given in it being that the Communists had better be left alone. He claimed that if they were expelled they would only be martyrs.

John Schussler of the Photo Engravers vigorously defended the Communists who, he said, "Had the courage to disagree with the dictators and autocrats of the American Federation of Labor."

Jon Fitzpatrick in a long speech denouncing the Communists, claimed that they were "clever enough to seize on fundamental issues" which, he said, "fooled the delegates." That is why they picked up militarism. How the delegates were "fooled" he didn't say. But he disagreed with Diehl on expelling them. "Don't get that sort of stuff into your thinking machinery," he said. "We won't question any man's right to represent his organization. The local unions are responsible for their delegates."

Much argument among the delegates brought out the comment that if Communists were wrong, they should be met upon the issues, and not expelled for being Communists. The report carried.

An ex-service man spoke, reminding the delegates that the delegates criticized had been delegates for a long time and were always welcome as good union men. He, as an ex-army man, was also opposed to the military training camps and he agreed with Delegate Swabeck that it was an issue, vital to trade unionists, and important to bring before the body.

MUSSOLINI TAKES 'RESPONSIBILITY FOR EVERYTHING'

ROME, Jan. 5.—Mussolini spoke today before a packed chamber. He said that he personally would take "normal political and historical responsibility for everything" which had brought on the present "moral question."

The dissension shortly would be cleared up, he predicted, but he did not allude to an eventual solution.

Mussolini recalled his first speech to the chamber in 1923 when asked whether there was present now any deputy who was willing to bring him before a high court of justice.

Much curiosity was aroused in the chamber by the obscure remark of Mussolini that there "would be a complete clarification of the situation within the next 48 hours."

Mussolini's speech was wildly cheered by the fascist deputies. At the conclusion of the speech, former Premier Salandra met with his own followers to decide upon a course of action to continue his opposition to the fascists.

The Workers Monthly

LAME DUCK DEMOCRAT QUACKS AT PARTY AND PRAISES CAL COOLIDGE

(Special to the Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4. — The democratic party was flayed as "useless" and its policies in congress denounced as "ridiculous," in a farewell speech to the senate Saturday, by Senator Nathaniel E. Dial, democrat, of South Carolina.

With biting invective, Dial charged his party had deteriorated "like sheep gone astray" by coalitions with "Bolshevism and Communism." He praised President Coolidge as a "better democrat" than his own colleagues, and paid high tribute to the president's leadership.

'DEMOCRACY' IN GERMANY ON ITS LAST LEGS

dustry and the junkers (the German nationalists and the people's party) have also made gains.

The fascist party (national socialists) have suffered a catastrophic defeat, having lost 18 of their 32 seats.

Dweedle-Dum Plus Dweedle-Dee.

These are the arithmatical results. In reality, however, no essential change has been affected, no problem solved. With the announcement of the first election results, the politicians of every party, from the extreme right to the extreme "left" of the social-democratic party, took up their pads and pencils and began to add and subtract: Social democrats plus democrats plus center equal so and so much; but such a "left bloc" won't do, for it has no effective majority. Then let's try: People's party plus center plus democrats plus social-democrats equal the so-called "big coalition"; that would do, but—the people's party is in reality the wing of the nationalists and was "bitterly" fought by the "republican" parties (those loyal to the Weimar constitution) in these elections as arch-reactionaries. The social-democrats would like to enter such a coalition, (the "Vorwaerts" lost no time in saying so), for it offers the only chance of getting a ministerial post or two, but the people's party insists on getting the nationalists into the new government.

Moreover, the so-called "left bloc," which the social-democrats had so passionately longed for, and is neither left, nor a bloc. The clerical center is divided in itself and is being pushed by its heavy industrial wing towards the right. On the democrats we need waste no words; they are simply democrats and will go anywhere and do everything—in the interests of the republic or the Vaterland, of course.

The Social-Democrats.

And the social-democrats? They are utterly at sea. They have thirty new seats but nowhere to go. In the election campaign they went as far as forming a "united front" with the catholic center and the democrats. A joint appeal was issued with the following historical slogan: "Vote for Center, Democrats or Social-Democrats!"

They submerged we may say drowned, their identity as a working class party. They succeeded, as we have seen, in duping the vacillating section of the workers, but for how long? We must bear in mind that the old reichstag was in reality one grand coalition, from Von Tirpitz all the way down to and including Breitscheid. The Dawes plan was put over on the German proletariat with the votes of the nationalists and the social-democrats. It now remains to be put in operation. What the parties are now fighting over is the distribution of the ministerial posts. The bankruptcy of parliament and bourgeois democracy is illustrated once more.

The Party of the Working Class.

There is only one party which is disinterested in the squabble—the Communist Party. It is a mass party with a solid nucleus of nearly 3,000,000 class conscious workers and peasants, who can be frightened by no terror, and who know what it means to vote for the Communists.

The most important fact established by the recent election is, that the Communist Party has conquered the best and most important section of the working class, and has driven a PERMANENT WEDGE into the body of the capitalist state. This fact is now admitted even by the bourgeois press.

What is the attitude of the Communist Party towards the new reichstag and the new government? A very simple and clear one: To the working class it makes no essential difference which agents of the bourgeoisie sit in the government. Whether the social-democrats receive a job more or a job less matters and alters nothing whatsoever. Our class enemy, from the extreme right down to and including the social-democrats is agreed and united on the main thesis, which is: (1) To continue the reparations policy on the basis of the Dawes plan. (2) To increase production and augment the profits of the exploiters at the sole expense of the working class.

The Communist Declaration.

The Communist faction of the new reichstag has met today (Dec 16), and has issued a "declaration of war" against every capitalist government—with or without the social-democrats, regardless of what parliamentary combination it puts on. The Communist parliamentary fraction will fight for the life interests of the working masses, and demands:

1. Complete amnesty for all political prisoners of the proletariat, and the immediate release of the imprisoned Communist members of the reichstag.

2. Complete and unconditional restoration of the 8-hour day, and a shorter working day in the mines and other dangerous industries.

3. A living wage for all workers and effective support for all unemployed.

4. Protection of the poor peasantry against the effects of the present crisis and the encroachments of the junkers.

It is self-evident that no capitalist government will or can fulfill these demands. To do so would mean the rejection of the Dawes plan and the establishment of a truly revolutionary workers' government. That in turn means revolution and civil war.

But the demands of the Communists are so elementary, so simple and clear, that every worker will understand them—and draw the logical conclusion from the present situation, in which the social-democrats are compelled by the masters they serve to fight against these demands.

ANOTHER PROBE OF POWER TRUST IS ABOUT DUE

Resolution to Investigate is Introduced

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Sen. Norris has called upon the senate to authorize the federal trade commission to investigate the hydro-electric power trust. Feeling is growing that the Muscle Shoals debate is a blind on the part of the power trust to hide the monopoly's activities elsewhere, particularly in coal power plants.

When his resolution covering every possible phase of interlocking financial powers and control thru which the trust is maintained, was offered, Sen. Edge of New Jersey objected to its immediate consideration. Edge declared that such an investigation would cost millions of dollars. He said he was not opposed to giving the facts to congress and the public, but the cost was beyond the means of the treasury just now.

Norris answered that the facts could be secured at very small expense, and they would be of the most importance in guiding public policy with reference to the power situation. He served notice that he would resist Edge's demand that the resolution be sent to committee. It is this giant trust, which is developing the super-power systems while extorting double and four-fold rates for electricity, that is presumably to get Muscle Shoals if the Underwood bill becomes law.

The Arrest of Jacques Sadoul on His Return to Paris

Courtesy of Russky Golos, New York

Jacques Sadoul is the most popular leader of the French workers. He served as an officer in the French army on the western front in the early part of the war. Then, in 1917, he was sent on military commission to Russia and was attached to the French embassy at Leningrad while Kerensky still ruled. When the Bolsheviki overthrew Kerensky and the Soviets became the governmental expression of the workers and peasants of Russia, Sadoul threw in his lot with the proletarian revolution and became a citizen of Soviet Russia.

The French militarists court-martialed him in his absence and sentenced him to death. But as he was in Soviet Russia and beyond their clutches his life was safe. Recently, however, he voluntarily entered France as a Russian citizen attached to the staff of Leonid Krassin, the first soviet ambassador to France. At once upon his arrival and in disregard of both his Russian citizenship and diplomatic immunity, he was seized and imprisoned to await execution. All working-class France immediately arose demanding his amnesty. The picture shows Sadoul being dragged thru the streets of Paris.

PUBLIC OFFICIALS CONTROLLED BY EASTERN KY. COAL BARONS DRENCH SOIL WITH MINERS' BLOOD

(Special to the DAILY WORKER)

HAZARD, Ky., Jan. 4.—The eastern Kentucky coal operators directly control the public officials, the schools, the stores and elections. Miners are shot down like dogs if they displease the coal operators.

An account of a typical Christmas—in 1923—by Petty Winstead, who was recently killed by a fall of slate in a mines, states, "Christmas wasn't very much here." The great and noted John Smith took the lives of three innocent men on Dec. 24. Smith's cousin had been killed at Glowmawr that afternoon and he and Raleigh Parker and Taylor Davidson, deputy sheriffs of Perry County, started up there.

"As they were passing Carlisle's store (an independent store and in the bad graces of the coal company), Smith entered and began firing, for no reason at all. Two men were killed outright, and a third died the following day. No resistance was offered. When Smith finished firing, he sat down on the counter and served cheese and crackers to the deputies. There were six killed around Hazard on Christmas day.

Tolbert Holiday, at present high sheriff of Perry county has killed a number of men during his term of office. His father-in-law is J. C. Campbell, a coal operator, and principal owner of the Campbell Coal company in Krypton, Ky. Campbell himself has been a county judge and is at present a representative in the state legislature.

Raleigh Parker, mentioned above, is notorious for his gun play in labor disputes. He is known to have killed at least eight men. One of those killed by Parker was a Negro shot down in cold blood on Main St. within a block of the county court house. When asked why he shot the Negro, Parker answered, "Just to watch him fall." He was never arrested for any of his murders, as he is "in good" with the coal operators and continues to wear his deputy's badge. Jim Gilkerson, another Perry county deputy sheriff, is a notorious Baldwin-Felts detective agency gun man, who took part in the warfare against the miners of Mingo county W. Va.

One of the residents of Hazard, Ky. declares, "One or two of these terrorizing deputies are kept in every mining camp to act as bodyguards for the mine officials. They are ordered to be ready to quell any manifestations of discontent on the part of the miners." J. W. Hayes, of Harlan, Ky., tells of what happened to him after he was caught addressing a meeting of miners. "I was driven out of Ponde, Ky., at the point of a gun," says Bates.

Lewis Whitehead, an old miner who has devoted years of his life to organizing work among the miners, was beaten into unconsciousness four years ago by two thugs. He was left lying across a railroad track, and it was only the fact that he was found by some switchmen that saved his life. A few months ago Deputy Dalton, deputy sheriff of Hazard, on his death bed confessed that it was he who had tried to kill Whitehead. He declared that Richmond Combs, who was then high sheriff of Perry county, had helped him beat up Whitehead.

These gunmen, placed in public office by the influence of the coal operators, are used to "elect" men to office, by terrorizing those who support opposition candidates. Luther Watson, of Hardburley, Ky., was told by the mine superintendent of the Hardburley Coal company that he or any other miner caught with campaign literature of a certain candidate who was opposing the candidate of the coal operators would be fired and run out of town. A miner at Dalna, Ky., had posted the picture of a candidate who was not in the graces of the coal operators, on his wall. A "mine deputy," a hired gunman, supplied by one of the detective agencies, tore the picture down and warned the miner not to repeat the offense.

Rufus Roberts, the present circuit judge of the 36th judicial district of Ky., elected thru coal operators' support, was deeply in debt at the time of his election. Within a year after his election, Roberts built a home costing $30,000. His salary is only $5,000 per year.

John Langley, congressman from the tenth Kentucky district, has been sentenced to two years' imprisonment in a federal court for illegal liquor deals. He was elected because he had the backing of the coal operators.

The coal operators control every election and political campaign that is conducted in eastern Kentucky. A candidate who is displeasing to the coal barons is not allowed to set foot in the coal camps to talk to the miners. The elections are held in company buildings, and the election boards are made up of men picked by the coal operators. The stuffing of ballot boxes is so common it is an expected procedure in each campaign. In the presidential elections, two thousand more election ballots were sent into Lynch, Ky., than there were registered voters in that mining camp. And all were "voted!"

HOUSE OF MORGAN TENDER TOWARDS ITALIAN DICTATOR

No Promise Made to Force Debt Account

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—The administration is avoiding all mention of the fact that Italy is in the same situation as France—unwilling to acknowledge her war debt. Tenderness for Italy is not officially explained, but in the past year the Coolidge-Hughes-Mellon regime has shown a warm friendliness for Mussolini that has not yet been withdrawn.

Mussolini's power is now challenged by the old leaders of the middle-class parties in Italy, and any pressure from Washington as to the Italian national finances, indicating their essential bankruptcy, might be the excuse for toppling Mussolini from his dictatorship. The French government is in the hands of nonentities, for whom the Mellon group has no appreciation. France is warned of a financial boycott. Italy is not worried.

MUNICIPAL WORKERS TO BE TAXED FOR SIX YEARS BACK INCOME

(Special to the Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.— Employes of states and municipalities, working on public utilities who were previously regarded as exempt from federal income taxes, must pay back taxes from 1918, according to a ruling of the internal revenue bureau has announced.

Employes affected include those working for public water works, street railways and other public utilities.

ITALIAN RIOTS SPREAD; BLACK SHIRTS GO WILD

Fascisti Use Torch in Many Cities

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Italy, Jan. 4.—Serious rioting occurred in many towns thruout Italy, with dead and wounded being reported from Peretola, Targinnia, Genzana, Verona, Valle, Giuliana, Naples, Fano, Borrigo, Cremona, Mantova, Messina, Torino, Livorno, and other towns, in clashes between the workers and the fascisti. A systematic campaign of the fascisti to terrorize the opposition and the Communists is marked by fires which broke out here and in other cities.

In Rome, mounted police rode thru the streets, disarming all workers, and breaking up anti-fascist demonstrations. The police searched many homes. A strict censorship has been set up by Mussolini on all outgoing news, and it is difficult to judge the gravity of the situation.

In Pisa the fascisti attacked the Messagero printing plant, destroying it and burning the supply of paper.

The Communist Italian newspaper Unite, has been supressed.

EIGHT JURORS IN PARDON PLEA FOR FORD AND SUHR

New Effort to Free Golden State Victims.

MARYSVILLE, Cal., Jan. 4.—Eight of the jurors who tried Herman Suhr—all who are still living—have signed a petition for his pardon. It is rumored that Suhr may be pardoned with "Blackie" Ford next May. District Attorney Manwell, whose father was killed in the Wheatland riot in 1913, announces that he will then have both Ford and Suhr rearrested for the death of Deputy Sheriff Riordan. The trial judge, with fine detachment, wants them both hanged. Neither Ford nor Suhr had anything to do with the killings, which resulted when county officers tried to break up a strike meeting. Ford and Suhr were leading. No one was ever prosecuted for the killing of several workers by the sheriff's gunmen.

A 12-Page Issue

On the First Birthday of the DAILY WORKER.

THE issue of January 13 will be heaped full of facts and features—all gaily attired with cartoons to best celebrate the very first birthday of the DAILY WORKER.

Comrade Bob Minor's splendid cartoons will be a leading feature. A review of the past year of American labor in general and the Workers Party in particular—plus the part the DAILY WORKER has played in both—will be another feature.

Special contributions by Wm. Z. Foster, Wm. F. Dunne, J. Louis Engdahl, T. J. O'Flaherty, Manuel Gomez and others among the best writers of the labor movement will add their share to the first birthday celebration.

Give this issue to a worker and you assure the DAILY WORKER a new reader—and your branch of the party a new member.

BUNDLE ORDERS MUST BE IN BY SATURDAY, JANUARY 10.

Mustn't Tell How Bad Peck's Bad Boy Was

(Special to the Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Legislation designed to protect the memory of presidents of the United States against "malicious defamation" or "slander" was introduced in the house yesterday by Representative Reid, republican of Illinois.

Along with it, Reid introduced a resolution calling for a congressional investigation to determine the "truth or falsity" of some of the allegations now appearing in a weekly magazine's series of articles on Woodrow Wilson, written by a woman friend.

The articles Reresentative Reid considered defamatory of Wilson and the republican party as well, were written by Mrs. Mary Allen Hulbert Peck.

The passage to which particular objection was found was one in which Mrs. Peck alleged she had been approached in 1916 by a man who "described himself as a representative of the republican party," and who offered her three hundred thousand dollars to enlist in a "precious enterprise which had as it objective the impeachment of the president of the United States."

Reid's resolution would have a committee of five members of the house conduct the inquiry and examine the papers of Mrs. Peck for evidence of the alleged attempt to bribe her.

DIXIE VICTIMIZES NEGRO MOTHERS IN CHILD BIRTH

High Death Rate Is Due to Neglect

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—How colored mothers die at childbirth, while white mothers in the same region—but in a higher economic grade—are saved, is shown by federal census figures for 1922.

In 1922 the death rate for white omthers at childbirth in Kentucky and Maryland, was 5.4 per 1,000. In Mississippi it was 6.6, in Virginia 6, in South Carolina, 7.4, and in North Carolina 6.7. But for colored mothers the death rate in Kentucky was 15.4 per 1,000, in South Carolina 12.2, in Mississippi 10.9, in Virginia 10.8, in North Carolina 10.7, and in Maryland 8.3. The colored mothers had as a rule no money to secure good medical care.

Of all the states, Utah showed the lowest death rate, which was 5, while South Carolina had the highest at 9.7 per 1,000. For the 30 states represented in the registration area, the average rate was 6.7 for 1923, compared with 6.6 for 1922, 6.8 for 1921 and 6.1 for 1915.

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

FARMER-LABORISM IN MASSACHUSETTS

By BARNEY MASS.

IN going over carefully the "catechism" conducted jointly by Comrades Lovestone and Bedacht, in the Dec. 20 issue of the DAILY WORKER, I was particularly interested in their strenuous efforts to overwhelm the majority by showing the tremendous sentiment for a farmer-labor party in this country.

They began by stating "Now for some outstanding facts showing the strong undercurrent of sentiment for the building of an independent political party—in the ranks of the masses." No. 2, under the question five, they quote: "In the conference for progressive political action of Massachusetts, the minority demand for a farmer-labor party against a fraudulent liberal third capitalist party was strong and clear cut. Had our central executive committee given the party members in Massachusetts proper guidance instead of an overdose of phrases in a tape-worn manifesto, the party could have struck an effective blow against LaFollette and could have established our leadership amongst an increased mass of workers in the Bay State."

One in Frisco would imagine from this product of Communist research that the textile workers (and incidentally there were no textile workers present) wanted a class farmer-labor party even more strongly than the northwestern farmers in the peasant revolt of 1923. But not one who was on the spot as I happened to be. The implications of the minority are false. The facts are as follows; dissociated from any blind faith in dogmatic catechisms.

The committee of progressive political action recently held a conference in Boston. To this conference some comrades succeeded to get elected from sympathetic fraternal organizations, and one or two progressive locals of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. At a meeting of the party delegates, the comrades wanted to know just what our procedure would be in the committee for progressive political action of Massachusetts. Ballam suddenly suffered a lapse of memory as to what the policy of our party was in a situation of this kind, and sent a telegram to the national office asking for this information.

Comrade Ballam was quite innocent of the fact that there is only one policy which is that of the C. E. C. expressed by a majority vote. He had to be reminded of this elemental point by a telegram from the central executive committee, that the C. E. C. statement was the policy of the party. Now in a more favorable position to his interests, he could have told under-studies just what the policy of the party was. As everyone expected, (those who understood the structure of a Communist organization) in accordance with the election statement of the central committee, the instructions were against penetration of the third party. Then Comrade Ballam, overcome by this "unusual" instruction of the C. E. C., made insinuations about disruptive tactics. He wanted to create the impression to the comrades that the C. E. C. was out to kill even labor party sentiment where it existed in mass character.

Who wanted a labor party? Some party members of the minority, (in this particular situation). They established in our familiar sympathetic organizations to get such a resolution passed. The only union to my knowledge, was a local of the A. C. W. of A., after our members fought to put it over.

Somehow or another, Ballam was unable to attend personally such a responsible, and delicate affair. (C. P. P. A. conference). It reminds one of the generalship of Wicks in Minnesota who was everywhere, but where he should be. The whole thing ended up by the few comrades who were delegates to this conference splitting away in a disorderly manner. Some comrades who were elected by fraternal sympathetic organizations never showed up to the conference. WHERE IS THE SENTIMENT FOR A FARMER-LABOR PARTY IN MASSACHUSETTS?

If the other examples "of strong undercurrent of sentiment for the building of an independent political party—in the ranks of the exploited farmer—a class farmer-labor party—in the ranks of the mass" are as truthful as the one in Massachusetts, then the policy of the minority rests on quicksand.

THE C. E. C. IS CORRECT

By HEINZ SCHROETER.

THE Workers Party is now in a lively discussion over the C. E. C. (majority) thesis on the immediate tasks of our party. Shall we raise the slogan of a (class) farmer-labor party or not? The majority say "no" and the minority say "yes."

What are the conditions that justify the use of a farmer-labor slogan? Are the conditions in existence or not? I say the conditions are not in existence, politically. Even the minority thesis states that " . . . . the LaFollette movement had developed in definite form . . ." and established " . . . its leadership over the farmer-labor forces which stood for a class party . . ." Then will the slogan of a farmer-labor party automatically separate the farmer-labor forces from the LaFollette illusions? The minority thesis states that it will. "The political alliance of the trades union bureaucracy with the petty-bourgeoisie will make the slogan of a farmer-labor party an entering wedge between the working masses and their treacherous leaders." Note that the slogan will make " . . . an entering wedge . . ." and destroy the LaFollette illusion in the working masses.

Let Comrades Ruthenberg, Lovestone, Bedacht, Engdahl and Gitlow go among the working masses and preach their gospel and see how much of a following they will get. It is true that they will get a few who will follow them (not taking into consideration of the farmer-laborites in our party). These few who have arrived at such a political maturity, as to recognize that the LaFollette movement is a petty-bourgeois movement, also recognize the existence of classes. Then will Ruthenberg & Co. try to build up a class farmer-labor party, with these elements, in competition with our party?

It is true that the progressive decline of capitalism will cause a more acute separation of the workers with the petty-bourgeoisie even in the La-Follette movement, but there are no indications, in the LaFollette movement, at present or in the immediate future that any such class conflict will arise because LaFollette did not have the chance to show his betrayal to the working class. His repudiation of the June 17 farmer-labor convention was not sufficient to create a separate mass movement.

It is only after the LaFollette movement shows itself to the working class as a middle class movement will the workers form a separate mass movement and not before.

THE RIGHT TO LEADERSHIP; WHAT IS A COMMUNIST PARTY?

By MORRIS CHILOFSKY.

THE Communist Party is part of the working class, namely: its most advanced, intelligent, self-sacrificing, and therefore, most revolutionary part. The Communist Party differs from the general mass of the workers in that it takes a general view of the whole historical march of the working class, and at all turns and events it defends the interests of the working class and is the leader of the working class.

The Communist Party is the organized political lever by means of which the more advanced part of the working class leads all the proletarian and semi-proletarian mass.

The Communist Party is to the working class, what the head is to the body. If separated, they cease to function.

The class war is not a casual episode. It is war as any other war. The Communist Party is the general staff which guides and pushes forward the proletarian battalions in its struggle against capitalism.

Strategy and Tactics.

In war we lay out strategic plans and tactics which are valid for the whole period of war, or only for a part of that period. The most important task of strategy is to ascertain that main line to be followed by the working class movement, the line most advantages for enabling the proletariat to strike its enemy the main blow required for the attainment of certain aims, established by the program.

To accelerate or retard the movement, to facilitate or hinder it—this is the sphere of tactics and political strategy.

Tactics are a part of strategy and subordinate to it. Tactics are not occupied with the war as a whole, but with its separate episodes and battles. At no time must tactics endanger our strategic plan. Tactics must not look only to the temporary interests of the moment; they must not desert the solid ground and build castles in the air—tactics must adapt themselves to the tasks and possibilities of strategy.

The views set forth above are not original; they belong to Comrade Lenin and Stalin. It is surprising to note that comrades of the minority who have in the past had reputations as Marxists, should completely forget Lenin, the strategist. It is also surprising to note what little attention these comrades attach to slogans and directions.

Speaking of slogans, Comrade Stalin says: "In the sphere of politics slogans are of great importance, for we deal with tens and hundreds of millions of human beings, with manifold demands.

"The slogan is the concentrated and clear formulation of the immediate or ultimate aims of the struggle, and is issued by the leading groups—in the case of the proletariat by its party."

Comrade Stalin says further. "To confuse slogans with directions, or slogans of agitation with slogans of action is just as dangerous as premature or too retarded action, which can become catastrophic.

"Slogans must be of such a nature so as to rally masses of workers. It sometimes becomes necessary to alter or withdraw slogans, when they cease to have a dynamic effect upon the movements of the masses. Sometimes to postpone them to a more favorable time."

Strategy and Tactics of Our Party

Let us see what has been our main strategic aim? It is this:

To develop independent political action of the working masses under the leadership of the Workers (Communist) Party.

This is still our main strategic aim only our tactical means must be changed, because of the changed political situation.

The trouble with the comrades of the minority is this: They have confused our tactical means with our strategic aim. To them the farmer-labor party becomes an end instead of a means to an end. At a certain period under given conditions our farmer-labor party policy was correct but not now.

Political Action and the United Front

To some comrades of the minority the farmer-labor party is the all-inclusive phase of political action. To them the united front can only be applied thru a farmer-labor party.

This conception is wrong and is due, mainly, to a misunderstanding of Communist political activity and also to the misunderstanding of the united front tactic.

Political action for the Communists does not merely manifest itself in elections or in parliament and neither is it confined to the streets, party. Mass demonstrations against the state is political action, a fight against the injunction is political action. It is sometimes impossible during a struggle to distinguish between economic action and political action for vice versa. If we Communists are in the work shops organized into nucleus, we will be ready to lead and sharpen all political action.

To believe that political action is only limited to a farmer-labor party is absurd.

In every argument put forth by the minority they claim that to abandon the F. L. P. policy is to abandon the united front. To listen the way these comrades talk is almost to believe that the Comintern adopted the united front tactics solely for the United States. It is strange that in every country the Communists have applied the united front. We are not the only ones and they did it not thru a farmer-labor party, but on the basis of the daily struggles of the working masses, e. i., shop committees, eight-hour day, etc.

The European comrades in applying the united front did it with the Communist Party as the leader under its own banner. Not handing it over to a party which can never be anything else but a reformist party. It spite of the fact that Comrade Ruthenberg attaches the word "class" to it.

Liquidation.

The Communist International has said that there can be only one Communist Party in any country. The Workers (Communist) Party is capable of developing into a mass Communist Party. There is no other name. To hand over virtu..s to a reformist party which rightly belongs to a Communist Party, is not Communist action.

Comrade J. Powell in attacking the T. U. E. L. program, says "The new T. U. E. L. program has plenty of demands all the way from amalgamation to nationalization to abolition of the K. K. K. Yet it entirely overlooks the greatest need of the working class of this country; the necessity of a political party."

Evidently it seems that Comrade Powell has forgotten that there is a political party of the workers in this country. He has forgotten the teachings of Marx and the Comintern that only a Communist Party is a political party of the working class. He also does not know that the left wing in the trade unions in this country has been following the leadership of the Workers (Communist) Party and are ready to do so in the future. But no! Comrade Powell wants the workers to follow a real . . . political party, a farmer-labor party.

Comrade Powell is not the only disappointed Communist, here we have Comrade Sylvan A. Pollock, who says that he can find fault with the part of the statement which calls for the strengthening and development of the party, but when it is claimed that it must be at the expense of the united front tactics of the farmer-labor party, I must disagree. This comrade is ready to give up his own party for the sake of the poor little deserted and homeless F. L. P., the orphan, that no one wants at present, not even the working masses.

Now, let us see what is Comrade Ruthenberg's position. In the December number "Workers' Monthly" Comrade Ruthenberg admits at least partly that a broad inclusive farmer-labor party is not possible at present,

Our Wayward Majority Shouts "Stop Thief"

By HERBERT BENJAMIN.

"NOTHING has contributed so much to develop our party from a sectarian group to a recognized political force in the life of the labor movement of this country than our maneuvers in relation to the farmer-labor party. It is thru this campaign that we have established our leadership and prestige among the masses of workers and farmers. The campaign for the farmer-labor party must be continued as a major campaign of our party in the future."

The above is a summary of a statement published by our C. E. C. sometime last August. It was part of the program of immediate work which was handed to us by our present majority of the C. E. C. This part at least must have had the unanimous indorsement of the C. E. C. (Perhaps Lore did not indorse it, but then there are some doubts even in the C. I. as to whether he belongs on the C. E. C.)

I venture to say that at the time this statement was written, not a single active member of our party could have been found thruout the country who would take issue on the question. Every member of our party felt confident that our farmer-labor party campaign was a correct estimation of the situation in the United States. Altho I traveled over a considerable part of the country in the interim, I did not find a single comrade anywhere who thought that we were liquidating the W. P., that we were building a reformist party; that we were opportunists, or any other one of the many terrible things that an advocate for this policy is called today. What produced the miraculous change?

If we study carefully the thesis of the majority and the articles which are written by its supporters, we learn that this change was produced from the fact that the majority never understood the purpose of the F. L. P. campaign, feels unable to conduct it towards its proper objective, and attributed their failings to others.

The majority cannot openly deny that we gained from the F. L. P. campaign those advantages which they claimed for it. They are now very anxious to go in a round about way and disparage our gains, but they dare not deny that what they wrote in August was untrue. That they are not very enthusiastic about the policy is to put it mildly. The reason for this is to me very apparent. The reason is that in the year 1924 we did not gain anything thru the F. L. P. campaign. The advantages gained for our party thru the F. L. P. campaign were gained up to the time when the present C. E. C. assumed leadership of our party and not since then. Because the present majority of the C. E. C. does not understand how to apply the campaign to the advantage of our party. This tho would be a poor reason to offer to but can't we at least use the slogan for a "class" F. L. P.? The only reason for the use of the slogan at present, that Comrade Ruthenberg can give is that in view of the fact that the class struggle is becoming more intensified; therefore, let's call the workers to form a "class" F. L. P.

Comrade Ruthenberg is not concerned with the illusion in that slogan, or the effect of that slogan, neither does he recognize the role or possibility of a F. L. P., but he wants one at any cost or at least the slogan.

Comrade Lovestone, the leader of the minority, is very good at figures and percentage and in his research to justify a F. L. P. or the F. L. P. tactic his reason is that Magnus Johnson received more votes in Minnesota than LaFollette. Very good! How will Comrade Lovestone explain that one of our comrades in Massachusetts received more votes than Foster?

The above reason is supposed to prove the potency of continuing the F. L. P. tactic. Now we come to the necessity of a F. L. P. and Comrade Lovestone is of the same opinion as the other disappointed Communists in the minority that the Workers (Communist) Party is not the political lever of the proletariat in this country, but the F. L. P. is. Yes, the Comintern is wrong.

The minority has no confidence in the Workers (Communist) Party. They are ready to hand the role of our party—the Communist Party, to the F. L. P. This is outright liquidation.

This also proves that some of our comrades do not understand the flexibility of Communist strategy and tactics. To them a slogan or tactic once adopted must stand regardless of the objective or subjective conditions.

If we claim to be Marxian dilectic..ians then we must subscribe to this "The practice of the class struggle is fertilized by theory and in its turn becomes the fruitful soil for theoretical study."

The tactic of the majority of the C. E. C. is correct in the light of conditions and experience, and the comrades who believe that the role of leadership of the proletariat belongs to a revolutionary Communist Party, should help break the "farmer-labor party" fetishism in our party.

the members to justify their abandonment of the F. L. P. campaign, so we suddenly discover that we are much better off if we don't bother with it.

The members of the majority suddenly made the discovery that we were organizing a rival to the Workers Party. That it is non-Communistic to engage in building a "reformistic" movement and that we must build the Workers Party.

If it were not that I know that Comrade Cannon is one of the leaders of the present majority, if it were not for the fact that I have had previous experience with this comrade's method of pre-convention polemic, I would be as amazed as are many members of our party at present, at the questionable methods used to induce our members to abandon a major policy and fundamental concept of Communism. Knowing this comrade as I do, I am not amazed. I am simply more determined than ever to help remove such comrades from positions of responsibility.

To brand a policy approved by the Comintern and ratified by two party conventions as non-Communistic. To have a comrade who according to the Comintern, "failed to maintain a Communist position" stigmatized as the very comrade who fought against his deviations, as non-Communists, is carrying things altogether too far.

To have comrades adopt the policy of one who has been declared by the C. I. to be a left wing social-democrat, form an alliance with him, and attempt to prove that the group opposing them is a right wing group, is depending too much on the gullibility of the membership.

To declare that we must abandon the farmer-labor party campaign because there is no sentiment for it among the masses, and then propose as a substitute labor congresses, shows that the proponents have a very rich imagination, but are by no means practical.

The present majority have without doubt, done great injury to our party. They have already delayed considerable activity in furtherance of our major campaign. They have cast reflections upon the integrity of many of our most able and trusted comrades. But they cannot succeed in covering up their errors by shouting "Stop Thief!"

The party convention and the Comintern will decide who the real liquidators, right wingers, opportunists and non-Communists are.

OPEN LETTER TO COMRADE FOSTER

By ISRAEL AMTER.

DEAR COMRADE FOSTER:—You and your group in the party maintain that you represent the Bolshevik section of the party. You also maintain that you are the majority in the party. It is true that, being the majority of the C. E. C., you have the machinery of the party in your hands.

You contend further that your group contains the active trade unionists in the party.

Let us look into the matter. Who support you in your position on the farmer-labor party slogan—despite the decision of the Communist International?

1. Elements in the German Federation who follow the lead of Comrade Lore—a tendency that the Communist International branded as being of the Two-and-a-Half International; elements stigmatized as social-democratic within the Workers Party.

2. The petty-bourgeois elements in the Jewish Federation, most of whom are followers of Comrade Lore.

3. The Workers' Council group, with few exceptions, who for more than two years after the formation of the Communist Party of America, refused to accept the Communist position, and one of the leading members of which declared to me in Moscow that he was just becoming a Communist.

4. The members of the Finnish Federation who follow the lead of Comrade Burman, who recently sent a dastardly letter to the branches of the Finnish Federation, containing distortions and bare-faced lies as to the position of the minority, the character of the minority members of the central executive committee and the actions of the executive secretary of the party.

5. The syndicalistically inclined members of the Workers Party, who are disposed to stress the industrial work of the party, as industrial work, and to minimize the importance of the political work. This was especially true of the Greek farmer-labor branch in New York, many members of which received a letter from the manager of the Greek paper, stating that he is for Foster because Foster stands for industrial work and not so much for political activity.

6. The new members of our party who have just come from the social-ist party and do not understand the maneuvers of a Communist Party. This is comprehensible, since they have abandoned the S. P. because of its petty-bourgeois character and its efforts to become an integral part of the LaFollette movement. With their "purist" tendencies, they are afraid to venture into the struggle for the control and leadership of the masses.

Are these the Bolshevik elements in the Workers Party, Comrade Foster? Are these comrades, sincere as they may be, considered by the Communist International as the real Communist core of the Workers Party? Comrades in Moscow, Comrade Foster, and you know what the presidium of the Communist International said of these elements.

You have declared and still declare that the majority in the party contains the active trade unionists. It is true that the group directing the national work of the T. U. E. L. is with you. Examine the groups and the individual comrades doing the active work in the districts and locals, and you will find that they do not agree with you—either on your abnegation of the farmer-labor slogan or on the manner in which you conduct the industrial work. There is deep concern about the methods that you employ, which is considered a complete perversion of the position of the Red International of Labor Unions.

There is a group, followers of Comrade Lore, whom you have entrusted with the conduct of the industrial work both in New York City and in the eastern district. These comrades support you in your farmer-labor policy, but they carry out the industrial work so opportunistically that you have criticised them in the majority theses, without daring to mention them by name. And your criticism is correct, when Comrade Jamposlky, industrial organizer of New York, declares that we "do not want a united front with the fakers in the Central Trades and Labor Council" and that "it is not so important for our comrades to take the floor in the C. T. L. C.," then he reveals complete ignorance of one aspect of our industrial work. When Comrade Zimmerman, industrial organizer for the eastern districts, declares that we can take the floor at a central body only when we are strong, then he demonstrates that he has not the courage of a Communist.

You are justly ashamed of this group, Comrade Foster, but this is the type of comrades who are supporting your political policy and representing you in the industrial work.

But the local and district leaders, and the local comrades who are doing the active, militant work among the masses, do not side with you. They are in rebellion against your methods of eternally negotiating with the local and national leadership of the unions, of considering it Communist work merely to get resolutions put across and to capture offices in the unions. They consider Communist work the building up of our leadership among the rank and file of putting the T. U. E. L. on a firm organizational basis, and thus forming the only foundation for our Communist activity.

The overwhelming majority of the comrades who helped to form the Communist movement and Communist Party in the United States, who have had a training in Communist tactics and strategy and the comrades who do the active industrial work, do not side with you, Comrade Foster, they are with the minority.

This letter is merely to put you right, Comrade Foster—and to call your attention to a few facts that are pertinent and very striking. As long as the American question is to come before the Communist International once more, it will be good also that the Communist International should know the line-up in the American party and recognize that it is not merely a struggle that is taking place in the C. E. C. of the party, but a struggle going on thruout the party, owing to the divergence of opinion, as to what constitutes Communist work on the political and industrial fields.

We should like to hear your side, Comrade Foster. We of the minority stand by the above, fraternally yours,

Israel Amter.

English Branch of Washington, D. C., Is For Majority Thesis

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 1. (By Mail.)—The English Branch of the Workers Party discussed the party task on Dec. 29 and continued the discussion January 4 and at the conclusion a vote was taken, resulting in 8 votes for the C. E. C. majority thesis and 6 votes for the thesis of the minority. Several members did not vote.

The leaders of the minority were Comrades Irvine and Powell, while Comrade Macintosh led for the majority. A general discussion followed the chief speakers.

CENTRAL BUREAU OF ESTHONIAN SECTION IS WITH THE MINORITY

The Central Bureau of the Esthonian section of the Workers (Communist) Party, at its meeting held on Dec. 23, 1924, after discussing the theses presented by the majority and the minority of the Central Executive Committee, adopted the following resolution:

The Esthonian Bureau of the Workers (Communist) Party agrees with the minority theses of the C. E. C., which aims at the unity of the workers and por farmers in a political party, under the slogan of a "farmer-labor party."

The reasons that impelled the Esthonian Bureau to adopt the minority theses are as follows:

1. In our opinion, it is necessary to carry on a campaign under the slogan of a "farmer-labor party." We understand that if we organize such a party, it will be the best means of bringing the organized and the unorganized workers and the poor farmers into political action. This will increase their class consciousness and also make it possible later to draw the best elements into the Workers (Communist) Party. The winning over of these revolutionary elements by the Workers (Communist) Party will help to make the party a strong and well crystalized party capable of conducting the class struggle in the United States; a party that at the time of the proletarian revolution can lead the workers and poor farmers to take the power into their hands and establish the proletarian ditatorship.

2. The farmer-labor party, therefore, is an organization in which the workers and poor farmers will be united in one party, so as to help the class struggle. Comrade Lenin, the leader of the world revolution, said that "if should not be possible for us to win over the peasants, the Russian revolution will be lost." The main function of the Russian Communist Party now is "to unite the city with the village," which means "to unite the workers with the farmers."

This kind of work must be begun in the Workers (Communist) Party so that the day of the proletarian revolution will not find the American farmers unprepared.

3. The minority theses, therefore, comply with the requirements of the Communist International and also with the program of the Workers (Communist) Party.

We do not share the opinion of the majority of the C. E. C. to the effect that LaFollettism killed the farmer-labor movement, as stated in the majority thesis that "The farmer-labor party is dead." We believe that this question is alive today and cannot be "dead." We believe that the majority of the C. E. C., instead of encouraging the use of the slogan of a farmer-labor party, in their work are killing it.

We maintain that the majority of the C. E. C., has not fulfilled or carried out:

a) The program adopted at the last national convention of the Workers (Communist) Party, declared that the C. E. C. of the Workers (Communist) Party shall use all of its energy to organize a farmer-labor party.

b) The majority of the C. E. C., has ignored the twice expressed demand of the Executive Committee of the Communist International to form a farmer-Labor Party.

The Esthonian Bureau approves the theses of the minority of the C. E. C., as the most practical theses by which we may form a strong united front in the class struggle against capitalism.

The Esthonian Bureau directs every Esthonian branch of the Workers (Communist) Party carefully to discuss the theses of the majority and the minority of the C. E. C., so that every members of the Esthonian branches of the Workers (Communist) Party may take a correct position on the party policy.

This reso ution was adopted by a vote of six against one.

A. Kobel
Member of the Esthonian Bureau of the Workers (Communist) Party.

CONNELLSVILLE COAL DIGGERS WIN PAY RAISE

Non - Union Operators Forced to Cave In

(By The Federated Press)

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 4. — The determination with which union miners have fought the wage cutting movement has at last produced tangible results. Eight of the larges independent operators in the Connellsville coke section of Pennsylvania have found it impossible to maintain the low 1917 wage scale and after conference with their employees are restoring the scale in effect Sept. 1, 1920.

Upward Tendency.

This break in the ranks of the non-union operators is expected to improve the position of the union miners in the Pittsburgh region and may produce an upward tendency in wages in the non-union fields of West Virginia.

The independent Connellsville operators reduced wages in May and June to the level of Nov. 1917, the reductions in tonnage rates and in most day rates amounting to form 30 per cent to 33 per cent. The previous scale, known as the Frick scale was put into effect in August 1922 to balance the union settelment and prevent the non-union strikes in that region from resulting in a rush to join the union.

Below Union Rate.

The present increase means a change from $5.05 to $7.55 a day for drivers and pit helpers and an increase from $2.29 to $3.34 per 199 bushels of 76 lbs in the mining rate. This means that the restored rate is equal to 85c a net ton or just below the union rate in the Pittsburgh district. According to Black Diamond this difference is more than equalized by the softness of the coal and the thickness of the vein.

The companies making the change are the Orient Coal & Coke Co., Hecla Coal & Coke Co., Republic Iron & Steel, Buckeye Coal, Tower Hill Coal, Thompson-Connellsville Coal & Coke, Eastern Coke and the Olive & Snyder Steel Co. The Frick Coke Co., U. S. Steel subsidiary in that region did not reduce wages when the other made that move but practically shut down operations.

Advance Necessary.

This restoration of non-union wages to the highest level suggests that a general advance by non-union operators may be necessary to prevent non-union miners from joining the union in large numbers. As pointed out by The Federated Press on June 23 and again on November 1, 1924, there is a feeling in the industry that non-union operators can not permanently maintain a low wage scale unless they can force similar reductions in the union fields. So far they have failed to accomplish this against the solid opposition of union miners.

SOVIET MOTOR INDUSTRY BOOMS

Motor trucks, built for the Russian Soviet government at the "Amo" auto factory, near Moscow, recently completed a tejal journey of 2,000 miles, in the course of which they touched Moscow, Leningrad, Pskov, Vitebsk, Smolensk, Moscow.

A demonstration in their honor was arranged for them on the Red Square in Moscow on their return. The band of the G. P. U. played "The International," and speeches were delivered by representatives of the "Amo" factory, the Communist Party, trade unions and government institutions.

The incident shows the enormous advance of Russian industry in the past few years. Several members of the Chicago Society for Technical Aid to Soviet Russia are working at the "Amo" factory.

TWELVE WORKERS RAISE 50 DOLLARS TO INSURE DAILY

City's White Collar Clerks to Get Axe; But Not Higher-ups

Several hundred city employes will be discharged, it was announced yesterday by Alderman Ross Woodhull, chairman of the finance committee. The excuse given for firing the city employes is that the budget for the coming year will require a restricted payroll. The public works department will be most affected, but other departments will feel the ax, it is announced.

Woodhull declares that the pay raise given the police and firemen last year increased the budget. The well paid politicians will get as high salaries as usual.

Phone Operators Winning Strike in Six Illinois Towns

HARRISBURG, Ill., Jan. 4.—The strike of the telephone operators of the Murphysboro Telephone company continued today, following the refusal of the company to grant the demand of the men that the chief operator must belong to the union. Other differences have been settled and the wage scale for 1925 has been decided upon.

Telephone service in Harrisburg, Eldorado, Galatia, Raleigh, Carrier Mills and Stone Fort is entirely suspended.

Pittsburgh I. W. A. Beats Theatre Boycott

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 4.—In the place of the previously announced show for January 17, the next workers' movie in Pittsburgh, Pa., will be given Saturday, Feb. 7, at North Side Carnegie Music Hall, Federal and Ohio streets. This is the result of months of activity on the part of the Committee for International Aid in the steel city, during which time theater after theater was refused them, and even the Moose Temple, where four previous shows had been run without trouble, stalled for weeks while referring the application to a "board" which never met. Finally the committee went out into the working class district and secured this fine hall, where none but the very best films have ever been shown. A record-breaking success is looked for in answer to this boycott by the "big bdsiness" theater owners.

The program will include the latest Soviet Russian feature, "The Beauty and the Bolshevik," together with the educational "Russia in Overalls." The latter will prove of special interest to the steel workers of the district in that it shows their fellow steel workers of Soviet Russia on the job. Tickets at local headquarters, Room 5, 805 James St.

BRITISH BOSSES PLAN ATTACK ON LABOR UNIONS

Preparing Ground For Big Offensive

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press Industrial Editor.)

Reduction of British labor costs to capture foreign markets in the face of cheap foreign competition is about to produce a struggle which may make or break the independent labor movement as a power in that country. The employing class, faced with a continued upward tendency of wages in basic trade union conditions including present wage levels have become a serious handicap since the continent has gone over to longer hours and lower wages.

Wages Went Up.

Wage changes in Great Britain in the nine months ended September 30, 1924, were predominantly upward. Increases affected 2,664,000 workers, bringing a rise of over $2,500,000 a week in the country's total payrolls. Decreases during the same period affected only 635,000 workers, cutting approximately $350,000 from the weekly wage bill.

During the same period in 1923 there were net reductions totaling approximately $450,000 in the weekly wages of 3,160,000 workers and net increases of somewhat more than $1,400,000 in the weekly wages of 1,130,000 workers.

The general character of the increases granted during 1924 is shown in the table issued by the British ministry of labor which records the increases and decreases by industries:

	No. affected Inc.	Net change per wk. Inc.	Dec.
Building	556,000	$15,000	225,200
Mining, quarrying	364,000	161,200	141
Brick, glass, etc.	220,000	250	25,600
Iron and steel	157,000	41,000	87,400
Engine, shipbldg.	158,000	8,000	228,000
Other metal	74,000	32,000	56,800
Textile	74,000	2,500	11,200
Food, drink, etc.	65,000	3,500	59,200
Woodworking	45,000	7,000	37,200
Paper and printing	1,250	30,000	470
Building	473,000	250	2,820
Transport	330,000	15,000	21,800
Public utility	198,000	23,000	5,570
Other	63,000	14,500	7,050

Not Ready to Fight.

These increases were secured and maintained largely because the employing class was not yet ready to precipitate a fight with the strongly organized unions. Today the strong metal trades labor amalgamation is pressing for an all around increase and it is generally admitted that these workers are underpaid.

But with the temporary regularizing of the European situation by the Dawes' reparations plan and the number of unemployed workers not diminishing, there are signs that union demands and standards will meet stiffer opposition. There were 94,000 unemployed metal trades workers in September among those pressing for wage increases and 25,000 emigrated last year in search of a job. Altogether the number unemployed in the insured trades Sept. 22, 1924, was 1,240,045 or 10.8 per cent of the total.

Unemployed Army.

Included in this grand total of unemployed were 102,076 coal miners, 122,367 in the metal trades and iron foundries, 77,790 shipbuilders, 80,602 cotton mill workers, 20,053 woolen-mill workers, 21,908 tailors, 12,299 shoe workers, 70,412 building trades workers, 66,711 in the iron and steel industry and 85,869 in distributive trades.

British industry like American industry came out of the war overexpanded. To maintain prosperity on a capitalist basis it must regain its old dominance in foreign markets. That old dominance was achieved, according to Frank Vanderlip, former president National City bank, thru such low wages as constituted a red ink overdraft on the physique of the British nation. The vital question is whether British labor will tolerate a similar overdraft today.

Many Thousands Of Ex-Soldiers Are Denied Bonus

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 4.—Fifteen thousands application for adjusted compensation by ex-soldiers have been denied, and over 400,000 have been returned unpaid because of technicalities, by the U. S. Veterans' Bureau, which has had a history of constant exposures of graft and corruption. Numerous investigations of the bureau have shown that thousands of ex-service men have been denied compensation rightfully belonging to them undre the laws governing the bureau.

The bureau is now receiving 12,000 applications for compensation every day.

had not only to struggle against the persecution of the csarist okhrana, but also against the machinations of the menshevik (Russian L. F. P.). The paper was built up out of the kopecks willingly sacrificed by the workers. These kopecks were destined to be stepping stones towards the October revolution—and ultimately to the present 500,000 circulation.

The Party Grows.

This remarkable growth of the "C. O." (as the Russians call their central organ) is partially explained by the Lenin enrollment in the spring of last year, when Lenin's death marked the flocking of over 200,000 workers into the party to carry on his work. But it is also due to the increasing influence of the party among the broad masses, whose interest in the paper grows from day to day.

If we bear in mind that there are thousands of local party newspapers, and also that the party has 400,000 members (with 700,000 candidates for membership) then it becomes evident that the 500,000 readers of the central organ must include large numbers of non-party workers.

A Masas Organ

To understand the full significance of the paper's growth, it must also be remembered that Russian conditions are such that a half-million sale of "Pravda" has more political significance than a million and a half circulation of the bourgeois yellow press. The latter is built up on on stunts and sensationalism, appealing to the doped mass psychology of the West.

On the other hand, the Pravda in addition to popular sections such as "Worker's Life," the revolutionary poems of Demyan Byedny, etc. contains abundant material on political, economical, and cultural problems, and deals elaborately with all questions affecting the everyday life of the workers and peasants. Therefore the Pravda is by no means "light" reading, and the 500,000 circulation for an educationally backward country like Russia is a stupendous cultural victory for Communism.

Pravda is a popular mass paper based on the realistic lines of Marxism and Leninism. Hence its success. The Russian revolutionary press, in general has a much wider ideological scope than exists under so-called bourgeois "freedom of the press." As Comrade Zinoviev remarks in connection with the Zinoviev letter, "bourgeois freedom of the press means deception of the people—throwing sand into their eyes."

Worker Correspondents.

Pravda strengthens its contact with the working and peasant masses by worker-correspondents. There are now 50,000 of these throughout the Soviet Union, and their second conference coincided with Pravda's reaching the half-million sale. One of the chief organizers and inspirers of this movement is Maria I. Ulianova, Lenin's sister, who is secretary of Pravda. The conference formulated measures for strengthening the network of workers, peasant and Red Army correspondents.

These correspondents play an important role in disclosing defects in the state apparatus, and exposing abuses of bourgeois "specialists" etc. The peasant correspondents have an especially difficult task, often being persecuted locally for their exposures of the "kulaks" (rich peasants) vodka-speculators, etc. They do heroic work in helping the Soviets state to struggle against backward and reactionary elements in the villages. Above, all, it is these correspondents who have played so large a part in building up the 500,000 circulation. But the party only considers this a first step. It has set itself the task of doubling the circulation by May 1st, 1925, and a slogan for this campaign is —"Still deeper and deeper into the masses."

An Example for U. S.

The influence of "Pravda" extends far beyond the Soviet Union. It has been described as the "All-Russian School of Political Grammar," but it is no exaggeration to say that Pravda has become the leader and inspirer of the proletriat of the whole world.

We even see its influence by the frequent quotations from Pravda leading articles appearing in the bourgeois press.

Pravda is above all an example and model for the Communist press of the West.

Movies for Workers

The Pittsburgh, Pa. committee went out into the working class district and engaged the splendid North Side Carnegie Music Hall for a showing of "Polikushka" on January 17, for the benefit of the International Workers Aid fund for the relief of European political prisoners.

"Polikushka," a gripping film of old Russian enslavement, made by the Moscow Art Theatre on so high a plane that every critic that has reviewed the film has given it highest praise, and the national board of review calls it one of the best forty films in America. The picture symbolizes the suffering of enslaved labor thruout the centuries and is relieved in sombre coloring only by the Russian slapstick comedy "Soldier Ivan's Miracle." Ivan is a scamp who is sent to the army and enlists some questionable allies to get out of it, but he does it thru a highly questionable "miracle" that returns him to the arms of his fat sweetheart, Dunja, the dishwasher.

Same Program in Chicago and Los Angeles

The same program will be run by the I. W. A. Committee at Philharmonic Hall, Los Angeles, Cal. on Jan. 19. Fred Biedenkapp, who has booked more working class movie dates than any other man in this country, is helping in the arrangements. In Chicago the Society for Technical Aid to Soviet Russia is running this program at Gartner's Independence Theater, Independence Blvd. and Roosevelt Road, Jan. 15, continuous 6.30 to 11 p. m. In Dowell, Ill. "Polikushka" will be shown at the Rex Theatre, Jan. 11, together with a new labor film called "Prisoners for Progress."

"Russia and Germany" at Binghampton

"Russia and Germany, a Tale of Two Republics" will be shown January 9, at Binghampton, N. Y.

UNIONS PROTEST GOVERNOR'S RANK DISCRIMINATION

Pardons the Rich Killers, Holds I. W. W.

(By The Federated Press)

SEATTLE—Led by the Tacoma Teamsters' and Chauffeurs' Union, Washington labor bodies are vigorously protesting at the pardon granted without stated reasons to a soldier-murderer who killed and robbed a union taxi driver in 1920. The pardon was one of Gov. Hart's last official acts. He also pardoned a man who had served only 16 months for killing a woman.

Labor feeling is especially strong because of Hart's surrender to the wealthy friends of the two slayers. The retiring governor has steadily refused to interest himself in the eight I. W. W.'s who have been in the penitentiary since 1919 on second degree murder charges. They were convicted of killing members of an American Legion mob that was battering down the doors of their labor hall in Centralia. Seven jurors have since declared that the imprisoned workers should be freed.

The Seattle Union Record points out editorially that the Centralia men could have been pardoned by Hart with little risk of protest and with much more justice.

John L. Lewis May Not Get Cabinet Sinecure After All

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON—Doubt as to the appointment of Pres. John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers to the post of secretary of labor in the new Coolidge cabinet is increased by administration rumors, as Sec'y. Davis returns from South America. While Davis' retirement on March 4, was officially announced at the White House in November, recent indications point to success for his campaign to win another term. Davis intended to run for governor of Pennsylvania, but discovered that the bosses would not have him.

Swabeck Will Discuss Tactics of Communist International Monday

At the next meeting of the North Side English branch, Monday night, January 5, 1925, at Imperial Hall, 2409 N. Halsted St., our district organizer, Comrade Arne Swabeck, will speak on "Strategy and Tactics of the Communist International."

Please, comrades, come early for we have very important business to transact before the lecture starts.

NOTICE, CARPENTERS AND MINERS!

It is essential that we have information as soon as possible regarding the vote cast for the left wing candidates in the recent elections in the carpenters' and miners' unions. The reactionaries at the head of these organizations may be depended upon to rb us of our vote wholesale nor thus to diminish our showing. Therefore, it is the duty of every left winger in these unions to let us know at once how his local voted. You should take this matter seriously and act upon it without delay. Amsterdamers Nervous

It is amusing to observe the antics of the Amsterdamers when any of their number appears to be, by reason of wide rank and file pressure, driven over to the left enough to make some speeches with a class struggle, not to say a Communist, tone.

The executive of the Amsterdam International met at that city on December 1, while the cables were burning with the news from Moscow that the British labor delegation, visiting the Sixth All-Russian Congress of Labor Unions at Moscow, had imbibed of the Bolshevik atmosphere and were in both speech and writing hailing the Soviet government as the hope of the world and the citadel of working class emancipation.

The British delegation, it must be remembered, was headed by Purcell, who is also the president of the Amsterdam International, and who was leading the hurrah in Moscow for everything he saw in the land of proletarian dictatorship.

The remaining members of the Amsterdam organization, huddled under the wing (the right wing) of Jouhaux and Oudegeest in the little seaport of Holland, looked at one another in amazement and consternation. "What bug had bitten Purcell? The British will bring ruin upon us all!" Thus we conceive the thoughts of the nervous reformists at the seduction of their president by the wily Bolsheviks.

But, as Losovsky of the Profintern says, "Wherever there is a particularly dirty piece of business to do, the Amsterdamers assign Oudegeest to the job." Oudegeest is the most able reactionary of the three secretaries of the Amsterdam International. So, in his secretarial capacity, Oudegeest made up the press report which goes to all the world, telling of what the Amsterdam executive thinks of such goings on. And this is what we find on page one of Press Report 49:

"With regard to the attitude of Purcell in Russia, it was pointed out in the discussions of the executive, that Purcell did not go to Russia as representative of the I. F. T. U. (Amsterdam International), and that therefore he is only personally responsible for his utterances in or about Russia."

Again, on page two we find the following disclaimer of any "unofficial" conversations between Purcell and the Russian unions regarding the burning question of world unity of all labor unions:

"The president of the I. F. T. U., A. A. Purcell, who is at present in Russia as leader of the delegation of British trade unions to that country, has on several occasions spoken of the relations between Amsterdam and Moscow, and in the press these speeches have been connected with the negotiations between the I. F. T. U. and the Russian trade unions. It is obvious that the negotiations with Moscow are conducted by the Amsterdam executive exclusively on the basis of the Vienna resolutions, and that no definite resolution can be taken before the meeting of the I. F. T. U. general council, which has been fixed for the beginning of February."

Thus does Oudegeest rescue the fair name of Amsterdam and wash his hands of responsibility for the Amsterdam president who appears afflicted with the "virus of Moscow."

But the masses continue to go left.

Let the Scissors Talk

A stoolpigeon carrying an Associated Press commission is making the rounds of Russia in search of local color to embellish his lying campaign against the Soviet Republic. He has already painted the Ukraine and Georgia. He is now doing Kazan, in the Tartar Republic. It is interesting to note what makes his heart bleed, so instead of arguing with him we use the scissors:

"The granite and bronze monuments to Alexander II. and other historical figures of Russia have been wrecked and replaced with harsh Communistic figures of workmen. From all flagpoles the red flag of the revolution flies. To many it is only that grim reminder of the spiritual death of the city, which has been in Russia's possession since the days of Ivan the Terrible."

That is sad, indeed! No doubt the American workers will weep salt tears when they learn that the brawny figures of Russian workers are substituted for the imbecile face of the czar. But the worst is yet to come:

"The churches present an especially melancholy sight. They are in full process of decay. The clergy are to poor to repaint them. Many of them have closed their dors. Others have been converted into Communistic clubs or barracks. The correspondent visited the largest of the churches, the famous convent of the Virgin Mother, where mass was in progress. The priests and nuns were more numerous than the congregation, which numbered exactly six persons."

The scissors are eloquent. Comment would be like painting a rummy's nose.

Hoover Is Cheerful

New Year's day finds the American people living better than at any other period in the history of this country, declares the rotund Herbert Hoover, in a booster interview to a news distributing agency. The people live longer and better and their living standards are going up so rapidly that within a short time every man's home will be his castle in the literal sense as the workers are no longer satisfied with hall bedrooms in which a person cannot even change his mind without scratching the walls of his brain cell. The workers are now demanding flats and individual houses and they are getting them, according to the jolly Herbert.

This will be exciting news for the thousands of unemployed miners in Illinois, for the thousands of unemployed textile workers and for the hundreds of thousands all over the country willing to work, but who cannot work because the boss who owns the shops will not permit them.

This country is wealthy. On that point we are in perfect accord with Herbert Hoover. But the wealth of this country was built by the workers and we believe it belongs to the workers.

The New Year's resolution that Hoover would wish the toilers to make is, be thankful for being allowed to live in a country like this. We urge the workers to make a resolution that during the coming year they will redouble their efforts to perfect their economic organizations to fight for more of the products of their toil and to join the only political party of labor in America that aims to mobilize the workers for the political struggle against the master class for the overthrow of capitalism and the organization of the Workers' Soviet Republic of America.

That party is the Workers (Communist) Party.

The New Suicide Squad

Dispatches tell of the arrest of Comrade Ruth Fischer, of the German Communist Party, in Vienna. The dispatches state openly that her arrest was ordered by the British authorities and that it is part of a new drive against the Communists thruout eastern Europe and particularly in the Balkans.

Some days ago we stated that the tour of Austen Chamberlain, British foreign minister, thru the European capitals—the vatican was included for the very good reason that it insists on being declared in on any dirty work that is on foot—was for the purpose of organizing a new offensive against Soviet Russia and the Communist International. The dispatches from Europe confirm our statement.

Central and eastern Europe have passed the artificial period of stability secured by liberal injections of allied gold into the veins of the anemic paper republics of these territories and the national economics are definitely on the down grade. In Egypt, India and Morocco there are great nationalist movements. In China, Soviet Russia has taken the initiative away from western imperialism. The Balkan puppet governments are shaken by great revolts of the peasants and workers and the federation of workers' and peasants' republics of the Balkans, proposed by the Communists, has stirred the masses of these nations.

Great Britain, altho France offers no opposition at present, has undertaken an impossible task—that of uniting tottering European capitalism against Soviet Russia. These alliances are doomed before they are consummated because of the national rivalries of the rulers and the dissatisfaction of the working class they oppress. Such a coalition must wage war on Soviet Russia and Great Britain will find that this time she will not have her usual success in getting some other nation to do her fighting for her.

This is not the Europe of 1914 or even of 1918-19. Today the moment that any army leaves its home base for an offensive against Soviet Russia it has a hostile rear. In addition to that all the armies are needed at home to crush the revolts of the native workers. This is their principal function.

A war against Soviet Russia today is suicide for capitalism and Great Britain knows this so well that she sets up as shock troops little nations far removed from the center of British capitalism.

The new offensive against the Communists and Soviet Russia is testimony, not to the strength but to the weakness of the European exploiters and oppressors.

Calvin Coolidge is a republican. M. Vandervelde of Belgium is a socialist. Coolidge favors peace, then signs a bill appropriating $110,000,000 for increasing the efficiency of the navy. Vandervelde makes the following statement: "We do not ignore the necessities of national defense. We are certainly internationalist and anti militarist and hate war, but we recognize that the nation must have a military defense force."

Ramsay MacDonald recently delivered a speech on golf. He regretted that the game was not so cheap today as it was in the past. He urged a movement to bring golf within reach of the masses. Why not automobiles and shares in biscuit factories, Mac?

The new republic of Mongolia is showing a tendency to follow in the footsteps of Soviet Russia. This is putting it mildly, judging from the fact that no employers of labor can vote in that country, and that the flag of the republic is red.

The American capitalist press, formerly enthusiastic supporters of Mussolini (with few exceptions), has received his latest decision to suppress the opposition newspapers without any show of enthusiasm. Even Arthur Brisbane failed to rise to the occasion.

Concentrated Propaganda, Incorporated

By MORITZ J. LOEB.

VERY few realize the significance of recent organizational changes which have been effected recently in our party with regards the party press. For the first time serious efforts are being made to centralize the party's English language press; to bring into one organization the activity for the development of that trinity of powerful organizers, educators and propagandists of our party.—The DAILY WORKER, The Workers Monthly and the Literature Department. More exactly stated, for the first time these serious efforts are bringing real results. For the truth of the matter is that the plans and the resultant efforts were started more than six months ago these are now beginning to bear fruit.

Why Centralization?

A YEAR ago the party press situation was a model of decentralization and disorganization. We had a weekly Worker with its editorial and administrative departments in one place; the type was set in another and the press work was done in still another. There were three monthly magazines published under our control, The Labor Herald, The Liberator, and Soviet Russia Pictorial, all with separate editorial and business departments and all making separate printing arrangements. There was the Literature Department also apart from the rest of the party's press. Thousands of dollars were being wasted every year in the payment of wages alone to party employes who though they were necessary perhaps to turn out the work were a needless drain upon the party resources.

BUT this was not the worst of it. Combined with the extravagant and inefficient procedure this arrangement was the most confusing and chaotic system of distribution imaginable. At the top there were the various business administrations, competing with each other for the attention and activity of the party members. Below were the party units and the individual party members, confused, discouraged and for the most part inactive in one of the most important tasks of the Communist movement, the distribution of the party press. The result was what might have been expected. In not one of the printed propaganda institutions of the party was any progress being made. Instead there was stagnation and decay; decreasing circulation all down the line.

The Plan and the Effort

THE first step which made centralization possible was decision to buy a printing plant for THE DAILY WORKER and a building to house the plant and the national headquarters of the party. But before even this was done the outline of the plans were made for the complete centralization of the party's press. It was decided that the English language press must be made a unit from the standpoint both of administration and distribution.

IT was not an easy task even to made the plans. Many obstacles stood in the way. Special interests of the various departments of the party had to be provided for. But the principle was established as long ago as last January and ever since then the administration of THE DAILY WORKER has been at work to draft the proper program.

It was at first decided to bring all of the three monthly magazines under the management of THE DAILY WORKER administration. But it later became apparent that the party was not big enough nor strong enough to give successful support to three monthly magazines. It was therefore decided to amalgamate the three into one larger magazine.

First Fruits

THE WORKERS MONTHLY is in its third issue. Already it has more than twice the paid circulation than any of its predecessors. This is not to be taken as a reflection on the Labor Herald, The Liberator or Soviet Russia Pictorial. Centralization is the reason!

CENTRALIZING The Workers Monthly with the administration of THE DAILY WORKER has been the first big step in the general centralization program. The advantages have already made themselves apparent. In the first place there has been a tremendous saving in overhead expences amounting to over $12,000 a year in wages alone. For in place of the various editors and assistants there is now one editor and no assistants and in place of the various managers and assistants there is the staff of THE DAILY WORKER, with the sole addition of one girl helper in the office.

BUT it is not in this overhead economy that the greatest benefits are derived. Nor even from the improvement of the quality in our monthly official organ that must result from the centering of effort, does the greatest advantage come. It is the centralizing for work, work in the field distributing. The Workers Monthly and THE DAILY WORKER which is the strongest, longest step in advance.

ONE of the most important tasks which THE DAILY WORKER has been trying to accomplish has been the organization of agents to sell subscriptions and in other ways represent THE DAILY WORKER in the field. While we have made only a beginning in this direction, much has already been accomplished. The organization of The Daily Worker Builders has been a further development of the central idea that the backbone of our press must be the organization machinery which gives our publications distribution. The results so far have proven the correctness of this standpoint.

Two Ways for Progress

THE centralization of the party press is going to work two ways. First of all it is going to strengthen the organization and effeciency of this distribution machinery and secondly it is going to work for the immediate and constant improvement of the circulation building activities.

As has already been said, the circulation of The Workers Monthly is already more than twice that of any of its predecessors. This was due al most wholely to the fact that there has been a concentration of sales efforts. All of the agents of THE DAILY WORKER have been doing likewise. The result has been that in the two months since The Workers Monthly was started more subscriptions have been sold than for any of the other three magazines during the past year.

THE centralization is already bringing results! What its effects on the circulation of THE DAILY WORKER itself will be cannot yet be determined but it is certain that the circulation work of THE DAILY WORKER will be assisted a great deal.

Literature Department Next

THE next step in the centralization program will be the bringing of activities of the party literature department under the management of THE DAILY WORKER. For a party the size of ours, we distribute an extremely small amount of books and pamphlets. When it is considered that by means of propaganda and education contained in these publications we must hope to develop Communist understanding and Communist spirit, it must be said that the party has seriously neglected one of its most important tasks. The one excuse for this neglect has been poverty, but it is not a valid one. The literature department of the party can be developed into a profitable one from the financial as well as the educational point of view.

What is needed is a proper distribution machinery. That is what the centralization is going to provide. With the sale of books and pamphlets is in the same hands as the sale of our periodicals, then for the first time our literature will receive the attention which it must have and which it deserves.

I HAVE gone to some length in dealing with this subject, yet in view of its importance I feel that too much cannot be said. For it is not simply a matter of mechanical centralization of the production and administration of our party press. It is a real centralization for work by reason of which for the first time the distribution of our press and its wide and deep penetration of the masses becomes possible.

In subsequent articles I will deal with the nature of the work of party press distributors and suggests how this work can be most effectively organized and performed.—M. J. L.

Views of Our Readers on Many Subjects

Plea for Sacco-Vanzetti.

To the DAILY WORKER:—In spite of the new evidence that has come to light, Judge Thayer has refused to grant a new trial for Sacco and Vanzetti. Here is but another bit added to the monstrous mass of facts to show what sort of "justice" and "equality" militant workers can get in American courts. Unless the workers compel otherwise, two more working class fighters will have been judicially murdered. And at once the mind is irresistibly impelled to note the many points of similarity between the murders of Communists and other revolutionists by the fascisti of Europe and the murders by our courts.

Workers, what difference is there between the black shirts of the fascisti and the black shirts of our judges? Both are worn by our enemies sworn to break every militant organization and murder every fighter of the working class; both are hand-picked by the power of the capitalist state and are but the tools and agents of the bankers, bosses and landlords of the world. Yes, what difference is there between the black shirts, east and west? Both are the black shirts of fascism. One is the coarse black shirt of the brutal hangman, plying his bloody business with bullet and bayonet; the other is the silk black shirt of the Judas, with his treacherous phrases of "equality before the law" and "justice for all" and his ferocious betrayals "within the law."

Far better is the crankiness of the hangman than the lulling treachery of the Judas. We must remember this; that the blood and iron policy of the "black hundred" is used only when the workers have come to know their deadly enemies—the owning classes—and have massed for the attack against them. A Mussolini means that the state can no longer rely on its regular coercive machinery. A Mussolini means that the entire structure of class rule is tottering before the blows of the proletariat, and is ready to collapse.

In America we have no Mussolinis because the Judge Thayers are still able to fool the workers with their "justice." The rulers of America are still so strong that they do not need extra legal machinery to establish the "law and order" that will crush the workers. The smooth death-dealing action of the law courts is quite sufficient for the purposes of our masters.

Workers of America, we must awake! Sacco and Vanzetti must not die! Sprung from the loins of our class, they but personify our dreams and hopes for a better world. We can break our enemies, the capitalist rulers of America and their agents, the courts and the government. Only let us tear the black shirts of fear and cowardice from off our red hearts; only let us by mass demonstrations and strikes give proof of our invincible solidarity, and class prisoners can be free! Let the Sacco-Vanzetti case be a test of strength.

Workers, present a united front for the Sacco-Vanzetti defense.—Albert Weisbord, Boston, Mass.

A Negro's War Experiences.

To the DAILY WORKER: Being an ex-service man, and knowing something of the activities of the Negro troops at the front, as well as behind the lines in the world war, I have been somewhat interested in the welfare of the race. When I think over my war experiences and remember how those Negro troops would go to work early in the morning and work all day unloading supplies from boats, and another shift come on at night and work all night to supply the troops at the front with food, I think of them as a hard working race looking only for the right to make a living by their work.

I expected that the government would give them some protection. But after I came back from overseas, the Washington race riots occurred, followed by the Chicago and Omaha riots and lynchings thruout the south. One of the blackets moves against the Negroes was the order from the mayor of Johnstown that all Negroes that had not lived there for three years would be deported.

With all these things driven into their system, I wonder just how the Negroes feel when a man like Charles Dawes—also an ex-service man—and Cautious Calvin, tell them about "the constitution." I notice the governo of Missouri has offered a reward for the conviction of any member of the mob that hanged the Negro and burned his body after dragging it thru the Negro district. Of course it is not probable that anyone will claim the reward, and even if they do it will not stop lynching.

The law of the south does not protect the Negro nor punish the whites who practice violence on the Negro. I have noticed that all congressmen, as well as the gospel sharks are against mob law. I used to wonder why somebody didn't do something to stop lynching but I don't wonder any more. A little lynching party keeps race hatred stirred up, making it much easier for the capitalists to exploit both races. And the loss of one or two Negroes isn't so bad, as the capitalist slaves breed young as a rule.

Both white and black workers must take what the capitalists want to give them. Which is the best—the exploited class to slaughter another exploited class or for both exploited classes to unite?—Earl Kirk, South Bend, Ind.

MUSIC - LITERATURE - DRAMA

By Alfred V. Frankenstein.

Leo Sowerby, who is probably the most important composer in America today, and certainly the most important in Chicago, played a piano concerto of his own with the Chicago Symphony orchestra last Friday and Saturday. Like most of Sowerby's work, the concerto is the concentrated essence of pep and dash and vigor. The influence of the jazz artists can be plainly seen. It is a fine, enjoyable work, but compared to the ballad "King Estmere" for two pianos and orchestra played here last season, it it not so tremendously hot. Perhaps the fact that "King Estmere" is a later composition of Mr. Sowerby explains this.

The concerto illustrates one of the pet peeves of this writer. All the interpretative directions of the work were written in English. At first blush this may not seem wrong. Supposing, however, that Chaykovski had written all his tempo directions in Russian, Beethoven in German, Dvorak in Bohemian, Berlioz in French, MacCunn in Gaelic and Gomez in Portuguese, to mention only a few examples. A musician would have to be a linguist of no mean dimensions.

There exists a musical esperanto, the Italian language. Italian musical terms are used all over the world. They are understood in Japan and in Wyoming, and in all places in between.

The curious inconsistency of composers, who like Wagner and Debussy and Sowerby use their own languages to express degrees of tempo and method of interpretation, in using the sympols F for loud and P for soft, abbreviations of the Italian forte and piano, is also worthy of note.

For the past two or three years Mr. Sowerby has been in Rome. He won a prize that enabled him to go there. Why the organization which paid his expenses should stipulate Rome is pretty largely a mystery. Rome, musically, is the most unimportant capital in Europe. A prize sending a man to Paris or Munich or Vienna would seem more valuable. The main reason for the choice of Rome seems to be that for a century or more the Paris conservatory has been sending young composers to the eternal burg.

Preceding the concerto was the second symphony of Alexander Borodin, the Russian chemist-teacher-physician-musician. Borodin in his day was renowned as a scientist, and so intensely and well did he combine music and science that he died at the age of 40. In this second symphony one runs the gamut of Russian art, as we know it in the west. The first movement is brutally strong, flashing with color, vital and admirable—the Russian pomp and ceremony celebrated in some of the Moscow art theater plays. The third movement is the Russian of the wistful, the defeated and warped, Russia as Gorki and Dostoyevski and Chekov have painted it. In the fourth section exuberant notes burst like sky-rockets in the air. (Nikita Balieff sticks his moon face grin thru the curtains and says: "Leddies and zhentlemen, I spik no Engleesh").

A simple-minded suite by old man J. S. Bach and a simple, ingenious but not simple-minded piece of music, Humperdinck's prelude to Haensel and Gretel opened the program.

The repertoire for the Tenth Week of the Chicago Civic Opera Company will open on Sunday at 3 p. m. with the third performance of Madame Butterfly (at popular prices), with Mason, Perini, Hackett, and Bakin noff in the leading roles. Mr. Polacco will conduct.

Monday night brings the fifth performance of La Tosca with Muzio, Ansseau, Baklanoff and Moranzoni conducting.

Tuesday night the 1st and only performance of Romeo and Juliet will be given with Mason, Claessens, Hackett, Formichi and Cotreuil. Conductor Polacco.

A special matinee will be given Wednesday afternoon at prices ranging from $1 to $4, with Muzio, Lenska, Marshall, Formichi; Mlle. Nemeroff and corps de ballet. Moranzoni conducting.

Wednesday evening, the fourth presentation of Lucia di Lammermoor will be sung with Dal Monte, Schipa, Simini, Lazzari in the leading roles and Polacco conducting.

On Thursday evening the third performance of Werther will be given with Garden, Freund, Ansseau and Kipnis, with Polacco conducting.

Friday night will be the last performance of Traviata, with Muzio, Schipa, Schwarz; Oukrainsky, Miles, Milar, Shermont and corps de ballet, Cimini will conduct.

The Saturday matinee will be Il Trovatore, with Muzio, Homer, Lamont, Formichi and Weber conducting.

The popular price Saturday evening performance will be Rigoletto, with Macbeth, Hackett and Formichi, with Weber again conducting.

REVOLT SHAKES MUSSOLINI RULE

Ruthenberg Sentence 3-10 Years; Bail Denied

AS WE SEE IT
By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

CHICAGO FEDERATION OF LABOR

A Lively Discussion—Some Dead Arguments. Fitzpatrick's Ghost. Communists Fight for Fundamentals.

If there were no Communist delegates to the Chicago Federation of Labor it might strike the Musicians' union in whose hall the sessions are held to provide an orchestra to play the "Dead March" during the proceedings. It would be a dead body, politically speaking. As it is, the presence of a Communist is enough to cause a feeling of tension behind the little round table which John Fitzpatrick, president, belabors with his gavel, whenever he desires to add emphasis to his arguments, such as they are.

There was quite a lot of excitement at last Sunday's meeting of the federation. It originated, innocently enough when Comrade Arne Swabeck, delegate from Painters' Local No. 194, rose to protest against the action of Thomas F. Kennedy, delegate from the C. F. of L. to the El Paso convention of the A. F. of L. in endorsing the military training camp system engineered by the American capitalist class and railroaded thru the convention under the leadership of the late Gompers and his satellites. This was in the traditional manner of orators of the federation as has been pointed out. The speaker made a very telling speech, criticizing [illegible] its sins of omission and commission.

He dealt with the menace of capitalist militarism, unemployment, the organization of the unorganized, making particular reference to the workless fiasco made by the so-called committee for the organization of the steel workers. He was followed on the floor by another delegate, not a Communist, who took exception to the action of Delegate Kennedy in committing the Chicago Federation of Labor to a militarist program. It was quite evident that Fitzpatrick did not desire Kennedy's report to be brought up on the floor, as it was not read to the body but deposited in the columns of the Federation News, which is not very widely read, for various reasons.

Then, a very significant incident occurred. A delegate from the Metal Polishers, by the name of Diehl drew a kite in the form of an unmask. He suggested that the Communists be expelled from the federation. He thought the time was overripe but perhaps there was still time. This speaker tried to look impressive but failed notably. He referred to those who criticized Kennedy's report as "plants," an epithet which may be partly responsible for the way some of the delegates "flew" at him later on.

Delegate Diehl made such a novel argument in favor of the military training camps that it deserves to be recorded in history. If he did not stumble on it accidentally, he should be given credit for more fertility of imagination than one would suspect. This is what he said in substance: It is quite evident that the critics of the report did not read the report. If they had they would know—if they can know anything—that what the American Federation of Labor convention actually did was to take militarism out of the hands of the militarists. According to this kind of logic we could abolish the capitalist system by taking the exploitation of the masses out of the hands of the capitalists now in control and turn the business over to the leaders of the American Federation of

COURT PUSHES ATTACK; CALLS MINOR FEB. 22

Plan to Carry Fight to U. S. Supreme Court

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., Jan. 5.—C. E. Ruthenberg, national executive secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, is in jail here tonight, under sentence of three to 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine, for having "assembled with" his comrades in the national convention of the Communist Party at Bridgeman, in this state, in 1921.

The fight to secure Ruthenberg's release on bail, pending an appeal to the United States supreme court, will be carried to the Michigan supreme court at Lansing, tomorrow.

Sentenced to State Penitentiary

Judge C. W. White, in the Berrien county circuit court, in imposing sentence, refused to allow Ruthenberg to remain at liberty pending the appeal. The sentence of Judge White calls for imprisonment in the Michigan state prison, at Jackson.

That the Michigan prosecutors, supported by the U. S. attorney general's office at Washington, is planning to push the trials of the other Communists arrested, including William Z. Foster, William F. Dunne and a score of other prominent party members, was shown in the calling for trial of the case of Robert Minor, former editor of The Liberator, and now cartoonist of the DAILY WORKER. The Minor case is set for Feb. 2, but it is thought it will not be called until Feb. 9, when prospective jurymen have been ordered to appear.

It is expected that the Michigan supreme court will act on the appeal to the U. S. state supreme court on Jan. 15.

Court Room Is Crowded.

Ruthenberg arrived here early today from Chicago and appeared in court accompanied by his attorney, Isaac E. Ferguson, of Chicago. The court room was as crowded as on the most interesting day of the trial that resulted in Ruthenberg's conviction; the same court room that saw the disagreement in Foster's trial, after a long and hard fought legal battle.

Ruthenberg was not permitted to address the court, stating his views as a Communist on trial in a capitalist court, before sentence was passed. After sentence, however, he issued a statement declaring that:

Statement by Ruthenberg

"I have this to say: I am a Communist. I have openly stated from the witness stand in this court the principles which as a Communist I advocate and support. I deny that there is anything 'criminal' in these principles.

"If a law the courts of this state have held, to advocate the principles of Communism constitutes a crime, it is because the class in present day society which profits thru the exploitation and oppression of the masses has used the governmental power which it controls to make advocacy of ideas and principles which threaten its social privileges, a crime.

"I am not charged with commission of any act in the state of Michigan except that of 'assembling with' the Workers (Communist) Party of America. It is charged that the Workers (Communist) Party of America is an organization which violates the law.

SETTLEMENT OF COAL STRIKE UP TO ARBITRATION

Teamsters Get No Pay Raise Yet

The three thousand members of the Coal Teamsters' Union will return to work this morning after a one day day strike that completely tied up Chicago coal deliveries, and threw a scare into industrial, commercial and municipal users of coal. A conference between the union officials and representatives of the coal merchants association, which met during the greater part of yesterday at the Atlantic Hotel, agreed that the men should return to work while committees representing both sides "arbitrated" the differences.

The outcome of the conference is at least a temporary victory for the coal merchants' association, as the teamsters have as yet gained nothing by their walkout. The coal merchants declared that the drivers are return ing to work on the old scale, pending arbitration. It was stated at union headquarters that the men will work starting today, on the scale determined by the "arbitration" committees.

The strike was effective while it lasted, the union drivers tieing up coal deliveries even of the small independent coal dealers. The large companies made on effort to deliver coal yesterday.

At one o'clock yesterday afternoon the conference between the representatives of the Coal Teamsters' Union and the coal merchants' association was still going on, no agreement having been reached.

In spite of the fact that Marshall Kelg, member of the Coal Merchants' association, earlier had termed the demands of the coal drivers as "ridiculous," as soon as the strike went into effect the coal merchants asked T. J. Lynch and Milton Booth, presidents of local unions 704 and 782, for a conference. The conference was expected to be over at two o'clock but near that time chairs and food were sent for and a prolonged conference appeared likely. "We are far from any agreement," said one of the representatives of the strikers in the conference.

The strikers are demanding an increase of $1.00 per day, and working regulations which exempt them from having to load coal from the trucks they drive.

The union headquarters at 637 S. Ashland Blvd., announced that no organized picketing is being carried on. However, the coal truck drivers were seeing to it yesterday that no coal trucks were allowed on the streets except those for hospitals or orphanages.

KENNEDY SUCCEEDS GREEN AS SECRETARY-TREASURER OF THE MINE WORKERS' UNION OF AMERICA

(Special to The Daily Worker)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 5.—Thomas Kennedy, 40, of Hazelton, Pa., president of District No. 17, United Mine Workers of America, was selected international secretary-treasurer today by the miners' executive committee to succeed William Green, who became president of the American Federation of Labor following the death Samuel Gompers.

REED COLLEGE IN NEW WAR ON ALL REDS, LIBERALS

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 5.—The regents of Reed college, a privately endowed Portland institution once famous for its liberal educational experiments, are giving notice to the students that there are some things in the established order that are sacred. When Pres. Richard Scholz died the students wanted Alexander Meiklejohn, ousted liberal president of Amherst, to be appointed but the regents named Norman Coleman, practically an unknown figure.

No Hurry.

The Oregon Liberal, published at 215 4th St., declares that the regents are determined to sit hard on economic heresies in the student body. "The cry set up that youth is responsible for the dissatisfaction at Reed," says The Liberal, "is a smoke screen to hide the fact that economic teaching at Reed is to remain well in hand and that the students shall not do too much prying around the foundation stones of economic privilege lest they discover just what conditions are.

No Social Radicalism.

"These are days when you may be as radical as you please about the depths and structure of the sidereal universe or the chromosomes of guinea-pigs, but nothing digging now and then on the question of the distribution of the economic income of the local community or the nation is held up as dangerously radical and evidence of an impulsive revolt of youth which must be sternly curbed."

TELEPHONE OPERATORS' STRIKE TIES UP LINES AT HARRISBURG, ILL.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HARRISBURG, Ill., Jan. 5.—The deadlock in the strike of telephone operators of the Murphysboro Telephone company here continued today with another conference between union leaders and company officials scheduled for this afternoon.

Harrisburg business interests are suffering as the result of the tie up of all telephone service. Mayor Guy Patterson today notified both factions that they must get together and end the strike.

ALL EUROPE AWAITS CRASH IN ITALY; NEWS OF FIGHTING ESCAPED FASCISTI CENSOR

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Jan. 5.—Private advices from Italy today said that the internal situation there was extremely serious, with both fascists and anti-fascists in the smaller towns aroused to high pitch.

Serious conflicts have broken out and the police do not know what course to follow, these advices said. Large numbers of police stood by and watched the fascisti wreck the Nuvo Giornale, a newspaper of Florence, fearing to take a stand against the mob.

It is reported Mussolini plans to create a directory of three—himself and two generals—and impose martial law as a means of bringing order to Italy, but this is believed unlikely, at least at present.

There were evidences in London today that the heavy censorship in Italy is being maintained, if not tightened. News of the troubles there is subject to long delays in transmission.

Salandra Quits Mussolini.

The secession from the black shirt party of former Premier Salandra has come at an inopportune time for Mussolini.

"I have lost faith in fascism," Salandra said. "My work for the past two years to insert fascism in the normal life of the country has been destroyed."

To offset this adverse event, however, Mussolini today had the delirious approval of the fascist newspapers, who pledge him to continue the renewal of the fascist administration. They consider the steps taken so far as only the preliminaries in the "restoration of tranquility to Italy."

To Oust Opposition Deputies.

It was believed a decree would be forthcoming soon, declaring that all deputies who do not attend sessions of parliament would be deprived of their seats. The boycott had been the weapon of opposition deputies and their means of showing their disapproval of "Mussolini despotism."

Mussolini practically has placed Italy on a basis of martial law, with the strictest orders for suppression of anti-fascist organizations, special militia guarding the railway stations and the fascist prefects authorized to mobilize the black shirt militia.

A railway strike under Communist leadership is said to be in preparation to prevent the movement of fascist troops.

The government has ordered the dissolution of the Italia Libera association, composed of former soldiers who are opposed to fascism.

Fascists and Oppositions Clash.

ROME, January 5. — Rome waited breathlessly yesterday to learn the measures whereby Premier Mussolini, in accordance with his speech on Saturday, would "clear the air" and "break the Aventine sedition," meaning by this the resistance of the deputies who were staying away from parliament.

As far as learned these measures included (1) the strengthening of the railway militia to prevent attempts at sabotage, (2) sequestration of the headquarters of political associations which had not yet been specified and (3) giving the local prefects authority to mobilize the "black shirt" militia.

Sham Attack on Rome.

In Rome and other cities the militia mobilized itself. Fifteen hundred "black shirts," fully armed, performed maneuvers outside Rome, executing a sham attack on the city. They were subsequently congratulated by the new generalissimo, Gandolfo, and later they paraded the streets of the city.

Exceptionally heavy cordons of soldiers surrounded the principal opposition newspaper offices and the Grand Orient (Masonic) lodge.

Fragmentary reports from Bologna mention serious rioting in the course of the fascist reunion there. Minor disturbances attended a forbidden meeting at Naples.

The Garibaldian association, Italia Libera, has been suppressed. It is not known whether other opposition parties will also be suppressed.

The resignation of Sig. Casati as minister of education was confirmed today.

THE WATCH DOGS OF WORLD EMPIRE BARK AT FRANCE

Senators, Financiers and Observers Unite

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—France's much heralded "proposition" for the funding of her $4,000,000,000 war debt to the United States was officially revealed today as only an empty gesture, which for the present does not afford a suitable basis on which serious funding negotiations can be begun.

The communication which Ambassador Herrick forwarded to the state department over the week end was not addressed to the American government, or did it come from the French government, but was a "personal memorandum" from Finance Minister Clementel which contained no definite nor concrete suggestions for payment.

In view of this fact, it was said to be doubtful whether the American debt funding commission even would be assembled to consider the French communication. A copy of was sent to Secretary of the Treasury Mellon for his information. M. Clemental's memorandum was devoted almost entirely to an exposition of French public opinion on the general subject of war debts.

If examination of the French memorandum bears out the information concerning it cabled from abroad—that France has proposed a ten year moratorium and an interest rate of one-half of one percent over a period of eighty or ninety years—then it is considered certain here that the commission will reject the terms proposed, and call upon the French government for something more in keeping with the the American policy. American imperialism insists on its overlordship.

The chief hope of administration officials today was that the French communication would be found to contain sufficient "meat" to warrant serious funding negotiations.

Bulwarking Senators on the Job.

Only the beginning of real negotiations can forestall an outbreak in congress over the French debt, which will not be calculated to improve Franco-American relations. No less than a dozen senators, some of them bulwarks of the administration, are planning to express themselves concerning France's policy of quasi-repudiation of her war obligations.

Among those planning to speak is Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, chairman of the foreign relations committee. He will point out, among other things, that the American taxpayer is now being taxed one per cent a year on the British debt, being approximately $50,000,000 a year.

If the French debt is settled on anything like the terms France is reported to have "unofficially" proposed, American taxpayers will make up the

MANY HUNDRED CITY EMPLOYES TO LOSE JOBS

Wage Appropriations Are Cut by Aldermen

Holding of the city's annual appropriation bill within the anticipated revenue of approximately $46,500,000, which the finance committee has started out to do, will be at the sacrifice of several hundred jobs of persons now on the city pay roll, it was announced by the chairman today. The committee planned to resume its sessions directly after today's regular meeting of the city council, and start into the home stretch, which is expected to be reached by Jan. 20 or before.

Bill Slated to Pass by Feb. 1.

The council session was expected to be short, the purpose of the meeting being merely to authorize expenditures of the city for January in order that the departments may go ahead functioning legally until the budget is passed. In the last few years such action has been necessary for both February and March as well as January, but it is hoped that the appropriation bill will have been passed by Feb. 1 this year.

Salary Raises Increase Budget.

The appropriation of $1,700,000 made last year for raising salaries almost exclusively in the police and fire departments makes it necessary for the antiquated retrenchment this year in various other departments. The salary increases in 1924 applied only to the last three months of the year, but in 1925 the entire $1,700,000 must be met and it is pointed out that there can be no cutting of activities in the police and fire sectors.

The finance committee is cutting off no jobs as such, but there will be no appropriations for materials with which to work in several sections of the public works department, which is naturally expected to result in certain classes of employes being laid off. While this is expected to hit hardest in the department of public works, Ald. Woodhull states that cutting down of expenditures in several other departments will be obligatory.

ANOTHER COAL MINER LESS OF CZAR LEWIS' 200,000 "SURPLUS"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HARRISBURG, Ill., Jan. 5.—Walter "Handsome" Ellsworth, age 35, a coal miner, was electrocuted here today, half an hour after he had gone to work as machine runner in the Ogara mine, No. 12.

As John L. Lewis has declared that there are 200,000 miners too many, Ellsworth's death leaves the surplus 199,999. Before the three-year contract expires, Lewis' program of forcing these "surplus" miners out of the industry, may be effected by the operators ignoring safety laws.

NO WAGE CUTS MADE IN READING, PA., TEXTILE MILLS; BOTTOM ALREADY REACHED

By ART SHIELDS.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

READING, Pa., Jan. 5.—New Year's day is not witnessing any wage cuts in the large silk and hosiery mills of Reading because these mills already have the long hours and the high speed system which give them a commercial advantage over their Paterson and New England competitors. Four to six looms are operated by each silk weaver—contrasted with the two-loom system the Paterson workers are maintaining by aggressive unionism—and the 10-hour day prevails.

Since the Paterson strike last summer the huge Vanity Fair mills, covering a long city block in Reading have been working overtime. Women work the full 54-hours permitted by Pennsylvania law and the sky is the limit for men. Only straight time prevails for overtime.

Organization Benefits.

The advantages of organization and the disadvantages of the open shop are glaringly illustrated. Building trades workers and printers, both strongly organized, have the 44-hour week and union wages. Shop crafts workers for the Reading railroad maintain the eight-hour day. Some minor reforms are treasured by steel workers, organized in three locals of the Amalgamated Association of Iron Steel and Tin Workers, the shop control is lacking. The rest of the city's workers, for the most part, have to accept whatever the boss decrees.

No Textile Unions.

In the Vanity Fair mills there is no unionism, tho the United Textile workers and the Amalgamated Textile workers have made organization efforts. The Nolde & Horst Stocking factory; the Berkshire Knitting mills and smaller concerns, employing a total of thousands of knit goods workers are without the vestige of organization. An organizer of the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers, spent a year in Reading, making a determined attempt to build up a union but was not able to get results. The Reading workers are Americans, of old Pennsylvania Dutch stock.

Might Be Worse.

Compared with some other towns in eastern Pennsylvania, however, Reading unionism is to the fore. Its well organized building trades and printing workers make a strong contrast to the open shopism of Bethlehem, for example, where Charles M. Schwab has crushed out unionism. Even in the steel industry the contrast is noticeable between the three locals of the Amalgamated in Reading and the lack of unionism in the three steel mills in Bethlehem.

AS WE SEE IT—By T. J. O'Flaherty

Labor. Isn't that the doodle-bug's nippers?

NO other delegate had the temerity to second Diehl's suggestion that the Communists be expelled, but Victor Koehler disposed of his military pipe dream very effectively by the single exclamation of "Bunk." Having cleared the air he then proceeded to state that tho he was not a Communist, he knew from his experience with Communists—mentioning Jack Johnstone in particular—that they stood up for fundamental issues and he stood with them and would do so in the future when he thought they were right. It was not the Communists who were tending to disrupt the labor movement he declared but those like Diehl, who would expel them.

AND this is a very significant fact, that should be carefully noted. It was very obvious that no matter how many of the delegates disagreed with the Communists on the ultimate ideal of the Workers Party and the methods by which that goal could best be realised, they nevertheless knew that the policies advocated and fought for by Swabeck, Johnstone, Overgaard and the other active Communists in the labor movement were very vital issues in the lives of the working class, while those were the very issues that the fakers were either ignoring or actively fighting against. And if the Communists fight for the interests of the workers and the reactionaries fight against those interests, who is the honest union man going to support, regardless of how much brimstone and smoke the fakers hurl around in order to becloud the issue? The question answers itself.

DIEHL'S suggestion to expel the Communists evoked no enthusiasm and Edward Nockels, secretary of the federation, realizing that a "boner" was pulled, gut and tried to belittle the Communists. He said they should be left alone. Was Diehl's suggestion after the fashion of Noah sending out the raven from the ark to look for evidence of an abatement of the flood? In this case the raven was testing the sentiment of the members for the expulsion of the Communists, but instead of bringing back an olive leaf he got a bunch of raspberries.

DELEGATE SCHUSSLER, referred pointedly to the christian gentlemen at the head of the federation who followed the lowly Nazarene yet raved like maniacs at the presence of Communists in the meeting, tho early christianity was the anthitesis of capitalism. He inferred that Jesus was lucky he got away with crucifixion that had he lived today in Chicago it is quite likely he would meet a worse fate. John Fitzpatrick then made some forceful if not logical contribution to the discussion. The force was entirely from the lungs and from the gavel.

HE blamed Comrade Swabeck for injecting his views into the situation and hazarded the guess that Swabeck was taking his orders from the Workers Party and not from Local No. 194 of the painters. He admitted that the issues raised by Swabeck were fundamental ones. He could hardly restrain his anger against the darned Communists who seemed to have a pen chant for taking up issues fundamental to the workers. Of course it war quite clear to Fitzpatrick that there was an "ulterior motive" behind all this, some Jesuitical trick to secure the leadership of the masses and no doubt free them from the shackles of capitalism and the fossilized labor misleaders. This was the way these wily reds acted. Had they, as radicals formerly used—waste their time in senseless criticism, merely picking on the padded expenses accounts of the labor fakers when they travel from Chicago to Washington let us say—and ignore bigger questions they could be put down as "nuts" and "kickers," and safely ignored.

FITZPATRICK was, to use a favorite phrase of his, "in a most unhappy position" and he was getting worse and worse as he proceeded. His oratorical effort was partly a rebuke to Delegate Diehl (the raven who got the raspberries) and partly a suggestion that the local unions who send Communists as delegates to the federation should see that only safe sano and silent ones be sent in the future. He thought it was a mean trick on Swabeck's part to bring the Kennedy report up for discussion, and have Fitzpatrick's anti-militarist ghost stalk in all its nakedness before the delegates. Therefore he turned his guns on Swabeck and after making a personal attack on him refused him the floor on a point of personal privilege before putting the question to a vote.

ON the whole it was an instructive discussion in the sense that it revealed the entire bankruptcy of the reactionaries. They were afraid to face the issues raised by the Communists, intellectually, because, as Fitzpatrick admitted, these issues are "fundamental." Instead they resort to cheats of expulsion and charges of "ulterior motive," ad nauseam. It should not be assumed that because Fitzpatrick and Nockels decided last Sunday that no delegate would be refused a seat in the federation because of his political views that no attempt will be made in the future to deprive them of the right to represent their local unions. There is no doubt but Fitzpatrick and Nockels will be just as willing to do the dirty work for the head fakers of the A. F. of L., in Chicago, as the fake radical Cramer was in Minneapolis. That the Communists are using the proper tactics in the unions needs no more convincing proof than the unwitting admission of John Fitzpatrick.

RUSSIAN FLEET HELD BY FRANCE TO BE RETURNED

Britain Tries Delay Fearing Red Navy

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Jan. 5. — While allies' commissions remain in Constantinople for the purpose of determining the future status of the Dardanelles, the Turkish and Roumanian naval staffs are becoming disturbed by the apparition of the Black Sea fleet.

Since the close of the world war Russia has possessed no important naval force. But the recent decision of the French government to hand over to the Soviet government the fleet formerly possessed by Gen. Wrangel opens up an entirely new vista.

Fleet at Bizerta.

This fleet, which is lying at Bizerta, Tunisia, is not of date compared with modern American warships, but is incomparably superior in size and speed to any other eastern European navy. Its battleships and destroyers would completely dominate the Black Sea, and Roumanian and Bulgarian ports, as well as Constantinople, would not be secure in the event that relations with Russia became strained.

In Turkey it is believed that Great Britain pointed out to France the difficulties and dangers which the return of the fleet to the Moscow government would create. Therefore, the transfer may be delayed, but it seems doubtful whether the plan of delivery will be prevented ultimately.

To Go to Odessa.

After the fleet has been thoroly overhauled it probably will proceed to Odessa, where it will make its headquarters.

There is talk to the effect that the eastern European states will summon a naval conference to discuss this matter. None of them feel inclined or is able to go to the expense of constructing new war vessels, while none can view with equanimity the presence of a naval force so greatly superior to its own.

On January 17, a conference of the Baltic white guard governments, including Latvia, Esthonia and Finland, will meet at Helsingfors. It, too, is expected to protest to France against returning the vessels to Soviet Russia, only these Baltic states will complain that the fleet will make the Bolsheviks the strongest naval power in the Baltic.

MUSSOLINI DOES NOT REPLY TO MURDER CHARGE

Wants to Resign; Violence Continues

ROME, Italy, Jan. 5.—Mussolini, who does not deny the charges of Cesare Rossi that the fascist leader plotted the murder of his chief opponents, is anxious to resign, latest reports from Italy declare. Deputy Farinacci, the extreme fascist leader whose differences with Mussolini are growing more acute, has expressed the desire to organize a new government led by the extreme wing of the fascist party.

Mussolini is demoralized. His fascist organ, Popolo D'Italia, in an article today, did not deny the charges of Rossi that Mussolini instigated the murder of the socialist deputy Matteoti, and murderous attacks on the opposition deputies, Amendola, Misuri and Forni, and the robbing of ex-Premier Nitti's house in Brianza.

The fascisti provincial council of Milan has already resigned, in the face of charges of criminal acts of violence. Drunken fascisti attacked workers on the streets of Milan, who retaliated, killing the fascist Vittorio Agnudter and mortally wounding Giovanni Lanino. Many other exciting witnessed fights between the fascisti and workers, many being killed and wounded thruout Italy.

Opposition newspapers demand that Mussolini resign, calling for a judicial inquiry into the charges of Rossi. The opposition leaders declare that Mussolini cannot hold an election until the Rossi charges have been sifted.

Outgoing Iowa State Treasurer Will Need Len Small's Good Luck

DES MOINES, Ia., Jan. 5.—Following the closing of several Des Moines banks recently, the Iowa state executive council today passed a resolution to institute suit against W. J. Burbank, outgoing state treasurer, for the recovery of nearly a million dollars of state funds. Burbank, it is alleged, failed to account for these funds to R. E. Johnson, the new state treasurer.

It is charged that Burbank did not have adequate securities on his bonds executed by various personal friends and surety companies.

Some More Camouflage Drops Off the Face of Exploiters' Kept Press

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, two editorial writers are carrying on a sham battle in the columns of the Tama, Iowa, News-Herald. One writes from the republican viewpoint; the other turns out democratic dope. This is the solution offered of the merger of the Herald, republican, and the News, democrat. It is a logical solution. The next step should be to have the two editorial writers work on alternate weeks. It is guaranteed that the readers wouldn't be able to tell the difference between the productions of the two "bought and paid for" scribblers.

* * * *

Both the republican and democratic writers, in all their editorials, will support capitalism—the rule of the landlords, the bankers, the grain speculators and the food gamblers. They will seek to justify the continued rule of the buzzards who will fatten off the worker and farmer masses of Iowa as long as the republicans and democrats have their say.

Formerly the staffs of pen prostitutes on the Tama News and the Tama Herald performed under separate tents. Now the demo-republican show is consolidated. Under this latter condition these hired hacks, whose jobs are guaranteed as long as they turn out the right kind of dope, should carry less influence than formerly. The bi-partisanism of the capitalists is better revealed.

* * * *

In the November elections last fall more than 4,000 workers and poor farmers in Iowa cast their ballots for the Communist candidates of the Workers Party. This was good as a starter. It shows that the capitalist game is on the down grade; that there are goodly numbers of exploited in this state who refuse to be fooled and misled any longer by the capitalists—either big or little. They have learned the real nature of the class enemy of city and land labor.

* * * *

They know, for instance, that their press champion is the Communist daily—the DAILY WORKER. They have reached that milestone on the road to their liberation, where they realize that the capitalist state must fall in order to make way for the Communist society. That realization on the part of a growing number of other workers and poor farmers will result in more consolidations of capitalist newspapers of differing shades in Iowa, as in every other section of the nation.

COURT PUSHES ATTACK ON THE COMMUNISTS

What are the principles of the Workers (Communist) Party, for belief in which and advocacy of which the state of Michigan acting as the agent of the capitalist class desires to imprison me?

"The Workers (Communist) Party and I as a Communist point to the class character of the present social order and the existing government. I have pointed out the the few capitalists exploit and take from the masses of workers and farmers the wealth which they produce. I have pointed out that the present government is the supporter and upholder of this system of exploitation. I have argued that the working masses must organize their power under the leadership of the Communists to establish a workers' and farmers' government which will rule in their interests in place of that of the exploiters. I have urged that such a government only could reorganize our social structure to abolish exploitation and oppression and to make industry serve the happiness and well-being of those who produce the wealth of this country.

"In stating these principles of Communism I have stated further that all history shows that no privileged class has surrendered its privileged position without a resort to force to maintain its right to exploit and oppress, and that the ultimate struggle between the workers and capitalists would be a struggle of force. I have not advocated any present act of force by the working class. I have made this historical forecast that the situation which existing social forces will bring will create a situation in which the class struggle will inevitably develop into a struggle of force.

"I have been imprisoned before because I advocated and supported these principles. I shall not change them because the class laws of capitalism imprison me again, because it is my firm belief that the existing social order leads inevitably to such a catastrophe as the world war, which all but destroyed European civilization, and that if what is good in our civilization is to be saved, if mankind is to go forward to a better and finer life, if exploitation, oppression, misery and suffering for the masses is to be ended, that can only be achieved thru a struggle of the workers against the existing capitalist system until thru their organized power they establish a Soviet government and begin the rebuilding of our social order and the creation of a Communist society. To lead that struggle, to carry it forward to victory, that is the task of the Workers (Communist) Party with which I am charged with assembly and of which I am proud to be a member."

difference between 4½ per cent now being paid on liberty bonds, and the one-half of one per cent France suggests. This would amount to approximately $150,000,000 a year for years to come.

Our Imperial "Observers."

Officials reiterated today that the presence in Paris of Ambassadors Kellogg, Herrick and Col. James A. Logan does not mean they will debate the debts with the allied finance ministers, who meet there tomorrow. Kellogg and Logan were sent to Paris "to observe" and safeguard "American interests" in the reparations proceedings rather than to discuss war debts.

BRITAIN FIGHTS NOTE

LONDON, Jan. 6.—The British cabinet took under consideration yesterday America's note which, it is understood, states frankly that the United States has a "legal right" for payment of its war claims through the Dawes reparation plan.

Note Received—But Not Welcomed

The note was received by the foreign office today and sent immediately to the cabinet. The American note was a reply to the British note of last wednesday.

Out of the cabinet meeting was expected to come a definite statement of policy, not only on America's war claim, but also on the Franco-American debt and war debts in general.

The specific purpose of the cabinet meeting, it was announced, is to give Chancellor of the Exchequer Churchill final instructions covering his appearance at the allied financial conference in Paris this week.

Britain will not, it was said, accept the terms which France has made in informal memoranda to the United States for payment of the Franco-American debt. These terms specify a ten year moratorium and 90 years to discharge the debt.

British Plan to Bolt Paris Meet

It appears likely, diplomats conceded, that the financial conference in Paris will break down. An effort then will be made by Great Britain to bring about an inter-allied debt conference. This conference would take up the question of the participation of the United States in the reparation payments.

SETTLEMENT OF COAL STRIKE UP TO ARBITRATION

which were the only two exemptions made by the union.

Chief Collins Aids Coal Dealers.

An attempt of the Hedstrom-Schenk coal company to operate coal trucks by means of scabs was frustrated when the first truckload of coal to leave the yard, was tipped over in an altercation between pickets and the strikebreakers. The coal company immediately called on the police to try to terrorize the strikers. Chief Collins, who has had ill luck in his attempts to clear up the crime ring that infests Chicago, responded with the statement that deliveries of coal by strikebreakers will be "protected" by his force. As a usual, the police have been called out to oppose the strikers.

Will Use Scabs.

The Coal Merchants' association announced that today, if the strike is still on, strikebreakers will be used on a large scale. Police rushed to the coal yards of the L. W. Ferguson Coal Co., and tried to disperse 25 strikers who were protesting at the opening of the gates by the company. The coal companies have been warned by union men that the gates must be kept closed as a safeguard against violence incited by strikebreakers.

The union officers were deluged with telephone calls, personal visits and telegrams yesterday, asking to be placed on the exemption list. But the reply was, "No coal unless it is a hospital or an orphan asylum." A member of the West Park board drove up in a limousine and asked for coal for the conservatory there. He was told to return later. A large laundry company asked for coal, but was refused. A dog hospital called up and asked for drivers, and the union officials replied they would take the matter under consideration.

The sentiment of those union officials at the headquarters yesterday was that the strike will be over today at the latest. Meanwhile, the coal drivers, who, in their sheepskin coats and with their faces stained with coal dust, presented a marked contrast to the coal dealers and their clerical staffs, continued with their unofficial picketing. One driver told the DAILY WORKER how he stopped a coal truck in Douglas Park. "I told the driver it is very unhealthy to be driving a coal truck along the streets today," the driver said. "We are not going to keep all coal trucks off the streets."

Helpers Get Low Wages.

Another coal truck driver explained that the helpers employed to load and unload the coal receive only $4.00 to $4.50 per day. These are practically all non-union men." The driver told the DAILY WORKER. "If they had a union card they would get $6.00 a day, and maybe they would stick to their jobs a little longer. They do not belong to our union." These are the workers who must load and unload all the coal, according to the demands of the strikers. As it is now the coal truck driver sits side by side with a non-union helper, who would probably be glad to join the coal drivers' union if eligible.

While the drivers were out energetically picketing, they clung to their faith that the unions original demands will be won even if winning them means a stubborn strike.

WE SELL POLICIES FEVERISHLY, SAYS NEW YORK AGENT

By T. R. SULLIVAN,
Organizer, District 4.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 5.—All of the comrades in District No. 4 are in the insurance business on a large scale. The reason is not that we have all become small capitalists, but that we realize very keenly the great services done the party by the DAILY WORKER. It is to continue these services in a greater and more effective means of bringing our Communist program to the masses that we are all selling, insurance feverishly.

The DAILY WORKER has accomplished more than the most optimistic hoped for, and with the support promised for 1925 will establish our Daily as a real power in the life of the workers in America. District No. 4 is wholeheartedly on the job to raise its full share for the insurance of our Daily for 1925.

ONLY ONE RED WAY TO ACT!

There is only one RED WAY to act. And that is to enter EVERY party campaign a hundred percent and with that pugnacious spirit which every Communist must have.

For we are fighters. We are militant or we are nothing. Today we want you to fight with us to overcome the things that stand in the way of the safety and progress of the DAILY WORKER.

The way to fight this battle is to sell INSURANCE POLICIES. The way to tell who are the fighters is by INSURANCE POLICY REMITTANCES.

So we have decided to (1) Issue a BIG RED SPECIAL EDITION of the DAILY WORKER, upon the first anniversary of our party organ, on January 13th.

(2) In the BIG RED SPECIAL we will feature the PAGE FOR MILITANT BRANCHES. Militant branches are those that ARE RED, those that REMIT FOR POLICIES sold.

(3) The name of all branches that remit for INSURANCE POLICIES before January 8th, will be printed upon this MILITANT PAGE.

PITTSBURGH COMMUNISTS VOTE FOR MAJORITY THESIS AND BOOST DAILY WORKER FUND CAMPAIGN

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 5.—Besides adopting the majority theses by a vote of fifty-two against thirty-eight the general membership meeting held here yesterday also contributed over two hundred dollars for the DAILY WORKER.

A resolution introduced by District Organizer Blankenstein condemning factionalism was carried by a vote of thirty-eight to 28.

Comrade Merrick's position on party policy received only four votes.

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

THE MINORITY'S UNITED FRONT POLICY

By J. W. Johnstone.

The longer the party discussion continues the clearer we find out just what the minority wants. Not so much from their writings but rather in the general discussions that have taken place. One cannot gather much farmer labor party arguments from the comedy column conducted by Lovestone and Bedacht. Nor can one see a Marxian argument for a farmer labor party from the fact that Lore voted for a motion made by Foster. So we have to read between the lines of what the minority writes and listen carefully to what they say in debate.

A year ago our party wanted an all inclusive mass farmer-labor party, and both factions were agreed that if a farmer-labor party did not crystallize into a national organization and run its own candidates in the 1924 presidential election, that the farmer-labor party movement would be ruined for many years to come. The minority says so in its thesis of last year. The minority admits the correctness of this theory, by the very fact that they have given up the hope of an all inclusive farmer-labor party and rather willingly resign themselves to a mere "class farmer-labor party."

What had been puzzling me for some time was just what the minority means by a clas farmer-labor party and the answer to this puzzle was supplied by Comrade Minor. In the Pullman membership meeting Minor in his well known broken dialect said in substance, "We want big, revolutionary, bolsheviki farmer labor party," and again in the Chicago membership meeting Minor in as many words said that in order to get a workers' and farmers' government you have to have a "class farmer-labor party," so there we have it.

The dictatorship of the proletariat has to come thru a big, Bolshevik farmer-labor party. Just what was to become of the Workers (Communist) Party Minor failed to state, but we do not have to guess very hard what would happen to our party if the membership would be foolish enough to place the direction of our party policies into the hands of these farmer-labor party Communists.

Their Last Stand.

One thing is certain and that is, the minority wants a farmer-labor party. They are not all as sure as Minor is just what kind of a party they want, but they want a class farmer-labor party badly. In fact, they want it so bad that they say definely that a united front upon the political field is impossible unless thru a farmer-labor party. It is very easy to understand why the leaders of the minority take this opportunistic attitude, why they make this fundamental blunder.

The arguments put up by the minority in favor of a farmer-labor party take many peculiar turns but they always offer one to the emotions and sentiment rather than to the intelligence of our members. One of their arguments is to point out that some members of the minority have served prison sentences for their Communist principles. Leaving two impressions, one, that it is only the minority comrades who were sent to the penitentiary, two, that serving prison sentences is a qualification for Communist leadership. With all due respect to these comrades, minority and majority alike, who stood the test, we refuse to accept the sentimental rot, that that alone, is a qualification for Communist leadership. It that is the case, then Gene Debs would be a Communist leader, he stood the test of the penitentiary-but failed miserably in every other test.

In reality, our party has not yet shaken of completely its underground garments, and this stupid loyalty by the minority to the farmer-labor party movement is a hang-over from our ill legal underground days. Some 18 months ago when our party actively entered, as a factor, the movement for a farmer-labor party, comrades like Bob Minor were still viewing the masses thru a perfiscope from the ten thousand foot level. They emerged from the cellar into the farmer-labor party movement. That is the closest they have ever got to the masses, and they resent, rather viciously, any and all the attempt of the majority to push them a little nearer to the workers.

It is not so very long ago that some of these same comrades were of the opinion, that comrades like Foster should be relegated to the industrial field, as well as party's industrial experts. The party's Communist purity was to be protected by our intellectual leaders, the self-styled "Marxian" group. The fear of losing their Communist virginity thru too close a contact with the masses is still strong altho not talked about quite so loudly. This is still the background of the present struggle in the party. It is a struggle between pseudo intellectuals and one proletarians in our party.

The minority leaders talk a great deal about more action instead of the mere issuing of programs. This I subscribe to 100 per cent—we want more action. But what have the minority contributed to whatever action our party has taken in the struggle of the masses in the past, the present, and what action do they propose for the future? Let me refresh the memory of some of our comrades on just a few of our past activities. I will deal mainly with District 8 because I am more familiar with and took part in these activities.

The Record Speaks.

Take the unemployed campaign of 1921 and 22. Who was it that perfected the united front and formed the unemployed councils? The comrades who took the lead in that campaign in District were Krumbein, Swabeck, Overgaard, Kjar, Greenwood and a host of others I could mention, but cudgel my memory as much as I may I cannot recall a single leading supporter of the minority who was to be found during that campaign. A campaign in which our party played a leading role. Where over 100 mass meetings were held in Chicago alone, where hundreds of local unions had open meetings, all of which heard, for the first time the Communist message.

Unemployment.

In every committee in this campaign we had representation. Overgard, chairman of the speakers committee. Krumbein, on the committee to look after the open union meetings Swabeck, publicity committee and so on down the line. It was a splendid campaign, despite the fact that we were more enthusiastic over the unemployed, than the six million unemployed were themselves. For the comrades who took an active part, it was an invaluable experience, and it brot our party much closer to the workers.

In the Open Shop Drive.

In the open shop drive of 1921-22, who were our active actionists? Take the building trades strike of Chicago. Who were the members of our party who advocated and set up a united front of the union movement to fight the Landis award, which resulted in a protest parade of over 150,000 workers against the "open shop" Landis award. One-half million leaflets were distributed and hundreds of union meetings addressed. Again we find the same group and we fail to locate the minority.

The Railway Strike.

In the big railroad shopmen's strike we find the same situation, the minority who are now demanding more action did not answer the roll call. Here was the opportunity for real action Comrade Overgaard who was also chairman of the speakers committee did much good work in that strike and two years later in the machinist convention held in Detroit, was defended by delegates whom he did not know and who pointed out in defense of the Communists and members of the T. U. E. L. that these two organizations were the spirit of the shopmen's strike, and that if the leaders of the union had done half the work done by Overgaard and his comrades the strike would have been won.

The Anti-Injunction Majority.

Comrade Foster, according to the minority is merely a program writer, took an active part in all of these united fronts. In the railroad shopmen's strike, Comrades Foster and Dunne spoke to at least 100 meetings in a tour made by them from Chicago to the coast. The same story could be told about the miners and other strikes that took place during that great capitalist offensive. And what was advocated, comrades, as well as the fight against wage cuts? "Defy the injunction," was one of the slogans. Of course, according to the minority, when this is done at a strike meeting or in a union hall, by some piece of magic it becomes an industrial and not a political act. Strangely enough, as it may seem to Minor, they also pointed out the necessity of establishing a workers' and farmers' government.

Where Were the Minority?

In case it may seem to me taking an unfair advantage, by getting too close to our underground days, and that I am not giving our minority comrades a chance to get off their overalls after our mining experience, let me cite a recent strike—the International Ladies' Garment Workers strike of last year. Oh, where, Oh, where were these actionists? They will have to answer that themselves. we could not find them. Oh, yes, we found one who spoke at a strike called by Comrade Engdahl. Comrade Kruse, a loud clamorer for more action (if we ever got a flicker of action out of Kruse we would be more than satisfied), stated in the Chicago membership meeting that I appealed to the political committee to stop Comrade Engdahl from launching a fight against Alderman Oscar Nelson. Nothing was further from the truth and Kruse knows it.

Strike meetings are always the best meetings for Communist propoganda but there is also such a thing as a strike psychology, which our minority has not yet discovered. What I protested to the political committee about what was the kind of a fight that Engdahl carried on in the DAILY WORKER and what he said in the strike meeting. What was it? "That Nelson and Victor Olander were two big bums, two big two hundred and fifty pound slobs who would look well on the picket line." If that is the Kruse idea of a fight against the city hall, I will oppose it.

The Picket Line First.

I pointed out to Engdahl that he weighed about 300 pounds himself and that he had been no closer to the picket line than either Nelson or Olander. Who manned the picket line, who urged the defiance of the injunction, who really held the strike line as long as it lasted?—Comrades like Dora Lipshutz. The Young Workers League and party members every morning strengthened the picket line. The entire district executive committee were on the picket line except Bob Minor, "the man of action." Not a single leading member of the minority spent two minutes on the picket line.

The Minority United Fronts.

Now let me deal briefly with some of the united fronts set up by the minority. First, let me take the famous united front with Fitzpatrick. In all of my experience in the Chicago Federation of Labor we never had a united front with Fitzpatrick on any question, until the united front set up by the Pepper-Lovestone-Ruthenberg group just prior to the July 3rd and 4th farmer-labor party conference. When this was set up, we we knew Fitzpatrick, thru the district committee wrote to the C. E. C. then in control, the present minority, to be very careful in dealing with and not to place much trust in the Fitzpatrick-Nockels-Brown group. We were told to mind our own business. Who made up this Fitzpatrick united front committee? Pepper, Lovestone and Ruthenberg. Our united front in Chicago was in the tank and the end the result of that united front was that we brought to the July 3rd convention 58 delegates from Chicago alone.

The Hillman United Front.

Another united front set up by the minority when they controlled the C. E. C. was the Pepper-Hillman united front, a united front that almost ruined, and did completely demoralize for a long time, our left wing group in the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. We, as disciplined Communists very naturally carried out our instructions. We carried out the instruction so well, that our party members in the groups, up until the open discussion started, thot that it was our policy and not Pepper's.

To us who opposed this collaboration with Hillman, Pepper stated, "Between the left wing and Hillman, I will take Hillman for the next ten years, and maybe for two years more" and, because he thought he could use Hillman to form a farmer-labor party. In the elections in the Amalgamated that year Hillman suggested that we should elect as a left winger one of his tools and the candidate Minor, the actionist, actually argued in favor of it. "Why," he said, "we can at least claim him as our man."

In the last convention of the A. C. W. U., Hillman invited Minor to speak, while the C. E. C. selected Comrade Browder to organize the left wing. While Browder was organizing the left wing in the convention to fight Hillman, Minor as very delegate known, was one of the cheer leaders for Hillman. Even in Moscow, at the time when the Russian American Industrial Corporation was being formed, Hillman objected to our party picking its quota of directors, as he wanted them first submitted to him for approval. He said, (and I was there) "I have no objections to men like Bob Minor."

And in the election that has just taken place in the A. C. W., where the policy of collaboration with Hillman was discarded, and the elections based upon a clear and definite left wing program, some of the party members deserted the party principles and signed a petition for Levin's office just on the eve of election repudiating the left wing program. This naturally demoralized to quite an extent the left wing. On top of this our comrades had to battle for Levin's office at the polling places, some of them being slugged. What did Bob Minor do under these circumstances? He introduced a motion in the district executive committee meeting asking the C. E. C. to restate the party policies in the A. C. W.

Here, for the first time, since the forming of the Pepper-Minor-Hillman united front, our party policy in the Amalgamated was very clearly understood. So clear in fact, that the weak members of our party were afraid to endorse it, and actually repudiated it rather than enter the fight against the Hillman-Levin machine. The only interpretation that can be put on Minor's motion, is that he prefered the old Hillman alliance to a fighting program of action.

The United Front in the Printers' Union.

Take another one of our minority leaders, the king pin Marxian of them all. If you don't believe this, ask him. Comrade Wicks, another one who demands more action. He says that the farmer-labor party is as inevitable as the stars in the heaven. Wicks says that the majority's opposition to the forming of a farmer-labor party at this time, is just as futile as the bull issued by the pope against the appearance of Haley's comet. Well, the pope is not the only one who has made a bull; Wicks has made several of them.

Wicks wants a farmer-labor party at any costs, in fact he thinks that a Communist Party cannot function except it has a farmer-labor party to play with, and he wants a united front so bad that he is willing to form it with anybody. His last united front was with James Lynch, the most reactionary labor faker in the American labor movement. Wicks, the "Marxian" actually lined up with this faker and helped to elect him to the presidency of the Typographical Union. The C. E. C. promptly condemned Wicks publicly, but Wicks has never admitted that he was wrong in lining up with Lynch. In the Paterson silk workers' strike, where our party assumed leadership and did splendid work, Wicks, the Marxian, was the one who made the motion to stop a Communist from speaking at the strike meetings.

Ballam's "United Front."

Then there is Ballam who carries around the minority's farmer-labor party pulmotor for the resurrection of dead farmer-labor parties. Ballam wants more action and less programs. Just a few days ago he submitted a program of action in the boot and shoe unions This was a program of complete surrender. Amalgamation, according to Ballam has to be discarded in the boot and shoe industry and we have now to force the independent unions to merge with the Boot and Shoe Union. But according to Ballam, this surrender must not be done too quickly. We must work cautiously and not too fast. I suppose for fear that the workers in the other unions might get hep to what is being done and might refuse to surrender. Ballam does this with his eyes open, because he points out that the officials of this union are fakers, still he urges a program of surrender to these very fakers. No, Comrade Ballam, the surrender will not be made, not as long as the present majority is formulating the policies of our party.

HAS THE FARMER-LABOR PARTY SWALLOWED JAY LOVESTONE?

By ANDREW OVERGAARD.

IT is significant to note that Comrade Lovestone in his last article in the discussion on the party theses, has made a new discovery, that the LaFollette swallowing has come to a standstill, and the supporters of the farmer-labor movement are again becoming visible. According to Comrade Lovestone, the farmer-labor party is reviving because certain fights took place between the labor fakers in the state of Minnesota. Let me call the attention of Comrade Lovestone to a few items that appeared in the DAILY WORKER on the same day that Comrade Lovestone's discovery appeared.

Our old friend, Robert Cramer, who was one of the farmer-laborites that was captured in our great campaign, made a motion to expell the Communists from the farmer-labor federation of Minnesota, which was carried by a vote of 25 to 11. Those 11 being either party members or sympathizers. According to this information the reactionary elements have not only been swallowed by LaFollette, but have since the A. F. of L. convention been swallowed by the Gompers policy. This, I would call, a revival with a vengeance, and I would advise Comrade Lovestone to turn around in his chair in the research department once more and see facts as they are instead of using pure abstractions. It doesn't mean anything, as Goldberg would say.

Comrade Lovestone seems to be very much afraid of the idea that we shall rally the workers around the Workers Party in the immediate struggles, and draws the following conclusions—that therefore, the majority is "against the united front." Comrade Lovestone does not seem to conceive of the idea that the united front can be established from below. His conception of the united front seems to be that of maneuvering in conferences regardless of the mass sentiment below. I am afraid that if we adopt the policy of the minority, that we shall have a greater number of disappointed Communists than we have already made thru the policy. Now let me ask you about the united front, and please let us know whether or not you have lost confidence in the ability of the Workers Party to rally the masses around itself in the immediate struggles, when all these problems be taken care of by the farmer-labor party? Looking over the DAILY WORKER again, we find another story of Communist activity in Boston, where our comrades are leading the unemployed workers in demonstrations before the city council. Is that political action or not, Comrade Lovestone?

It is not necessary to mention other united front campaigns the party carried on under its own name. Just we, without masses moving in that direction, set up fake labor parties, based upon gymnastic organizations, literary clubs, self-advancement clubs and parlor Bolshevik associations—organizations that do not play any part in American politics—and that party, or abortion of a party, shall then take the lead in and take over the functions in the immediate struggles of the workers, while the Workers Party shall rest on the shelf and only come out at times shouting for the dictatorship of the proletariat and the Soviet form of government? I think not, and I think Comrade Lovestone can find very few phrases that he can use in the words of Marx or Lenin for such a policy.

Comrade Lovestone uses the words "menshevist skepticism." Yes, Comrade Lovestone. Your argument smells badly of menshevism. Your skepticism of the Workers Party participating in the election campaign of Communism and not in the Farmerlorite, is a bad menshevist disease. You seem to be disappointed in the fact that our party did not show a tremendous growth at once. You seem to be of the impression that, for instance, the 10 per cent increase that the DAILY WORKER during this election campaign has increased its circulation by 5,000 new subscribers. Is it not of the utmost importance that the morale of our party membership has been strengthened in this campaign? Is it not important that some of our branches that were beginning to die, have come to life again and are beginning to educate themselves in fundamental principles of Communism instead of farmer-laborism?

Perhaps your misunderstanding of the situation is due to the fact that you have not realized the necessity of studying the conditions among our membership, but have only taken a superficial look into our affairs.

Comrade Lovestone, I would like to recommend to you that instead of basing your analysis on the basis of enthusiasm, you may be able to stir up in mass meetings composed of workers, that you go to a union meeting, for example, in one of the most progressive ones at this time, and select two subjects.

For example, a united front with the Workers Party to organize a fight against injunctions, a united front to organize the unorganized, or suggest they participate in another farmer-labor convention. I'd like to see where you get the most enthusiasm. I am afraid they'll tell you that they have passed about 100 labor party resolutions and they are sick and tired of it at this time, but they would like to unite with the Workers Party to fight injunctions or against unemployment, etc. Shall we then tell them that we can't fight injunctions because we have no farmer-labor party or shall we tell them that we have a Communist Party which is capable to fight their battles?

And then please, Comrades Ruthenberg and Lovestone, do not throw sectarianism against us. Communists who participate in the everyday struggle of the masses, who are leaders of strikes who are fighting against the bureaucracy in the trade unions will not possibly be let into sectarianism as those who shout from the national office dictaphones and hurl proclamations at the workers like Comrades Lovestone and Ruthenberg do.

The minority also tries the old stunt of theirs in accusing the majority of not trying to organize the F. F. L. P. altho Comrade Ruthenberg in the last convention explained the truth laid in between and this matter was refuted by the convention as being nothing short of an attempt of the then majority, now minority to blame the Chicago district committee instead of blaming themselves. Comrades Ruthenberg and Lovestone know well that the majority carried on a real fight for the policy that they were against from the beginning, it is darned poor tactics when a certain policy proves to be wrong that we attempt to turn around and hang somebody instead of criticizing the policy itself.

Comrades Lovestone and Ruthenberg and the rest of the farmer-laborites in our party would do well to again study the thesis of the Communist International on the united front and also come down to earth and find out in actual contact with the workers what the real situation is and not because they like to maneuver around conference tables and speak in conventions, will we be able to rally the workers for struggle. Our duty as a Communist Party is to lead the masses in the everyday struggles against capitalism based upon the policy of the united front, if you please, Comrade Lovestone, and thru these struggles we shall become a real mass Communist Party.

ACTION FOR PROGRAMS

By GEORGE MAURER.

COMRADE BEDACHT, in one of his recent articles on the party discussion, starts out by accusing the majority of our party of mud-slinging, and then he turns around and throws stones, evidently forgetting that the minority is living in a glass house. Comrade Bedacht, instead of discussing the point at issue, goes into a long tirade and accuses the majority of all kinds of crimes, and states that the minority is in favor of action versus programs. Comrade Bedacht then pours out a story which Comrade Pepper attempted to tell in the last convention of our party, which this convention repudiated. The same old story is repeated of accusing the comrades in Chicago of failing the rank and file in the central labor council and the unions for the good old fakerated.

It is well to remember a few facts, since this question has been brought up again. The writer happened to be the industrial organizer of the party at the time that the struggle took place in the unions for affiliation to the federated. The district committee and the industrial department in Chicago made all the efforts in its power to organize the party to carry this struggle to a successful conclusion. Some thirty-two meetings of our members in the various unions were held, and in a good many unions the question was taken up, and we succeeded in a few affiliations to the federated farmer-labor party.

However, in a good many of them, we were badly defeated, altho a strenuous fight was put up by our comrades. We could not, however, affiliate those unions where we had no membership, and secondly, Comrade Bedacht, Comrade Lovestone and all the rest of the minority people themselves extremely ignorant when they speak about the Chicago labor council.

What were the facts in this situation? There were about twenty-five Communists who were delegates there, fighting among a crew of approximately 300 business agents who were tails to the A. F. of L. officialism. Another fact is that the so-called minority had failed to bring in very many affiliations themselves, for the reason that they happened not to be connected with any trade unions themselves. Comrade Bedacht, who is so ardently trying to accuse the majority of gross neglect, has for a year neglected to join the Barbers' Union, to which he is eligible. Of course, there are always technical excuses for a Marxist who swims in technical abstractions. This very question of the federated farmer-labor party was defeated by only a few votes in the Barbers' Union. It would undoubtedly have been carried if it had been for the fighting qualities of Max Bedacht within it.

Another fact—when the question was up in one of the Machinists' Unions, a very prominent member and leader in one of our federations, who also shouts fight, failed to show up when the question came up. This same comrade, who still shouts fight, also failed to show up when the LaFollette question was fought out in his union.

Comrade Ruthenberg, who likes to form a farmer-labor party by father-ly smiles, would do well to remember the discussion that took place in his own branch upon his own request after the call had been sent out for the St. Paul convention. He then requested that the branch members report as to what they had done in regard to the farmer-labor party. To my memory, it was four members of the majority who got up and reported at least that they had carried on a fight in their local unions but were unfortunately defeated. The members of the minority failed to report any activity as they did not have any connections with the labor movement.

Let us take the minority all the way thru during this whole campaign. Comrade Minor, Comrade Engdahl, Comrade Ruthenberg, and Comrade Lovestone and followers, can shout fight until they are blue in their face. It is a very easy matter to fight behind the scenery of the battlefield in the party branches, but the first prerequisite to the formation of any organization based upon the trade unions necessarily must be that of the organic connection of the Communists within these organizations. Comrade Wicks accuses the majority of having responsibility for the death of the Buffalo farmer-labor party, and then proceeds to tell that he had charge of it at that time.

In other words, Comrade Wicks, the baby died in your arms. And please, do not throw that responsability upon the majority.

Why didn't you do something in the American Federation of Labor, says the minority, and accuses the majority of only wanting resolutions there. Well, unfortunately that was all we could have inasmuch as we did not have any of our comrades as delegates. Comrade Semanoff has a slim chance, and he really rips open the bankruptcy of the minority leaders by stating "The issue of the minority is very clear. The minority is raising the slogan of a Leninist party, a party of action." In other words, this is a new lesson for us Leninists when the slogan of a farmer-labor party is the only slogan that can develop a Leninist party in America. Poor Comrade Lenin would sure turn over in his grave if he could hear some of the wonderful interpretations the minority are using in order to prove that they follow a Leninist policy.

Comrade Amter is again raising point of order, after he has been raising them in Moscow until Zinoviev had to call him to order for the many illservices he had rendered to the young American Communist Party.

"How dare you," says Comrade Amter, "drop the policy of the farmer-labor party and come out as the Workers Party in the election? The Workers Party can only become a mass party by adopting the slogan of a farmer-labor party and by establishing a bond with the farmers who are at the present time in a state of strong fermentation."

Comrade Amter, however, fails to point out where this fermentation is going on among the farmers in this country, and shows how little he understands the present situation in America. He shows as little conception of the American situation as he did when he was author of the famous "Ford-Dubnerf" theses. I would propose to relegate Comrade Amter to a position where he is given the task of writing some long book, or go back to his profession as a music teacher, instead of attempting to lead the Communist movement of America into the abyss of opportunism.

Yes, Comrade Bedacht, Comrade Lovestone, Comrade Ruthenberg, Comrade Semanoff, Comrade Wicks, and Comrade Amter, action we want as against programs.

The majority theses points the road to action which leads to the dictatorship of the proletariat.

NEW YORK WORKERS' SCHOOL

Class in "A B C of Communism" at Workers' School.

In response to the demand for more classes in the "A B C of Communism," the Workers' School in New York City now offers such a course at its own headquarters, 208 E. 12th street.

The classes will be conducted by Comrade J. C. Oblans, for many years an active party worker, and will meet every Thursday night, from 8 to 10 p. m.

The first session will be held Thursday, Jan. 8. Comrades in lower Manhattan particularly are urged to register and to get sympathizers also to enroll.

Educational Directors Meet Monday, Jan. 19.

A special meeting of branch educational directors will be held on Monday, Jan. 19, at the headquarters of the Workers' School, 208 E. 12th street, New York City, at 8 p. m.

Branches which have not yet elected their educational director should do so at once, and send name and address to the secretary of the Workers' School.

All educational directors should take careful note of the date, Jan. 19, and make no other arrangements for that evening.

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

UNANIMOUS FOR MINORITY THESIS

The Lettish Branch, Chicago.
By F. Zeims, Secretary.

WE had the privilege to hear the part issues discussed by two outstanding personalities in our party, namely, Comrade W. Z. Foster, of the majority group, and Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg, of the majority group of the central executive committee before our branch, on Friday evening, Dec. 12, with 56 members present.

Foster Draws Pessimistic Picture.

Comrade Foster plunged right into the farmer-labor party issue and drew a very pessimistic and defeatist picture of our activities in connection with the farmer-labor movement in the past, declaring: "The federated farmer-labor party was suckling the life blood of the Workers Party," and threw in the deliberately falsified figures of Joseph Manley, to say that it cost the Workers Party a fortune to "organize the many fake farmer-labor parties," as if the comrades who heard him say that did not know what the party really did and of the underlying motives of doing so during the farmer-labor party campaign.

Foster maintained that our party must have "the guts to do as the socialist labor party and the socialist party did: to go before the labor unions and speak of their party," as if the Lettish comrades, all of whom were at one time or another members of the socialist labor party and socialist party, were to draw a moral lesson from the history of the socialist labor party and socialist party. On the contrary, to many of them, their experience with the socialist labor party and the socialist party—the morale of it—the sectarianism, the fear from the masses of workers, the virgin "purity" of Marxism, the dual unionism, etc., was sufficient proof that Foster was expounding sectarianism and not a Bolshevik conception of Communist tactics.

The Other United Fronts.

Other united front tactics of the party were enumerated by Foster, with exaggerated emphasis on the amalgamation movement, the campaign for the protection of the foreign born and similar activities of our party, while our campaigns in connection with the farmer-labor movement came in for ridicule, as if Foster would have been enthused by the contribution of Comrade Martin Abern when he tried to make the world believe what a darned fool he was for doing what he did.

And what was said in this connection, the Lettish comrades could not help think that Comrade Foster presumed they had been in Latvia, fighting the bloodthirsty Latvian government all this time, away from the continent and therefore did not know anything about amalgamation and other "successes" of that kind which our party experienced while participating in the everyday struggles of the workers of this country. Comrade Foster did not realize that, by sneering at some of our attempts on the political field in connection with the farmer-labor policy of our party, and by exaggerating over and over again our activities on the industrial field, particularly the amalgamation movement—he led the comrades to suspect him of syndicalist tendencies, of being a graduate of a syndicalist school of thought, but not as a leader of a growing Communist Party.

The sum total of Comrade Foster's argument in the discussion before the Lettish comrades that night was: "Thank God, the farmer-labor movement is dead and buried; let it rest in peace. We must look out for it—it will liquidate our party—the Workers Party." But if it was not for the poorly lighted hall that night, Comrade Foster would have seen many of the Lettish comrades smiling. And why? Simply because Comrade Foster, narrow-minded them of De Leon, once their idol, who convinced them for a time that: "The trade unions are no good—they are bankrupt, and, therefore, leave them alone. (Start your own industrial unions, etc.)." In short, Comrade Foster presented a narrow, pessimistic, syndicalist and defeatist conception of the united front tactics of our party in connection with the farmer-labor party movement.

Ruthenberg Speaks for Minority.

It did not take long for Comrade Ruthenberg to convince the comrades that our participation in the farmer-labor united front campaigns, regardless of the many defects and mistakes, was a tremendous boost for our party, the Workers (Communist) Party; that nothing in the whole history of our party, not any other single factor, has contributed so much to its growth and consequently to increase the prestige, influence, and leadership of our party, before large masses of the workers and poor farmers in this country as our campaign for a mass, class farmer-labor party.

"Our task, the road we have to travel," pointed out Ruthenberg, "is well defined by the Communist International. It is up to us to carry it out. Here is what it declares: 'The first task of the Workers Party is to become a mass Communist Party of workers. It can fulfill this task only by most actively participating in the establishment of a labor party which will embrace all elements of the working class and by establishing a bond with the farmers who are at present in a state of strong fermentation. The two independent tasks, the task of building around the Communist Party a broad, class labor party, and of establishing a bond between a labor party and the poorest elements of farmers, have developed in the United States, thanks to the peculiarities of historical evolution, as one problem, namely, the building of a common party of workers and exploited farmers.'"

In other words, Comrade Ruthenberg hit the ball so hard and fast that he "walked home" to make a "home run." He added that: "Comrade Foster and with him the majority group of the central executive committee does not analyze the prevailing economic and political conditions from a Marxian standpoint, whether these conditions do or do not demand for class political action on the part of the workers and exploited farmers—political action in the sense of organizing an all-embracing political party of their own, as a power against the capitalist parties, but Comrade Foster bases his conclusions on what he cares to see on the surface. Marxians must base their policy," pointed out Comrade Ruthenberg, "upon the scientific analysis of the question affecting society, and therefore, if the conditions in the United States have been such as to develop a movement for independent political action on the part of the workers and exploited farmers a year or two ago, and if these conditions have not changed for the good of the working class, but to the contrary, have grown for the worse, then why argue that the farmer-labor movement is dead and buried? It is our Communist duty to take the leadership of the movement and make it serve to build the Workers (Communist) Party. We can do that by rallying the workers and exploited farmers around us thru a campaign with the slogan: FOR A CLASS FARMER-LABOR PARTY."

This nailed the head of Foster's arguments down fast, and remained nailed down for the whole evening, and are still there, as far as we are concerned. There remained some of the "fake" of Foster's arguments still wagging, and in the next few minutes Comrade Ruthenberg stopped the wagon (wagging) by burying them, dead.

Foster Speaks Second Time.

When Comrade Foster arose to speak for the second time, one could see that he felt defeated. If did not have an argument, a real argument in advance. He was picking "flowers," a little one here and there. When pressed for an answer why he had ordered the militant trade unionists in Canonsburg, Pa., representing a district of 10,000 miners who had placed in their program a demand for a farmer-labor party, to take that demand out of their program and substitute in its place a negative proposition: "Independent political action," Foster, at first, denied having done anything of the kind; that he did not know of anything of the kind, but then turned around and asked: "What if I did?" The fun of the matter is that Comrade Foster was asking for "proof" that the sentiment for a farmer-labor party expressed itself anywhere, now; right after, just a few days, after the presidential elections.

The decision of the A. F. of L. at El Paso, Texas, was interpreted to mean that the Gompers machine is getting ready to join forces with the LaFollette movement which was to be another reason why the Communists have no business to monkey with the slogan for a mass, class farmer-labor party.

Ruthenberg in Rebuttal.

When Comrade Ruthenberg took the floor again he pointed out the illogical way of reasoning by Comrade Foster, when speaking of liquidation that "when there was a large mass farmer-labor movement then there was no danger of liquidation, but now, when, according to Foster, there is no labor movement, much less a sentiment for it, then there is a danger to liquidate the Workers Party." The point scored was, that Comrade Foster with his own arguments admits that there is a sentiment, a deep-rooted need for a class farmer-labor party. Otherwise, "why be afraid that something which is not there will liquidate our party?"

Ruthenberg wound up the discussion by appealing to the Lettish comrades to help Bolshevize the party by advocating the participation of our members in the everyday struggles of the American working class, let it be strikes, lockouts, protection of foreign born, amalgamation of craft unions into powerful industrial unions, unemployment councils, recognition of the first workers' government, Soviet Russia, and by all means around the slogan for a class farmer-labor party; always having in mind how to serve the best interests of our party—the Workers (Communist) Party; how to make it grow, how to make it to be the leader of the American working class, to prepare them and to lead them now and in the final struggle—the revolution against American capitalism.

1. In our contribution to the discussion on the farmer-labor party issue now before the membership, we just want to tell other comrades of the impressions we gained after listening to the discussion at the above mentioned meeting by Comrades Foster and Ruthenberg, as given in the few foregoing paragraphs and sentences.

We have read with concern the theses of the majority and the minority of the central executive committee; we have followed in every detail the discussion carried on thru the DAILY WORKER, all of which really centers around only one issue, namely, the slogan for a mass, class farmer-labor party, and whatever else that may entail, and after allowing a certain amount of deductions for things said and written which have nothing to do with the subject matter under discussion, we have come to the unanimous conclusion that the minority, in their analysis of the economic and political conditions now prevailing in this country and in their analysis of our possibilities as a young and growing Communist party, the minority of our central executive committee has a better, broader, more realistic and Marxian outlook than the majority. The minority represent a living spirit, a Bolshevik spirit, something desiring to live, to work, to propagate, to organize, to lead, and actively participate in all struggles of the workers, including the struggle for a class, farmer-labor party, which is an absolute necessity for the politically backward American masses of workers.

2. In all the discussion, not a one has dared to minimize the fact that it was because of our campaigns in connection with the farmer-labor movement that we received not less than a million dollars' worth of free publicity in the capitalist press. Every knock was to boost us. No other of our united front campaigns, including the amalgamation campaign, has reflected itself in the capitalist press to such an extent as the farmer-labor campaign. If anyone's memory is short to remember 6, 12 or 18 months back, should it once consult the files of the capitalist press in any library in any American city to be convinced how the capitalist press was filled with lies, denunciations, slander and misrepresentations of the Communists. In our judgment the fact that the capitalist press, as a true representative of the capitalist interest was alarmed, scared and frightened about our activities in connection with the farmer-labor party, is the best and most convincing evidence that the minority of the central executive committee is correct and that the farmer-labor movement is a living issue and therefore must be of concern to the Communists.

3. In the course of our campaigns to expose the true character of misleaders of American labor, particularly John P. Fitzpatrick, with whom our comrade Amter was the last to break company, it was pointed out in the DAILY WORKER and the Labor Herald that John F. has once said: "I will immediately suspect myself of doing something wrong for the labor movement the moment the Chicago Tribune will praise me," or words to that effect. And when John P. was asked, how about it, when the Chicago Tribune was actually praising him for the stand he took against the farmer-labor party movement and went over to Sam Gompers' family, "to reward friends and punish enemies." But how about it now? How about our majority? Fitzpatrick, Sam Gompers and the Chicago Tribune? The fact of the matter is that they all agree that there is no sentiment or need for a farmer-labor party.

Comrades, we must strive to make our party a living Bolshevik party, and we shall deny ourselves to advance one of the major slogans (Comrade Bittelman, please do not quote us as saying "the only slogan") in our united front campaigns: "FOR A CLASS FARMER-LABOR PARTY."

THE MEMBERSHIP MEETING IN NEW YORK

By ISRAEL AMTER.

THE results of the New York membership meeting were such that they need analysis. First of all the vote: 482 for the majority thesis, 330 for the minority. This would appear to be a great majority for the central executive committee thesis—and taken on the face of it would indicate a strong group in the city of New York supporting the position of Foster, Cannon and Bittelman.

The matter, however, is not so simple, for it must be understood that the strength of the Lore group in the party is concentrated in New York. In fact, outside of the minority group in the New York district, the Lore group and their followers are the strongest group, the Foster-Cannon group being a small minority. It is a sad fact—but still a fact. The Lore group must not be regarded as a group of Comrade Lore and his friends. There is no psychology and ideology which have succeeded in consolidating a large number of comrades despite the decision of the Communist International, despite the fact that Comrade Zinoviev declared Comrade Lore "not a Communist," and like a "social democrat hidden behind barricades because he says he is an orthodox Marxian;" despite the fact that the resolution of the Communist International declared him a "remnant of the Two-and-a-Half" International and the Workers Party.

This is due to nothing else that that reports are current in the party, evidently inspired by Comrades Foster and Olgin, that the Olgin-Lore point of view on LaFollette won in Moscow. This is totally untrue. As Comrade Radek said, it is merely a coincidence that a "social-democratic point of view (that of Olgin-Lore) agrees with that of the Communist International." Olgin-Lore were against the LaFollette alliance at a matter of principle; the Communist International was against it as a matter of safety for the party, since the Comintern deemed that the party was too weak to carry out the maneuver without danger to itself. The Comintern did not brand the tactics as such as opportunistic, but did see that in the American party there were strong evidences of opportunism—in the C. E. C. and in the ranks—which clearly indicated that the party would not be able to carry out the maneuvers without menacing its existence.

Associated with this group are comrades who have been appointed by the C. E. C. to conduct the industrial work—comrades whom the C. E. C. thesis brands as opportunist. The whole right wing element in the party gathers about the banner of Comrade Lore—even comrades who now call themselves followers of the Foster group, yet ideologically are still in the Lore camp.

This group gave the victory to the majority thesis and in stating this, we do not weep tears after a defeat. We of the minority consider the New York membership meeting a great victory; firstly, because the vote shows a strong Bolshevik minority in the city of New York; and secondly, because the lines are clearly drawn. Even the Comrade Lore had his scruples about the C. E. C. thesis—until the last moment—and at the German federation convention showed an irreconcilability between his view that that of the majority, it was perfectly obvious that, as usual, Lore would line up with the majority—to whom he has a natural affinity.

As for the meeting itself, New York contains the largest and most advanced membership in the party. It was expected, therefore, that the majority would send its most capable comrade to present its position. Bittelman had done a very poor job for the party both at the German and the Hungarian federation conventions, and besides could not be considered a "strong" man. Comrade Cannon was chosen for the presentation in New York. Those who had heard Comrade Cannon's presentation in the branches knew in advance what the contents of his presentation would be. The membership meeting would be. A little understanding and command of theory is necessary in New York (This is said without any spirit of factionalism.) If our membership is to be Bolshevized, then it is to be expected that the national educational director of the party should really command theory. There was not one moment of theory in the presentation of Comrade Cannon; only flamboyant demagogy, misrepresentation and appeals to the prejudices of the membership.

Thus, the book by Comrade Lovestone, "The Government — Strike-breaker," was held up to the contempt of the comrades present, most of whom have not read the book. It was declared a non-Communist book, a farmer-labor screed, devoid of all evidence of Communism. It was unfortunate for Comrade Cannon as soon as he received the book, Comrade Losovsky, head of the Red International of Labor Unions, ordered its translation into Russian and publication by the R. I. L. U.

Before the meeting, New York was greeted by the publication of a pamphlet entitled "For A Communist Party of Action—Against Liquidating the Workers (Communist) Party, Against Substituting the Workers (Communist) Party by a Sham Farmer Labor Party—an Appeal to the Members of District No. 2 Workers Party." There followed the names of thirty comrades of the English, Jewish, Russian, Lithuanian, Italian, Greek and Polish branches and of the Y. W. L. At the bottom it stated that the "publication was authorized by the central executive committee."

This document was an eleventh hour attempt to separate the so-called Foster-Cannon group from the Lore group. It was an eleventh-hour slander upon the minority and a misrepresentation of its viewpoint and aims. At no place does the document say a word about the Two-and-a-Half International of the Lore group; at no place is there even mention of the Lore group. This was quite natural. The point of view of the Lore and of the Foster group coincides. In other words, the Foster-Cannon group considers the minority, the "Marxian group in the Workers Party," (as the executive committee of the Comintern said) the dangerous group in the party.

There are two other significant facts about this pamphlet. As far as we have been able to learn, the central executive committee of the party authorized the publication of a pamphlet by Comrades Olgin, Cannon and Manley, at the expense of the party, to expound the majority point of view. We do not know whether the political committee of the C. E. C. approved the pamphlet before publication. The name of Comrade Cannon does not appear on the pamphlet, but instead the names of thirty comrades of various language groups.

We wish to ask the C. E. C. a question: DOES THE MAJORITY OF THE C. E. C. TAKE THE RESPONSIBILITY FOR LEGALIZING CAUCUSES WITHIN THE PARTY? If they do, they are acting in violation of the Communist International, and are openly carrying on disruptive work in the party. If the C. E. C. did not give its approval to the publication of the pamphlet in this form, how does Comrade Cannon abuse the authority of the C. E. C. to allow a pamphlet to be published by a legally constituted group of various federations within the party? Comrade Cannon, who said he would not accept his orders from Comrade Foster—and not from the central executive committee, which sends out all instructions and decisions thru the executive secretary of the party, has openly constituted a caucus, a faction within the party. If the members of the central executive committee of the party carry on such disruptive work, then what is the use of all passionate appeals to build the Workers Party?

A second point. All publications in any district of the party must pass thru the district executive committee, if the party is to retain its unity as an organization. The district executive committee had no cognizance of the publication of this pamphlet ostensibly authoried by the C. E. C. Is any group within the party, even if Comrade Cannon, a member of the C. E. C., belongs to it, to be allowed to usurp the authority of the recognized authority within the district?

The meeting was one of the best meetings that have ever been held by the party membership in N. Y. City. The splendid presentation of the minority viewpoint by Comrade Ruthenberg showed who are the Marxians in the party. The membership recognized this fact and gave him an ovation.

The minority is well satisfied with the membership meeting, but would like an answer from the C. E. C. on the above questions. The membership is entitled to an answer.

MAJORITY DISPLAYS GOMPERS TACTICS

By WALTER T. FRANK.

COMRADE BITTELMAN in the Dec. 2 issue of the DAILY WORKER severely criticizes the nature of the speech delivered by Comrade Amter to the Hungarian convention. He also attacks Amter for having delivered this speech, undoubtedly because it has seriously weakened the argument of the majority. Comrade Bittelman asks on what ground will Comrade Amter and the minority justify the raising of this issue in the party. Comrade Bittelman further says, "factionalism as a rule, is most rampant in pre-convention periods but it would seem that there would be a limit to it somewhere."

Minnesota "Majority" Putsch.

Comrade Bittelman undoubtedly hints that the majority in defending their position have overstepped the limit. Does Comrade Bittelman not know the Gompers tactics used by the majority as a means of forcing their views down the throat of the rank and file of the party. For an example the re-organization of the English branch in Manhattan.

The English branch meets every Thursday night. Previous to the meeting on Thanksgiving day, a notice was sent to the members of the branch, that inasmuch as the meeting was on Thanksgiving day it would be held in the morning instead of in the evening. Nothing was said about the contemplated re-organization of the branch. The meeting was opened by the statement that the English branch had not functioned and therefore should be reorganized. A chairman and secretary "supporting the majority views" were elected. The writer asked the chairman if it was not unCommunistic to reorganize a unit of the party, without having notified its members to that effect. One of the majority then answered that the constitution of the party had been accurate enough and they had found no such provision. In replying to this it was pointed out that in a Communist organization there should be no need of inserting such provisions. That any sincere member of the party should know that such tactics as the majority is using and the insertion of such provisions in the constitution would be admitting the existence of a lack of understanding of the elementary principle of Communism in the party.

But it was unheeded, too much oil had been poured on the machinery. Then, chairman J. O. Johnson having made an unfathomable discovery, the constitution of the party did not prevent one member of the branch from submitting a slate of candidates (of the majority) for the C. C. C. and various committees. Such a slate was then presented by Comrade Fineman. Since the machine was well oiled, members who generally do not attend regularly were present and in my opinion a special effort was made by the majority to control the meeting. As a result those supporting the majority rule were elected and those supporting the minority views were eliminated.

Membership Repudiates "Majority."

I was retained as delegate to the C. C. C. for the following reasons: (1) I had not then definitely determined which of the two theses were, in my opinion, correct. (2) The majority figured that there was a possibility of me supporting the majority.

At the following meeting of the English branch, the dirty tactics employed by the C. E. C. majority group was exposed, with the result that the branch became very indignant over what had been pulled on them at the previous meeting.

The discussion brot out that Comrade Braden who had been eliminated from the C. C. C. at this infamous Gompers meeting on Thanksgiving day, not because he had not been active or not attended the meetings regularly, but because the majority group feared him. The writer insisted upon Jack Braden being rejected delegate to the C. C. C. A motion to that effect was unanimously carried (meeting was very well attended). Another motion was made to rescind the former action of the branch. This motion would have carried unanimously had it not been for Comrade Braden and others stating that we should not pursue the same dirty tactics as used by the other group that we should maintain our Communist integrity and prove by our actions, that we, the minority were not Gomperites in tactics.

Where is "Majority Logic."

My contention is this, that if the majority has such a splendid, logical argument in favor of their position, they should not need to employ such dirty tactics. There is no excuse, Comrade Hathaway, first alternate of the C. E. C. and our district organizer was present at this meeting. He raised no objection to the procedure of the meeting. On the contrary, he was actively oiling the machinery.

I challenge any one of these comrades responsible for the application of such Gompers tactics to prove to the rank and file of our party that they were not overstepping the limit, that such tactics are not non-Communistic. These comrades would insofar as tactics are concerned put the lieutenants of the deceased labor faker, Gompers, to shame.

Previous to this infamous meeting of the English branch, at a C. C. C. meeting where Comrade Hathaway was present, the question of conducting party discussion on the two theses came up. At this meeting Comrade Hathaway boasted of the fact that the majority group was organized and declared himself in favor of a committee being elected, composed of representatives (not of both views) but of both groups. The writer and other comrades insisted that a discussion should be launched without creating factionalism and that we should strive for unity within the party and even though there always will be difference of opinions in the party as to policies, tactics, etc., we should under no conditions tolerate factionalism. Comrade Hathaway also said he was for unity in the party but that we should not be like an ostrich refusing to see the existence of factions. He has proved by his action that this was mere phraseology, an argument justifying the existence of a machine.

How They "Bolshevize" the Party.

Is this Bolshevizing the party of which the majority speaks? Many of the members of our branch have fought the capitalist system during periods of most severe persecution. They are rebels and are not going to allow such Gompers' tactics to be used if they can help it. It can be said to the credit of the members of our branch, with the exception of those who blindly follow the machine, that they are utterly opposed to it.

An illustration of this element who blindly follow the machine, can be given by one comrade, a delegate to the C. C. C. who declared himself for the majority group, admitting he had not even read the thesis.

Majority "Communist" Work in Unions.

As to whether the majority or the minority are the most active, let the following information guide you: At the last meeting of the farmer-labor federation, a motion was made by the right wingers in the federation to invite Dr. Schaper to address them. Schaper was a recent candidate for nomination for the office of governor of Minnesota. He was given the endorsement by the D. E. C. Schaper later in the primary campaign repudiated this endorsement.

R. S. Wiggins, assuming the role of leader of the left wing in the farmer-labor federation, said in support of the motion "that Dr. Schaper had consistently fought for power for the working class and we will be fortunate in having such a man address the farmer-labor federation."

Communist delegates to the farmer-labor federation who at present happen to be of the majority, due to the machine work of the majority group in the labor unions, did not have the courage (or else did not understand what their duty was) to defend the Communist principles and strive to assume the leadership of the left wing elements, by pointing out that Dick Wiggins is not representing the interests of the left wing, but is at the very best a centrist or in other words and opportunist.

Comrades members supporting the minority thesis were delegates to the F.-L. federation, they never failed to vigorously defend the principles, policies and tactics of the party and point out to the rank and file the opportunist leaders within the farmer-labor federation and in the trade unions.

For the Marxian Group.

As to the thesis, I am convinced the minority thesis not only correctly analyzes the economic and political situation in this country, but draws a logical Marxian deduction from this analysis as to the tactics and policies necessary for the party to build a mass Communist movement at the least expenditure of time and energy.

The slogan for a class farmer-labor party is based upon the existing material base for a farmer-labor party and not deduced from the feelings of the masses but from the existing economic conditions, therefore it is purely Marxian and not opportunistic. Whereas the majority thesis's tactics and policies are the result of that opportunistic reasoning (against which Karl Marx vigorously fought), that aims to destroy the fundamental economic principles as exponded by Karl Marx.

VIRGINIA GOVERNOR PARDONS 25 MINERS BUT 13 CONVICTED ON THE SAME CHARGE ARE STILL IN JAIL

By PAT H. TOOHEY.
(Special to the DAILY WORKER)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Jan. 5.—Just at the time when the recently formed Miners' Defense Committee was preparing to swing into action thru an intensive campaign to liberate the victims of the Cliftonville mine riot, convicted after a battle with coal company gunmen during the 1922 strike, the governor unexpectedly pardons 25 of the men, leaving a total in prison, excluding those pardoned December 18, thirteen more men, convicted on the same charge as those already liberated.

Liberation of All, Demand Miners.

The governor's actions will not deter the radical miners of the Pittsburgh district from waging a fight for the complete liberation of all those now serving time in the Moundsville penitentiary. Originally 43 were incarcerated but thru the political machinations of the corrupt district miners' officials five were gotten out who, probably as it was thus arranged beforehand, immediately began to sing the praises of the officials. This act was nothing more than a cleverly arranged piece of work done purely for political purposes when, at that time, the elections were drawing near. Those liberated are mostly the three to five year prisoners, while those remaining are eight and ten year men. Their pardons were assured if only the officials, who are handling the cases, would have filed the papers before the pardon board. The wife of one of the prisoners recently exhibited to the writer a letter from one of the officials stating that he husband had a wonderful chance of being pardoned, and that he would immediately file the papers. That was in November of 1923, and to date this worthy has yet to do that.

While incarcerated in Moundsville these men have been model prisoners and therefore should rank first in line for pardon. In connection with this I quote a letter received from the warden in answer to an inquiry relative to this.

Have Excellent Records.

"Enclosed find list and addresses of the Cliftonville miners as requested in your letter of Dec. 24. The rest of the boys were pardoned this morning. Regarding the conduct and record made by these men while in the institution, it gives me great pleasure to report that they all have made excellent records and are model prisoners with the exception of Chas. Cialella. Very truly yours, S. P. Smith, warden."

The left wing are of the opinion that if some are pardoned, arrested and convicted for the very same alleged offense as the rest, then they all should be pardoned and fish made of none. To this end the radicals will fight. Petitions will soon be ready, twenty thousand being printed, and a systematic canvassing of the Pittsburgh district will be made in behalf of these imprisoned fighters of the working class. All those reading this immediately write and petitions will be forwarded.

The Lewis tools, those parasites who supposedly were doing their utmost for the prisoners are shown to the membership for what they are. Frank Mercantini, while gathering signatures to petitions, reported that board member, Gullick, refused to sign it. This is but a sample of what they are capable of.

During the time when the progressive miners first started agitation for the release of the prisoners, and when Wm. A. Guiler, candidate for district president in the recent election supported by the left wing, made several visits to the penitentiary conferring with the men, our friend, Mr. Fagan, district president, got uneasy and escorted by his detective, W. D. Reese, visited the prison a number of times in an effort to find out what Guiler and the others were doing there. Prior to that his visits could be counted on one hand. It is not the assertion of the progressive miners that the Lewis tools are responsible for these men being in prison, but the assertion of the men themselves. I incorporate a letter from one of the prisoners, one of many of like character which we have received.

"I am writing you these few lines to let you know that I am still alive, and am fairly well so far as health goes, but am very sorry to have had to spend my third Xmas in prison. But I, and all the others of our crowd don't know and appreciate the fact that you boys are doing your best to get us out, and we feel sure that you are going to succeed for the way that you boys are going about it shows that you mean business.

Attorney Was Bought Out.

"We feel sure that you are aware of the fact that our attorney, Chas. Schuck, was bought off to lay down on us at our trial and to get us to plead guilty under the promise that we would all be out in from six months to a year's time. That man knew when he told us that story that it was a barefaced lie. He knew that he was being paid by Fagan and others to secure our conviction and when once we were in prison to see that only the ones whom the district officials wanted freed, secured their release. Now Brother Toohey, we were all indicted upon the same charge and imprisoned, therefore then why is it that some of the men are released and others are made to pull their time?

"Now, all the three year men feel very certain that they are going to have to do their time in full, unless you boys are successful in a very short time, and we hope that you will be, but how about we men who have sentences ranging from ten to five years, and still all had the same charge as the others? I tell you that this whole scheme was planned by our district officials, and executed by Chas. Schuck who was supposed to have defended us. I tell you that we are innocent men who have been made the goats for that bunch of crooks at Pittsburgh, and it is our hope that we may be given the opportunity to bring to light the truth that will expose the guilty parties and bring them to speedy justice."

That the officials are exposed to the membership is evident by the vote cast by the local unions in the Avella section, the former homes of the majority of the prisoners and a machine stronghold. At one local the progressives received 208 and the gang a sickly 3. The count of ballots by the progressives shows that their ticket swept the district, with hardly a local casting a majority against them. A scandal is brewing about the officials, which is but another one of many, they being implicated this time with crooked work in distributing strike relief, and being caught up by the strikers and internal revenue agents. This I will deal with in another article.

The Workers Party in Action

Militants of All Unions Are Invited

(Special to the Daily Worker)

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 5.—Charles Kuzdas, secretary of the Milwaukee section of the Trade Union Educational League has arranged a meeting for Jan. 10, to be held at 7:30 p. m., Brisbane Hall, at which William F. Dunne will speak on the El Paso convention of the American Federation of Labor.

The secretary of the Milwaukee league section has sent out the following letter which is expected to result in a large attendance of trade unionists:

To All Trade Unions and Labor Fraternal Organizations.

Dear Sirs and Brothers:

You are cordially invited to attend our lecture on the subject of "THE EL PASO CONVENTION OF the AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR AND THE LAST STAND OF GOMPERS."

The lecture will be given by Wm. F. Dunne of the Electrical Workers' Union, who is recognized as an authority on the American labor movement, as well as a masterful speaker and writer and a militant trade unionist.

The American labor movement is confronted today with many problems of vital importance. You will be interested to learn what answer was given to those problems by the convention; what decisions were taken on the question of independent political action; the question of unemployment and the organization of unorganized and the problems of amalgamation and consolidation of existing trade unions to resist attack of an open shop drive.

You will also be interested to know what decision was taken on the question of international relations and what significance may be attached to the presence at the American Federation of Labor convention of fraternal delegates representing organized labor of other countries, such as Germany and Mexico.

Wm. F. Dunne, in addition to giving a full report on the convention, will also throw light on all these questions.

The lecture will take place Saturday, Jan. 10, 1924 at 7:30 p. m. sharp, in Brisbane Hall, 628 Chestnut street, third floor, and should be attended by every trade unionist who has the interest of organized labor at heart.

There will be no admission charge.

Fraternally yours,
Charles Kuzdas, secretary.

Farmer Runs Workers' Movie.

Out near Frederick, South Dakota, a lone comrade had been reading in the English and Finnish Communist press of the delight shown by workers of big and little cities over working class pictures, especially those that showed the winning and building of the first workers' and farmers' republic, Soviet Russia. He waited to see those movies, but for a long time left that his town was too far off the beaten track to make this possible.

Finally the urge became too strong to be denied. A little local inquiry showed that local picture houses could be rented at a reasonable price, and a letter to the International Workers' Aid, 19 S. Lincoln St., soon brought information that other costs were also low enough. So he lined up three comrades to pledge themselves to share a possible deficit and arranged a showing of "The Fifth Year."

He faithfully put up the posters and distributed the heralds sent by the national office, and was surprised at how easily movie news finds its way into the local capitalist paper. Then came the day of the show, two days before Christmas, and with it came a biting sub zero wave. Most of the farmers upon whom he had counted for his crowd were frozen in, but he drew enough of an audience from town and nearby to cover all expenses and show a profit of over $30 for working class relief besides. This farmer comrade is going to run more movies, and he is urging his friends in other similar sections to do likewise.

Party Activities Of Local Chicago

City Central Committee Meets Jan. 7.

The next meeting of the City Central Committee, Workers Party, Local Chicago, will be held Wednesday, Jan. 7, 1925, 8 p. m. at Workers Hall, 722 Blue Island Ave. There are many important matters: February aldermanic elections, industrial matters, which must be handled. All delegates be on hand at 8 p. m. sharp.

The delegates are requested to settle at this meeting for "Polikushka" tickets that were mailed to the branches from the city office.

Youngstown Sub-District Meeting Saturday, Jan. 10

(Special to The Daily Worker)

YOUNGSTOWN, Pa., Jan. 5.—The sub-district committee will hold its next meeting on Saturday, Jan. 10, at 8 p. m., at the Athletic Hall, 338½ W. Federal street. All branches will render a report on insurance policies sold for the DAILY WORKER. The quota for the sub-district is $1,000 and by the way the branches are working the membership will go over the top a-whooping.

All branches will make returns on the vote cast on the majority and minority theses. Many branches have completed their vote on the theses, but have made no returns to the sub-district.

Beginning Friday, Jan. 9, at 8 p. m., Comrade John Brahtin, district educational director, will start his series of eleven lectures. The lectures will continue thruout the winter months and all branch members should attend and bring along sympathizers and visiting party members. Readers of the DAILY WORKER are urged to attend these educational lectures which will be held at the Athletic Hall, 338½ W. Federal St. No admission will be charged.

The DAILY WORKER is for sale at a newsstand located just around the corner of Market St. on E. Boardman street.

SOVIET ENVOYS AND CHINESE IN C. E. RAIL PACT

Cut Out Subsidy to Clergymen

(Special to the Daily Worker)

HARBIN, (By mail)—The board of directors and the board of auditors of the Chinese Eastern Railway sat in joint session for three days during the week-end, the main item discussed being the various expenditure budget estimates for 1924. As is known, the former boards of directors had passed less than a third part or so of these estimates, so that the new board has from the very outset been faced by a number of accomplished facts in the matter of expenditure.

Parsons Must Work

Among the decisions adopted at the last meetings the resolution should be noted to discontinue the granting of any credits out of the railway funds for the maintenance of churches and clergy of the line. Henceforth, all these persons shall be considered as dismissed and the parishioners will have to supply the funds for their maintenance.

The question of credits for the railway police was also thoroughly discussed, the decision finally arrived at being to curtail this item by 300,000 roubles. The latter curtailment is to take effect from December 1st on.

Cut Down Officials

Further, it was decided to curtail by four assistant comptrollers the staff of the chief control department of the railway.

As for the system of crediting Chinese governmental institutions, it was decided to keep the existing system till the end of this year and to take up this matter in detail when the estimates for 1925 will be discussed.

The budget commission was charged to start the drafting of the 1925 estimates without delay.

Ensure The Daily Worker for 1925

PHILA. BRANCHES GIVE BIG BOOST TO 'DAILY' DRIVE

Take Out Many Insurance Policies

By ALFRED WAGENKNECHT.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Jan. 5.—A roll call of the eighteen Philadelphia branches taken at last night's mass meeting showed that all are earnestly engaged in securing their full quotas in the drive to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925.

The Philadelphia branches realize that the official organ of the Workers Party—The DAILY WORKER—is the builder of the Workers Party, and that party membership increases as the readers of the DAILY WORKER increase.

The branches realize the serious nature of their duty to safeguard the spokesman of our party, and are making a concerted attempt to prove themselves militant by making remittances from every Philadelphia branch. The aim of the branches here is to make these remittances before Jan. 8, in order to appear upon the militant page of the Birthday Edition of the DAILY WORKER, to celebrate the first anniversary of the printing of the DAILY WORKER.

A big drive for subscriptions is on. The membership meeting resulted in over $150.00 in donations for policies.

Y. W. L. of Worcester To Have Liebknecht Day Celebration Jan. 11

WORCESTER, Mass., Jan. 5.—The Y. W. L. here will celebrate Karl Leibknecht day at the Belmont Hall, 50 Belmont St., Sunday afternoon, Jan. 11 at 2:30. A very fine entertainment has been arranged consisting of a musical program and speeches. Comrade Bloomfield will be the principal speaker.

Bronx Concert and Ball.

Saturday, Feb. 28; good music, good concert; proceeds to raise funds for section, and for library at Workers Hall. Comrades keep this day in mind.

BOLSHEVIK MASSACRES INVENTED BY THE CAPITALIST NEWSPAPERS GET THE HA! HA! IN RUSSIA

By M. A. SKROMNY.

While the yellow press is continuing to make revolutions and insurrections in Soviet Russia, our readers will be interested to learn what the Russian press thinks of it.

In the end of October the Chicago Tribune printed a cable from one of the lie-manufacturing centers in Europe to the effect that there was another famine riot in the Odessa district. This cable "quoted" an editorial from the Odessa Izvestia of October 12 as follows:

"Our Red Army last spring filled the mouths of 18,000 peasants and workers in the Charkoff district with earth because they killed the local commissariats and robbed the grain houses . . ."

The local Russian white guard sheet picked up this yarn and ran an editorial bewailing the victims of the Bolshevik atrocities.

There aren't very many people even among the Tribune readers who believe these stories any more. There are hardly any at all among the few readers of the Russian sheet.

The DAILY WORKER gave a proper answer to these counter-revolutionary liars at that time, but in order to put them to the pillory we have asked the Odessa Izvestia to send us a copy of that newspaper for October 12. We received a reply.

In the issue of November 23, the Odessa Izvestia, under the headline, "The Democratic Liars," writes:

"This time we are getting popular in the United States. On October 12 we were talking in our editorials about the most peaceful things—the preparations for the All-Union Teachers' Congress, but out of this the Chicago newspapers made such a mess . . .

"Not long a go the 'Vossische Zeitung' of Berlin, with the solemn face of a friendly crook, made an insurrection in Charkov, proving it with 'quotations' from our paper. Now the Chicago Russky Viestnik and other American papers, quoting 'an editorial from the Odessa Izvestia of October 12,' made an insurrection right here in Odessa. '18,000 workers and peasants shot'—exactly 18,000!

"These lies are no more in vogue even in America, and the DAILY WORKER of Chicago has asked us to send them a copy of our paper of October 12 in order to put to the pillory the yellow American press as well as the white guard Russian sheet.' We are sending them the paper, but will that stop the lies of the professional liars?

"Today they are 'quoting' an Odessa paper. It sounds serious and it is safe, for who reads the Odessa Izvestia in Chicago? Tomorrow they will 'quote' Savetskaya Belarus—we have many newspapers, and the American Hugheses have many dollars . . .

"That is the way they work up public opinion in America. That is the way the 'free democratic press' writes."

Now, what has the Chicago Tribune to say for itself? What has the counter-revolutionary Russian sheet to say?

We know that they will continue to print their lies. And we will continue to prove them liars.

THREE MOVIES IN ONE EVENING FOR ONE PRICE

The workers of Chicago will have the opportunity to see three live working class pictures in one evening for the price of one. All the pictures were made in Russia during the revolution.

The first is "Polikushka," the famous story of serfdom by L. N. Tolstoy. Made into a movie by the world famous Moscow Art Theatre.

The second, "Soldier Ivan's Miracle," a comedy, tells a serious story about religion, but in a funny, peculiar Russian way.

The third, "In Memoriam—Lenin," is showing Nicolai Lenin in action, the last picture is shown in connection with the first anniversary of Lenin's death.

The pictures will be shown in Chicago only ONE EVENING, THURSDAY, JANUARY 15, from 8:30 to 11 p. m. at Gartner's Independent Theater, 3725 Roosevelt Road, near Independence Blvd.

Admission will be 50c. Tickets are for sale now at Russian Technical School, 1902 W. Division St., Russian Co-operative Restaurants, 1734 W. Division St. and 760 Milwaukee Ave., at 166 W. Washington St., Room 307, at the DAILY WORKER, 1113 W. Washington Blvd., and by all members of the Technical Aid Society, U. S. S. R.

DAILY WORKER SWINGS IN BEHIND LOCAL CAMPAIGN

The DAILY WORKER will be a feature of the campaign in Chicago to elect ten aldermanic candidates endorsed by the Workers Party.

All party branches have been supplied with special folders containing five two-month, one dollar, sub-cards to the DAILY WORKER. The ward campaign managers have an additional supply of folders and are instructed to see that everyone going out with petitions to get candidates on the ballot are well supplied with DAILY WORKER sub-cards.

Arrangements are being made for free distribution of current issues of the "daily." The ward captains will be provided with sample copies to cover their respective wards.

The DAILY WORKER will play an important role during the whole of the campaign. It is planned to bring out several special campaign editions when the election battle reaches its height.

The Coal Teamsters' Strike

The Chicago coal teamsters have picked a good time to strike. The recent prolonged cold spell has exhausted many coal stocks and deliveries have been slow because of the bad condition of the streets.

The demand of the teamsters for a dollar per day increase and the provision that the teamsters themselves shall not handle coal has brought loud protest from the coal dealers, but both demands can be conceded by the coal profiteers simply by reducing their juicy profits. This is as it should be and we do not believe that the teamsters are going to be influenced by the hard luck tales of the middle-class parasites that exploit them.

Driving a team or a truck and at the same time being forced to wallow in coal dust, is an unnecessary hardship for the men who handle coal. They become heated while unloading the coal and then may ride for miles in a below zero atmosphere. We have never seen a coal heaver that did not have a racking cough during the winter months brought on by this condition under which they work.

The dealers and the property owners who are complaining at the strike and the demands of the teamsters could not and would not endure the misery that a coal teamster suffers in an eight-hour winter day.

We hope they have to pay what the teamsters ask and from all indications the teamsters seem to be determined to make a good fight for their demands. They have our best wishes and the DAILY WORKER, as always, will be one paper that will tell of their struggle as it should be told—as part of the class struggle which the workers are forced to wage for even minor concessions in the form of wages and hours.

The Workers (Communist) Party will gladly furnish pickets if the teamsters need help, but that is not likely as in this strike they have already shown their ability to take care of themselves—and the scabs.

An Optimistic Ambassador

Sir Esme Howard, British ambassador, expressed before the American Political Science Association recently the opinion that the Communist danger was over so far as Europe was concerned.

The remarks of the spokesman of British imperialism are contradicted by the strenuous efforts now being made by the British foreign office all over Europe to arouse some semblance of united action against the Communist International and Soviet Russia. The danger is not over for capitalism but is more menacing than in 1918-19 for the very good reason that the Communist parties of Europe are now well organized and disciplined leaders of the revolutionary workingclass in their respective countries.

The revolutions of 1918-19 failed because the Communist parties were young and inexperienced and without sufficient contact with the masses. At that time the social-democratic parties were strong and had not lost their mass following as is the case today. It has taken almost seven years for the workingclass of Europe to find out the true character of the social-democracy—its treason to every phase of the workingclass movement.

This process is almost completed—there is a widespread disillusionment among the workers and European capitalism has lost its last smoke screen. The struggle is clean-cut—the workingclass led by the Communist International on one side and capitalism on the other.

It is an optimistic capitalist spokesman that can call such a situation "devoid of danger" for capitalism.

Another Indigent Debtor

The friendship of the House of Morgan for fascism is shown by the fact that it is not adding to the other troubles of Mussolini by prodding him up about the Italian debt to the American plunderbund. Italy has made no effort to pay its war debt but no pressure is being exerted from Washington that can be seen with the naked eye.

The slightest sign that that collection agency for the house of Morgan—the Coolidge administration—was about to ask for a few shekels as an earnest of intention to pay would probably send the lire tobogganing to oblivion. For that reason the Italian dictator is allowed to make paranoic speeches in lieu of advancing some cash.

Italy, like France, cannot and will not pay. The whole nation teeters precariously on the edge of bankruptcy and the black shirts of the fascisti are about the poorest security in the world just now.

The House of Morgan might foreclose on the vatican and its treasures but the Italian workingclass with the Communists in the lead are also keeping an eye on this well-stocked storehouse which contains something for more tangible than the spiritual pabulum dispersed by its owners.

Capitalism's Tame Madman

Mussolini is a madman. His speech to the chamber was the speech of a homocial maniac and indeed this is the only type of individual that could see any wisdom in or hope of saving Italian capitalism.

The American capitalist press was greatly cheered by the bombastic but wandering oratory of its idol and all the little prostitute correspondents "seen their duty and done it." They gave Mussolini a great boost but the story of the wrecking of the headquarters of a couple of masonic lodges by the enthusiastic fascisti will probably cool the admiration of the ku kluxers who have been following the antics of their Italian prototypes with undisguised approval.

With the suppression of the opposition press as the first step in his election campaign Mussolini has turned all of Italy into a battlefield. When the smoke clears away it will be seen that another idol of capitalism which the masses were supposed to fall down and worship had feet of clay. Perhaps they are even of a more clinging and odorous material.

Whatever the composition of the feet of this fascist idol there is plenty of proof that they are cold. His speech in the chamber resembled nothing so much as a boy whistling to keep up his courage while passing a graveyard.

Textile Workers Must Organize

The textile manufacturers are organized nationally and their association meets to decide, not on the matter of wage cuts in principle—on this they are all agreed—but on the method of reduction and the amount of decrease which they think the textile workers will bear without revolt.

The textile workers are poorly organized and almost at the mercy of the bosses. There are a number of unions in the industry, but very little unity. Unless the textile workers soon see the menace to themselves and their families in their present situation, facing a powerful organization of capitalists backed by local, state and national government, they will be worse off than the chattel slaves of the pre-civil war period.

The Trade Union Educational League, in its statement to the textile workers, points out the remedy for this pitiful weakness. The Communists in the textile districts must see that this message and meaning gets to the workers and that it is translated into concrete forms of organization.

A Telephone Operators' Strike

The news of a strike of telephone operators in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, which has tied up all telephone lines in that vicinity, brings to mind the fact that these women workers, once fairly well organized under the jurisdiction of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, are now about 90 per cent unorganized and therefore at the mercy of the telephone trust—the Bell Telephone company, which has a virtual monopoly of this all-important public utility.

The history of the disorganization of the telephone operators is too long to be told in a short editorial, but it is one of the best instances of the damnable effects of division into craft and calling that curses the American labor movement. The process of disorganization has been going on so long and the telephone trust has been able to take so much advantage of this condition that organization is much more difficult than it was ten years ago. Stock selling schemes, welfare systems, social activities—all under the auspices of the trust—have sapped the morale of the telephone operators.

We hope that the Harrisburg strike is a sign of a revival of the militancy that was once characteristic of the operators and that enabled them to wage many hard fought strikes.

Coal Diggers Support Communists

Yesterday we published a set of resolutions adopted by the Christopher local of the United Mine Workers of America protesting the persecution of Communists and calling for the repeal of all criminal syndicalism laws. This is the kind of news we like to print, especially at this time when the sentencing of Comrade Ruthenberg by the Michigan capitalist courts probably means that the prosecution of active members of the Workers Party will be re-opened.

The feeling among the workers that the Communists must be defended because they are the most consistent and courageous fighters for the working class is the best guarantee that the jailing of Communist workers has the opposite effect to that desired by American capitalist government. Resolutions like those from the Christopher coal diggers make it possible for Communists to face the prospect of prison sentences with a light heart.

President Coolidge hopes to call a military armament limitation conference this year, according to press reports. The best preparation for peace is to be for war, mused Cal, as he signed the $110,000,000 naval appropriation bill. He is now in a position to say: "Bring on your goddamn peace meet!"

King Boris of Bulgaria is looking for a wife. He will start his quest in Belgrade and wind up in London. If he fails in Europe and decides to try the American field, we venture to guess he will never pass the battery unless he surrenders to some sausage manufacturer's daughter.

The sixty-eighth congress had fifty-three days of work left on January 1. Judging by its activity on the first day of the year it will not die of overwork.

MORGAN POWER TRUST AFTER MUSCLE SHOALS

Ford Sidetracked by Owner of Dawes

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 5.—The General Electric company, in a last minute attempt to nullify the effect of unfavorable publicity in the senate, where the monopoly of electric power by Morgan's "power trust" has come to light, announces a fake "dissolution" of the trust. This dissolution, however, consists in the transference of the stock of the trust from its left to its right hand pocket. Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of directors of the General electric company, announces that the stock of the Electric Bond and Share company has been distributed on a pro rata basis to the General Electric company.

However, the Underwood Bill, which would have given the Alabama Power company owned by the Morgan power trust, a lease on Muscle Shoals, has been temporarily defeated because of the disclosures.

The Electric Bond and Share Co., was formed by the General Electric as a means of controlling the numerous small electric light and power companies, thruout the country. In this way many independent companies were brot under the wing of Morgan's trust. A third powerful corporation in this trust, which extends to the Bell telephone system and the Western Union Telegraph company, is the American Gas and Electric company. These three large corporations are connected with interlocking directorates and stock ownership of Morgan interests in all three companies. Anson W. Burchard is a director in all of these companies. Directors of the three companies include George F. Bakre, of the United States Steel corporation and numerous railroads; Dwight F. Morrow, Morgan's partner, Edwin Stettinius, another Morgan partner, and other individuals under Morgan's control.

LOWERING OF STANDARD OF EXISTENCE IN OTHER LANDS FORCES WAGES DOWN HERE

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

The menace to American wage standards in the lower standards of living forced on foreign labor is shown in a survey of real wages thruout the world issued by the International Labor office at Geneva. American wages measured by the quantity of food they will buy, according to the labor office figures, are more than 100 per cent higher than those in Great Britain, the nearest competitor.

This means that where the average Philadelphia worker can purchase each week $27 worth of goods and services the average worker in London is limited to what $12.40 would buy. On the same basis the average wage earner in Paris gets only $9.05 worth, the average Berlin worker $6.82 and the average worker in Milan $5.71 worth of necessaries.

The figures issued by the labor office are index numbers based on the purchasing power of wages in London as 100 per cent. The wages used in the averages for each country include building trades, metal trades, furniture trades, printing and bookbinding and common labor. The purchasing power is measured in terms of the cost of a given quantity of food in the various cities. Where available the cost of housing is also taken into consideration and a second set of figures developed to include this. The figures given for wages prevailing July 1, 1924, are:

Average Wages	Based on food	Based on food and rent
London	100 Pct.	100 Pct
Amsterdam	89	88
Berlin	55	—
Brussels	59	64
Christiana	72	72
Lisbon	32	—
Madrid	57	—
Milan	46	49
Ottawa	173	155
Paris	73	65
Philadelphia	214	213
Prague	56	61
Rome	46	50
Stockholm	81	79
Vienna	47	51
Warsaw	83	—

The fact that workers in London must give more than twice as many hours of work as those in Philadelphia and those in Berlin nearly four times as many to earn the same quantity of food raises the question how long standards can be maintained in this country. Sec'y. Hoover's statement on the economic prospects of the new year calls attention to the fact that with wages about 100 per cent over 1914 and the cost of living up 72 per cent real wages in this country are at the highest level in history. He says this is possible because of increasing efficiency in production.

More Goods; Less Jobs.

But increasing efficiency means that more goods must be sold if labor is to have full employment. This is far from the case at present. The attempt to sell more goods means hotter competition with foreign labor. What the effect is likely to be is indicated by the textile industry which has cut wages from 10 per cent to 15 per cent to secure markets for its products in the face of sharp competition from foreign imports.

UNITED MINE WORKERS WILL PICK SUCCESSOR TO SECRETARY GREEN

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 5.—The executive board of the United Mine Workers of America, expected to recommend a successor for former secretary treasurer, William Green, now president of the American Federation of Labor, went into session here today.

John L. Lewis, international president of the union, refused to reveal who he will favor for the position and said the matter might be the last to be considered by the board, which is faced with a heavy amount of routine business.

NEED FOR FARMER SUPPORT REASON FOR RATE SLASH

Canadian Regime Plays Old Game

By JOHN ROBUR.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

OTTAWA, Can., Jan. 5.—The Mackenzie King administration will not cease its efforts to keep the support of the progressive group in the Canadian parliament. The latest step is the reversal of the railway commission's order which abolished the Crow's Nest Pass railway rates between eastern and western Canada. These rates are materially lower than those generally in force; they apply to grain and flour moving eastward and to agricultural implements, fruit, and quite a list of articles moving westward. They were suspended during the latter years of the war by legislation; they came into force last July; but they were again set aside this fall by the railway commission.

Now the cabinet, which sits as a court of appeal in this matter, has ordered their restoration in 15 days. The issue is on appeal before the supreme court of Canada, and the government has put the Crow's Nest rates in effect until the supreme court decides the question.

After Rural Support

The strongest pressure in favor of bringing back the low rates has naturally come from the west, which is almost entirely progressive in the house of commons. The King administration is in a minority of two and needs support from the farmers. Last sessions it got this support by tariff reductions. Now it has appealed to it by a cut in rates, and the same underlying reasons may bring more tariff reductions next session.

Who Says There Is No Unemployment?

By JAY LOVESTONE.

In the midst of all the noise that is being made about the high tides of prosperity overwhelming us, the employment situation the country over affords an instructive example of the propaganda methods of the employing class.

The latest official findings of the United States department of labor relative to the present unemployment situation certainly show no evidence of prosperiy among the working masses.

Surplus of Workers in New England.

Turning to the New England situation we find that in the textile and shoe plants, in the paper and pulp mills of Maine there is a surplus of labor and part time schedules prevail. The shoe industry, the hosiery mills and the machine shops of New Hampshire are operating with reduced forces. In the Boston industrial district practically all plants are operating part time. In the textile and metal mills of Rhode Island there is a surplus of workers.

Connecticut's New Haven industrial district shows many factories ating part time. In the textile and surplus of factory hands.

Plenty Unemployed in Middle Atlantic States.

When we enter the middle Atlantic tier of states we find a similar situation. In New York state there is considerable unemployment chiefly of unskilled workers. The completion of summer road work and numerous construction jobs is releasing many workers. The building industry is slackening. The iron and steel industries of New Jersey are below normal in operation. Many other industries in the Camden and Trenton districts are working on part time basis. The cessation of road building is releasing many skilled, semi-skilled and unskilled workers in Pennsylvania.

Dark Clouds in Illinois.

The surplus of common labor continues in Illinois. In the Chicago district a large electrical concern has decreased its forces by about one thousand during the month. The coal mines of Danville and the steel mills of Joliet are operating below normal.

Farm labor, furniture manufacturing help, automobile production forces all show a surplus in Indiana. In Michigan there is a surplus of common labor thruout the state. Coal mines are operating fifty per cent capacity. The automobile factories are in some cases releasing workers. It is very difficult for the unskilled workers to find jobs. Two large auto plants in Detroit employing fifty thousand men are working on part time.

Wisconsin has a surplus of common labor. "With the exception of highly skilled mechanics in the building trades and also some experienced butchers, there is a surplus of skilled and semi-skilled men in most all lines and in common labor" in the Milwaukee district.

Ohio continues to show a surplus of labor. The metal and allied industries are hardest hit. The automobile industry is operating considerably below normal. The mining industry is far below normal. Building operations are not so active. Rubber tire manufacturing is slackening. In Youngstown a number of blast furnaces are closed and the steel industry is generally operating on part time. In Cleveland all classes of help are applying for jobs.

Northwest Building Curtailed.

Building operations are being curtailed in Minneapolis. In St. Paul there is also a surplus in the building trades. In Missouri there is a considerable surplus of unskilled labor. Because of the poor corn crop the demand for farm help is lighter than expected in the St. Louis district. In Iowa the tile plants and button factories of the Des Moines district are operating with reduced forces. In Kansas there is an over-abundance of common labor. The railroad shops of Topeka are operating on a five-day a week basis.

In Omaha, Nebraska, there is a surplus of office and factory help. South Dakota shows a surplus of labor. In North Dakota there is also a surplus of common and skilled labor. Here building construction is slackening.

Not Much Brightness in Sunny South.

Due to the curtailment of building operations and road construction the number of unemployed among the unskilled is increasing in Maryland. In Baltimore there is a surplus of building tradesmen and a seasonal decrease in the forces engaged in the manufacture of clay and glass. The District of Columbia shows an oversupply of clerical and sales forces.

In Virginia there is still a surplus of textile workers. West Virginia still shows a surplus of unskilled labor. The demand for farm labor in North Carolina is decreasing. There is an oversupply of clerical help in Wilmington and textile operatives in Raleigh. The textile districts and cotton mills of Columbia, South Carolina, are now closed.

There is unemployment reported thruout the state of Georgia. The supply of unskilled labor has increased in Florida due to migration.

During the month there were losses in the forces employed in the railroad, leather and chemical divisions of Kentucky. There is a surplus of workers in the textile industry. In the Ashland district there is an oversupply of iron and steel and unskilled laborers. In Tennessee there obtains a surplus of labor in many industries. The Alabama coal mines are hard hit and building is slackening. The lumber and textile mills of Mississippi report a surplus of labor and are operating on a part time basis.

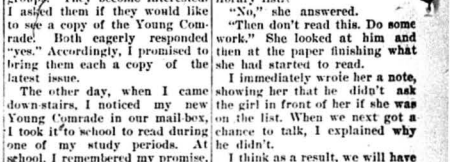
Drought conditions have increased the amount of surplus labor in Louisiana. In New Orleans there are many plants operating on part time or with reduced forces. Some lumbering plants are closed here. The oil industry of Shreveport is especially hard hit by unemployment. In Arkansas there exists a surplus of skilled and unskilled labor. Last month witnessed a loss in the forces employed in the Oklahoma oil fields. The completion of cotton picking has increased the surplus of unskilled labor in Texas.

Southwest Hard Hit.

The railway shops of New Mexico are operating on a five-day basis. In this state all agricultural activities except cotton harvesting work are showing seasonal curtailment. Industry in Utah is less active now than thirty days ago. In Wyoming there is considerable release of out-of-door seasonal workers. The outlook here is for reduction of the forces in the oil industry. There is moderate surplus of common mine labor in Nevada. The Idaho sugar beet crop activities have been curtailed on account of the drought. Building, highway construction and agricultural activities are showing a seasonal letup in Montana. Several thousand agricultural workers have been released in Colorado.

No Prosperity in Mountain District.

In California a large force of workers has been released by the cessation of fall harvesting operations. Ordinary mine labor shows an increased surplus in this state. In the San Francisco district labor as a whole is very plentiful in the iron and steel, textile, printing, glass, clay and leather industry. Work on railroad and highway construction, as well as in logging camps, is temporarity at least being suspended in Oregon for seasonal reasons. The fish and fruit canneries are slqwing up. Some of the lumber mills of Washington are reducing their output. The completion of the apple harvest has added to the unemployment list in this state. In Seattle "an increasing surplus of laborers and mechanics prevails."



Teacher Sees Young Comrade.

A few days ago I was telling two of my classmates about the "Young Comrade" and the junior groups. They become interested. I asked them if they would like to see a copy of the Young Comrade. Both eagerly responded "yes." Accordingly, I promised to bring them each a copy of the latest issue.

The other day, when I came down-stairs, I noticed my new Young Comrade in our mail-box. I took it to school to read during one of my study periods. At school, I remembered my promise, I decided to let them see this one.

One of the girls has the same study periods as I, so I asked her if she would like to see it then. She said she would and I gave it to her.

It happened to be one of the days when the teacher walks around the room to see who is absent. A girl was reading a story book and he passed her. Behind this girl sat my friends. The teacher looked at her, then at the paper. He noticed a head-line. It didn't look like the head-lines of the school paper. The headline said something about a strike. He took the paper from her and looked at the front page. I noticed his face change color as he read the name "The Young Comrade." "Are you on the library list?" he asked her.

To understand what he meant, I will explain. Anyone who gets

"D's" cannot take books from the school library. "D's" mean poors. They make a list of the names of those who may draw books from the school library and call this library list.

"No," she answered.

"Then don't read this. Do some work." She looked at him and then at the paper finishing what she had started to read.

I immediately wrote her a note, showing her that he didn't ask the girl in front of her if she was on the list. When we next got a chance to talk, I explained why he didn't.

I think as a result, we will have two more new juniors.

Comrades, this goes to show how they treat us in the school. Will we let, this go on? No! We won't! But how will we prevent it? By getting more juniors, members.

Don't forget to send to Thelma Kahn, 1109 So. Robey St. for the address of the junior group nearest your home. —E. S.

Juniors: Are You Ready?

This is a very good letter. It is the kind of a letter we want to receive for our column. Let us have more of them! Surely you have not forgotten how to write to our Russian comrades? Send letters telling of your experiences in school, of your propaganda activities of anything that happens to you that you think will make an interesting story.—Editor Junior Column.

STRIKE LABOR AGAINST COURT EDICT

YALE UNIVERSITY LIBRARY NEW HAVEN CONN. JAN 7 1925

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

AMONG the editorial sapheads to partly blame the Communist International for reaction in Europe is the gentleman who presides over the Seattle Union Record, once a rather progressive sheet, but now even worse than the Milwaukee Leader, which is saying a mouthful. This much can be said for the Leader. It is not hypocritical. Berger flaunts his political nakedness before the public with as little self consciousness as a drunk taking the sun on a busy thorofare with nothing on to obstruct Old Sol's rays.

THE Seattle Union Record, pretends to be a friend of Soviet Russia, but those who know the history of the Russian revolution should be able to grasp the fact that without the Communist Party of Russia, which is the backbone of the Communist International, the workers' and peasants' rule would topple in short order. Yet we find people who go into ecstacies—in public consumption—about the Soviet Republic, aping the capitalists in their denunciation of the Communist International.

ONE could blame the C. I. for reaction in Europe with as much or as little justification as one could blame those who opposed the war in the United States for the passage of the criminal syndicalism laws. Because that high priced genius, George Bernard Shaw, took a wallop at the Communist International, every second rate liberal pen pusher in the United States feels obliged to follow suit. It is regrettable that the calm of Shaw's comfortable existence should be so rudely disturbed by those who desire to make life as pleasant for those who produce the grub that Shaw eats, but it is now for the Shaws!

THE workers of the world would today be literally grovelling at the feet of their masters, but for the "provocative" actions of those who were inspired with the spirit of rebellion. They went to jail and to the gallows. They made trouble. And eventually the changes they fought for were made, and the human race advanced another step. Society has now reached the point where further progress is impossible under the capitalist system. The Communist International is directing the forces of world revolution against the capitalist system. But the capitalists are not taking it lying down, as the liberal pacifists would advise the workers to do. They are fighting and intend to fight. It is regrettable, but a fact. The workers must quit or fight. They will fight because they can do nothing else unless they are willing to die in the midst of plenty. That they will not do. Until capitalism is overthrown there will be reaction in Europe and elsewhere even if the Communist International did not exist.

A LITTLE four-page bulletin, called The Union Dollar, published in the interests of labor banking by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America has a paragraph entitled "U. S. Leads World Labor Movement, Says Carver." Why this is so, Carver evidently echoing the sentiments of the leaders of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, hastens to prove. Carver tells us that the European leaders still believe in the Amsterdamian class struggle whereas here in America the labor leaders have discovered that capitalism can be captured by purchasing it. Now save your money boys and get your slice. How is that for the erstwhile radical Amalgamated? This kind of class collaboration has old man William H. Johnston's knocked for a can of axle grease.

"TEXTILE WORKERS: ORGANIZE AND FIGHT!" IS SLOGAN ISSUED BY THE T. U. E. L. NATIONAL COMMITTEE

TO ALL TEXTILE WORKERS—ORGANIZED AND UNORGANIZED:

Comrades and Fellow-Workers:

The National Association of Textile Manufacturers has announced that the industry must be saved from foreign competition by a series of wage cuts, an increase of working hours and a general speeding-up of the workers.

This is a declaration of war upon the workers in the textile industry whose labor piles up the enormous profits that allows the textile millionaires to maintain summer and winter homes, ride in limousines, hire high-salaried lobbyists, bribe lawmakers and judges and pay policemen, gunmen and militiamen to club, shoot, bayonet and jail striking textile workers as has been done in every textile strike from Lawrence to Paterson.

This is an old excuse—this talk of competition. Sometimes it is the "competition" of the southern mill-owners that brings on a cut in wages in northern mills; sometimes it is the other way about, but always the textile workers and not the textile barons suffer. Today it is "foreign competition" and tomorrow it will be something else.

It all means that these greedy capitalists want the last ounce of strength from the workers and want to pay the lowest possible price for it.

The textile workers are either without any union or divided into small craft unions. There is no unity among the textile workers like there is among the bosses and this is the reason that wage cuts can be put over. The textile workers need a powerful industrial union—all the textile workers in one union.

This is the immediate program of the Trade Union Educational League for the workers in the Textile Industry:

An industrial union of the workers against the industrial union of the bosses!

A united front of ALL the textile unions and textile workers against the United Front of the textile millionaires!

Resistance to all wage cuts and increases in hours!

Abolition of child labor!

One Union in the Textile Industry—Amalgamation of ALL the unions into an industrial union!

Instead of wage cuts—more wages.

Instead of longer hours—shorter hours!

Instead of many little Unions—One Giant Union and the industry for the workers!

Organize and Fight!

NATIONAL COMMITTEE, TRADE UNION EDUCATIONAL LEAGUE.

MUSSOLINI USES GUNS TO SAVE TOTTERING RULE

Bloody Riots and Fires on Increase

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Jan. 6.—Bloody fighting continued thruout Italy today, three being reported killed and many wounded. Armed fascisti are patrolling the streets of Rome, carrying on raids, conducting searches, and seizing newspapers.

After several unsuccessful attempts to storm the Giornale d'Italia, the crowds finally succeeded in setting the newspaper office on fire, completely destroying it. The newspaper Mattino, in Naples, was also burned down.

At Setri Ponete, near Genoa, a center of revolutionary activity, a big fire broke out, causing five million lira damages. Setri Ponente includes a huge arsenal and munitions works.

Some of the opposition newspapers appeared for the first time today, but most of their pages were blank where the Fascisti had censored them, or were filled with advertisements. No editorials were allowed.

Aldo Origlio yesterday resigned as minister of justice, and Alfredo Rocco, now president of the chamber of deputies, was appointed to replace him. Salandra has resigned as Italy's representative in the league of nations.

Mussolini is expected to formally declare martial law in those provinces where the Communists are strong.

Rally to the Defense of Your Militant Fighters!

TO THE WORKERS AND POOR FARMERS OF AMERICA:

Brothers! Comrades!

The revival of the Michigan cases, the sentencing of C. E. Ruthenberg to prison for three to ten years, is the first step to a general campaign against labor!

The Supreme Court of the State of Michigan on Dec. 10, decided against the appeal in the case of C. E. Ruthenberg, executive secretary of the Workers Party of America, upholding the constitutionality of the so-called "criminal syndicalist" law.

Comrade Ruthenberg was thereupon sentenced, on January 5, by Judge White of the Berrien County Court, to a prison term of not less than three years and not more than ten years. Comrade Ruthenberg was refused bail and immediately locked up in jail.

Following the sentencing of Comrade Ruthenberg comes the announcement that all the others were indicted in the Michigan case will be brought to trial. This will include such outstanding representatives of the militant labor movement of America as William Z. Foster, William F. Dunne, Robert Minor, etc. The class conscious workers of America are now in danger of losing the active services of a large number of militant fighters in the cause of labor.

Once more the master-class of America has laid its brutal hands upon the militant fighters in the cause of the oppressed and exploited masses.

Once more your enemy, the capitalist class, has set in motion the oppressive machinery of its government to seize from your ranks and lock into prison those who stand for your interest and lead the struggle against your capitalist exploiters.

Capitalist reaction is again raising its ugly head. It is preparing the ground for new wage-cuts, "open shop" campaigns, and general persecution of the labor movement.

Rally to the defense of your class, your organization, and your militant fighters!

• • • • •

THE CAPITALISTS ARE REAPING THE FRUITS OF THEIR VICTORY!

By these new acts of oppression and outrage against the labor movement, the American capitalist class is reaping the fruit of its victory in the last presidential election. The backwardness of the American working masses, the open betrayal of such labor leaders as dominate the American Federation of Labor, and the sham and futility of capitalist democracy, which is nothing but a dictatorship of the capitalist class, all this enabled the republican party to entrench itself in power in the interests of capital.

The government of Strikebreaker Coolidge and "Open Shopper" Dawes has fired its first shot in a general campaign against the labor movement.

Wage cuts and "open shop" drives are being prepared in every industrial center in the country.

Unemployment is ravaging the ranks of labor, greatly weakening the fighting abilities of the workers.

Child labor is utilized by the capitalists to further undermine the fighting strength of the working class.

Capitalism in America is triumphant!

Like a beastly bird of prey it is preparing to jump at the throat of of the working class. The working masses of America must unite their forces to defend themselves and their organizations from these new attacks of the capitalists.

• • • • •

THE WORKERS PARTY CALLS FOR A UNITED FRONT!

The Workers (Communist) Party of America is the revolutionary political party of the American workers and poor farmers. The Workers Party stands for a militant and merciless struggle against capitalist exploitation, for the complete abolition of capitalism thru the establishment of the dictatorship of the proletariat, which is a Workers' and Farmers' Government. The Workers Party is unqualifiedly opposed to the parties of Big Capital, the republican and democratic parties, and to the pontical movement of small capital and its hangers-on, the LaFollette movement.

The Workers (Communist) Party is carrying on a militant struggle against wage-cuts, against "open shop" drives, against unemployment, against child labor, and against the use of the so-called "criminal syndicalism" laws to throttle the labor movement. The Workers Party is waging an energetic struggle for the release of Tom Mooney, Sacco and Vanzetti, and all other prisoners of the class war. The Workers (Communist) Party of America, which is the only political party of the American workers and poor farmers, calls upon the oppressed masses and their organizations to rally to the defense of their militant fighters.

Down with the "Criminal Syndicalism" Laws!

Down with the prosecution and jailing of militant fighters in the cause of labor!

Down with Unemployment and Child Labor exploitation!

Resist wage-cuts and "open shop" drives!

Demand the release of all prisoners of the class war!

Hail the United Front of Labor, the unity of all workers in the Struggle Against Capitalism!

WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY OF AMERICA.
CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE,
Wm. Z. Foster, Chairman.
C. E. Ruthenberg, Executive Secretary.

RUTHENBERG APPEAL SET FOR JAN. 17

30 Other Cases Will Be Tried

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., Jan. 6.—The case of C. E. Ruthenberg, now in jail here, will be taken to the U. S. supreme court on January 17, Isaac L. Ferguson, attorney for the Communists, declared today.

Ruthenberg is now held without bail following the sentence by Circuit Judge Charles E. White, who sentenced him to from three to ten years and a fine of $5,000 for "assembling with" other Communists in their national convention in August 1922. Ruthenberg will probably be moved to the state penitentiary at Jackson today.

A writ of error has been filed with the Michigan supreme court at Lansing, asking for bail pending appeal to the United States supreme court. On January 15, the new appeal for a rehearing will be disposed of by the Michigan supreme court.

The next step in the fight for the release of Comrade Ruthenberg, will be an application to a judge of the United States supreme court, asking for bail pending the hearing of the case by that body, Comrade Ferguson told the DAILY WORKER. The U. S. supreme court will then set a date for the hearing of the case.

The trial of the remaining 30 Communists arrested at the Bridgeman convention will be pushed, O. L. Smith, of Lansing, assistant attorney general stated.

Robert Minor, noted Communist speaker, writer and cartoonist, will be the next to go to trial. Minor's case will come before Judge White during the February term. He is scheduled to appear on February second.

Minor was arrested in Coblenz, during the war, charged with spreading propaganda among the soldiers in the American expeditionary forcees. He is at present writer and cartoonist for the DAILY WORKER.

Ruthenberg, who was brought to trial in the spring of 1922, after the Foster trial, was found guilty of "criminal syndicalism," on the charge of "assembling with" other Communists. The U. S. department of justice co-operated with the Berrien county authorities thruout the trial. The sentence, however, was postponed until after election, it being thought best by the government to keep up the sham of observing the free speech clause in the constitution until after Morgan's money had safely elected Coolidge.

One of the chief witnesses against Ruthenberg was Jacob Spolansky, whose real name is Shpolinsky, and who posed as a "good American" during the trial. Spolansky acted as a stool pigeon in the socialist party and later in the Communist movement. He was recently fired from the bureau of investigation of the U. S. department of justice.

LABOR HATER CROWE TO HEAR STRIKE DISPUTE

Coal Drivers Officials Agree to It

A conference between officials of the coal teamsters' union and of the coal merchants' association, which lasted most of Monday, ended with the union officials agreeing to send the men back to work at once, without a definite agreement or decision on the unions' demands, and with State's Attorney Crowe appointed as arbitrator.

Had the strike lasted many days, and an injunction been issued, as it almost certainly would have been, it would have been State's Attorney Crowe's men who would have arrested the strikers for picketing. Crowe's office was active during the Ladies' Garment Workers strike, his assistants arresting the pickets and manhandling young girls. Crowe is one of the worst labor-haters in the city. The Chicago Federation of Labor officials opposed him in the last elections.

The first session of the "arbitration board," consisting of James Lynch business agent of local union 704, and Tim Lynch, secretary of local union 782 for the teamsters, and two representatives of the coal merchants, with Crowe as umpire, begins on Friday. Charles C. Fitzmorris of the Globe Coal company, and Michael Ready, representing the team owners and independent dealers, will endeavor to prevent the men from getting their demands.

The coal drivers are fighting for an increase in wages of one dollar per day. They also demand that they are not be required to load and unload coal in addition to their duties as truck drivers. They are now paid seventy cents an hour.

COMMUNIST DEPUTIES IN REICHSTAG RAISE A STORM FOR AMNESTY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Jan. 6.—Riotous scenes attended the opening of the reichstag. During President Ebert's address, Communists interrupted the president with shouts of "Amnesty! Amnesty! Free the prisoners."

President Ebert called the house to order, but when quiet was restored a Communist deputy rose and started a speech in behalf of working class prisoners. Ebert peremptorily ordered the speech stopped.

PAY BOOST FOR POSTAL WORKERS IS REFUSED

Senate Upholds Cal's Veto

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 6.—The bill increasing the salary of postal employes, which was vetoed during the last session of congress, failed to obtain the necessary two-thirds majority vote yesterday evening. The veto was sustained by the senate.

Coolidge's "exposure," charging that six postal officials bribed the secretary of the post office committee in the senate, may have had the desired effect of adding a few votes against the bill which Coolidge has fought so bitterly.

According to the rules agreed to, the senate took a vote on the vetoed bill before four o'clock and debate was limited to ten minutes for each senator.

Senator Moses failed to bring the new postal bill backed by Coolidge before the senate as a substitute for the vetoed bill. Moses' bill was presented after the Sterling bill, also backed by Coolidge, had to be withdrawn because the newspapers protested against the high postal rates for news publications.

Denies Negotiations For Franco-German Trade Are Broken

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Jan. 6.—The German delegation, here to negotiate a Franco-German commercial treaty, issued a statement this afternoon denying that Germany had broken off negotiations.

NEW WAR UPON SOVIET RUSSIA TALK OF EUROPE

Monarchists and White Guards Plot Invasion

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Jan. 6.—The strong undercurrent of a new offensive against Soviet Russia, so marked in the recent acts of Austen Chamberlain, the new tory foreign minister of England and the anti-Soviet concordat of the white guard Balkan and Baltic states, has a variation in the rumor now current in Germany.

Munich Paper Reveals Plot.

Hints that Grand Duke Nicholas of Russia intends a military attack against the Soviets aided by France, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland and the Balkan states are contained in an article published by the Munchener Neueste Nachrichten, a leading Munich newspaper.

Wrangel's White Guards Again.

The nucleus of Nicholas' army, it is stated, will be the remnants of General Wrangel's forces now assembled in the Balkans.

The French nationalists, notably President Millerand, are named as especially favorite the alleged forthcoming attempt to wrest Russia from the Bolsheviki. To Poland, it is said has been offered the Ukraine as the price of her aid, and Germans are warned that German soil—probably Bavaria—may be used for mobilizing Nicholas' troops.

Klukers Wrangle.

SACRAMENTO, Cal.—Within the past month six warring factions of the ku klux klan have applied for California charters to Secretary of State Frank Jordan, or have sent in petitions or gone to courts in attempts to keep each other out of the state.

CALLES, WALL STREET LACKEY, SENDS TROOPS AGAINST PEASANTRY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MEXICO CITY, —Federal troops have been sent to guard the farm lands of United States Consular Agent W. O. Jenkins, government agents said today. The troop movement followed the complaint of Jenkins that agraristas (peasants) were trying to confiscate his crops. This was the second attempt in a month to rob his farm, Jenkins reported.

Compromise Contract Ends Phone Strike

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HARRISBURG, Ill., Jan. 6.—The strike of telephone operators employed by the Illinois Southern Telephone company ended today when the representatives of the telephone operators union and the telephone company signed a compromise agreement. Southern Illinois business men were represented in the conference, which lasted until late Monday night.

ANTHRACITE COAL STRIKE'S OFFICIAL SHOT TO DEATH AT PITTSTON, PA.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSTON, Pa., Jan. 6.—Bloodshed marked the strike of the 12,000 miners of the Pennsylvania Coal company today when Sam Pace, 31, secretary of a local union, was shot to death as he returned home here after attending a meeting of the miners' union.

Residents who heard the shots rushed into the street in time to see two men running away. Pace was found dead in the snow with fourteen bullets in his body. Pace is a world war veteran and one of the miners on strike in this district for more than four weeks.

NOTORIOUS KLAN INCENDIARY TO RAID THIS CITY.

HERRIN, Ill., Jan. 6.—S. Glenn Young, noted ku klux klan raider of Williamson county fame, today refused point blank to deny reports that he had been selected by the grand dragon of the realm of Illinois of the ku klux klan to lead the klan's proposed drive to "clean up" Chicago, but admitted that his work in Williamson county was "about done."

Results of Membership Meetings

Results of additional general membership meetings are announced as follows:

MASSILLON, OHIO—Yorkville mining sub-district voted: majority, 7; minority, 19. District organizer Max Lerner spoke for majority; Herbert Benjamin for minority.

EAST HAMMOND, IND.—Membership meeting including Whiting, East Chicago, Indiana Harbor and East Hammond voted: majority, 10; minority, 17. Speakers: majority, J. W. Johnstone; minority, Robert Minor.

CORRECTION—The vote at the meeting in Pittsburgh, Sunday, was: majority, 62; minority, 38. The original report published gave 31 to the minority.

U. S. LOSES RUSS TRADE TO EUROPE

"Economic Vacuum" Is Full of Business

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—How the failure of the American government to recognize Russia is hurting American trade with that country is once more indicated by statements recently appearing in Commerce Reports, the official publication of the department of commerce, in which the chief of the hide and leather division of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce says this, concerning Russian foreign purchases:

"Purchases abroad of 3,000,000 feet of chrome and kid leather have just been completed by the Russian state trading organization, according to an article appearing in Economic Life, Moscow, Oct. 5, 1924. This was a government order, placed to cover the needs of the leather syndicate. These purchases were: Germany, 200,000 feet of chrome and 150,000 feet of colored kid; France, 400,000 feet of kid; the United States, 450,000 feet of kid. Part of these orders had already been received and the remainder is in route. Terms of 4 to 5 months without interest were obtained from the firms making the sales.

A contract has also been made for delivery of 3,600,000 pounds of sole leather from a leather factory in Lithuania in a year's time."

Gives Jobs to Swedish Workers

In the same issue, A. E. Fenselau, clerk to the American commercial attache at Copenhagen, reports: "Conditions affecting the machinery industry of Sweden showed marked improvement during the first quarter of 1924, and to a less extent during the second quarter. As a result the number of employed increased 17.3 percent on July 1, 1924, as compared with the same dates in 1923. Eight machine-building plants in Sweden are engaged in executing Russian contracts for machinery, four of which will employ about 1,560 workers on these Russian orders and four others 200 hands until the end of the year. Three plants in addition to the eight mentioned recommenced operations during the second quarter of 1924."

Germany, France, Sweden and Lithuania all have full diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union.

Takes Jobs From Americans

Meanwhile, the Federal Reserve Bulletin for July, 1924, has declared that production of basic commodities in the United States was lower in May, 1924, than for May, 1923; that factory employment fell 4 percent in May, and that "the largest reduction of working forces occurred in the textile, metal, automobile and leather industries."

Without diplomatic relations, American exporters of machinery, leather and other goods needed by Russia are compelled to face special difficulties as to credits, insurance, ships papers, inspection of goods, etc., or to cut prices to cover the cost of this extra work if it is done by the Russian government trading corporation.

Notice for Pittsburgh.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., January 6.—Remember Saturday evening, Jan. 10, is the day of the Fruit and Costume Carneval held by district five of the Workers Party at 305 James street, N. S. Pittsburgh. It promises to be the most interesting affair held this season by any working class organization in Pittsburgh. Three prizes will be offered: First, to the costume most representative of revolutionary activity or of revolutionary spirit. Second price will be given to the prettiest costume. Last but not least will be given to the funniest costume. We can promise wholesale amusement, good music and entertainment. All the comrades should attend and bring their friends.

PROTESTS THE 'DESCENT OF MAN' WHICH ROBS MONKEYS OF GLANDS

BOMBAY.—Public protests thruout India are directed against cruel and inhuman treatment of monkeys shipped by the hundreds to America and Europe by agents or rejuvenation and surgeons for gland operations. The animals are herded into cages with little provision for the trip, it was charged.

CAPITALIST DYNAMITER RESIGNS AS HEAD OF BIG WOOL TRUST

LAWRENCE, Mass., Jan. 6.—William M. Wood resigns the presidency of the American Woolen Co., for alleged reasons of health, but stays on the board of directors. During the 1912 Lawrence strike Wood was indicted on a charge of planting dynamite among the strikers. He has fought labor hard in several strikes. Wood was born in Portugal, coming to America as an immigrant and is now one of the richest men in the country. Moody's Manual of Corporations shows his name on the directors' lists of numerous textile companies, both woolen and cotton.

LEFT WING MACHINIST SLATE CONTAINS CANDIDATES WITH MILITANT FIGHTING RECORDS

By J. P. A.

FOR INTER. PRESIDENT, Julius Emme, Local 459, St. Paul., Minn., Card No. 290577.

FOR GENL. SECY.-TREAS., Tim Buck, Local 235, Toronto, Ont., Can., Card No. 4417991.

FOR EDITOR OF JOURNAL, A. Overgaard, Local 390, Chicago, Ill., Card No. A39110.

MEMBERS OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL, U. S.:

H. S. McIvaigh, Local 497, Tacoma, Wash., Card No. 238805.

P. Jensen, Local 492, Chicago, Ill., Card No. 173876.

John Otis, Local 536, Pittsburgh, Pa., Card No. 273530.

H. Garner, Local 209, Hammond, Ind., Card No. 771038.

Alfred Goetz, Local 82, Detroit, Mich., Card No. 291236.

Andrew McNamara, Local 52, Pittsburgh, Pa., Card No. 102423.

For the benefit of those members of our organization who don't know all the candidates on the left wing slate, I consider it necessary to touch briefly upon the past history and activities of the most outstanding figures comprising the slate.

Julius Emme, the candidate for international president, is well known in St. Paul, Minn., and in the labor movement of the whole state. He was a delegate to the Rochester convention as well as the recent Detroit convention, and in both these conventions he was one of the recognized floor leaders of the progressive forces. Brother Emme has been active in the political movement of the workers in the state of Minnesota for many years. He has served as delegate from the Central Labor Council to the A. F. of L. convention.

Brother Emme was a candidate for congress on the farmer-labor party ticket in the recent election and was nearly elected, altho the Central Labor Council stabbed him in the back by withdrawing its endorsement and giving support to a reactionary republican, as Emme was known as a Communist.

Brother Emme has participated in a number of strikes in years past. He is respected by friends and enemies in the labor movement for being a fearless fighter for the working class.

Tim Buck, candidate for secretary-treasurer, is a well-known figure in the Canadian labor movement. He is known for activity in all the struggles of the Canadian workers. He is recognized as the leader of the amalgamation movement in Canada. He ran as left wing opposition candidate against Tom Moore for the presidency in the recent Canadian Trades and Labor Congress. Brother Buck is known as a capable organizer, he is known for absolute honesty and for his revolutionary integrity. He was the delegate of the Communist Party of Canada to the Fifth World Congress of the Communist International and also represented the Trade Union Educational League of Canada as delegate to the Third World Congress of the Red International of Labor Unions, both congresses being held last summer in Soviet Russia.

A. Overgaard, candidate for editor of the Journal, has been active in the labor movement since he arrived in this country a few years ago after being blacklisted by the manufacturers' association in Denmark for leading a so-called "illegal" strike against the combined opposition of the trade union leaders and the bosses. Brother Overgaard took part in the railroad shopmen's strike and helped to strengthen the morale of the strikers by organizing speakers' squads, by helping to organize relief for the strikers, etc. He has taken an active part in the amalgamation movement and helped to organize the great amalgamation conference after the shopmen's strike.

Brother Overgaard participated actively in the apprentice movement in Europe, where he was active before coming to this country. He has written a great deal on the present situation of the metal trades workers in the United States. He has served his local union in many capacities, on numerous committees and delegate bodies, and is at present delegate to the Chicago Federation of Labor and the Machinist District Council. Brother Overgaard is also known for his activities in the Workers (Communist) Party, of which he is a member.

Pete Jensen, candidate for member of the executive council, is well known to the membership for his past activities, for his participation in a number of strikes and especially for his activities in the last shopmen's strike. His organization of the relief committee helped a great deal to keep up the morale of the strikers, as well as teh organization of tag days in behalf of the strikers. He showed his fighting spirit in all these struggles.

Brother Jensen is known as one of the leaders of the amalgamation movement. He was one of the floor leaders for all progressive measures. He is known as one of the best fighters for the rank and file in the organization. Numerous examples can be given of the fighting record of Peto Jensen, but space will not permit us. He is fresh from the shop where he feels the pulse of the working class.

H. S. McIlvaugh is another one of the fighters in the railroad strikes of this country. He is especially known on the Pacific coast. He was the leader of all the progressive measures carried on by this year's district convention on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, to which he was a delegate. He is known far his opposition to the infamous "B. & O. plan." He was one of the delegates to the recent convention of the union. He is well respected by all who know him and the rank and file on the Pacific coast have the fullest confidence in him.

Andrew MacNamara and John Otis both come from the heart of the steel industry, Pittsburgh. Both of them have been active in the labor movement there and deserve some of the credit for the exposure of the labor spies that have been uncovered in the Central Labor Council and in local unions. Both of these candidates are known for their opposition to the "B. & O. plan" and other schemes of the present administration.

Both of these brothers were delegates to the recent convention in Detroit. MacNamara was one of the leaders in the fight for reinstatement of the unjustly suspended members of Toledo and was a member of the grievance committee of which the majority report favored reinstatement.

H. Garner is from another steel district, namely the Calumet district, where he is employed at the present time. He feels the iron heel of the Gary dictatorship every day and has no chance of being poisoned by the propaganda to do away with the class struggle.

Brother Garner was active during the shopmen's strike also, as were most of the candidates on the left wing slate. He holds office as president of his local at this time. He was also delegate to the Detroit convention.

Alfred Goetz comes from the great automobile center, Detroit, where he has been active in the trade union movement for sime time. He comes direct from the workshop; he has for years been active in the organization of the young socialist and later, the Young Communist League in the state of Michigan.

We could elaborate more on the qualifications of these candidates, but as space is limited, and the issue not personal, but based on fundamental changes in the organization policies, this introduction will suffice. We appeal for support on the basis of the program, and the records of the candidates should be considered as well. Support us for this fundamental proposal for a better fighting organization.

GREAT WORKERS PARTY CONCERT AND DANCE ON SUNDAY, JAN. 11, 4 P. M.

This Sunday, Jan. 11, the Russian and Ukrainian branches of the Workers Party will give a concert and dance at Schoenhoffen Hall, corner Milwaukee and Ashland Aves. Half of the proceeds will go for the Russian Communist daily, "Novy Mir." The concert promises to be an interesting one. The Ukrainian workers' chorus, a mandolin orchestra, singers from the Russian grand opera, classic dancing and other numbers will be on the program. Russian and American dancing will follow the concert. Beginning at 4 p. m.

Comrades from all nationalities are invited to enjoy a good time and help a good cause.

At a well attended meeting of Local Union 337, of the International Association of Machinists, Monday night the left wing slate was unanimously indorsed. P. Jensen and Andrew Overgaard presented the viewpoint of the left wing.

Max Bedacht, member of the central executive committee of the Workers Party, addressed the meeting on the subject of, "The Sharpening of the Class Struggle in the United States."

The only attempt to defend President Johnston was made by a visiting machinist belonging to Local Union 113, who made a weak speech. The local took no heed of this machinist's remarks, but overwhelmingly indorsed the left wing slate.

Next Sunday Night and Every Sunday Night, the Open Forum.

SHOE WORKERS REVOLT AGAINST NEW WAGE-CUTS

Bosses Attempt to Break Union Agreement

By M. SHARAF.

LYNN, Mass., Jan. 6.—At a meeting of the Stichers' Local, the largest of Shoe Workers in the country, it was unanimously voted to notify the J. R. Donovan Shoe Co, that it would have to live up to its agreement, and that no reduction in wages will be considered by the union until April 30, 1925.

It was declared emphatically that the time has gone by when the union will allow itself to be bluffed by the fake benevolence of the bosses, and that the bosses would not be allowed the free and false publicity that it gave them. Formerly it has been the custom of the Donovans and others to let themselves be interviewed by the local dailies, who made them appear as benefactors and friends of labor, who by a necessary curtailment in wages saved the industry for the city and the jobs for the workers. Three years ago Donovan put his game across, and within a month a general reduction followed all over the city.

Camouflage Wage Cuts.

Before this meeting the general officials of the union had told the Donovan Co. to fire all employes who did not wish to live up to the infamous agreement rendered to them by the notorious state board of arbitration, by which the sting of reduction was camouflaged by giving a different classification—yet the sting was there in the shape of a thinner pay envelope.

Your correspondent looked into the matter, and discovered that Donovan owns the Checker Chain Shoe Stores, and supplies his own stores at a cheaper price, thus making his extra profit in the retail price, while using this cheap selling price as a pretext for wage reuction. In a word, this cheap selling price was a fake—a book price, and a snare.

When a committee of business agents went to interview Donovan, he told them that he was out to make money, and that he didn't care where it came from. When this was reported to the union membership, the above mentioned motion, offered by a militant, was then accepted.

Members of Indiana Legislature Hold Ku Klux Klan Kaukus

(Special to The Daily Worker)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 6.—Members of the Indiana legislature holding membership in the ku klux klan were scheduled to caucus tonight in a downtown hotel, to decide on whom they should support for the state senate and lower house. The assemblymen packed hotel lobbies discussing the caucuses of the republicans and democrats Wednesday night. The republicans are to caucus in the state capital, and the democrats in the Claypool hotel.

Members of the klan belonging to both parties will meet in the ku klux klan legislative caucus.

Strike of Motion Picture Operators Likely Saturday

Members of the Motion Picture Theater Operators' Union may go on strike Saturday, following the flat refusal of the theater owners to grant their demands of a wage increase of ten per cent. The present contract between the union and the motion picture executives' association expires on Saturday.

Several preliminary conferences have been held, the last one ending Monday without an agreement as to the 1925 contract, having been reached.

A union mass meeting will be held by the motion picture operators on Thursday to decide on their future action.

Executive of Building Trades Department of A.F. of L. Met Yesterday

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—A special meeting of the executive council of the building trades department, American Federation of Labor, took place in Washington, Jan. 6, for discussion of jurisdictional and other problems facing the building trades in 1925. Geo. F. Hedrick, the new president, and William Tracy, the new secretary were installed. Hedrick said they were hopeful of finding a way to bring the dispute with the carpenters to an end, but that no specific plan was yet in mind.

Heavy Drop in Coal.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—The total production of bituminous coal in the United States in 1924 was aproximately 467,700,000 net tons, while the production of anthracite amounted to 89,320,000 tons, according to preliminary estimates made today by the geological survey. In 1923 the production amounted to 564,157,000 tons and 93,020,000 tons, respectively.

Gary, Rockefeller and "Cal" Talk Enforcing the Laws of Capitalism

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the White House in Washington is being got ready for Coolidge's Thursday morning breakfast, at which it is proposed to discuss the question of law enforcement.

The great capitalists, Elbert H. Gary, head of the Steel Trust, and John D. Rockefeller, Jr., heir to the Standard Oil billions, will sit down with the exploiters' president, to talk "law and order."

At the same time, C. E. Ruthenberg, a Communist, victim of the "law and order" of American capitalism's white terror, will breakfast alone in his cell in the Berrien county jail, at St. Joseph, Mich.

The White House discussion will not be directed toward effecting a sane regime of real "law and order" in these United States. It will merely take up the problem of fighting the enemies of the capitalist class, whether it is the poor and starving mother, who steals a loaf of bread to feed her children, or the Communist who unites with his comrades in the growing vanguard of labor's militant army fighting for all power. Capitalism must be protected against the Ruthenbergs.

The biggest profiteers are the biggest violators even of their own laws. Yet they will not discuss their own banditry.

The oppression of millions under the heel of the Steel Trust and the Oil Trust will not be considered. The breaking up of homes, the robbing of men, women and children of the working class of even the barest necessities of life; thru low wages, recurring periods of unemployment and the increasingly high cost of living; these questions will be pushed under the table at Coolidge's breakfast discussion with Gary and Rockefeller.

Attorney General Harlan F. Stone, the corporation lawyer from New York City, who has been promoted to the U. S. Supreme Court bench, will be there.

He will no doubt explain how the department of justice can be more effectively used against the workers in the next big strike.

During the last railroad strike, for instance, in carrying out the edicts of capitalist "law and order," thousands of workers were charged by the department of justice with violating injunctions, with being criminals against the capitalist state; the most dangerous kind of criminals, because they dared lead in the class fight against capitalism.

Hearst's purveyor of piffle, Arthur Brisbane, rises to suggest to the White House breakfasters that "crime can be reduced by increasing facilities in obtaining employment."

If Hearst really believes that, he should start putting Brisbane's ideas into effect in his own huge publishing plants. The shorter workday will make more jobs. But Hearst always fights, most militantly, against the demands of the workers. In this he is like all other great employers.

Unemployment is inherent in capitalism. The exploiters use the huge armies of jobless to fight the demands and break up the organizations of the working class. Gary, Rockefeller and Coolidge will not discuss the question of getting jobs for the unemployed at Thursday's breakfast. If they discuss the question at all, it will be the problem of how to keep the hungry jobless in check if they protest their conditions and wage a struggle against them.

There is no doubt that growing unemployment results in a rising wave of so-called crime. But the question the capitalist trio will take up is how best to put workers, who would rather steal than starve, behind prison bars. The question of solving unemployment will not be touched.

The greatest crime in the world today is the continuance of the capitalist social system, with the passive or active consent of the masses of workers and poor farmers. The only real drive against crime, that will bring results for the workers, is the drive of labor against capitalism, with the unflinching intention of completely wiping it out. This is a drive that workers alone, under Communist leadership, can organize and carry out. As labor turns in that direction, workers everywhere can laugh at the breakfast in the capitalist White House, at Washington, under the regime of the strikebreaker, Cal Coolidge.

'NO ARBITRATION OF REPARATIONS' SAYS U.S. CAPITAL

British Jockey for War Debt Parley

LONDON, Jan. 6.—The British foreign office was disappointed by the refusal of the United States to allow the American war claims to be arbitrated, it was said today in diplomatic circles here. American capitalism which insists that labor unions must arbitrate their demands, seems in no mood at all to apply the same principle to itself.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Church ill left today for the allied financial conference which opens in Paris tomorrow. He intimated he did not expect the conference to reach any concrete conclusions. He does hope, however, it was said, that out of the conference will come an inter-allied conference to settle all war debt controversies.

The foreign office looks ot the Paris conference also to clarify the American war claims situation, it was said. Pending the result of the conference there will be no British reply to the American note, it was stated.

Proposals that an allied debt conference be called in Brussels in March or April, with the United States invited to attend, have not yet received official sanction, the foreign office said.

AUSTRALIAN LABOR IS STRONGLY OPPOSED TO CONSCRIPT PLAN

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MELBOURNE, Australia. — The All-Australian conference of the Australian labor party demands that no Australia may be conscripted for military service overseas. This decision means that when a labor government is formed in the federal parliament, a referendum will be taken, and the constitution altered if the vote of the people so decides.

Capitalist Solons Meet in Springfield To War for Spoils

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 6.—A battle over the speakership of the house loomed today as state senators and representatives began gathering here for the opening of the fifty-fourth Illinois general assembly Wednesday. Representatives Robert Scholes, of Peoria and A. Otis Arnold, of Quincy were leading candidates for the chair. Scholes is classed as "wet" and Arnold "dry."

Both parties were scheduled to caucus tomorrow.

After completing its organization the legislature was expected to adjourn until the inauguration of state officers Jan. 12.

PARIS PARLEY TO MARK CRISIS IN WORLD RIVALRIES

Constant Conflicts Never Settled

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—On the heels of France's disappointing communication regarding her $4,000,000,000 war debt, administration officials expressed the hope today that the meeting of the allied finance ministers in Paris tomorrow will result in such a general clarification of the international atmosphere that it will be found possible to begin real negotiations for funding the debt within a few weeks.

A Crisis at Paris.

No European conference in months has been so fraught with possibilities for peace or discord in world affairs as is the Paris meeting, in the opinion of officials here.

France's failure to submit a serious proposition regarding her debt was a sharp disappointment to Washington and in some high quarters there was a disposition to question France's sincerity in the entire matter.

If the Cow Goes Dry—Or Bolshevik.

However, it was recognized that France might have been desirous of temporarily postponing a definite commitment on the debt until she determines how much milk she is to get from the German cow under the Dawes plan. The allies hope that this will be determined at Paris. But if the cow goes dry from so many milkers?

If, after the Paris meeting, France does not then come forward with something tangible in the way of settlement suggestions, it is considered certain here that pressure of "the most rigorous sort" will be applied from Washington.

Bryan (Charles W.) Still Has Some Irons In Fire So to Speak

LINCOLN, Nebr., Jan. 6.—Today was "moving day" for Charles W. Bryan, democratic candidate for vice president in the November election. He retires today as governor of Nebraska and vacated the executive mansion to make way for his republican successor. Bryan, who attracted national interest by his "trust-busting" activities in the matter of coal by the state of Nebraska, will continue his fuel business in private life.

Pension Rotten Teachers.

NEW YORK.—How to rid the schools of unfit teachers was the chief problem discussed by the Modern Language Ass'n. of America in its annual session. William Allen Neilson, president of the association and of Smith College, raised the issue and recommended early retirement on pension as "better economy than to continue to pay full salaries to men who kill the interest of students and discredit their subjects."

bonds advertised in the daily news. According to the salesman, religion is a good paying proposition. "In our 55 years' investment experience, church bonds of the recognized denominations have never been known to fail," reads the advertisement. THE correspondent who discovered that William D. Haywood was on his way to Fort Leavenworth penitentiary via Armenia is entitled to the leather medal for the biggest whopper of the year. If there is a Nobel peace prize for lying he should put in his application. Of course he is a Chicago Tribune correspondent. He had "Bill" wandering thru the mountain fastnesses of Armenia, with tears in his eyes, bunions on his feet and callouses on his tongue from cursing Soviet Russia. "To make" matters worse he made him borrow a dime from a Y. M. C. A. man! Nobody seemed anxious to give "Bill" a free ticket to the can, so the "disappointed rebel" walked out sadly into the night, a la the movies.

"BILL'S picture would look nice with that of Emma Goldman, the fake anarchist and capitalist stool-pigeon," thot the city editors. So they dug up his photo and those of everybody they could by any stretch of the imagination put down as disappointed admirers of the Soviet regime. Isadore Duncan, the dancer was among them. Of course it is a pity to spoil the story with such a prosaic thing as the truth, but the fact is that tho the Tribune correspondent stated that Haywood was a year on the road travelling from Moscow when he hit Armenia, the selfsame William was living rather comfortably in the Lux hotel, Moscow, at the very moment he was reported crushing the soil of Armenia under his tootsies. So much for that.

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

LOVESTONE'S LABOR PARTY BOOK: "THE GOVERNMENT—STRIKEBREAKER"

By WM. Z. FOSTER.

IN the present party discussion, one of the main contentions of the C. E. C. is that the farmer-labor Communists tend strongly to liquidate the Workers Party by pushing it and its interests into the background and by making their "class" farmer-labor party an end in itself. With high indignation the self-styled "Marxian trunk" of our party repudiate this accusation. They declare that with them the farmer-labor party is the merest instrument for the building of the Workers Party, and that they never for a moment forget that they must use it to develop the prestige and leadership of the Workers Party amongst the masses.

After which, it is highly instructive to take a look again at Jay Lovestone's book, "The Government—Strikebreaker." This book is a striking proof of the correctness of the contention that the "class" farmer-labor party slogan, as proposed by the minority, leads directly, under present conditions, to opportunism and liquidation of the Workers Party. Lovestone's book is labor party propaganda pure and simple. It ignores the Workers Party altogether.

"The Government—Strikebreaker" has 371 pages. It is by far the most pretentious literary effort ever made by the Workers Party; and the subject it deals with—the government as a class organization and what to do about it—is one of the most vital consequence. It is a book, considering all the expenditure of money and effort, and with such an important subject, was a splendid opportunity for the Workers Party to make effective propaganda for itself. Indeed, in the very nature of things the author of such a book, to be of real value to the Workers Party, had to demonstrate clearly that the Communist program alone indicates the only way the workers can emancipate themselves, and that the Workers Party is the only party capable of leading the working class to the overthrowal of capitalism.

But, Lovestone's book does none of this. It forgets entirely the main objective of building the Workers Party, and is concerned only with the formation of a labor party. The book appeared in 1923. Lovestone, like Pepper, and so many others, was already obsessed with the labor party. slm which at present so sharply characterizes his outlook. In this book, to elaborate analysis of the capitalist state, showing how it operates as an instrument of the capitalist class against the working class. But then, instead of bringing the Workers Party to the fore, by demonstrating its function as the vanguard of the proletariat and by outlining its immediate program and ultimate goal, he actually leaves the Workers Party out of the picture altogether. His book degenerates into nothing more or less than an argument for a labor party. This costly publication, which should have been a powerful exposition of Communist principles, policies, and organizations, turns out to be merely propaganda for the labor party.

The extent to which Lovestone shoves aside our party is almost incredible. In the whole bulky volume the Workers Party is actually mentioned only once. That and no more. This occurs in a mention on page 334, when Lovestone merely incidentally, in his usual role of disinterested spectator, remarks briefly that the W. P. delegates were not seated at the C. P. P. A. conference in 1922. Of course, this is by no means to be boosting the labor party as an end in itself, that he does not even consider it worth while to state why they were not seated or what their program was. Indeed, at no point in the whole book does he even indicate that the Workers Party favors the formation of a labor party, or tell why it does, or what its labor party policy is. He says absolutely nothing about the big fight the Workers Party was then making for the labor movement for the labor party. He does not point out the limitations of a labor party, nor does he even remotely indicate the necessity for the revolutionary Workers Party to lead the workers to the revolution. He is so intent upon making propaganda for the labor party that he ignores the Workers Party completely.

This systematic suppression and obliteration of the Workers Party is what the farmer-labor Communists call keeping the Workers Party in the foreground and exploiting the labor party movement for its benefit. But we of the C. E. C. majority dub it what it actually is, a policy of opportunism and liquidation.

Lovestone's book is an advocacy of the labor party as an end in itself. There is no other conclusion possible from a reading of the book. While Lovestone indicates the class character of the state and at least hints that the workers must abolish it, he by no means says that the Workers Party is necessary to do the job. His analysis leads merely to an argument for the formation of a labor party. The assumption is that such a party is sufficient. From the text there is no chance that a reader could get any information about, or an appreciation of the Workers Party and its role. The Workers Party is simply not in the book. Seemingly its only function is to humbly pay the heavy bills for this opportunistic labor party propaganda and to modestly put its name on the book cover as the publisher.

In his recent article, Comrade Manley estimates that $50,000 had been directly spent in our labor party propaganda. This is a fair estimate, also the Comrade Ruthenberg evasively disputes it. To it should be added the high cost of Lovestone's book, which is labor party propaganda de luxe. Since his book came into question, the minority comrades who engineered its publication are very shifty and indefinite about what it cost to produce. But considering the extensive research work done and the expensive make-up of the book, it must have cost $3,000, if not more.

Comrade Lovestone wrote the book in his best opportunistic style. Not only did he keep the Workers Party out of it altogether, but he also carefully edited out revolutionary expressions and references. He was desperately anxious to be respectable and to make a good showing with the labor partyites. It is a glowing example of the kind of propaganda our party should not make.

In the present party discussion, Comrade Lovestone constantly evades quotations, however inappropriately, from Marx, Lenin, Zinoviev, and other revolutionary leaders. An inexpert reader would conclude that these men were the great originators and defenders of the "class" farmer-labor party. But in his opportunistic "The Government—Strikebreaker," Lovestone disposes with them very nicely. He does not quote one of them. Altho Lovestone attempts the fundamental Communist task of analyzing the capitalist state, explaining the robbing of the workers thru the wages system, and of fixing a remedy for this exploitation, he never finds it necessary to mention the names of Marx or Lenin, or of any other world-known revolutionist once in the entire book. In fact, except for myself (I am quoted a number of times) all the authors cited are thoroly respectable bourgeois. Not even the taint of socialism is upon any of them, much less Communism.

In making his opportunistic analysis of the state and in providing his quack remedy of a labor party, Lovestone had little use for the sayings of revolutionists, American or foreign. When he analyzes the state his authorities are not Marx or Lenin, but Woodrow Wilson, Beard, Flake, McMaster, Bryce, and similars. When he wants an authority on the organization of the workers he tells us what was said by Representative Ricketts, whoever he may be. Various reactionary politicians and economists illuminate his points on wages. Even Shields and Judge Smith expound on the class nature of the courts and the "class character" of the persecution at Herrin was most forcefully "exposed" by A. W. Kerr, attorney for the defense—I thought the Workers Party had had something to say upon that subject.

Lovestone's book deals largely with the textile, mining, and railroad strikes of 1922. But not a word does he say about the policy of the Workers Party in the part it took or did not do in these struggles. In the whole book there is not a single quotation from the Worker or from any statement of the Workers Party. On the other hand, the book is just packed with quotations from reactionary papers, politicians, labor leaders, and economists. When he indicates the growing class consciousness of the workers in the struggles mentioned, he cites not the Worker, but the Railway Clerk. When he wants an appraisal of the significance of the Herrin trial, he takes it from a manifesto of the Illinois farmer-labor party.

So it goes, all thru the book. Respectables and fakers crowd one another's heels, so much so that there is no room, or, in Lovestone's conception, need for revolutionaries. The Workers Party and the revolutionary movement in general are kept well in the background. This fits in very nicely with the labor party conclusions at the end. One thing that makes me feel queer is the various quotations from the Labor Herald and myself. How come we in such respectable company? We are the only revolutionary sources quoted in the entire book. Why pick on us, Comrade Lovestone? What did we ever do to you that you should include us in such ultra-orthodox company? But, perhaps, the explanation is that by calling the Labor Herald "the well known trade union magazine" and myself "one of the ablest and leading advocates of amalgamation," you figure that we are kosher enough to get by. Certainly you do not link us up any way with the Workers Party, whose identity you are so careful to suppress all thru the book.

Since, in the party discussion, I have pointed out that Lovestone's book advocates the labor party as an end in itself, the minority comrades are making the most desperate efforts to explain it away. They say my own writings are no good. But even if we admit this, how can it excuse the self-admitted great Marxian, Lovestone, for his farmer-laborism? They also say that even Lenin sometimes wrote pamphlets without directly advocating the Communist Party. But can we (as yet) compare Lovestone with Lenin? And whoever heard of Lenin, who about all others taught the principle of always keeping the Communist Party in the forefront, writing a 371-page book, leaving all mention of the Communist Party out of it, and concentrating his whole argument in a demand that the working class work for a party rival to the Communist Party? No one, of course. Then the argument is made that Lovestone's book has been translated in Russia. But what of that? That lends no endorsement of his farmer-labor party deviations. The Russians are far from endorsing in toto all that they translate and publish. This is a matter of common knowledge. They have translated Upton Sinclair's books, the life of Henry Ford, Taylor's works, and many others far from Communist in conclusions.

Lovestone and his minority followers may squirm as they will. But his book speaks for itself. It is a clear case of labor party opportunism. It is an advocacy of the labor party, not to the advantage of the Workers Party, but at its expense; it puts forward the labor party, not merely as a tactical maneuver, but as a substitute for the Workers Party. Even when labor party sentiment was strong in the whole country, we, in our reaching for the masses, committed many opportunistic errors, of which Lovestone's book is only one glaring example. But now, when the labor party movement has amalgamated itself with the LaFollette movement, the continuance of our labor party policy, by causing still more reckless efforts to get hold of the masses, would lead us into a veritable morass of opportunism. The health of our party would be greatly endangered. The discarding of the farmer-labor party slogan, as the C. E. C. thesis proposes, and the concentration of our activities to the united front policy as outlined by the Comintern, offers the only way to build the Workers Party into a mass Communist Party.

MINORITY MUMBO-JUMBO— THE FARMER-LABOR PARTY

By JOSEPH MANLEY

ARGUMENTS put forth by leaders of the minority, in the present party discussion, remind me in memory back to the dear dead days of the romantic past of the minority. In these days of farmer-labor knight-errantry, when the central executive committee operated in a bucolic Polyanna atmosphere created by those of the minority who saw the (LaFollette) revolution—just around the corner.

The C. I. decision and what happened at the Cleveland C. P. P. A. conference seem not to effect at all the methods of reasoning or the line of argument of the minority. Their myopic methods produce a distorted picture of events that suits and bolsters up the preconceived conception of the minority—that right or wrong we must have a farmer-labor party—twisting and turning the merest everyday happenings in the labor movement, into "debacles" for the policy of the majority and howling victories for the minority. And all this they swear to, not in the name of, but of Marx.

Back of all this minority distortion and exaggeration lies much that is personal desire and ambition. When I was a member of the Pepper caucus it was the chief object of the group to have Comrade Ruthenberg accompany Comrade Pepper to Moscow. Comrade Ruthenberg in spite of the importunings did not go across. He probably felt that the big thing for him would be to organize for the St. Paul convention while Pepper and Foster fought it out in Moscow. Then when Foster got back he would be faced with a fait accompli—a farmer-labor party.

In this Comrade Ruthenberg reckoned without his host. In spite of all information to the contrary Foster got back before the St. Paul convention, and brought with him a decision which changed basically, insofar as the LaFollette manouver was concerned our whole conception and program.

The lesson I learned from Foster's first reading of the C. I. decision to the C. Z. C., was that our farmer-labor manouver was nothing short of a united front at the top, which all factions alike were equally responsible for. My experience was that the majority were the quickest to recognize this conclusion and the correctness of the C. I. decision itself, and was this fact, more than anything else which won me away from the minority, and eventually led to my joining the majority.

I too have said that Comrade Lovestone is the most logical thinker of the minority. But Comrade Ruthenberg also, on occasion is logical. Is it not logical for Comrade Ruthenberg to continue to hang on to the name of the farmer-labor party? He it was, who consistently pushed it whenever he could. In his official capacity as secretary, before the holding of the July 3rd, 1923 conference, he got out subscription lists for donations to the campaign for a federated farmer-labor party. These lists brought about a near crisis in the negotiations between us and the old farmer-labor party. He wrote the platform of the ill-fated federated party that was organized at the Chicago convention. He wrote manifestos issued by it. He attended the first St. Paul conference to arrange for the St. Paul convention. He and I perhaps more than anyone else became steeped in the farmer-labor movement. He went to the February gathering of the C. P. P. A. at St Louis; and well I remember that on his return he wrote a thesis in which he said nothing but a miracle could prevent the organization of a labor party at the coming Cleveland July 4 convention of the C. P. P. A.

As I have intimated Comrade Ruthenberg's supreme effort was made after Pepper and Foster left for Moscow. He organized many farmer-labor parties thruout the east, all for the St. Paul convention. To still maintain the necessity of this past work is the secret of Comrade Ruthenberg's present logic. All the noise made in organizing these parties, all the money spent on them and their delegates to the St. Paul convention furnishes the basis of the present alleged sentiment found by the minority for the farmer-labor party. The only real sentiment for a farmer-labor party I can find after months of close observation all over the country is in the ranks of the minority itself, or those with an opportunist inclination. It has its foundation upon events that are dead and gone that is responsible for the intransigent attitude of Ruthenberg and others.

The leaders of the minority are busy citing "facts" to prove either the existence of actual organization of or sentiment for, a farmer-labor party.

Let me cite an actual fact bearing upon the existence of an organized farmer-labor movement in one typical F. L. P. state—South Dakota. The farmer-labor party of South Dakota was an organization, composed mostly of bankrupt farmers and some industrial workers, also well known leaders, were Tom Ayres and Alice Lorraine Daly. Miss Daly several years ago polled over 40,000 votes for governor of South Dakota. Ayres is far superior to Mahoney both for political honesty and as a sincere farmer-laborite. Only a few day conference immediately before the holding of the St. Paul convention stood with us against Mahoney who wanted to keep the Workers Party out of the St. Paul convention. In the convention itself Ayres again rallied his fifty delegates—mostly farmers—to stand with us. Again at a caucus of his delegation Ayres with the assistance of three Finnish Communists from South Dakota put the delegation on record to stay in the convention, even if LaFollette was not nominated. But all Ayres influence availed him nothing against the wave of LaFollette hysteria. When the delegation returned to South Dakota, they demanded and insisted that their farmer-labor party go with LaFollette, in spite of the fact that LaFollette's agents set up a duplicate organization in South Dakota and generally double-crossed the farmer-labor party. Ayres and the South Dakota farmer-labor party went with LaFollette. Today, Ayres is no longer active in the political life of the farmers but is writing insurance for a living. And the South Dakota farmer-labor party is broken up and scattered to the four winds. This is an instance of the "separatness" from the LaFollette movement, of the farmer-labor movement that the leaders of the minority try hard to find or create even in their own imagination.

The minority's proof of the existence of the sentiment is cited by them in the Massachusetts C. P. P. A. conference. The facts as I found them on a recent trip to Boston was that the Massachusetts C. P. P. A. conference was not representative of the C. P. P. A. itself as generally constituted. The Massachusetts conference was ignored by the Railroad Brotherhoods and the bulk of the A. F. of L. unions affiliated with the Central Labor Union. Those actually participating were the A. C. W. the I. L. G. W., the Jewelry Workers and the Machinists along with a bunch of fraternal and benefit organizations. The delegates, for the most part, to the labor party were either members of our own party or influenced by its late campaign. Our own party members who were delegates, appeared to be caught more or less unprepared and did not exploit their manouver as instructed by the C. E. C. with any degree of brilliancy. Whatever the reason for this, it is significant that the D. O. Comrade Ballam who was charged with the responsibility of directing the maneuver, was not present and he now issues a diatribe against the majority on the grounds of his own peculiar "dialectical" presentation. Surely Comrade Ballam will hardly claim that the narrow basis of the Massachusetts C. P. P. A. gathering he speaks of, was hardly broad enough for even a left wing farmer-labor party. In the halycon days of the farmer-labor party movement in Massachusetts and after repeated attempts I could get nothing more there than a mere committee for a farmer-labor party. On the other hand, Comrade Ballam and Ruthenberg see nothing significant in the fact that Comrade Winfield A. Dwyer the Massachusetts Workers Party candidate for secretary of state in the recent election polled 24,000 votes. Comrade Dwyer is a longshoreman with a union button on his lapel as big as a dish pan. He is famous amongst the men of his trade and the workers generally for his militant fight in their everyday struggles. His 24,000 votes as a Communist candidate is a fact that tho in front of Comrade Ballam's nose he does not see, but it is a complete refutation of the specious argument of the minority. It shows that the issue in Mass. is not a left wing F.-L. P. but the Workers Party itself. It is a sample of the united front at the bottom that the majority stands for. It is a united front that will win workers not for opportunism but for Communism.

Now that the minority on the say-so of Comrade Lovestone has become the "Marxian group," And deals in such truck as the following taken from a series of "Mike and Ike" questions and answers published in the Daily Worker for Dec. 24: "The central executive committee made no effort to conduct a political campaign combining united front actions, such as unemployment, recognition of Soviet Russia, etc., with the election campaign in order to transform the election campaign from one of mere propaganda for our candidates into one of political action."

If ever there was conscious misrepresentation, this certainly is. The fact is and Comrade Lovestone knows it very well, that I was made campaign manager because the majority demanded and insisted upon someone, because they wanted a real political campaign; and at that time I was the least objectionable to Ruthenberg. The desire of Comrade Ruthenberg was to have no campaign manager, so that every phase of the campaign would be completely under his personal control. After my appointment, I made recommendations, for instance, for the publication of various leaflets—a million copies to start with—making a special political appeal to the workers in the basic industry of each calling in the country. These leaflets I proposed should be distributed free and should be the beginning of an attempt to reach the masses with our political program. Comrade Foster and Comrade Ballam and the rest of the majority supported me in this proposition. Comrade Ruthenberg took the position that no money could be found for this free distribution, and so nothing ever came of it.

Comrade Ruthenberg if any one many ever ran anything, ran the technical end of the campaign. He it was who made the campaign to raise the money. Comrade Wagenknecht only coming in when it was more than half over; he it was under whose direction the number of leaflets and pamphlets were gotten out, far less than a thousand of Lovestone's "LaFollette Illusion" were distributed, it is not the fault of the majority but of Comrade Ruthenberg. And Lovestone knows this also. I, thought bearing the name of campaign manager was nothing but a clerk in the office. The fact is that when the majority proposed any measure tending to branch out with a real broad political campaign, they and I met with the fact that everything even to the execution of the merest office detail, was fastened down by the executive secretary whose principal consideration, it appeared to me while in the general office, was to keep within his personal grasp everything and anything even to ridiculous details that pertained to the administration of the general office. These matters are cited against the alleged fact by Lovestone; that the majority sabotaged the election campaign. This charge by Lovestone is on a par with the one that Foster believes in the united front at the top. Foster more than anyone else, continually warned us against Mahoney, saying repeatedly that Mahoney would surely double cross us. It is a sample of the "Marxian" analysis that Lovestone and his group apply not alone to internal party affairs but to objective conditions in general.

The facts which cause the minority to champion at present the issue of a farmer-labor party are subjective rather than objective. That is why their arguments are unconsciously dishonest. Perhaps unconsciously they speak of such objective matters as the A. F. of L. convention or the Minnesota farmer-labor federation, they display in addition to their desire to subvert everything to their subjective ends, a naive lack of understanding the realities of working class organization It is this subjective aloofness and naivete on the part of the minority toward working class problems that creates the present situation in our party. No talk from the minority about the ability of the majority; no self laudation by the minority; as the only "Marxian group" in the party, will disprove the poverty of their objective analysis. They have not the intellectual courage to admit their mistakes. To perpetuate their kind of leadership they want to fasten upon our young party a dead policy for a dead movement.

The past is with the farmer-labor party, the future with the Workers (Communist) Party.

THE MAJORITY IS "DISMAYED"

By P. CLINE.

LAST Friday, the 19th of December, the majority suffered a "crushing" frontal attack by the valiant defenders of the farmer-labor party. Comrade Engdahl was the gunner who delivered the broadside. His article entitled "Fight Off the Paralysis" furnished the shrapnel. The majority is ruefully gathering together the battered remnants of its defense and is seriously considering unconditional surrender. But while breathlessly waiting for Comrades Foster, Bittelman and others to recover it behooves the rank and file to "carry on."

Comrades Engdahl in his article assaults the same sector of the majority lines that was subjected to the terrific bombardment of Comrade Bedacht earlier in the week, namely the passivist, fatalist sector. One wonders that Comrade Engdahl, as editor of the DAILY WORKER could not pick a more propitious time to publish his article than simultaneously with that of Comrade Browder's reply to Bedacht. After reading Comrade Browder's simple, lucid, and undisputable statement of facts, one turns to Comrade Engdahl's journalistic froth with vast incredulity. It is unfortunate that the arguments of the majority put one in such a frame of mind but they are so dogpone convincing one can't help it.

At any rate, Comrade Engdahl attacks the majority for withdrawing from the class struggle because it has discarded the farmer-labor party slogan and campaign. He aimlessly quotes from Infantile Sickness of Left Communism by Lenin to the effect that the political activities of the Communist Parties are not simple and easy. It requires strenuous mental gymnastics to figure out how this militates against the majority which has consistently pointed out that there are no magical paths by which we can build our party into a mass Communist Party, but that we must do this painstakingly, "brick by brick." Indeed it is against the minority that this quotation can be most fittingly aimed. It is they who seek easy roads to power thru united fronts, with non-existant labor parties composed of illusory masses. To the comrades of the minority the class farmer-labor party is the "clean, wide, level, straight, street" to the mass Communist Party. Nay, more than that. It is the only street. If we do not we are doomed to sectarianism, syndicalism, fatalism, passivism, chvostism, and other diseases too horrible to mention. However, Comrade Engdahl's farmer-labor party complex does not enable him to see that his quotation from Lenin is a veritable boomerang. He actually thinks he has made a joint.

Knocking at the Wrong Door.

Reading further along we are informed that the majority refuses to fight LaFolletteism except with words. Evidently this is the old ruse of robber turning accuser. Who is it that wishes to fight LaFolletteism with words (class farmer-labor party for instance) If not the minority itself? Who is it that wishes to combat the petty-bourgeoisie democratic illusions of the masses as expressed in the LaFollette movement, with petty bourgeoisie illusions as expressed in the farmer-labor party, if not the minority? Who is it that expects to win the masses thru organizational maneuvering and convention groups if not the minority? The majority on the other hand, proposes to break the democratic political illusions of the masses by entering into united fronts with them on the basis of concrete issues and pressing needs. In this way it will be able to assume actual, everyday leadership over them, it will be able to give their struggles a political orientation and thus expose the nature of the capitalist state and its henchmen of the La-Follette type. Only in this manner can the Workers Party effectively proceed to revolutionize the masses and to develop class political action.

Erasing the LaFollette Movement.

Having demonstrated to his own satisfaction that the majority refuses to fight the LaFollette movement, Comrade Engdahl curiously enough proceeds to show that the LaFollette movement is no more. We are told that it was merely an ephemeral election phenomena and that it is already vanishing into thin air, leaving the precious farmer-labor party high and dry, ready for us to salvage. As conclusive evidence of this there are elicited various instances of labor fakers and "effete politicians" who are forsaking the LaFollette ranks. The writers are disturbed in an unhingly resentful over this betrayal of their hopes. Here they had their hearts set on a party all for themselves—and the LaFollette gang has cheated them out of it! Therefore, their illusions are utterly destroyed, and they are ready to follow the Workers Party in organizing a class farmer-labor party! This is a striking example of the topsy-turvy thinking of the minority. It does not occur to them that the reason why the LaFollette movement is not being crystallized is because the mass sentiment for it has lulled. It is the masses themselves who are betraying the La-Follette third party. Instead of demanding the formation of the farmer-labor party as the minority pictures them, they are even indifferent to the formation of a third party. But this does not at all imply that the democratic, petty bourgeois ideology, which inevitably takes the form of the LaFollette movement has been destroyed. If the comrades of the minority do not see this we might gently ask them for tangible manifestations of the farmer-labor storm which LaFollette's betrayal has occasioned. We would like to see a few of these enraged workers who are going to get even with LaFollette by organizing a farmer-labor party. Perhaps some of them may be peeved enough to join the Workers Party.

"WE SHALL NOT—"

By A. J. LIPSHITZ.

THE overwhelming majority of the Workers Party members are working men and working women, who, for many reasons are, unfortunately, not in a position to be as close students of the Communist literature as our more fortunate (in this respect) comrades whose labors do not lay in factory or mill or who are endowed with more than race intelligence—and who consequently find it somewhat difficult to follow or take part in a discussion that has resolved itself not only in a battle of wit and wisdom but also of literary accomplishment.

And, yet, we of the rank and file have our definite ideas about the matter.

Shorn of all quotations, of all slogans, and simmered down to a plain and practical proposition, the situation presents itself to me in this shape —Should we or should we not devote our hard-earned pennies for the purpose of establishing a non-Communist political party on the off chance that later on we will be able to utilize this party for the purpose of advancing the Communist cause?

Put in that form the underlying issue must be: "We should not," and for the following perfectly obvious reasons:

(1) Because we know that all parties and organizations which are successful in gathering strength are quite naturally and invariably assuming their own individuality, their own life and mind and develop their own psychology.

Once they become an organization they fight for their existence as all organisms in nature are, and their fight and resistance is in proportion to their strength.

(2) That a class farmer-labor party would be molded in the image of the British labor party, and become in time the most efficient tool of the capitalist dictatorship and our bitterest enemy.

(3) If past experience is any criterion in estimating situations—I am justified in assuming. That in spite of the fact that the Worker Party (that is, assuming we could do it, which is not at all certain) was largely instrumental in establishing the farmer-labor party, the leadership will soon slip into the hands of the labor faker fraternity, especially if there were important personal ends to be gained, and if organized labor should desert, shortly making the professional fakers' entry easy.

(4) That it is more than a mere assumption that should, in the future, a new, younger, and more brazen Moses arise to take the place of La-Follette, and who will offer all kinds of reforms for the asking. That such a person at the head of a middle class combination, such as the LaFollette, will easily gather in such a farmer labor party bag and baggage, leaving the Workers Party high and dry.

(5) That nothing is so demoralizing to us rank and file than to give our little time and money to support candidates whom we despise tho we may do it out of a sense of discipline, but this is putting an unnecessary strain on our loyalty.

I would wish to call the attention of the advocates of the farmer-labor party slogan that the rank and file of the Workers Party are not professional politicians tho many kid themselves that they are. The vast majority are just blunt and determined men and women who like to call a spade and spade, and this makebelieve and sophisticated maneuvering is the shortest way to discouragement and doubt. We like to keep on right ahead — straight — the Communist Party against the capitalist dictatorship. That road we understand! we can come out and face the enemy on our own terms, fearless and sure of our ground.

But we are at a disadvantage when called upon to defend positions we do not believe in and doubt their utility.

In conclusion permit me to say that all comrades will agree on this: That the discussion has done us a heap of good—notwithstanding its occasional bitterness—and that it would be most desirable that more comrades outside of those recognized as leaders should have their say.

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

FIGHTING THE LaFOLLETTE THIRD PARTY

By WILLIAM WEINSTONE.

Clearing the Ground.

IN joining the discussion at this late date, it is necessary to clear the ground of many little heaps of deceptive arguments piled up by the majority to catch the imaginations of comrades who were disappointed by the actual organizational accomplishments resulting from the labor party campaign. In the branch discussions, the motto of the majority seems to be "one reference to the F. F. L. P. and St. Paul is worth a dozen arguments." This group of arguments about the alleged premature efforts to form a labor party, blinds many comrades to the actual situation now confronting the party. It settles for them the entire question. These comrades say, "July 3 and June 17! What vain and futile efforts! Why should we try it again? Why spend our energy and money upon such work?"

These arguments tho they are matters for consideration in future undertakings of a similar nature, are not valid arguments for the present discussion. Only comrades opposed on principle to the advocacy of a labor party can propose them as decisive arguments against the utilization of the "farmer-labor party" slogan at present. If they apply to the minority, they likewise apply to the majority. The majority maintains that the campaign for L. F. L. P. produced beneficial results in the strengthening of our party. The majority agrees to participate in the movement for a L. P. should sentiment for it again arise.

It is an undialectic method to judge the campaigns for the united fronts by whether an actual, lasting united front is achieved. The Communist International is not engaged in the united front for the purpose of forming alliances with the social democrats and labor bureaucrats. It aims to intensify arousing the workers, in breaking their lethargy in divorcing them from their petty-bourgeois leadership. Judged by the number of united fronts actually formed, the Communist International only can have very much to boast about. Judged by the success gained thru the united front tactics in winning the masses, the Communist International has everything to boast about. The united front has turned the Communist Parties from sects into mass parties. The united front is a method of revolutionary "agitation and mobilization of the masses." Nothing more.

Keeping the W. P. in the Foreground.

The second group of deceptive arguments centers about the slogan: "We must at all times keep the Workers Party in the foreground." If this is an argument against the labor party slogan at the present time; it is an argument against it for all time. What does keeping the Workers Party in the foreground mean? In the foreground of the class struggle, of the everyday activities of the masses. And it does not mean, merely keeping the name of the party before the masses. This is the way of the propaganda societies—not of a S. L. P. which confines its activities to the issuance of a leaflet bearing the S. L. P. emblem. A fighting Communist organization must have a program for the immediate activities—it must engage in united fronts. It must be the heart and soul of every movement against the capitalists. These tactics keep the party in the center and in the foreground of things. The united front substitutes the name of a bloc of organizations for the Workers Party in a given instance, but it brings the party into the heart of the masses, into leadership of their struggle. This is what we must accomplish. If this argument were valid for the present discussion, it would apply to the majority as well as minority. The majority maintains that during the election period, where the masses are immature, the united front will be employed in the form of labor congresses, councils of action and labor parties. In other words, of organizations other than the party itself. If the growth of the Workers Party depends upon its ability to find ways and means to reach the broad masses of workers and if it confined itself to winning the masses thru an S. L. P. orthodoxy and a rigid formulation—it would wait until doomsday.

The Point at Issue.

The real point at issue is not touched upon by the above objections to the minority position. The issue is—how to combat the LaFollette illusion. How to prevent the masses from going over into the third party camp. How to prevent the workers who are ready to break away from the old parties from going into the new bourgeois third party.

The election showed that politically the party was isolated from the great masses of the workers. It obtained the support of the party membership and its close circle of sympathizers. The change in the election policy was a necessary change. The election campaign helped to build up the movement by spreading Communist propaganda, etc., which is correct: There is no reason to despair because of the low vote. But we must face the fact that the party is as yet weak in influence among the masses. This must be kept firmly in mind in the consideration of the tactics to be employed in the present situation. To break our isolation is the chief problem of the party.

I am of the opinion that this weakness compels us to employ the slogan of the farmer-labor party to combat the third party movement. The use of this slogan does not exclude the united front on the basis of the immediate economic and political issues and the minority thesis has not at all excluded it. It recognizes that the united front on the basis of the immediate issues is one of the major weapons in the campaign against the enemies of labor whether in the camp of the old parties or in the LaFollette movement. The workers are confronted at the present time with the necessity of making a decision. Shall they affiliate with the third party? What shall we propose? What shall the party do? The chasm between the broad masses of workers and the party is too great today, to effectively make the counter-proposal of "supporting the Workers Party" against "Join the progressive party." And the majority, tho it insists that this must be done as in the case of the Massachusetts C. P. A., shows itself to be wiser in other instances when it proposes "independent working class political action" in the case of the carpenters, miners, and most recently in the left wing program of the machinists.

The slogan "class farmer-labor party" aims to utilize the sentiment which exists for the formation of an independent party of labor and in that way not only combatting the LaFollette movement, but steering the workers into a party independent of the petty-bourgeois.

In England and France.

The Communists in England faced a similar situation in the case of the MacDonald labor government. Zinoviev tells us in the "Lessons of MacDonaldism," that there the Communists employed the slogan "a real labor government with a class program" with telling effect. In France where the socialists and the petty-bourgeois Herriot organized the left bloc the Communists answered with the slogan of—a "workers and peasant bloc." Frought in this paper, as the slogan farmer-labor party undoubtedly is because of the illusions, it may create within our own ranks, it nevertheless serves usefully in the present political situation . . . in fighting the LaFollette movement.

The Role of Middle-of-the-Road Slogans.

The majority has raised the cry of opportunism against the middle of the road organizations. This applies only where there is a systematic policy of building middle of the road organizations irrespective of the political situation where there is a general policy of building political organizations, to accommodate masses not yet ready to join the Workers Party. However, the use of middle of the road slogans is not opportunism. It is the only method with which to mobilize the masses. The necessity of providing a link between the immediate demands and the dictatorship of the proletariat brought forward the slogan of the "workers' and farmers' government." In fighting against the LaFollette movement, it is not only necessary to have the immediate demands, slogans—it is necessary to have a slogan which can lead the masses further than the immediate struggle and lead them to desert the third party. They are not yet ready to bridge the gap between the LaFollette party and the Communist Party—the farmer-labor slogan will lead them on in that direction.

Combatting Two-and-a-Half International.

The majority has avowed that it is opposed to Two-and-a-Half Internationalism in the party. It charges the minority with bad faith in its fight against this menace. What, however, is the record of the majority on this issue? Not until Olgin began writing his articles, had the majority done anything. However, as if to counterbalance Olgin's attack, Bittelman lost no opportunity to whitewash Lore of his past sins at the convention of the German federation. What admission and more important of all, he support-ed the position of the Trotsky opposition and the right wing group in the German party during the October days. If he has admitted very weakly that he was wrong in the Lore and Serrati matters and in his criticism of the past policy of the C. I., which was made in his article in March of this year, there is very little to his credit. Even an infant can now see that Levy was a rank opportunist. But what about the opposition in the Russian party? This is now the main internal question of the Communist International. The whole Second International bases its hopes for the disruption of the Communist International upon the development of this opposition. What about the German right wing? Lore has said nothing regarding his mistakes in these questions. Why then the rush of the C. E. C. majority representative to whitewash Lore? What did the C. E. C. do politically or organizationally to influence the outcome of the German federation convention?

Why did it not take steps to assure the party of a bureau which would loyally support the Communist International and would combat Two-and-a-Half Internationalism just as it is now utilising its organization power to fight the minority. The press committee elected by the convention to control the Volkszeitung consists of comrades who are themselves unreliable from the standpoint of their Communist ideology.

The attitude of the majority toward Two-and-a-Half Internationalism is again shown by the manner in which it is combatting the opportunist tendencies in our trade union work which it is compelled to admit exists and which it seeks to stigmatise in its thesis. However, why does not the majority tell the party who the leaders of this tendency are? Why does it treat it so abstractedly? This is using "diplomacy" in fighting a menace to the party. With such methods, the party will never be able to defeat the Two-and-a-Half and social democratic ideology which is all too prevalent in our ranks. The majority cannot convince the party membership that it realizes the extent and the menace of Two-and-a-Half Internationalism within the party with such methods.

LOREISM IN THE WORKERS PARTY

By ISRAEL AMTER

THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL, after hearing of the derelictions of Comrade Lore, branded him and his followers as "remnants of views of the Two-and-a-Half International." This has been stated very mildly in the resolution of the Presidium of the Communist International. (Later we shall see what Comrade Zinoviev said on this matter.)

In reporting to the Presidium for the American Commission, Comrade Radek, speaking of Lore and his followers said: "In conclusion let me say something about the Lore group. I believe that we are not dealing here with personal lapses of Comrade Lore. He has written articles in which he presents the history of the Communist International completely in the spirit of the Second-and-a-Half International. He represents us as a movement which at first was anti-parliamentarian, and for splits in the trade unions, and then crept out to a realistic standpoint. Or in an article on the British Labor Party Lore says: 'Poor MacDonald would like to do everything good for the working class, but the liberals won't let him.' In an article on the German revolution, he says that conditions have long been overripe for the revolution, but the German Communist Party, for which there are international difficulties, has succeeded in keeping the workers from the revolution.

"I believe that behind these matters there is one fact in regard to Comrade Lore. During the war there were in America German workers, former social-democrats, who for patriotic reasons were against America's participation in the war. Part of the German comrades in America came to us not as Communists but as a result of the struggle which they conducted as Germans against America's entry into the war. And perhaps I am wrong, but I have the impression that Lore represents this section. . . . For that reason I believe that the C. E. C. acted incorrectly when it regarded the lapses of Lore as lapses of peculiar fellow. This is a centristic tendency in the party against which the C. E. C. must fight. The comrades must oppose Lore in the press; they must attack him.

"The comrades must not be misled by the fact that in the question of the support of the third party Lore has gone along with us. He did so from a traditional social-democratic point of view—because of fear of compromises with petty-bourgeois parties. We are on no account against such compromises . . . Lore has a social-democratic viewpoint meeting with a Communist point of view. And it would be very wrong if the decision of the Executive Committee of the Comintern should be so interpreted as if the Exective Committee puts the banner of the executive into the hands of Lore and should say that he represents the point of view of the executive. This is merely a coincidence."

There are American comrades, defenders of Lore, who maintain that Lore was a Communist in his antagonism to the war. Let us see if his nationalism has so completely vanished—even at the present time. On November 19, Lore had an editorial in the Volkszeitung entitled "The Belated Pardon.' In this article Lore states:

"The pardon granted the French ex-premier Joseph Cailleux and—in less measure that granted ex-minister Louis Malvy by both houses of parliament is a correction of an injust act committed in the heat and hatred of the war, even if it comes very late. . . .

"Joseph Cailleaux represented for nearly twenty years that movement in France which sought a rapprochement with Germany in order together with the German empire to question the world supremacy of Great Britain." (Emphasis mine.)

Lore evidently has a notion of bourgeois justice, and feels that Cailleaux, who was a "liberal", was treated unjustly by Clemenceau. We Communists in the laughable role of defending the liberals against the reactionaries! But the crux of the situation is that Cailleaux was for a "rapprochement" with Germany, in order together with her to secure the hegemony of the world. This is the innate nationalism in Lore, which Radek was perfectly justified in charging him with. Despite their militant opposition to the war, the motive of Lore and his followers was not a Communistic, but a German, patriotic one.

But we have a still better specimen of this nationalism. Two days after Comrade Lore confessed his sins regarding the Communist International, his stupid, social-democratic articles regarding the German revolution and the British labor government, there appeared on the editorial page of the Volkszeitung (Dec. 4) the following notice:

"The Shame of the German Bourgeoisie. Berlin, Nov. 12. As we have learned, the constructors and engineers of the Zeppelin works at Friedrichshafen are going to move to America. Just the people who always talk of the 'fatherland' are selling themselves to the entente."

The "shame of the bourgeoisie"—because of the loss of the Zeppelin works! The "shame of the bourgeoisie" because Germany will no longer be able to build Zeppelins! And when the Zeppelin arrived in America, Lore celebrated it with a broad scareline in the Volkszeitung!

Radek was perfectly right: Lore is still a nationalist.

Social-democracy Still Rampant.

In this period of the decay of capitalism, the social-democrats not only fail to lead the workers into action against the capitalists and capitalist state, but in keeping with their cowardice and treachery, speak well of the bourgeoisie and refuse to attack the enemies of the revolution.

Unfortunately we have to record that in the Workers (Communist) Party there are remnants of this ideology and Comrade Lore is one of its most outspoken exponents. A man the name of Louis Simon died recently. Simon was a socialist, a member of the cigarmakers' union and of the Volkszeitung Konferenz, and viciously fought the Communists at every turn. Lore knew this as well as anybody else. Yet in the Nov. 17 issue of the Volkszeitung we find an obituary containing the following. "Simon did not always share our ideas especially in the last two years, but he was a staunch man—a man who always supported a good cause and was always on the job when it was necessary to help it along." Evidently in the mind of Lore, to fight Communism is a "good cause"—to assail the Workers Party is a "good cause!"

On Sep. 24, there appeared in the Volkszeitung an article by Kautsky, entitled "The Question of the War Blame." In this article Kautsky attempts to prove that the social-democrats were not responsible for betraying the international, but on the contrary succumbed to the deception of the German kaiser. Innocent politicians who "took a position only against Austria and not against the policies of the German government," because they "were deceived by the German government in the belief that Germany had no hand in Austrian policies, that she was mediating between Austria and Russia and in this activity in the interest of peace, was attacked by the czar."

Lore declares that he placed a footnote in the issue explaining the reason for publishing the article. But Lore always has bad luck: things just happen in the Volkszeitung. Only three weeks later, after the real Communists in the German federation protested against the publication of an article by the renegade Kautsky in the Volkszeitung, did the footnote appear. And what does Lore say in the footnote? He too, wishes to prove that the social-democrats did not act from innate cowardice and treachery, but were deceived by the German kaiser! In other words, he practically identifies himself with Kautsky! Lore, the Communist!

The Crown of Lore's Treachery

Lore's attitude to the Communist international as revealed in his article on the fifth anniversary of the Comintern in March, is duplicated in the following paragraph from an article in the Volkszeitung on Dec. 12, 1924, entitled "Dark Clounds Are Rising on the World Firmament." This article deals with the charges of the Herriot government that the Communists intend to overthrow the government.

In the midst of this article Lore writes: " . . . The Communists not only repudiated the nonsense attributed to them, but at the same time proved how little their ostensible intentions of overthrowing the government would serve the interests of Moscow,' which is supposed to be directing them. If the Soviet government, as is constantly being contended by the capitalist press, is placing great hopes in obtaining a loan from the Herriot government, it wouldin 1925, when it is under the pressure of a promise to its followers to create a party in 1925, is to be contrary to facts.

The only real basic demand that existed in 1922-23-24 for a F. L. P.—a class F. L. P., has not vanished, as the majority contends. On the contrary, it has been strengthened. To deny that what ever pressure existed from below, still exists for a F. L. P., is to say that our two years or so, of agitation thru the T. U. E. L., etc., for a F. L. P., has not only failed to increase that pressure, but has in some mysterious way wiped it out entirely.

Who Guides the C. E. C. Majority Policy?

The majority does not admit it, still its attitude shows plainly; that it is not the needs or the demands of the rank and file that it gauges the situation by, but rather, by the mood of a few labor fakers. Here we see: First, that the material conditions are favorable to the continuation of the farmer-labor slogan. Secondly, that the only basic demand most worthy of heeding—that of the partly disillusioned portion of the rank and file is still here.

The only difference that has caused such a sudden and complete change of heart in the majority, is the fact that Mahoney, Fitzpatrick, Cramer, and a few others of their stripe do not happen to be in the proper mood now, that they are not for a united front with the Communists. This appears to be the only reason for the majority's attitude toward a F. L. P. C. E. C. Majority Worships United Front From Top.

What comrade, who lays claim to the most elementary knowledge of Communist movement will not readily admit that, the Fitzpatricks, Mahoneys, etc., are not to be relied upon? Who does not know that this element works with us only, as long as we do not challenge their leadership? Who do not know how our Communist face? Still, it is upon them that the majority bases its conclusions, and not upon the prevalent and potential economic and political conditions, or the temper of the rank and file.

The majority reminds one of a child who sat on a hot stove, as a result, much of the skin and flesh of a certain part of its anatomy was badly burned. The child immediately concluded that the stove was no good and should be disposed of. It never occurred to the child that, tho, the stove was not a suitable thing to sit upon, it was still useful, if employed for those purposes for which it was made.

The majority became badly contaminated with the illusion that at one sweep an all-inclusive F. L. P. could have been formed in the United States at this time. Now that the majority had its crude awakening, that it found that an all-inclusive party could not be formed at this time, it proceeds to disown the idea of a united front upon the political field. In a word, when it found that a hot stove could not be sat upon, it proceeds to rid itself of the stove. But the stove is still good, it will still respond to proper handling. The struggle is still on! The former labor united front is still useful if properly applied.

To assume as the C. E. C. majority did, that an all-inclusive movement can be had at this early stage of revolutionary development, in the country, is to misunderstand the first elementary factors of the American movement. By its actions the majority has shown that it thought an "all-inclusive" party could be formed in 1924. What are the facts? Did not the majority understand that the organised labor movement was, and is in the control of agents of capitalism (conscious or unconscious)? Did the majority not understand that the C. P. P. A. together with LaFollette, even if they were willing to form a F. L. P., (which they were not) would have not consented to any sort of a coalition with the Workers (Communist) Party? particularly if it involved our inviolable Communist right to criticize. We could not have accepted a united front without that condition.

Did not the majority understand that the only thing that could have been done under the circumstances, was to concentrate upon the formation of a party, a class party, only of such elements that are close enough to us as not to fear us? No! They did not understand all of this. They started out to form an all-inclusive farmer-labor party. In their short sightedness they discounted the hold upon the wide masses by the labor leaders and LaFolletta. Is it not known to the majority that in England where the labor party is based upon the trade union movement, which in turn is not officially the existence of the class struggle, even there, the Communist Party is still knocking at the door of the labor party for admittance.

To assume that an all-inclusive labor party could have been formed in the United States in 1924, simply means that the majority blindfolded itself to the facts in the case. It assumed first, that our own party was ideologically so fortified, as to be beyond contamination no matter how opportunistically our C. E. C. majority maneuvered us. In the second place, it utterly failed to understand its field of operation. It underestimated the control of the labor leaders and fake progressives over the great bulk of the organized workers and poorer farmers. In a word, the two most elementary and indispensible needs of generalship, namely, to know the strength and morale of one's own forces as well as that of the enemy, were either not considered at all by the majority (who were for an all-inclusive party or nothing at all), or else their judgment is anything but judgment.

THE PECULIAR LOGIC OF THE MAJORITY

By JACK BRADON.

WHY does the majority oppose a farmer-labor party now, when it admits that the material conditions are substantially as they were, when the majority was in favor of such a party? Does not Marx warn, those who care to heed: That it is upon the material conditions of the working class that the politics of a revolutionary party must rest, and not upon the illusions of the mass? How does the blabbering of the majority offered us, as an excuse for its thesis and action, reconcile with the practicability of labor party now, but in some mysterious way wiped it out entirely.

Who Guides the C. E. C. Majority Policy?

The majority does not admit it, still its attitude shows plainly; that it is not the needs or the demands of the rank and file that it gauges the situation by, but rather, by the mood of a few labor fakers. Here we see: First, that the material conditions are favorable to the continuation of the farmer-labor slogan. Secondly, that the only basic demand most worthy of heeding—that of the partly disillusioned portion of the rank and file is still here.

The only difference that has caused such a sudden and complete change of heart in the majority, is the fact that Mahoney, Fitzpatrick, Cramer, and a few others of their stripe do not happen to be in the proper mood now, that they are not for a united front with the Communists. This appears to be the only reason for the majority's attitude toward a F. L. P.

What Became of This Much Talked-of Demand?

We are told that aside from the united front decision of the C. I., and the experiences of the British C. P. —two factors were interpreted to have constituted the demand for a farmer-labor party in the United States. First, the formation of the C. P. P. A.; second, and far more important, the manifestation of the more conscious rank and file. Let us then (aside from the material conditions, which in the long run must be the policy-determining factor) merely examine this demand that existed, but has now vanished.

In the first place, the organization of the C. P. P. A. by labor leaders was not prompted by their craving for an F. L. P. Nor was it due to pressure from the rank and file. Had the rank and file been possessed of the pressure credited to it, it would have used that pressure upon the labor leaders, for what it considered more immediate needs. That is, it would have made those leaders put up an aggressive fight for wages and hours. Neither was the pressure of the rank and file of such moment as to drive these leaders towards the organization of the C. P. P. A. as a blindfold to ward off such pressure.

Even a brief examination of the railroad brotherhoods which constitute the backbone of the C. P. P. A. will easily convince anyone that none of those leaders were in any danger from the rank and file on the contrary, they were all firmly seated in the saddle of leadership of their respective unions. The C. P. P. A. was organized principally as a center where some of the quarreling labor leaders could be united upon the issues as to who was a friend, or an enemy of labor, so as to punish or reward them accordingly, that is, to make more effective that non partisan policy so dear to them; also to eliminate the evil of straddling between the labor leaders, because of their political infringements upon each other. It was an alliance of labor leaders, each seeking to strengthen himself.

THERE WAS NOTHING IN THE IDEOLOGICAL OR REPRESENTATIVE MAKE-UP OF THE C. P. P. A. TO HAVE WARRANTED INTERPRETING ITS FORMATION AS A DEMAND FOR A F. L. P. In a word, the C. P. P. A. did not have the intention of forming a F. L. P. This is corroborated by the fact that it hopefully waited for the democratic party to nominate McAdoo, or for the republican party to nominate some other fake progressive. Had this been done, the C. P. P. A. would be no more.

C. P. P. A. and the Labor Party.

To say that, the C. P. P. A. constituted one of the demands for a F. L. P. in 1922-23-24, when it was not pressed from below, when it could have swung in back of any republican or democrat, without fear of national effective rank and file opposition, and that it will not constitute a demand from the Herriot government, it wouldin 1925, when it is under the pressure naturally do nothing to nip these hopes in the bud."

These statements need no comment—they come from the "Communist" Lore!

What did Comrade Zinoviev say in the Presidium of the Communist International when the American question was before the Presidium? . . . Now as regards Lore. From what I have read he proves that he is by no means a Communist. I really do not know whether he belongs in the central executive committee. In the resolution we have said that very politely. Perhaps we will be compelled to tell it to him less politely. The fact that Lore was against the support of LaFollette is of no moment. We know the manners of the social-democrats who hide behind some barricades, who say they are against the work among the farmers—because they are orthodox Marxians. The American Party will find ways and means of stating openly what is the trouble with Lore."

The trouble with Lore is that he is no Communist. This is not a manifestation of today or yesterday. Lore has shown a constant opposition to the ideas of the Communist International, in his support of Serrati, Levi, his criticism of the Comintern and of Zinoviev—in his utterances on questions arising in the United States, in his conception of what a Communist Party should be and do. This the Communist International knew and knows. This the majority of the C. E. C. knows or should know—unless it believes that Lore is a Communist.

What has the majority of the C. E. C.—who are the C. E. C.—done in carrying out the decisions of the Presidium of the Communist International, namely in carrying on an "ideological campaign" against Lore and his followers, who are "remnants of the Two-and-a-half-International" in our party?

In Memoriam—Lenin

On the 21st of January the workers the world over will hold memorial meetings for Nicolai Lenin, the leader and fighter for the liberation of the laboring masses. In connection with these memorial meetings, on Thursday, Jan. 15, a moving picture, "In Memoriam—Lenin," will be shown in the Gartner's Independent Theatre, 3725 Roosevelt Road. Two other pictures will also be shown: "Polikushka," and "Soldier Ivan's Miracle."

Qualified in Theory, But Denied in Practice

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—The nation is still filled with non-voters, according to a table of percentages on the recent presidential election, compiled and made public today by the republican national committee.

Eighteen of the 48 states failed to poll 50 per cent of their qualified voters.

West Virginia, home state of John W. Davis, led the nation in voting efficiency, polling 72 per cent of her maximum, and Indiana was a close second with 71 1-3 per cent. Wyoming was third with 68.

South Carolina Lowest.

South Carolina showed the least voting efficiency, polling but 6 per cent of her 779,991 persons over 21 years of age. Georgia and Mississippi were next low with 12 per cent.

States that polled above 60 and below 70 per cent were: Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, North Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Delaware, Idaho, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Utah and California.

States that polled over 50 and less than 60 per cent were: New Hampshire, Rhode Island, New York, New Jersey, Ohio, Michigan, South Dakota, Oklahoma, Montana, Nevada and Oregon.

North Little Better than South.

In the 40 per cent class were: Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Arizona and Washington.

In the 30 per cent class were Maine and North Carolina.

Under 30 per cent were all the rest, Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana and Texas. "Democracy" is thus shown to defeat, in practice, all real expression of the majority—the toiling masses.

Actors Meet to Consider Radio Danger to Their Craft

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.— Altho radio broadcasting of first rank singers and performers by Victor Talking Machine Co. and the American Telegraph and Telephone Co. arrangement does not directly concern the Actors' Equity association, the actors' union is very much concerned over the power of radio to keep people away from the theater.

Equity has provided "that if a radio microphone is placed in the footlights for broadcasting the performance, the manager shall then be charged by the actor for an extra performance" with the idea of making play broadcasting too expensive for managers.

An open meeting of Actors' Equity is scheduled for Jan. 26 to consider the danger of radio to actors and arouse the theater to concerted action.

The Workers Party in Action

COMMUNISTS GET BUSY IN COMING ELECTION FIGHT

Aldermanic Campaign Decided On

The Workers Party of America, Local Chicago, is entering eleven Communist candidates in the coming aldermanic elections, Feb. 24, 1925. Altho candidates are put up in only eleven wards, the entire city organization of the Workers Party is throwing itself into the campaign with vigor and enthusiasm. Captains have been appointed for each ward and several party branches are co-operating in putting across a rousing Communist campaign.

Important Issues.

Te candidates are running on a platform covering every issue of genuine interest to the workers of Chicago. The questions of housing, transit, schooling, among others, which local politicians have been using as a political football, are dealt with in this program in a practical manner that offers real relief to the workers of Chicago.

The Workers Party is not interested in appealing to any other element than the working class, and its entire campaign is to be run on that basis. It offers the workers no short cut to paradise, but a realistic solution to the immediate and ultimate problems that face them under the capitalist regime.

Candidates Are Workers.

The candidates are all workers with records in the American labor movement, men who have again and again given evidence of their devotion and loyalty to the working class.

The full program of the Workers Party in this election and a brief biography of each of the candidates will follow in subsequent issues of the DAILY WORKER.

Combined with this campaign will be a campaign to acquaint the wide masses of Chicago workers with the DAILY WORKER, the newspaper that fight every day for the interests of the workers.

There Are No Race or Nationality Bars in Workers' Republic

ODESSA, Russia.—Recent elections in the Kiev district show that in addition to the Ukrainian Soviets elected in Ukrainian villages have also been elected three Polish Soviets, four Russian, two Jewish and one Czech.

Thus in one small district the fullest cultural autonomy prevails, the villages electing officials and carrying on business in the language each knows best.

CHICAGO COMRADES MUST HOLD OPEN JAN. 11 FOR Y. W. L. KARL LIEBKNECHT DAY CELEBRATION

The Chicago International Karl Liebknecht Day will be celebrated by the Young Workers League on Jan. 11 in the Northwest Hall, corner North Ave. and Western, at 8 p. m. There will be speakers from the party, the league and from its junior section.

This celebration has been arranged to organize the working class youth into the Young Workers League and to fight for the youth demands, against militarism and for the Communist organization of youth labor—to carry on the work which Karl Liebknecht, Rosa Luxemberg and other of our great leaders have so valiantly begun.

A Call to Action.

Working area branches and the nuclei of the Y. W. L. of Chicago, the party branches and the junior groups must make the significance of the Karl Liebknecht Day known to the workers in their shops and to their school mates. Special Karl Liebknecht edition of The Young Worker will be taken to the shops and our members working there must see that discussion is prompted and the workers familiarized with the Liebknecht Day, the league and its program.

Leaflets advertising the International Karl Liebknecht Day will be distributed at the large factories employing large numbers of young workers where we have been carrying on campaigns, calling upon the young workers of Montgomery, Ward & Co., Sears, Roebuck, Butler Bros., Boston Store, Davis Dry Goods Co., National Biscuit Co. and the various large clothing shops in the so-called "Maxket" district downtown and various other factories, to attend the Karl Liebknecht Day meeting at the Northwest Hall.

Bring Up At Union Meetings.

Comrades who are members of the unions are asked to take the issue up at their meetings and call upon the workers there to attend the Liebknecht Day meeting.

The juniors are already taking care to see that their school mates are told all about the Karl Liebknecht Day meeting and will no doubt, get a good response.

A special feature of the Liebknecht Day meeting will be Lenin-Liebknecht enrollment of new members into the league and party where during the course of the meeting a number of comrades willing to join the league will be initiated at the meeting.

Make the Karl Liebknecht Day the major topic of your agitation during the coming week! Make the International Karl Liebknecht Day a real mass demonstration of young workers!

NEW HAVEN, CONN., COMMUNISTS ARE SOLID FOR "INSURE DAILY" DRIVE

An earnest manifestation of support for the central organ of the party, the DAILY WORKER, was displayed at the membership meeting held in New Haven, Conn., Friday in response to an address by Alfred Wagenknecht, director the insurance policy drive.

The speaker called attention to the war clouds that were slowly gathering in the Orient, indicated by the fortification of Singapore by the British, the maneuvers of the Japanese war fleet, and the coming Pacific tryout of the United States navy. The struggle between the imperialist nations for the possession of the oil fields in the near East, the speaker said, contained like germs of war.

"That another world conflict is imminent, every Communist understands, but to secure the very essential details regarding the development of the imperialistic struggle requires a daily party organ," Comrade Wagenknecht reiterated. "Such a daily paper must not only inform the party membership of the danger ahead and teach this membership its Communist task in the next war, but must also secure a mass circulation, so that tens of thousands of proletarians will be influenced and led by it when the day comes when the workers will again be called on to exterminate each other."

The speaker then asked for donations and pledges to build the DAILY WORKER and to insure its constant existence. The New Haven Jewish branch responded immediately with $38.00 collected from its members present and pledged its quota of $75.00. The English branch of five active members pledged $25.00 and gave $10.00 at once. The Russian branch paid $30.00 cash, the Ukrainian branch came forward with $20.00 of their $45.00 quota; while the Polish, German, Italian and Finnish branches promised an early remittance.

Out-of-town members were then called upon for reports. Stamford, Waterbury, Hartford, and Bridgeport, the largest locals in the state, all reported the branches busy at work collecting policy funds. All had accepted their quota and promised remittances at an early date.

District 15, of the party, will undoubtedly prove by performance that it believes in keeping the DAILY WORKER and in building it. Comrade Wagenknecht concludes as the result of his visit in the New England states.

Largest Liebknecht Day Celebration in Cleveland, Jan. 11

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 6.—The Cleveland Young Workers' League expects to have one of the largest Liebknecht memorial demonstrations of the hundreds to be held thruout the country.

Widespread advertising has taken place and the young workers of Cleveland are going to have an opportunity to hear the speakers of the Y. W. L., Oliver Carlson and Nat Kaplan, deal in detail with the lives of Liebknecht and Luxenburg, which typify the various struggles of the German proletariat in their battle for freedom from the exploiting class.

The Cleveland meeting will be held on Jan. 12, 8 p. m. at Jaites Hall, 6006 St. Clair St.

All readers of the DAILY WORKER are urged to attend and bring their shop mates with them.

Cleveland Y. W. L. General Membership Meeting Jan. 13

CLEVELAND, Jan. 6.—The Y. W. L. of Cleveland will hold a general membership meeting on Jan. 13 at 5927 Euclid Ave., 8 p. m. to discuss the statement of the national executive committee. A representative of the N. E. C. will present the N. E. C. position and any comrade representing any other opinions will be given equal time to present their viewpoints on our future outline of work and our position on the party political policy. Every member of the Cleveland Young Workers' League must be present at this meeting. Admission will be by paid membership card only.

Every general membership meeting of the Y. W. L. held to date has approved the statement of the N. E. C. of the league.

MANY NEW YORK BRANCHES NEAR DAILY WORKER QUOTA

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Jan. 6.—Eleven hundred dollars has been paid in to the New York office of the Workers Party as the first results of their DAILY WORKER insurance policy drive, according to a report from L. E. Katterfeld, the DAILY WORKER agent here. With fifty branches yet to be heard from, prospects are bright for an early completion of New York's quota. Only twenty of the branches are eligible so far for the roll of honor on the "Militant Page" of the special birthday edition of the DAILY WORKER Jan. 13, as just those branches whose remittances are received before Jan. 10 will have their names on the "Militant Page."

How the New York branches show by the following list of contributions up to Dec. 31, in comparison with the quota assigned:

This shows a total of $1,119 paid in at the New York office by 20 branches. Fifty branches have paid nothing as yet. Many of these have of course sold policies, and will remit in time to be included in the next tabulation.

Every New York branch should be included in the militant page next week. If your branch has made no payment on insurance policies as yet then look up your DAILY WORKER agent and see that he gets busy. Raise the question in your next branch meeting. Remember that this drive has only just begun, and that we're going to fight it out on this line until every branch has met its quota.

Another Fakir "Settlement"

When union officials pick State's Attorney Crowe, the arch labor hater and baiter of Chicago, as arbitrator with dictatorial powers in a wage dispute, as the coal teamsters' union officials have, it is ample proof that something is rotten in the conduct of the union officials.

One does not have to be a Communist to know that Crowe is the tool of the employers' association and that he has sought and enforced injunction after injunction on striking workers. Every union man in Chicago is aware of the fact.

Crowe will grant, probably, some concessions to the teamsters' union, but the real rewards of the efforts made by the rank and file of the union will be reaped by the business agents and by Crowe himself, who will use this appointment to prove that he is "a friend of labor."

The union officials have therefore committed two crimes against unionism—they have assured to the members of the union the barest minimum possible in the way of wage increases and working conditions and they have given Crowe a chance to fool some more workers.

After all, this is the chief use to which the labor fakirs in Chicago and the United States as well, put their offices—the deception and betrayal of the workers for their own profit and that of their friends in capitalist political circles.

Only the revolt of the rank and file against such practices, a revolt based on the program of the Trade Union Educational League—amalgamation into industrial unions, recognition of the class struggle, rank and file control of the unions—can end such disgraceful prostitution of the labor movement.

Cinching Up the Supreme Court

Coolidge has cinched up the supreme court with the appointment of Harlan Stone, House of Morgan lawyer, to succeed McKenna. The members of the supreme bench are appointed for life and Stone is a fairly young man. His appointment as attorney general to succeed Daugherty of odoriferous memory evidently was a sort of preliminary to the real job for which he was selected by the capitalist rulers.

The supreme court is the real instrument of capitalist legality in the United States. It makes no pretense of being responsible to the popular will. It can and does override the decisions of the legislative bodies and it fears no election rebukes. It represents the majesty of power of the capitalist system which lives thru changes in administration over which its dupes become excited.

In no other country where there is a semblance of parliamentary democracy does there exist a tribunal above and apart from the other legal forms with full power to suspend and veto legislation. That it exists in the United States, is accepted without any great mass protest and that the overwhelming majority of the masses still believe they have a voice in determining government policy, is a tribute to the propaganda abilities of the capitalists.

The capitalist class has secured another able champion on the most powerful judicial body in the nation and as for the workers, if they stop to realize what it all means, they will understand that Coolidge is fulfilling the role he was chosen to play—that of strengthening the machinery of capitalist government wherever possible.

"Hat-Tipping" Unionism Dying

In a continual stream the returns of the recent election in the United Mine Workers of America, come into the DAILY WORKER.

The cold figures from local after local, showing that the left wing slate beat the Lewis administration, the stories that accompany the totals, relating dozens of instances of crookedness and juggling of the election machinery by administration henchmen, the tales of how the left wing members had to fight for their right to vote and then to get the vote counted, constitutes an epic of the struggle that is being waged in the labor movement of America.

The left wing is just beginning to find itself, but it has already learned that it can expect no mercy from the officialdom which makes a well-paying business of unionism and uses union offices as stepping stones to positions in capitalist government.

When the full total of the left wing vote in the United Mine Workers is in it will be proof that there is in this big union a big left wing group that knows what it wants and the kind of fight it has to make to get it. The total left wing strength is enough to make insecure the tenure of office of all the vultures that have made the American labor movement their feeding ground.

The days of hat-tipping unionism are almost over in the United States.

Who Opposes Mussolini?

The essential cowardice and vacillation of the socialist-liberal parliamentary "opposition" to the Mussolini regime is disclosed in recent dispatches.

It is upon these poor pieces of parliamentary furniture that the pacifists of the world are depending to defeat the fascist reaction, but as the days pass and the Italian crisis intensifies it is more and more certain that only the working class of Italy, led by the Communist Party, is the opposition to fascism and that as always the fighting will be done by the revolutionary workers.

The Aventine opposition, frightened by the bombast of Mussolini, dissolves into the original groups of which it was composed and accepts the suppression and censorship of its press without protest. But the workers prepare for strikes and armed resistance to the terror of the fascist bands. Many of them have fallen aleady in these conflicts.

Industry is at a standstill in Italy and the national economy becomes more chaotic each day. The Brisbanes in America laud the fascist chief, but eulogies will not feed the Italian population or pay the enormous national debts.

Italian capitalism is in a state of dissolution and even if the liberals succeed Mussolini, swept to power on a wave of workers' blood, they will be unable to repair the damage.

Only the dictatorship of the working class of Italy, with the Communist Party at its head, will be able to build a sane and stable social order there.

The United States senators started the New Year right by failing to attend the first session of the year.

The Postal Workers' Raise

The opposition of the republican administration to the bill raising the wages of the postal employes may appear to be a small matter to those workers who are engaged in other occupations, but it is important as showing its hatred of and stubborn hostility to the workers.

The raise to the postal employes is refused by Coolidge as a matter of principle—the protection of the principal invested in industry by his masters. These masters intend that from Washington shall come no encouragement of any kind to wage earners, no legislation that might be interpreted as a sign of weakness of the capitalist dictatorship.

The postal employes will find that protestations of patriotism, demonstrations of efficiency and appeals to sentiment will avail them little. A little disorganization of the mail service will do more to assist them in getting a raise in wages than all the servile lobbying with senators and congressmen who are thinking of votes alone.

There have been strikers of postal workers in other countries—why not in the United States?

As the advertisement says:
"Eventually, why not now?"

William Jennings Bryan has made application to join the Darwinian society. If his application is approved, the Dawinians will have one perfect monkey to experiment on.

Autocrats at the Breakfast Table

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and Elbert H. Gary will have breakfast with President Coolidge next Thursday.

This innocent item appears in the Hearst press. The further information is given that these two robber barons and their lackey will talk about "law enforcement and the findings of a citizens' committee of one thousand."

When looters and lackeys begin to talk over "law enforcement" there is a sinister meaning for the toiling millions for whose suppression the capitalist state and its thousands of laws exists. We are of the opinion that the chief subject of the breakfast conversation of the autocrats will be the menace of labor unions and revolutionary organizations with the words Communist and Bolshevist sprinkled plentifully thru the gabfest.

What better illustration is there of the source from which American government gets its orders than this breakfast table group of two billionaires, exploiting thousands of workers—and a president?

The sentence of from three to ten years against C. E. Ruthenberg was another echo of the election returns last November. If the workers and poor farmers would protect their class and its spokesmen, they must fight rather than vote with the capitalist parties. Now is a good time to "Join the Workers (Communist) Party," and help fight the barbaric sentence imposed by the Michigan capitalist courts against its national executive secretary.

Wall Street politicians are busy picking a new attorney general to succeed Stone, promoted to the supreme court bench. Anyone who will make war on the Communists, and at the same time wink at the big corporation mergers proposed for this year, will do. It will not be difficult to find such candidates in the ranks of the legal gentry who fatten at the feet of big business.

The United States senate has upheld Coolidge's veto of the pay raise demanded by the postal employes. But the fight of the postal workers for better conditions goes on just the same.

The Chicago Journal, writing an editorial review of the year 1924, finds Soviet Russia is still an international nuisance, but did not predict that next Christmas would find it among the missing.

REPORTS SHOWING BIG LEFT WING COAL MINER VOTE

Communists Backbone of Sturdy Flint

Reports on the recent elections in the United Mine Workers of America keep coming in to the office of The DAILY WORKER. The progressive ticket still continues to hold its own. One very significant fact stands out thru all the reports. Wherever there is a branch of the Workers Party, the progressive ticket has either won or made the fakers travel pretty hard. The Communists have also insisted that the ballots be counted, not miscounted. The result is that in locals where hitherto the reactionary machine grabbed everything in sight, the count this time showed a fifty-fifty break.

Fakers Run Behind.

SPRINGFIELD, Jan. 6. — The progressive slate was overwhelmingly victorious in local 413, Farrington being beaten five to one. The vote was: Farrington, 56; Hindmarsh, 254; Fishwick, 126; Hewlett, 190; Nesbit, 88; Conturiaux, 164.

The rest of the progressive slate went over big, Joe Tumulty polling the record vote of 302 for board member, district number 5.

Local 754, Riverton, gave Farrington 37 votes and 441 for John Hindmarsh. The latter fared better than the progressive candidates for vice-president and secretary-treasurer who polled less votes than their reactionary opponents. Tumulty led for board member in this local also, as did Thomas F. Scott, for international board member.

Frank on Short End.

Local 492, Springfield, gave Farrington 108 and Hindmarsh, 148. Local 721 voted 18 for Farrington and 35 for Hindmarsh. Local 3761, Pana, gave Farrington, 22; Hindmarsh, 128; Fishwick, 86; Hewlett, 80; Nesbit, 57; Conturiaux, 33.

Local 44 gave Farrington 91, and Hindmarsh 306. The progressive candidates for minor positions fared better than those who ran for vice president and secretary-treasurer.

Tough on Farrington.

Local 7471, Springfield, gave Farrington, 46 votes and 142 for Hindmarsh. Local 303, Orient, 180 for Farrington and 348 for Hindmarsh; 191 for Harry Fishwick and 300 for E. B. Hewlett; 191 for Walter Nesbit and 478 for Louis J. Conturiaux.

Local 959, West Frankfort, cast 128 votes for Frank Farrington and 269 for John Hindmarsh; 110 for Harry Fishwick, and 284 for Hewlett; 175 for Walter Nesbit and 192 for Louis Conturiaux.

Local 2425, Virden, gave Frank Farrington 124 votes and 88 to Hindmarsh. Local 997 cast 45 votes for Farrington and 74 for his opponent.

Progressive Beats Lewis.

TRIADELPHIA, W. Va., Jan. 6.—Local 4285 Mine No. 2 gave John L. Lewis candidate to succeed himself as head of the United Mine Workers of America, 58 votes against 88 for the progressive, George L. Voyzey. Philip Murray polled 61 to 80 for Arley Staples. William Green got 61; Joseph Nearing, 69.

Mine No. 2, gave John L. Lewis, 38 votes; Voyzey received 80; Murray, 45; Staples, 75; Green, 52; Nearing, 68.

In Barrakville.

BARRAKVILLE, West Va., Jan. 6.—Local 4346 gave Lewis 4 votes and George Voyzey, progressive, 78; Murray was given the zero sign and Arley Staples got 78; Green received another goose egg and Nearing 78.

Lewis Behind.

JOHNSON CITY, Ill., Jan. 6. — John L. Lewis ran 200 votes behind George Voyzey in local union 3192. The Farrington machine did fairly well here, however, beating Hindmarsh by two votes. The tally was 238 to 236. The other progressive candidates polled a large vote.

Grand Masquerade Ball of Y. W. L. of Hamtramck Jan. 10

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 6.—The Young Workers League of Hamtramck are running a grand masquerade ball at the International Hall, 3014 Yemane street, Hamtramck, Jan. 10, which begins at 7:30 p. m. MEMBERSHIP MEETINGS.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

On Thursday evening, January 8, at 8 o'clock sharp, the Workers Party of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, will hold the general membership meeting devoted to the party discussion on the immediate tasks of the party.

The meeting will be held in Millers Hall, 802 State street, and will be addressed by representatives of both the majority and minority, and governed by the rules laid down for the conduct of the meetings by the central executive committee.

All members must attend. Attendance is compulsory and admittance is by membership card only.

KENOSHA, WISCONSIN.

The general membership meeting, which is to vote upon the immediate tasks of the party, will take place in Kenosha, Wisconsin, at the German-American Home, 665 Grand avenue, Saturday, January 10, at 8 p. m.

Representatives of both the majority and minority will address the meeting, which will be governed by the rules laid down the C. E. C.

Attendance is compulsory and admittance will be by membership card only.

Go to Your Class Movies.

The latest Russian feature film, "The Beauty and the Bolshevik,' a happy story of love and labor and the Red Army of Soviet Russia, will be shown at the following cities under auspices of the International Workers' Aid. Proceeds benefit the "Captives of Capitalism" all over the world. With the features also goes the fine educational film "Russia in Overalls." Go to your class movies!

Bentleyville, Pa., Jan. 9; Daisytown, Pa., Nome Theater, Jan. 10; Omaha Neb., Alhambra Theater, Jan. 12.

A Correction!

A short time ago we printed an advertisement of the International Workers' Aid, which gave the number of workers imprisoned in the various countries. Among the countries was India. The figure for this country was 253,000. This was an error. It should have been 25,300, the International Workers' Aid informs us.

South-Slavic Branch of North Chicago Is For Minority Thesis

The North Chicago South Slavic branch, which is not officially connected with the Chicago city central committee, held its own meeting to discuss the majority and minority theses. After thoro consideration, the branch voted to indorse the minority thesis. A resolution was passed declaring that the minority thesis, "Has made a most thoro analysis of the present economic and political situation, and only by actively participating and leading in mass movements such as the united front slogan for a class farmer labor party—on the political field—can we draw the greater number of workers to ourselves and so make the Workers Party grow."

(Signed) P. Zdenco, organizer.

Cleveland Y. W. L. Jewish Branch for Minority Theses

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 6.—At the last meeting of the Jewish Y. W. L. branch of Cleveland held Sunday, Jan. 4, the theses of the party were taken up for discussion. Comrade M. Lomaz spoke for the C. E. C. (majority) thesis and Comrade A. Eleff defended the minority. After a thorough discussion by the members the theses were taken to vote which resulted 13 to 8 in favor of the minority thesis as the correct one and the one adaptable to the present economic and political condition of this country.

Jewish Br. Y. W. L. of Cleveland
M. Kelstin, Secretary.

Dillonvale, Ohio, Italian Branch Is Solid for Minority

DILLONVALE, Ohio, Jan. 6.—The Italian branch of Dillonvale unanimously indorsed the thesis of the minority by a vote of 24 to 0. A thoro discussion took place before the vote, and a representative of the majority spoke.

The branch passed a resolution calling for the continued use of the class farmer-labor party slogan as a means of strengthening the Workers Party.

HENDERSON HAS BEGINNERS CLASS JAN. 13

Local Chicago Starts a New School

What has everyday patient up-hill work in the trade unions to do with the dictatorship of the proletariat? A whole lot—providing that it is Communist work carried on in a Communist spirit and according to Communist principles.

So that every member of the Workers (Communist) Party may understand the full implications of what it means to be a Communist, the educational council of the Workers (Communist) Party, Local Chicago, has arranged for a series of two lectures which all new members of the party in Chicago are expected to attend. The lectures will deal with "Elements of Communism and the Program of the Workers Party." The lecturer is Archie Henderson of the DAILY WORKER.

Tuesday, January 13, is the date for the first of these lectures. They will be given at 723 Blue Island avenue, 8 p. m., on successive Tuesdays. As soon as the first series of two lectures is completed, a new series will begin—for those members who have come into the party during the two weeks.

This means that a new course will begin every two weeks. As soon as the worker applies for admission to any branch of Local Chicago, he is to be instructed to attend the next session of the beginners class. No new member will be given a card in the party until he can show that he has attended the class.

Comrade Henderson is fully equipped to conduct the class. He is an interesting lecturer and has had considerable experience with the beginners' groups.

Don't forget the date—January 13. If you are a newcomer in the party (that is, if you have come in during the past two months) be on hand at 722 Blue Island avenue, 8 p. m.

Party Activities Of Local Chicago

City Central Committee Meets Jan. 7.

The next meeting of the City Central Committee, Workers Party, Local Chicago, will be held Wednesday, Jan. 7, 1925, 8 p. m. at Workers Hall, 722 Blue Island Ave. There are many important matters: February aldermanic elections, industrial matters, which must be handled. All delegates be on hand at 8 p. m. sharp.

The delegates are requested to settle at this meeting for "Polikushka" tickets that were mailed to the branches from the city office.

"Polikushka" is coming to Gertner's Independent Theater, Jan. 18.

WORKERS PARTY ENTERS CHICAGO CITY ELECTIONS

Securing Signatures Is Our Immediate Job

In the coming aldermanic elections on February 24, 1925, the Workers (Communist) Party, Local Chicago, is entering candidates in various wards.

The immediate task of the Workers Party and Young Workers League members will be to get sufficient signatures to place the Communist candidates on the ballot.

Time is Short

Only a short time is available for that purpose, and comrades therefore must get busy immediately and go out every day in their locality to get the necessary signatures. Every petition must be in the local office, 166 W. Washington St., Room 303, by FRIDAY EVENING JANUARY THE 23rd.

The number of signatures required varies in each ward depending upon the size of the ward. An average of about 500 signatures is necessary in each which is not a very great number if our comrades will be properly active.

All captains of the wards have been fully supplied with material. Branches of the Workers Party and Young Workers League have elected branch election committees to function in the territory assigned them and every member of the party has been assigned to cover a certain territory to get signatures on petitions and should arrange to cover that territory immediately.

Report Once A Week

Members should not delay when they have gotten the lists filled but should report at least twice a week to their branch committee.

This is a so-called non-partisan election, that is the names of our candidates do not appear as running under the label of the Workers Party. However, our activity will make it a Communist campaign.

Every registered voter and citizen living in a ward and who has not signed any other petition for another candidate in the coming aldermanic election is eligible to sign petitions to place our candidates on the ballot.

Comrades in securing petitions should make certain of the fact that the signer has not signed for another candidate, otherwise the name will be thrown out.

Also comrades should see that the signer gets his full name and address on the petition and is duly qualified citizen and voter in that ward.

Carry Daily Worker Bundle

In connection also with the immediate drive to place the Communist candidates on the ballot, we are conducting a DAILY WORKER drive. Every comrade who goes out to secure signatures must take a bundle of THE DAILY WORKER with him and must leave a copy at each place he visits. Also comrades are to take subscription cards and try to get subscribers for THE DAILY WORKER and there is every possibility of excellent successes for THE DAILY WORKER if this is done carefully and systematically.

CHICAGO CANDIDATES ENDORSED BY WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY

Candidates nominated by the Workers (Communist) Party for the spring aldermanic elections are as follows:

22nd WARD—L. Cajka, candidate; A. Overgaard, captain. Branches participating: Czecho-Slovak Nos. 1 and 3, Lithuanian No. 5, Y. W. L. Nd. 4, Lithuanian No. 77, Douglas Park Jewish.

24th WARD—H. Epstein, candidate; William F. Kruse, captain. Branches participating: D. P. English, Italian West Side No. 2 and Y. W. L. No. 1.

28th WARD—N. Dozenberg, candidate; W. Ozol, captain. Branches participating: Lettish and West Side Scandinavian.

32nd WARD—Peter M. Lucas, candidate; M. A. Stolar, captain. Branches participating: Ukrainian No. 1, Polish N. S., Russian, Y. W. L. No. 5.

33rd WARD—J. L. Engdahl, candidate; N. J. Christensen, captain. Branches participating: N. W. English, Karl Marx Scandinavian, and the Armenian Branch.

34th WARD—Harry Brooker, candidate; I. L. Davidson, captain. Branches participating: N. W. Jewish, Italian Terra Cotta, Y. W. L. No. 6, and the Roumanian Branch.

44th WARD—J. W. Johnstone, candidate; Walt Carmon, captain. Branches participating: Finnish, Lakeview, Scandinavian, North Side English, German and Y. W. L.

Dock Strike Ties Up Tasmania; Two Thousand Stranded

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HOBART, Tasmania, Jan. 7.—Tasmania is threatened with a shortage of food and other necessary supplies, owing to the dock strike, which has completely tied up all commerce. Over 2,000 visitors and tourists in Tasmania are stranded, and some whose business is pressing have chartered steamers.

ANOTHER STRIKER MURDERED IN THE ANTHRACITE REGION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SCRANTON, Pa., Jan. 7.—Steve Frely, 21, a miner, was shot to death while standing with a group of striking miners in front of a store at Old Forge, near here early today.

Frely was the second striker employe of the Pennsylvania Coal company to be murdered within 24 hours in this region.

GENERAL MEMBERSHIP MEETING OF Y. W. L. IN NEW YORK CITY, JAN. 16

NEW YORK CITY, Jan. 7.—A general membership meeting of the Young Workers League of New York will be held Friday, Jan. 16, at Stuyvesant Casino, 142 Second Ave.

At this meeting the statement of the National Executive Committee on the work of the league and its future tasks will be discussed.

Comrade John Williamson, executive secretary of the league, will speak for the N. E. C. Discussion will follow.

It is the duty of every member of the league to be present at this meeting, so that a large representation as possible can be present.

Comrades, cancel all other meetings. Get after every member who may not know of the meeting and bring him there.

CAPITALISTS IN CONFERENCE TO DISCUSS SPOILS

Revisit Scenes of the Versailles Pact

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Jan. 7.—The thieves have gathered to quarrel, in a polite way, over the plunder.

Representatives of the twelve allied robbers, including six finance ministers, assembled in the famous clock room of the foreign office palace and were called to order at 3 o'clock.

Recalls the Dead.

It is the same room where the three old men, now either dead or politically dead—Wilson, Lloyd George, and Clemenceau, drew up the tangle of impossible penalties called the treaty of Versailles.

The specific purpose, it was announced, was to make a division among the allies of German reparation payments on the basis of the Dawes' plan.

Europe Has Something Else.

Representatives of the European states do not conceal, however, that the most important question to be discussed is the problem of the allies' war debts, in spite of the fact that it is not mentioned in the official agenda.

Plan to Claim Debt Cuts.

All delegations except the American are anxious to begin the discussion of the thorny debt question.

The solution of the problem, it is held, depends entirely upon the solution of the French war debts to the United States and Great Britain. The Roumanian, Jugo-Slavian and Greek delegates have been told that what their countries will receive will depend upon what concessions are received by France from her creditors.

Opposition to Funding.

One thing that appears certain to unbiased observers is that the refunding of the 37,000,000,000 which France owes the United States and Great Britain is as distasteful to the French as the cancellation of that sum is unacceptable to the American and British taxpayers.

French newspapers, regardless of political opinion, oppose the idea of a complete restitution, and they have much to do with the education of public opinion.

Frenchman and Briton Clash.

A highly important talk between Finance Minister Clemental of France and Winston Churchill, British chancellor of the exchequer, was held this forenoon.

Mr. Churchill opened the discussion by setting forth the well-known British standpoint that Great Britain must receive from her war debtors sums equivalent to those she must pay the United States.

The French finance minister's reply was that the French were obliged to take exactly the same attitude—that France likewise could not forgive her debtors while obliged to pay her creditors.

American Pressure Charged.

Up to that point, it appears, the conversation was easy in tone. It grew more difficult when M. Clemental began to place responsibility for the diminution in reparation payments which France may expect from Germany, chargeing it to the other allied and associated power.

France's finance minister, Clemental, was elected unanimously to the presidency of the international conference, however, on the motion of Churchill.

TEXTILE STRIKE SPREADS THRU NORTHERN ITALY

Mussolini Disarms Anti-Fascist Troops

(Special to the Daily Worker)

ROME, Jan. 7.—A strike in the textile industries which began at Breda, has spread thruout the northern part of Italy. The textile employers have declared a general lockout.

Mussolini, learning that the Italian troops are sympathetic to the workers and peasants, and are ready to fight against the fascisti, has begun to disarm all national troops.

General Diaz and General Giardino, the two leaders of the army, are against the fascist government.

All Communist Party branches have been raided and declared "dissolved" by order of Mussolini. The socialist and liberal parties and associations have also been "dissolved."

The newspaper Gazzettino di Venezia was burned to the ground in Venice and the newspaper Gustizia has been suppressed by the prefect of Milan.

The fascisti have so far raided 665 private homes and supressed over 200 opposition organizations. Rioting and general unrest are on the increase. Outbreaks occurred in Milan, Carrara, Ferrara, Florence and Venice, and for a time were beyond police control.

Ex-Premier Salandra's change from support of the fascisti to the opposition has caused a division in the liberal party. Some of the liberal deputies have passed to the opposition with Salandra, while others are remaining with the fascist party. The fascist liberals are now being led by ex-Minister Sarocchi, who resigned from the cabinet to relieve Mussolini of embarrassment.

Foreign newspaper correspondents in Rome have been hounded by the fascist police, their homes have been raided, their offices searched, and several of them placed under arrest.

"EXPELLED" LEFT WINGERS STILL IN UNION; OTHER MEMBERS ARE FORCING HANDS OF OFFICIALS

The officials of Local No. 181 of the carpenters' union are in an awful pickle, they have been in this pickle for quite some time, in fact it dates back to the time when W. L. Hutcheson, general president, and Harry Jensen, district president, signed a Landis "open shop" agreement without the consent of the rank and file.

A few weeks ago they decided to end their troubles by expelling five reds, but these darned reds refused to be expelled and herein lies the story.

They have been denied a working card, but they still work, they have been denied the new pass word but they still attend the union meetings.

Furnishing Comedy.

Monday night one of the supposed expelled members asked the chairman why he refused to give them the pass word and yet allowed them to attend the meetings. The president was stumped, he said he did not know. However the answer to this puzzle is, that the members would not allow the expelled members to be removed.

Some time ago one member was fined one dollar and another two dollars for daring to defend the expelled members, last night by motion the members remited the fines. The fight has

RUSHED TO 'PEN' IN CUSTODY OF COUNTY SHERIFF

Bail Is Denied Him by State Supreme Court

(Special to the Daily Worker)

JACKSON, Mich., Jan. 7.—C. E. Ruthenberg, national executive secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, is in the Michigan state prison here tonight, after a hurried trip from the Berrien County jail at St. Joseph.

Comrade Ruthenberg has begun to serve his sentence of from three to ten years, for "assembling with" other Communists at the 1922 national convention.

Capitalists Demand Pound of Flesh.

Because he dared to speak in behalf of the working class, advocating "all power to the workers," and the overthrow of the capitalist system of exploitation, the employers, thru their agents the U. S. department of justice and the Michigan courts, are striking a blow at the Communist movement of this country thru Comrade Ruthenberg.

In the custody of Sheriff Fred C. Franz, Comrade Ruthenberg was taken from the Berrin county jail, at St. Joseph, to Jackson, to begin his sentence.

Bail was denied to Comrade Ruthenberg, by the supreme court of Michigan, sitting at Lansing, on Tuesday. A telegram was received from Comrade Ruthenberg by Isaac Ferguson, his attorney, which said, "Am leaving for Jackson today."

The telegram was dispatched from Niles, which is near Jackson, and shows that Comrade Ruthenberg has already been transferred to the Michigan state prison at Jackson. He must have been hurried secretly out of the Berrien county jail at St. Joseph, Michigan, for the St. Joseph papers said that Ruthenberg would be kept in St. Joseph for several days.

Goes to Supreme Court After Jan. 15.

The Michigan supreme court will formally wash its hands of Comrade Ruthenberg's case on Jan. 15, when the final plea for an appeal will be disposed of by the Michigan court.

Stand by the Michigan Defendants!

A Statement by the National Executive Committee of the Young Workers League

YOUNG Workers and Communists of America!

The sentencing of the executive secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party of America, C. E. Ruthenberg, to a prison term of from 3 to 10 years, and a fine of $5,000, is the beginning of a new ferocious drive against the entire working class movement in this country.

The re-election of Coolidge, the republican arch-reactionary tool of imperialism, has given impetus to renewed persecution not only against the Communists but also against every section of the labor movement, against every attempt of the workers to better their conditions. It means a more concentrated drive by the bosses of America to lower wages, increase the working day, and break up the trade unions; it means the increase of exploitation and more energetic preparations for new imperialist wars.

Young workers of America! As that section of the working class which suffers the greatest in the industries, mines and fields, which is the first to be dragged into capitalist wars, which is discriminated against in almost every field of industry—both in the trade unions and in the shop—it is your duty to rally to the defense of the revolutionary leaders of the working class. The persecution of the Michigan Communist defendants is an attack on the entire working class.

Unite against the persecution of Communists and all other fighters for the working class!

Demand the abolition of all criminal syndicalism laws and the release of all political prisoners!

Demand more wages and less hours instead of lower wages and longer hours!

Join the struggle to abolish child labor!

Abolish the discrimination against young workers in the unions and in the shops and mines!

Unite for the six-hour day and five-day week for all young workers!

Join the Young Workers League for the struggle against capitalism, the exploitation of the young workers, and the coming of new imperialist slaughters!

BIG QUARREL LOOMS AMONG THE DIPLOMATS

For the First Time Nobody Talks

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Jan. 7.—A lull before the storm atmosphere prevailed in Paris this afternoon as time brought ever closer the opening tomorrow of the allied financial conference.

In diplomatic circles there was a distinct tenseness of expectancy and, for the first time since the war debt situation became a controversy no foreign representative was willing to talk.

United States Ambassador Kellogg arrived from London this afternoon. He would not discuss the situation. It was thought possible, however, that a statement outlining America's insistence on payment of its war claims thru the Dawes' plan would be forthcoming.

U. S. Wants $605,000,000 Reparations

America's fight to obtain $605,000,000 as its share of loot and reimbursement for the cost of the American army of occupation at the Coblenz bridgehead will begin tomorrow, when the allied financial conference convenes.

The United States claims $350,000,000 for damages to persons and property by Germany during the war, and $255,000,000 for keeping the doughboys on the Rhine for five years.

The finance conference must decide whether the French and Belgians are entitled to deduct, the cost of the Ruhr armies of occupation from the cash and material obtained in the Ruhr between January, 1923, and September, 1924, or whether all the proceeds shall be lumped together and divided pro rata.

Readjust Percentages.

Then the finance ministers must readjust the allies' percentages of reparations under the Dawes' plan, which reduces the total indemnity Germany was ordered to pay by the 1921 agreement from 132,000,000,000 gold marks ($33,000,000,000) to an indeterminate figure, generally set at 44,000,000,000 gold marks ($11,000,000,000).

The fixation and deduction of various priorities must also be solved, including the American claim for priority for the cost of the Coblenz garrison under the Wadsworth agreement and the expenses of various commissions.

The total of these priorities exceeds 400,000,000 gold marks ($100,000,000), so for a few years the allies will have only 600,000,000 gold marks ($150,000,000) to divide for actual reparations.

No Discussion of War Debts.

The American delegates, Ambassador Myron T. Herrick, Ambassador Frank B. Kellogg, and Col. James Logan, are instructed not to permit any discussion of America's war debts, and to insist on a settlement of the United States' claims.

Latest Train Theft Up to $500,000 Is Postoffice Guess

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—The loot taken from the Chicago and North Western train No. 12, which was robbed sometime Monday night between Omaha and Chicago, will amount to between $370,000 and $500,000 postoffice inspectors admitted here today.

The car the bandits looted was sealed and contained valuable parcel post shipments. They escaped with more than half the contents.

Just where the robbery occurred has not been ascertained. It was not found until the train reached Chicago. The robbers are believed to have climbed aboard shortly after the train left Omaha, and with keys to the strong boxes, worked leisurely, as the train makes few stops.

THE TEXTILE WORKERS MUST FIGHT AGAINST SLAVE CONDITIONS

Capitalist Imperialism Turns Its Forces Against Textile Workers; Other Industries Will Follow; Nothing But a Militant Class Struggle Can Save the Workers. Unite With the Workers (Communist) Party for the Political and Industrial Solidarity of the Working Class.—Statement of the Workers (Communist) Party of America.

Wage cuts! Longer hours! Speeding up!

That is the message delivered by the textile bosses, united in their National Association of Textile Manufacturers, to the workers, men, women and children, who work in the textile mills of America.

In one of the richest industries of the richest country on earth, the capitalist system has but one program for the working class—more bitter exploitation.

The bosses tell you that you must work harder for less wages—because of "foreign competition."

Do you not know that this "foreign competition" is only an excuse for the purpose of cutting your wages and making greater profits for the capitalist class?

Do you not know that the infamous Dawes Plan, which the American capitalist class has put into effect, crushes the textile workers of Germany, and from there, proceeds to crush the textile workers of France, England, and now of America? Do you not know that the slave wages of the German workers, enforced by the Dawes Plan, is now used as the excuse to drive YOUR wages down to the coolie-level of the German workers?

Workers! You must organize and fight against this slave-system of the capitalist class!

You must unite for the immediate struggle against the textile bosses by amalgamating all your little separate unions into one solid and powerful organization!

You must organize the unorganized textile workers!

And above all you must join with your fellow workers in all other industries in the general struggle of the working class against the capitalist class!

You must join in the revolutionary struggle of the workers of the world against the slave-pact of the Dawes Plan!

You must prepare to take your part in the struggle of the working class to wrest the powers of government out of the hands of your enemies, the bosses!

You must join hands with the revolutionary workers of the whole world as well as of this country, under the leadership of the Communist International and of its American section, the Workers (Communist) Party!

Workers of all industries! Join with the Textile Workers in the fight against the crushing drive of the Textile Bosses!

Amalgamate your unions!
Organize the unorganized!
Strike against all wage cuts and lowering of conditions!
Unite with the revolutionary workers around the Workers (Communist) Party for the defeat of the Dawes slave plan, for the overthrow of capitalism, for the Workers' and Farmers' Government.

ANTHRACITE MINERS FIRM IN DEMAND FOR CONVENTION AND QUICK SETTLEMENT OF GRIEVANCES

By ART SHIELDS.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

SCRANTON, Pa., Jan. 7.—The bleak New Year of northeastern Pennsylvania finds the deadlock still holding between 12,000 striking miners and their district officials, consisting of President Rinaldo Cappellini and his executive board of District 1, United Mine Workers of America.

The miners, now in the seventh week of their strike for adjustment of long standing grievances against the Pennsylvania-Hillside Coal Co., are demanding a special district convention to take action on the original grievances and to reconcile the ten outlawed local unions with the district and international organizations.

Miners Demand Convention.

This convention demand is more in the spotlight than any other issue arising from the strike. The demand is coming, not only from the ten striking locals, but from a large number of the rest of the local unions of the 48,000 workers not on strike. Many unadjusted grievances are claimed by these workers and much sympathy prevails with the Pennsylvania-Hillside strikers.

Demand for for the convention is coming in the shape of uniformly worded resolutions which ask the executive board to issue a convention call within 15 days after receipt of the resolution. The resolution was drafted at a general conference in Wilkesbarre, Saturday after Christmas, at which were present members of the grievance committees of all the local unions in the district, representing 60,000 miners, including the strikers and the men employed by other companies.

Officials Oppose Convention.

Indications are that Cappellini and his board will continue opposing the demand for a special convention. In the intermission of a board meeting in Scranton, Cappellini declared, "I won't give them a special convention, costing fifty to seventy-five thousand dollars, unless they show good reasons." Members of the executive board said the convention issue had not arisen at the meeting, none of the local union resolutions having been received.

Want Action on Violation.

Strike leaders behind the convention demand urge that the slow and file gathering is necessary to force action on the grievances unadjusted for ten months. These grievances, which will be dealt with in detail in a subsequent story, consist of the laying off of numerous men, and the company's failure to reinstate them in violation of the agreement, the men say; of payment for certain kinds of work at less than the rate provided for; alleged bad powder, and a string of other complaints. Two shorter strikes, earlier in the year, were called off, strikers say, on the district officials to have the grievances adjusted.

Miners Stand Pat.

If the district office does not call a convention the insurgents may take things into their own hands. At the Wilkesbarre conference it was decided to meet again. The Wilkesbarre conference was called in spite of Cappellini's opposition but it did not result in an immediate strike extension move. Tony Panne, chairman of the strikers' general grievance committee, and George Mullesky, another committeeman, asked their fellow workers not to strike now but to await the convention demand.

RADICH TAKEN TO ZAGREB PRISON UPON ARREST AT BELGRADE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BELGRADE, Jan. 7.—Stephan Radich, leader of the Croatian Peasants' Party, who was arrested yesterday at the home of parliamentary Deputy Kochoutitch, was taken to Zagreb prison.

The Croation peasants' party demands revision of the constitution. The government intends to lodge a charge of treason against Radich.

Aeroplane Crashes Into Motor Truck; Kills Two Occupants

DAYTON, O., Jan. 7.—Leon Harris and Paul Long, civilian employes of McCook field were almost decapitated today when a plane piloted by Lieut. E. H. Barksdale, accompanied by Observer Althoff, crashed into a motor truck on which the two men were riding.

The plane was tearing along at a high rate of speed near the ground, testing instruments used on the speed course, when the landing gears caught the top of the army truck and killed the two occupants. First reports said the plane had crashed at McCook field and that the pilots had escaped in their parachutes.

RUSSIAN LAND NOW OPEN FOR THE ONCE PROSCRIBED HEBREWS

MOSCOW, Jan. 7.—In addition to the 80,000 acres set aside recently by the Ukraine for colonization by Jews, White Russia has given 25,000 acres for this purpose. This is for the Jewish small town population of small traders and artisans which is being starved out by the growth of co-operatives and government factories, as well as by the policy of the government toward private trade. The land is now open to Jewish settlement, as it was not in the tsar's time, so thousands of Jews are leaving the ill-paid petty trading for the farm.

LODGE 390, I. A. M. GIVES THE BOOT TO W. H. JOHNSTON

Puts Overgaard in Nomination as Editor

At a meeting of Lodge 390, I. A. of M., Tuesday night, the Johnston administration suffered heavy defeat when only one of its slate succeeded, by accident, in getting the nomination for vice-president. The vote was divided between the Anderson group and the left wing. The only ones found to defend the Johnston-Davidson outfit were renegade socialists and former anarchists. The records of the present administration were thoroly exposed as well as the banking ventures and other class collaboration schemes. The vote was as follows:

For international president—J. Anderson, 28; J. Emme, 7; Johnston, 8.

For secretary-treasurer—Geo. Stilgenbauer, 20; Tim Buck, 8; Davidson, 6.

For editor-journal—A. Overgaard, 17; Dave Williams, 11; Hewett, none.

The following were nominated for vice-presidents: Pete Jensen, A. McNamara, John Otis, J. Taylor, Wm. Ross Knudsen, Harvey Nickerson.

The following members of the left wing slate won the nomination of the local: A. Overgaard, Pete Jensen, McNamara, and John Otis. The rest of the nominees are members of the so-called Anderson slate, with the exception of H. Nickerson, who is an administration man and who, by the way, received the lowest vote of the nominees.

The reason that the left wing slate did not win in its entirety was because some of the progressives in the local, as well as everywhere else, do not seem to distinguish between the left wing and the fake progressive group led by Anderson-Hannon, and others. The desire, however, of the rank and file is to oust the entire present administration and the nominations will no doubt show a great influence among the membership in behalf of the constructive program of the left wing.

Ruthenberg Rushed to Prison in Custody of Berrien Sheriff

The case will then go to the supreme court of the United States.

Frank P. Walsh will present the appeal to the United States supreme court after Jan. 15. If it is at all possible for him to be in Washington on that date. The U. S. supreme court has not yet passed on the Michigan or any other state "criminal syndicalism" law. The case of Benjamin Gitlow was appealed to the U. S. supreme court and by a vote out of Sing Sing on ball, pending a decision by that body on the constitutionality of the New York law.

George H. Bookwalter, the new prosecutor of Berrien county, is raving in regular Attorney Crowe style, as a means of getting publicity in the local papers and making a name for himself with the 100 per cent reactionaries. "I would like to try the Communists all in one batch," Bookwalter said. However, it has already been ruled that they must be tried separately. The citizens of Berrien county are angry at the authorities for greatly increasing their taxes by prosecuting the Communists under the absurd syndicalist law for merely "assembling with" other Communists. Thirty members of the Workers (Communist) Party were arrested at Bridgeman while they were conducting their national convention in August, 1924.

Protests of local unions and labor bodies against the syndicalist law, which was a war-time act to prevent freedom of speech, are being passed in increasing numbers. The latest resolution protesting against the imprisonment of Ruthenberg, printed in full in another column, was passed by the Stone Cutters' Local of Omaha, Neb. The resolution condemns the act of the Michigan supreme court and supports the Labor Defense Council.

The Labor Defense Council has issued a call to all members of the Workers (Communist) Party and all fighting sections of the labor movement to rally to the defense of their class in this desperate offensive of capitalism against the Communist movement of America.

Unless a new date is set, Comrade Miner, writer and cartoonist for the DAILY WORKER, will have to appear for trial on Feb. 2.

Worker Slashes Throat.

An unidentified man is near death in the county hospital after two attempts at suicide. The man first threw himself in front of stree car at Madison and Paulina St. He was slightly injured, the motorman having jammed on the brakes. While the man, who was dressed in working clothes, was being taken to the hospital in a cab, he slashed his throat.

Let Workers Emulate in Their Battles Deeds of Liebknecht, Luxemburg

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the current issue of the Workers' Weekly, the official organ of our British Communist Party, arrives and interest immediately centers in a cartoon entitled "The Change."

It shows on the one hand the veteran fighter of the working class, J. Keir Hardie, who died on the eve of the world war, declaring, "CAPITALISM IS OUR ENEMY!"

And on the other hand there is pictured a motley crew labelled "The Mutual Admiration Society." It consists of the present-day labor leaders in Britain, such as MacDonald and Clynes, standing on the same platform with the anti-labor tory, Chamberlain, and a pot-bellied British bishop, all hysterical proclaiming, in chorus, "COMMUNISM IS OUR ENEMY."

* * * *

That is "The Change"—from Hardie's "Capitalism is our enemy," to MacDonald's "Communism is our enemy!"

This change, crystal clear in all capitalist nations, becomes the theme for the tremendous Communist demonstrations planned over the world on the anniversary of the martyrdom of Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg.

The assassination of Liebknecht and Luxemburg, under the regime of the German social-democrats, is the logical culmination of the war declared on militant labor by the class-collaborating reactionaries. Hundreds of thousands of working class fighters have been martyred by this fascisti-socialist alliance against the workers' social revolution.

* * * *

Keir Hardie and Jean Jaures opposed the oncoming capitalist war. Yet they did not live to raise the standards of revolution in France and Great Britain.

It was in Berlin, however, the seat of power of the kaiser and German capitalism, that Liebknecht and Luxemburg, with the overthrow of the kaiserdom, struggled for the creation of the German Soviet Republic.

First they were arrested and imprisoned, then brutally murdered under the Ebert-Scheidemann-Noske regime.

* * * *

The echoes of the revolver shots that ended the heroic lives of Liebknecht and Luxemburg, but emblazoned their names on the minds of the world's working class forever, are heard on this side of the Atlantic.

In the United States, as well as in Europe, the official regime of organized labor joins with capitalism in the cry, "Communism is our enemy!"

The U. S. labor officialdom joins the so-called "socialist" regime of Calles, that has come into power in Mexico, in declaring "Communism is our enemy!"

* * * *

Therefore the answer must come loud and clear, thruout this western world, from the masses of exploited workers and poor farmers,—COMMUNISM MAY BE THE ENEMY OF CAPITALISM, WITH ITS LABOR SOCIALIST REACTION ALLY; BUT FOR THAT VERY REASON COMMUNISM IS THE SALVATION OF THE WHOLE WORKING CLASS.

On this Sunday, Jan. 11th, let the toiling masses join in the many Communist demonstrations everywhere keeping alive, not only the memories of Liebknecht and Luxemburg, but hurling the challenge of aroused labor into the capitalist camp in this country.

Remember the deeds of Liebknecht and Luxemburg by emulating them in the struggle against American capitalism.

REVOLUTIONARY YOUTH OF WORLD IN TRIBUTE TO LIEBKNECHT, LUXEMBURG

The revolutionary youth of the world will pay tribute to two great working class leaders, Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg on January 11. It is now six years since these two comrades were foully murdered by the socialist henchmen of German capitalism. During these past six years the German working class has suffered untold hardships.

The Communist Party has endured oppression equal only to that of the Russian revolutionaries under the czar. This persecution and imprisonment has taken place under the directions of the social-democratic party of Germany whose latest act of treachery against the working masses is their support and defense of the Dawes plan, which is commonly known as the "slave pact' of American imperialism.

The Young Communist International calls upon the entire working class youth of the world to rally around the red banner of the Communist Youth Leagues in each country.

In America, the Young Workers League with the support of the party are holding large meetings and demonstrations in many cities and towns. A few of the most important meetings which have been sent in are as follows:

Chicago, Ill.—Northwest Hall, Jan. 11, 8 p. m. Speakers: Max Shachtman, Alexander Bittelman and Peter Herd.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Eagle Temple, Broad and Spring Garden, Jan. 10, 8 p. m. Speakers: Oliver Carlson, L. Lore and H. Wicks.

Detroit, Mich.—Jan. 11, 2 p. m. Speakers: John Williamson and others.

Cleveland, O.—Jaites Hall, 6006 St. Clair St., Jan. 11, 8 p. m. Speakers: Oliver Carlson and Nat Kaplan.

New York, N. Y.—Star Casino, Jan. 11, 2 p. m. Speakers: League and party members.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Jan. 11. Speaker: John Edwards.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Jan. 11, 8 p. m. Speakers: Max Salzman and others.

South Bend, Ind.—Jan. 11, 2:30 p. m., 1216 W. Colfax Ave. Speakers: Harry Gannes and others.

Gardner, Mass.—Casino Hall, 65 Main St., Jan. 11, 8 p. m. Speakers: Sid Bloomfield and others.

Erie, Pa.—Jan. 11, 8 p. m. Party and league speakers.

Providence, R. I.—Jan. 11, 8 p. m. Speakers: William Simons and others.

Hibbing, Minn.—Jan. 11, 8 p. m. Party speaker.

Other meetings have been arranged but the time and locations have not yet been received by the national office.

All readers of the DAILY WORKER should attend these meetings and bring their shopmates.

RUTH FISCHER TO BE DEPORTED IN BRITISH ANTI-SOVIET CAMPAIGN

(Special to The Daily Worker)

VIENNA, Jan. 7.— Ruth Fischer, leading memer of the German Communist party, who was arrested Saturday morning, has been sentenced to a fine of 120,000 crowns and deportation from Austria, according to news reports. Comrade Fischer was arrested on a charge of crossing the Austrian frontier on a false passport and of registering under a fictitious name. Comrade Fischer is a native of Austria.

The arest was made following British propaganda against the Communists and Soviet Russia, which is being conducted thruout Europe and especially the Balkan states. The British imperialists fear the growing Communist strength in these countries and are taking extreme steps in an effort to stem the tide that has set in, in favor of the Soviet form of government.

POSTAL WORKER FIRED FOR HIS UNION ACTIVITY

Demand for Wage Raise Called Disloyal

By MARTIN A. DILLMON.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 7.—"If it is a crime to agitate for a living wage; I'm guilty," said Theodore H. Kaiser, a railway mail clerk, when advised of his removal from the service for alleged "disloyalty and antagonism to the postoffice department." Kaiser is chairman of the Allied Postal Legislative committee, a federated body of postal employes in charge of activity in behalf of the postal wage bill.

Headed Union Committee.

Kaiser headed a committee, which has done much effective work in behalf of a postal wage raise. Nowhere in the country are the postal workers more active than in St. Louis. The federated committee has made visits to labor organizations which resulted in telegrams and other communications pouring to Missouri senators urging them to vote to override Coolidge's veto of the wage bill. Other local postoffice workers identified with this effective agitation will not be surprised if the ax falls on their necks too.

23 Years in Service.

Kaiser has been in the mail service for 23 years, during which time he often has demonstrated the extent of his "disloyalty and antagonism" by working for almost unbelievable periods during emergencies without rest. The Christmas mail rush fell heavily upon employes in the St. Louis division this year, and Kaiser, the alleged "disloyal" employe, was off duty only 15 hours in one 134-hour stretch.

Expelled "Left Wing" Carpenters Still in the Union

been so hot that the members forced the local president to resign. He kept away from the meetings until last night and he became the center of a barrage of questions, in his confusion he let the cat out of the bag.

President Admits Following Hutcheson Instructions.

"How could you, as president, inflict punishment on any one without hearing the report of the trial committee?" was the question. "Well you see I had instructions from the general president," was the answer, and there we have it. Hutcheson ordered their expulsion and his forces are out to try to appease the membership. Three of the trial committee have signed a statement that there was no trial and the report finally given was a false one.

Here we have members expelled appealing to Hutcheson to reverse a decision that he was responsible for framing. He has had the appeal for ten days and has not yet answered it. Not an appeal against a decision of a trial committee, but an appeal asking Hutcheson to enforce the constitution. President Hutcheson is in Chicago and the membership of local 181 expressed a keen desire to have him appear before the local.

Basis of Trouble "Open Shop" Agreements.

The basis of the trouble was the signing of the "open shop" agreement, that also came in for quite an uncomplimentary discussion in local 181. The painters and paper hangers are now receiving $1.50 per hour while the carpenters are only receiving $1.25 per hour. And Hutcheson is here to see if he cannot get the contractors to raise the carpenters to the higher level. This they have refused to do.

A Bosses' Agreement.

The agreement is very specific, it is a one sided agreement, it is a bosses' agreement. The carpenters cannot strike. They cannot receive any wage increase unless the bosses agree to it. They cannot even submit it to an umpire. If any individual carpenters is caught getting more than $1.25 per hour he can be expelled from the organization and cannot be re-instated without the bosses consent.

Oh yes, it is a fine agreement, for the boss. The carpenters struck against the Landis award, they put up a splendid and winning fight, only to find themselves tied up with a Landis award agreement. The exposure of this scab agreement was the reason why the five members of local 181 were expelled. MEMBERS OF THE CARPENTERS UNION THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY DEMAND THE REINSTATEMENT OF THE EXPELLED MEMBERS OF CHICAGO AND LOS ANGELES.

BOSSES IN BIG CAMPAIGN ON U. S. CHILDREN

Only One State Has Yet Ratified Proposal

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—The capitalist class and their agents are making the most formidable drive to defeat the ratification of the child labor amendment ever organized by the exploiting classes in America.

During the present month 40 different legislatures will act on the proposed amendment to the constitution, which would give congress power to limit, regulate and prohibit the labor of persons under eighteen years of age.

One State Ratified.

So far only one state, Arkansas, has ratified the amendment. Three states Georgia, Louisiana, and North Carolina have turned it down.

Among the powerful organizations that desire to see the blood of America's youth congealed into gold for the use of our parasite class is the Roman catholic church. Thru Cardinal O'Connell that politico-religious corporation waged a bitter campaign in the recent elections against child labor, declaring the law to be against the interests of religion. As the interests of organized religion and those of big capital are identical it is not surprising that the cardinal had to dig thru the bible in order to find theoretical justification for his attitude.

Defending Big Biz.

All the big business institutions and the voluntary stoolpigeons such as the American defense society, the sentinels of the republic, the constitutional league and others of the same stripe pretend to look on the harmless amendment as a most dangerous and pernicious interference with the rights of the capitalists.

The American farm bureau sees in it an interference with the "healthful activities of the farm boys and girls."

The American Federation of Labor is as usual making a bluff at fighting for the amendment. But outside of an occasional milk and water statement from headquarters nothing is done.

Stop Women's Night Work.

PASSIAC, N. J.—Night work for New Jersey women was outlawed from Jan. 1, between the hours of 10 p. m. and 6 a. m. as the no-night-work-for-women law went into effect. Many textile plants are affected. The law was passed by the 1923 legislature.

More Textile Wage Cuts.

WHITINSVILLE, Mass.—Over 750 textile workers received notice that 10 and 12 per cent wage cuts were coming in the Linwood and Saundersville cotton mills owned by Arthur F. Whitin.

WHISPERED SCANDAL AGAINST POSTAL CLERKS' UNION ADMITTED FALSE BY THE ADMINISTRATION

By LAURENCE TODD
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—By open confession of the administration itself, the scandal which was whispered about the senate and house in mid-December, to the effect that officers of one of the unions of postoffice employes had bribed a senate committee employe for $10,000 to help them pass the salary-increase bill over the Coolidge veto, was false. The men who have been dismissed or suspended for alleged complicity in the deal were all bosses, who have been uniformly hostile to the postal employes' union. When it is remembered that this scandalous attack on the unions was put in circulation by a senator who received his information from the president himself, the quality of the Coolidge method in dealing with wage questions may be understood.

Flaherty Make Protest

When the names and positions of the alleged parties to the transaction with the senate committee employe, McDermot, were disclosed, a formal protest against the false impression created by the whispered scandal was made by Thos. F. Flaherty, secretary of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks; Edw. J. Gainor, president of the National Association of Letter Carriers, Wm. M. Collins, president of the Railway Mail Association, and Victor H. Stonesifer, representing the National League of Dist. Postmasters.

"The organization involved," they said, "the National Association of Supervisory Employes, is composed exclusively of the supervisory officials in first and second class offices. The subordinate clerks, carriers and other postoffice workers are not eligible for membership in this organization. These subordinate groups have separate organizations of their own, none of which are involved in these charges.

"In private industry these supervisory officials would be classed as employers or with the managerial or boss group."

Cal Using The Pork

Seventy-three senators voted for the wage bill last May. The votes or pairs of 64 are needed to re-pass the bill over the veto. Coolidge is working upon many of the 73, to get them to change their votes. Patronage has always been effective in fights of this kind. The White House has a long list of profitable jobs to award to outgoing senators who see the Coolidge light, or to friends of senators who remain in office and are tractable. Comparison of the original roll-call with the one about to be taken will indicate how far the light has penetrated.

Add to Government Lunchrooms.

MOSCOW.—The government eating houses, established a year and a half ago by several departments to bring cheap, well-cooked meals to the workers, have now a chain of 170 restaurants in general city buildings and 800 special factory restaurants. They expect to open 800 more in 1925 in the chief industrial regions.

LOW WAGES AT NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY CAUSE OF DEATH OF TWO CHILDREN

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Catherine Murphy, 11, was preparing lunch for Francis, 9, and Walter, 7, while her father Michael Murphy and her stepmother were away at work. Catherine turned on the gas under the pan and forgot to light it. A woman tenant on the same floor smelled gas and came in just as Mrs. Murphy returned at 5 p. m. to find the three children dead. They had come down from Gloversville, N. Y., to visit their parents over the holidays.

Mrs. Murphy works at the National Biscuit Co. for low wages to help out her husband and the children were kept by Dominican Sisters and relatives.

A 12-Page Issue

On the First Birthday of the DAILY WORKER.

THE issue of January 13 will be heaped full of facts and features—all gaily attired with cartoons to best celebrate the very first birthday of the DAILY WORKER.

Comrade Bob Minor's splendid cartoons will be a leading feature. A review of the past year of American labor in general and the Workers Party in particular—plus the part the DAILY WORKER has played in both—will be another feature.

Special contributions by Wm. Z. Foster, Wm. F. Dunne, J. Louis Engdahl, T. J. O'Flaherty, Manuel Gomez and others among the best writers in the labor movement will add their share to the first birthday celebration.

Give this issue to a worker and you assure the DAILY WORKER a new reader—and your branch of the party a new member.

WESTERN PACIFIC RAIL MEN WANT RAISE IN LINE WITH S. P. BOOST

SAN FRANCISCO.—Following the 5 per cent wage raise secured by locomotive engineers and firemen on the Southern Pacific railroad, employes of the Western Pacific are demanding the same raise. Representatives of the railroad and of the two brotherhoods are discussing the question.

LENINGRAD ONCE MORE FLOODED BY GREAT STORM

Kronstadt Guns Warn of Rising Waters

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LENINGRAD, Jan. 7.—The second great flood in the last few months is at its peak and the storm still rages over a countryside made desolate, while the warning of danger from the rising waters was given thruout the night by the ominous booming of the Kronstadt fortress guns.

Damage, it was estimated today, totalled $3,000,000.

Kronstadt Guns Arouse Sleepers.

Roads flooded and other communication interrupted, the only way in which officials could warn the populace of the rapidly rising waters was by means of the Kronstadt guns.

Actors were called upon to play a strange real life role. Flood waters swirled around the Marynsky Theater during a performance. The actors were on the stage when officials announced that the audience must be dismissed. Still in their make-up, the actors joined with firemen in rescuing their scenery and "props."

A cemetery was inundated and many graves and mausoleums were washed away.

Lives Lost at Peterhof.

At Peterhof the palaces and parks were flooded and several fishermen lost their lives.

At various places in the country side, the water is eleven feet deep on what hitherto was dry land. Telegraph poles were carried away by the rushing of the water.

Senator Wheeler To Get His "Day in Court" on Feb. 15

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. — Senator Wheeler, now returning from a trip to Panama, has been notified that Federal Judge Dietrich of Idaho has been assigned to deal with the frame-up indictment returned against him last spring by a federal grand jury at Great Falls, Mont. This grand jury will report on Feb. 15 to Judge Dietrich, who will then hear argument of counsel on Wheeler's demurrer, and will determine whether the case shall go to trial.

Getting Back to Gold Standard.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—Negotiations looking to the re-establishment of the gold standard for British currency and bringing the pound sterling back to par have been started in New York by Sir Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, according to official information received by the government today.

GRAND JURY FINDS CONDITIONS IN FRISCO CHILDREN'S HOME BAD

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7.—A committee from the grand jury suddenly paid a surprise visit to the San Francisco children's detention home, and found that it compared unfavorably with many prisons. The building has not been painted inside for eight years, is practically without heat, the roofs leak badly, and the unfortunate children have to sleep in broken beds, without ordinary comfort or conveniences. The board of public works blames the board of supervisors for these conditions, which would never have been revealed had not the grand jury decided to investigate.

COAL BARONS AND FAKERS WAR ON PROGRESSIVES

Use Capitalist Press Against Militants

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MARTIN'S FERRY, Ohio, Jan. 7.—The fakers in control of the Miners' Union in eastern Ohio, exasperated at the fight put up by the radicals in the recent elections have availed themselves of the hospitality of the capitalist press in order to strike back at the progressive elements in the union.

The progressives who are trying to take the union out of the hands of the burglars who now use it to further their own personal aims are referred to by the reactionaries as "disgruntled" and "subversive" elements.

Fakers Break Laws.

The fakers know that the radicals are not violating the laws of the union. This is being done by the reactionaries who trample on any law that does not suit them. The following article, taken from the Martin's Ferry Times, shows to what desperate straits the Lewis henchmen are driven:

"Circular letters giving the standing of the sub-district officers of the United Mine Workers in the recent election in which unfair and unpopular tactics are alleged to have been used by some of the officials were mailed today to all locals.

Fear Next Convention.

"Prior to the election the administration was aware of the fact that circular letters had been sent out denouncing the officials and praising opponents, but these were disregarded. With the elections now over, sub-district officers have issued a circular appealing to the rank and file to assist in making what is described as the discruntled element of the organization adhere to the principles of the organization.

"President Ledvinka terms certain plans advocated by opponents as a 'poison' seeping into the arteries of the organization.' This has increased till its greatest proportions and as a result of the situation, combined with the fact that many of the defeated candidates appear to be hard losers, the flames that have been kindled will likely burst forth when the coming convention is held."

BETTER ALL RAIL SERVICE ON RUSSO-CHINESE ROAD

Plan Daily Trains on Siberian Line

By Rosta News.

HARBIN.—According to reliable information, the management of the Chinese Eastern Railway has taken up a scheme of direct passenger communication between Harbin and Moscow. Accordingly, it is proposed to add to the direct passenger trains some cars for travelling without changing from Moscow to Vladivostok and from Moscow to Chanzohun.

An approximate estimate of the prospective financial results of this new measure planned by the C. E. R. promises large incomes. This estimate has been arrived at on the following basis: There are actually about 10,000 passengers leaving monthly for Europe from far Eastern ports and paying about six million rubles monthly for their voyages to different shipping companies. Now, by going by rail travellers will not only save time, but also make substantial money economies.

The latest statistical data tend to show that the number of travellers between Europe and the far East has considerably increased as compared with the pre-war period.

Under such conditions, it is reasonably believed that it will soon be possible to run direct trains on the Siberian line daily instead of one week-ly train as at present. However, even if for some time yet only one pair of trains a week be run directly between Harbin and Moscow, the revenue of the C. E. R. will be increased by 300,000 or 400,000 rubles, besides a considerable increase in the revenue of the railway network in the U. S. S. R.

BRITISH LABOR DAILY SAYS GOMPERS WAS A "PILLAR OF CAPITALISM" AGAINST CHANGE

(By The Federated Press)

LONDON, Jan. 7.—Samuel Gompers was a pillar of capitalism, declares The Daily Herald, organ of the British labor movement, in attempting to explain to its worker-readers how the late American Federation of Labor chieftain could at the same time be a labor leader and a bitter foe of socialism.

"Many minds," comments The Daily Herald, "belonging to people not very closely acquainted with the American scene, must have been puzzled by the statement that the late Mr. Samuel Gompers, so long America's labor dictator, was a vehement opponent of socialism.

"Labor and socialism have now become in European countries two words meaning the same thing. In the United States they mean very different things. A socialist there is regarded as a dangerous firebrand. Most Americans find it impossible to understand how anyone can wish to alter the system which has made Mr. Ford and Mr. Rockefeller and about two dozen others 'the richest men in the world,' and which enables large numbers of skilled workers to own motor cars.

"Labor leaders of the Gompers type are, on the contrary, made much of. Most Americans sympathize with the demand of the workers for a decent life. If someone else will arrange for them to have a decent life, most Americans say they will be delighted, and they are quite honest in this. The only stipulation they make is that their own business must not be interfered with.

"As Mr. Gompers and his like worked hard to prevent business being interfered with and set their faces against all ideas of change, they are regarded as pillars of the capitlist system. That is, indeed, exactly what they are.

"Not that ye complain of this, or even claim any right to criticize. Conditions in their country have been different from conditions in Europe. Every year, however, the similarity of their problem to ours becomes more noticable. This will change the character of their labor movement and its leaders, as ours have been changed during the past 25 years.

"It has been changed by pressure of events. Twenty-five years ago the breakdown of capitalism was not evident, as it is today. It began to be evident as soon as the workers became aware that capitalism could only flourish upon a foundation of wage slavery. When they demanded their fair share in the treasure of life, capitalism was compelled to reply: You cannot have it. To pay you decently would bust the show.

"Upon which it grew clear that the thing to work for was a change of system. Thus labor and socialism came to mean the same thing. Of course, it is necessary to get the best terms possible out of capitalism, but that is not, as it is in America, the be-all and end-all of labor in Europe. In America, capitalism can pay a small number of workers a decent living wage; they support it, without considering the vast number of workers who are wage slaves. When the latter use their power, American labor will follow European labor. Not till then."

Hooper Would Keep Fat Job on Anti-Union Labor Board

Ben B. Hooper, chairman of the railroad labor board, has issued another squawk against the Barkley bill, which would abolish the U. S. railroad labor board and cost Hooper his job. Hooper condemned the Barkley bill in a letter to Representative Everett Sanders of Indiana, chief opponent of the bill. He opposed it on the grounds that it would be too favorable to the railroad employes.

The railroad labor board, formed under the transportation act, has a continuous record for making decisions favorable to the railroad companies. Whenever a decision is rendered by the board which increases wages, the overtime pay is cut out, as in the recent decision of the board relative to the engineers and firemen on western carriers.

The chief merit of the Barkley bill is that it would eliminate the power of the labor board.

AMSTERDAMERS WILL CONSIDER WORLD CONGRESS

Meet on February 5th on Russian Proposal

At the meeting of the executive of the International Federation of Trade Unions (the Amsterdam International), the following letter was adopted to be sent in reply to the All-Russian Council of Trade Unions upon the question of affiliation of the Russian unions to the Amsterdam International:

"The executive committee of the I. F. T. U. discussed at its meeting of December 1, your letter of October 23. tober 23.

"We gather from your letter of July 26, and also from this last letter that you do not appear willing to affiliate with the I. F. T. U. on the basis of its rules and resolutions. Instead of doing so, you propose the convening of a joint general congress, a world labor congress, to which would be invited not only the organizations affiliated with the I. F. T. U. and the R. I. L. U., but all other organizations outside these internationals which recognize the principle of class war.

"We have already called your attention in our letter of September 11, to the fact that the Vienna congress gave us definite directions for the opening of negotiations on the question of the affiliation of the Russian trade unions to the I. F. T. U.

"It is for our general council, which together with the executive committee, constitute the two bodies competent to interpret and execute the decisions of our international congresses, to consider and define its attitude regarding your new proposal for the 'convening of a world labor congress.'

"The date fixed for the meeting of our general council is February 5, 1925."

GERMANY DENIES ALLIED CHARGES AS "POOR LIES"

Appeals to U. S. Interests Against Allies

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Jan. 7.—A storm of protest has been aroused in the German press by the allied note "explaining" the delay in the evacuation of Cologne.

The ambassador's note assured the allies hold proof that Germany had not lived up to the Versailles treaty, but had continued the manufacture of war materials and the storage of arms and munitions in quantities far above those permitted by the treaty.

Social Democrats Continue Humble

The only exception to the general protests was the socialist Vorwaerts, which said:

"Compliance with allied criticism and redressing of their grievances, if justified, is the only way towards evacuation."

The nationalist press, on the other hand, assails the government's "weakness" and urges an immediate reply, charging the allies with flagrant violation of the Versailles treaty. They point out that Germany's silence may be taken for the reticence of a guilty conscience.

Appeals to American Imperialism

The "Lokal Anzeiger" characterizes the allied note as "a poor lie covering a cowardly fraud. What says America to this infamous violation?"

"Tageblatt" calls the note a "cheap pretext."

"Germania," the organ of Chancellor Marx, says it "reveals a policy of brutal force."

Germany sent a note to the allied powers today in which it protests the failure of the allies to withdraw troops from the Cologne district. Charges contained in the note of the allies to Germany were emphatically denied.

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

MARXISM OR PSEUDO-MARXISM?

Notes on the "Marxian Trunk" and, Primarily, on the Marxian Root of Our Party.

By MOISSAYE J. OLGIN.

"We are the Marxists of the party," says the minority. "We are its Marxian trunk."

It is easy to confess Marxism. But Marxism is not a confession of faith. Marxism is even more than a set of doctrines. Marxism is the only scientific method of investigating social matters. To be a Marxist means, not only to have read "Das Kapital" and a few other books, but to be able to apply the Marxian analysis to living and therefore continually changing social conditions. He who knows how to apply this analysis correctly, and whose correctness of analysis has been proven by subsequent events, is a true Marxist. He who only mimicks the methods of Marxism, he whose conclusions are being repudiated by the course of events, is a pseudo-Marxist.

This little essay wishes to suggest that the leader of the minority, John Pepper, is a pseudo-Marxist.

We have chosen John Pepper because it an open secret that he is still the moving spirit of the minority group. If the minority calls itself the Marxian trunk, then John Pepper is certainly the main Marxian root. If the root is hollow, then there is something the matter with the trunk.

How did John Pepper apply the Marxian analysis to conditions in the United States? It must be remarked that the application of Marxism to history in the making, is Leninism. "If we wish, comrades, to define what is Leninism," said N. K. Krouptskaya, the widow of the late Lenin, in an address before the teachers of Leninism mobilised to instruct the "Lenin Enrollment," "we must say that it is Marxism applied to contemporary realities." How, then, did John Pepper practice Leninism in this country?

Let us take only one or two instances. At the Chicago convention of July 3-5, 1923, the federated farmer-labor party was proclaimed as existing. Was it a real party? Did it have a solid foundation? Was it a logical outcome of ripening conditions among the working masses?

Subsequent events have proven that it had no solid foundation, that it was an artificial contrivance. A year after July 3-5, the F. L. P. was thoroly forgotten. Six months after its coming into nominal being, it was hardly more than a name and a stench. This proves beyond dispute that it was a still-born organization. What was the duty of a Marxist after the formation of that so-called party? Plainly, it was incumbent upon him to give an adequate estimation of what had happened, to analyze the forces that were operating around the party, to have a realistic understanding of the new organization, and thus to indicate a correct attitude for the Workers (Communist) Party.

Did John Pepper make such an analysis? True, he used all the phraseology of Marxism. But this is what he found:

"Summed up in a single phrase, the historic significance of the July 3 convention is this: The first real mass party of American workers and farmers has been founded in Chicago."

"The new F. L. P. is a mass party. It is the first mass party of workers and farmers in the United States."

"The new F. L. P. is no artificial product of a mass doctrine, but is the result of a special American development."

"It is a party of rank and file."

This is how John Pepper estimated the new organization. That his estimation was entirely erroneous, entirely unbridled, i. e. entirely non-Marxian, is evident from the total disappearance of the F. F. L. P. from its non-existing at the present time. A "real party," a "mass party," a "result of a special American development," a "party of rank and file" cannot disappear entirely in four months. Plainly, John Pepper gave an expression of his ardent wish, not of the actualities of American political life. Plainly he did something entirely opposed to Marxism.

But maybe he only made propaganda among the membership of the Workers Party? Maybe he personally knew the truth about the F. F. L. P. Maybe he wrote as he did only to fire the imagination of the Communists in this country in order that they might devote themselves the more diligently to the building of the new party? If this were the case, it would be worse than the grossest error of estimation, because nothing is more injurious to the cause of Communism than misleading the workers as to the character of the organization they have to deal with.

However, it appears that John Pepper actually believed the F. F. L. P. to be "a real mass party of American workers and farmers." This is evident from the fact that he broad casted his findings all over the C. I. thru the medium of the International Press Correspondence (Inprecor, July 26, 1923, article by John Pepper "The First Party of American Workers and Farmers,") Pepper thus proved that he either failed to understand America, or he failed to understand what is a real mass party. At any rate he proved to be less of a Marxist and more of the type that Lenin admonished in the following words:

"Less political clatter. Less intellectual reasoning. Nearer to life." (Article "On the character of our papers.")

John Pepper not only made the mistake of heralding the lifeless organization as the mass party of American workers and farmers, but he persisted in his mistake. For months in succession, even as late as March, 1924, when the F. F. L. P. was no more than a shadow, he continued to view the future leadership of the Workers Party in the class struggle as based on the non-existant F. F. L. P. Thus strong is the influence of John Pepper's mistakes on the present minority of our C. E. C., that its latest thesis still invokes the ghost of the F. F. L. P. and it still asserts that the Workers Party could have made the F. F. L. P. a living thing if it wished (Comintern, Strange exception of Marxists. A small party, numbering a score of thousand members, could have created a greater party numbering at least hundreds of thousands! And vice versa: A mass party, "a real mass party of workers and farmers" springing from "spontaneous political development," ceased to exist because a small party, avowedly not a mass party, failed to send out a few organizers and speakers to help it. If this be a Marxian conception, what, then, is the voluntaristic conception which the Communist International has Marx-Lenin, and how far is it from the theory of "heores and masses?"

But let us return to John Pepper. John Pepper knew very well that it is the duty of the Communists to lead the workers. He knew it as a doctrine. He also realized that it is necessary for the American Communists to lead the American workers. Out of this theoretical realization sprang his conviction that the Workers Party is already leading the working masses. In numbers of articles and theses he stressed the idea that America had reached a stage where the workers were just looking for the Communists to lead them. This may seem preposterous after the experiences of June 17, July 4 and the election campaign of 1924, but this is what John Pepper told the Communist International in an article, "The Workers Party at a Turning Point" (Inprecor, Sept, 27, 1923.):

"The laboring masses of the U. S. consider the Communists as their leaders, and they expect us to show them the best ways and means of fighting against the capitalists and the capitalist government."

When a Communist makes such statements before the Communist International they can have only one meaning: that the popularity of the Communists and their party is widespread among the non-partisan workers, that the non-partisan workers have gropingly come to the realization of the necessity of combatting the capitalist government, and that it is up to the Communists to throw out slogans and take the lead. Tested by the situation of September, 1923, and by subsequent developments, such statements appear to be a bombastic phrase. It is against such statements that Stalin warns in his book "On Lenin and Leninism."

"As against 'revolutionary' empty clangor," he writes, "Lenin emphasized the simple everyday affairs, thus making it clear that 'revolutionary' fiction was contrary both to the spirit and the letter of true Leninism. 'Less luxurious phrases, says Lenin, more simple everyday work . . . Less political clatter, more attention to the simplest but living facts of Communist constructive work' (Article 'Great Beginning')."

But how is it that John Pepper could make such elementary errors in Marxian judgment? It is because his entire conception of American life was as he wished to see it and not as it appeared in reality. What John Pepper, the supposed Marxist, the man that still holds the C. E. C. minority under his sway, lived in a world of illusions.

Wherein lies the strength of Marxism? In its adherence to reality of social life, in its ability to analyze the social facts of social life and thus the law of their development, so as to be able to forecast the main lines of the future. "Theory does not form an independent kingdom," says the Russian Marxian philosopher, Debor in, in his book, "Lenin as a Thinker." "Its point of view of practice. Practice is objective truth. We should not confine ourselves to objects that exist in our heads, Marx taught us, but we must deal with concrete objects."

The following quotation should suffice to prove that John Pepper confined himself to "objects that existed in his head" and that those objects he proclaimed to be the reality of American life. In his article "Facing the Third American Revolution" (in the Liberator of September, 1923) he speaks of the revolution as having become a stirring fact in the United States: "Never before in the world's history," he writes, "not even in capitalist history, has it happened that such immense migrations, such deep changes in the manner of living of such great masses of people took take place in the short period of three years . . . It was a gigantic task to stir up the non-political conservative mass of American workers, farmers and colored slaves; but capitalism has succeeded in performing this miracle. Politics today has become a mass occupation. The basis of American conservative democracy was the inert mass of farmers. This basis is now collapsing. The last sure reverse of capitalism in America was the eight million Negroes in the south. This last reserve is in the act of deserting it . . . The workers are beginning to organize politically. The bankrupt farmers are overthrowing the most sacred fundamental law of capitalism, cash payments, and do not pay their debts. The Negroes in the south are making an unarmed Spartacus uprising."

Does it not look like a veritable revolution? Indeed it does. So it was understood by John Pepper himself who in the October, 1923, Liberator, in an article "Shall we Assume Leadership?" speaks of the "more and more imminent revolutionary crisis looming up." An imminent revolutionary crisis is understood in the Communist International in one way only; it means what the words imply: a great upheaval of large masses against the foundations of capitalism.

Now, we know that the minority will label an attack on such misleading declaration as "non-revolutionary,' as failure to see the deep changes wrought in American life by the war, as living in the pre-war mentality. To this we beg to reply that if there are in our party some members who are no changes in capitalism since 1914 and who do not realize the inevitable collapse of the capitalist system (such people represent the remnants of the S. P. psychology in our party), this does not justify blundering in the opposite direction. One is just as bad as the other. Neither is real Leninism.

"Vladimir Ilyitch," says Kamanev, "may be called the profoundest realist, the man of the soil, i.e. a man who always knows how to reckon with real life, who knows how to combine with practice, who is always with the modes of realizing it in life, who combines the greatest revolutionary passion with the greatest coolness in estimating the forces of the fighting parties and classes" ("Lenin and His Party," p. 35.)

If this is Leninism, then what are Pepper's declarations? The generous reader may try and excuse him on the ground that even a Leninist may sometimes be mistaken. This is true But John Pepper was too often mistaken, he was too deeply mistaken and he never acknowledged mistakes which is again contrary to true Leninism. The above article, "Facing the Third American Revolution," which in America appeared in September, and was written in August, 1923, was in its main parts reprinted by Pepper in the Moscow "Pravda" at the time when the fifth Congress of the C. I. was in session, that is to say, in June, 1924, ten months after its first appearance. In the summer of 1924 John Pepper still saw the imminent revolution which he saw in the summer of 1923. Nothing had changed for Pepper. In spite of the fact that the general slogan of American socio-political life he added in the "Pravda" the following paragraph:

"And last but not least, for the first time in the history of the United States there appears on the scene a Communist Party, which has its roots in the masses and is not a sect, A MASS COMMUNIST PARTY OF THE WORKING CLASS."

He did not know we had already a mass Communist Party. He must be grateful to John Pepper for discovering it.

But while all these statements, only show how Marxian analysis should not be made, the last one throws a strange light on the slogan of a "class farmer-labor party" appearing in the minority thesis. If our goal of a mass Communist Party has already been achieved, why not utilize part of our spare energy to build a new "class farmer-labor party."

A Word for the Majority Thesis from the West

By ELLA REEVE BLOOR.

Just a word for the majority thesis. Have been so busy, in California, helping in an organizational way, to create a "united front" of workers on the problem of unemployment, which is assuming huge proportions here, that I have only now a free moment to state a few practical reasons for supporting the majority thesis.

1. There is no national farmer-labor party in America, therefore, we cannot "back it up," or "permeate" something that does not exist.

2. We are creating a Communist Party, and should not confuse our efforts by also "creating" a farmer-labor party.

3. The slogan "For a Workers' and Farmers' Government" used by our party everywhere during our campaigns, and in our educational work, attracted the farmers and workers and also emphasized the fundamental principles of a united front class party of farmers and workers.

When the farmer-labor party, socialist party, etc., deserted the class party at Cleveland, it happened that I was serving as state secretary of the "united front"—independent labor party of Colorado. This party had called a state convention to nominate state candidates and had endorsed MacDonald and Bob La Follette. When, some of the endorsement of La Follette, and the action of the Workers Party in nominating Foster and Gitlow, a special "called" meeting was held, the matter fairly put before the membership, and an unqualified endorsement was given to the national Workers' Party candidates. Two weeks later the entire socialist party (with but one exception) joined the Workers Party; and later, all but two of the members of other organizations joined the Workers Party. A full ticket for governor, U. S. senator, two seats in congress and members of state senate legislature, was filed and a vigorous campaign was carried on, under the slogans "Vote Communist" and "For a Workers' and Farmers' Government."

During the strenuous campaign waged in the middle west, it was my good fortune to work in forty different towns and cities, viz. Milwaukee, Detroit, Chicago, Gary, St. Louis, south ern Illinois mine districts, etc. Many miners had "LaFollette clubs," it is true, but the "Progressive Miners' also functioned, and I found by practical experience that no camouflage was necessary to hold the interest and respect of the workers for our slogan and our straight, revolutionary class party. In fact, in places like Wilmington, where the socialists so grossly betrayed the workers, we held hundreds of workers in front of shops like International Harvesters and Allis Chalmers Co., at noon time, rallying around our banners with Foster and Gitlow's large pictures, the slogans "Vote Communist" and "For a Workers' and Farmers' Government"—and they did this right in front of their bosses, and shop stool-pigeons—and the LaFollette socialists couldn't hold their interest at all. That's the reason the socialist government of Milwaukee broke up two wonderful Workers Party meetings and arrested me and took me to their "socialist" city hall for "investigation."

The majority thesis urges the slogan, and the principle of working for a "united front" on working class emergencies now confronting us—unemployment, child labor, etc. The majority thesis also calls for "Communist Organizational Education" among farmers and the establishment of a Farmers' press. This is one of the most vital parts of the thesis. Organizers among farmers MUST understand the farmers' problems. In other words, they SHOULD be farmers. We would not, if sane, in our party work send a farmer to organize and educate union men and women; and a party paper for farmers must not repeat our former mistake of publishing dry theses, etc., for men who have pressing class problems of a different nature. So instead of working merely for a slogan, I would suggest, that both the minority and the majority push harder for a real farmers press as formulated in the majority thesis

We do not need to speculate about the action of the Communist Party in the future. If the farmers and workers SHOULD desire a class farmer-labor party of their own, there is no doubt that Communist tactics will still be used by us, and that the Communist party will adapt itself to new demands of workers and farmers.

LEFT WING OF AUSTRALIAN LABOR MOVEMENT ORGANIZES FOR ACTION

SYDNEY, Australia, Jan. 7.—The left wing movement of Australian workers held a conference at Sydney to unite all radical working class groups. An organization was set up and an executive appointed.

Militant demands for workers were decided upon. These include a minimum wage of $30 per week, and a 6-hour day of five days, and reinstatement of all workers victimized as the result of strikes. The conference demanded the latest scientific devices in the mining industry, and the right of trade union officials to access to all jobs. The conference also supports the claims by the coal miners for shorter hours and increased pay.

Majority at Work in Minnesota— Or LaFollette Communists in Action

By JACK BRADON.

THE majority tells us that the farmer-labor party has been tried and failed. How could it be otherwise in face of the countless unforgivable mistakes that were made? The greatest mistake was the illusion that, at one sweep an all-inclusive party could be created at this early stage of revolutionary development in this country. It will quite readily be admitted by anyone informed on the matter a Calvin Coolidge after his administration's corruptness had been so clearly shown?

Does not this show the backwardness of the American proletariat? Is it not clear now, that our temporary goal should have been and should be today, that slogan fitting to the labor slogan that party disillusioned a portion of the proletariat, so that from this element we could not only build our mass Communist Party by selecting the best of them for our ranks, but also utilize such a farmer-labor party as a weapon against the LaFollettes, whom the majority proposes that we let alone.

Majority's LaFollette Communism in Practice.

Another mistake, a non-Communist mistake was our united front from the top. The majority talks much about the "bottom." But what are its acts? Minnesota offers a unique illustration of the majority's concept of a united front from the bottom. Here in Minnesota, the so much "bragged" about united front really consisted of the Workers (Communist) Party, its original sympathizers and followers and a few labor misleaders. This is proven conclusively by the fact that when we broke with Mahoney, Cramer, et. al., as every good Communist knew we would have to break, the bottom fell out of the united front.

Who will deny, that during the so-called maneuvers here in Minnesota, not a move was made by the district party rulers without consulting those labor fakers? The party here did not own its own soul. To breathe even, it had to have the permission of these fakers. Last March, the writer protested vigorously against the tactics of subordinating the party to the whim of these labor fakers. At the time when the eyes of the workers and farmers were focused upon our party, was the time we praised and strengthened, not our Communist party, but those few labor misleaders who are today our bitterest enemies.

As a matter of fact, not only did we strengthen our present enemies in the eyes of the workers and farmers here, but in the eyes of our sympathizers, potential members and even our own members. Where were we when the writer insisted to the party here in Minnesota, that we should not build the fences of the labor fakers any stronger, because, before very long, it would be our task to break down those famous fences. Comrades of the district committee were so influenced by our boosting of Mahoney and his candidate for governor, Dr Schaper (who by the way shortly afterward repudiated the Communists), that they sneeringly charged the writer being "to suspicious." They said that Mahoney, Cramer and even LaFollette would not break with us.

Today we are confronted here with the task of breaking down those fences which we helped build unnecessarily. Both Mahoney and Cramer are our bitterest enemies. In face of these facts, the present lip service of the majority about a united front from the bottom becomes meaningless blabber. Anyone can talk. It is the actions of a Communist that count.

C. E. C. Majority Hasn't a Leg to Stand On.

We have seen, now by the few crudely put facts, contained herein: First, that the minority started out to accomplish the impossible; namely, the all-inclusive farmer-labor party; second, they could not appraise the strength and morale of their own party. Third, that they underestimated the strength of the enemy—that is, the influence of the labor fakers upon the masses. Fourth, that what ever temporary united front they had established, was exclusively from the top. Under these considerations, it becomes evident that only a mass party (in which Communists do not believe) could have saved us from all those mistakes and have given us a farmer-labor party. Despite this fact, the majority does not in a true Communist spirit admit its mistakes, which in its own words, "are not few" was made. On the contrary it feebly attempts to justify its behavior.

Lenin has warned us against such an attitude as now characterizes the majority. Because their illusions did not prove realities, hence their opposition to a farmer-labor party. When a man falls off a horse, breaks a bone or more, the reaction causes him to be more cautious in the future; impractical, he immediately concludes that horses are no good and must be gotten rid of. It does not occur to the impractical mind that such a mishap might have been due to his own carelessness and lack of understanding as to the habits and disposition of the horse. Nor does it occur to him that all horses are not alike.

C. E. C. Majority Loses Political Vision.

The majority fails to understand the basis of its own reaction to the farmer-labor party and hence cure of the workers and farmers to react with it. But a short while ago, the majority favored a farmer-labor party. Why? Because such a party offered a rallying point for numerous elements whom we are trying to reach.

Suddenly the reacting mentality of the majority, pictures those elements as having been revolutionized overnight, and are now ready to come into the Workers Party direct. You or the majority say to us to urge the workers to join our party. Very fine! Nothing against that. But can't you see that there is nothing to prevent us from urging and taking in to our ranks those workers who are ready to come in, even under the farmer-labor slogan? Under your proposal this is where we stop.

In this connection let us not remain indifferent to the fact that the organized workers are but a portion of the working class and that as a rule during periods of normal employment the labor movement was as a rule able to catch up numerically with its losses incurred during periods of unemployment. Are you not aware of the fact that the last two periods of normal employment have failed to replace the gaps made in the organized labor movement while unemployment was prevalent?

Do you not realize, that some of our attention must be given to the unorganized? Well, you will say the shop nuclei will serve as a point of contact with the unorganized. We reply that you know, and we know, that it would take some years before an effective shop nuclei system is developed in this country, therefore, to depend only upon the shop nuclei for taking leadership of the masses immediate future, is to depend upon something that does not exist, and which will not for a time be developed.

What Shall The Party Do?

The C. I. has reaffirmed its stand on the united front. We of the minority hold that the continuance of the F. L. P. slogan can effectively be applied in the immediate future around which to rally both organized and unorganized workers. The material conditions will lend momentum to our slogan. We cannot permit LaFollette to take leadership of the masses unchallenged. It would be a crime at this time, when several million workers and farmers are on the move to the left as evidenced by the LaFollette vote, for us, the Workers (Communist) Party, the only revolutionary organization in this country, the only defender and spokesman for the interests of the working class, to remain indifferent while the LaFollette "machine" is tightening its grip upon those workers, many thousands of whom are even now susceptible to propaganda for a class F. L. P.

How will we face these poor farmers and workers in the future, if we assume an attitude of "either come into the Workers (Communist) Party or we want nothing to do with you?" The masses as a rule move slowly from right to left. It is the Communist duty to encourage and hasten such movement, for after all, it is upon the impetus of such a movement that the building of a mass Communist Party depends. The majority is going to build a mass party, irrespective of the movement of the masses. They are again proposing to send the party off on a tangent. Their diagnosis of the situation is bad, and the cure they propose is infinitely worse.

The present outlook in the light of past experiences, shows clearly (to those who want to see) that the economic and political stage is so being set, as to make possible the formation of a class farmer-labor party of sufficient proportion. Let us go forth to such a party while keeping intact and strengthening our own party; never losing sight of our Communist goal.

HOW A COMMUNIST MEMBERSHIP MEETING SHOULD NOT BE CONDUCTED

By JOSEPH SIMINOFF,

THE purpose of this letter is to point out how a Communist meeting should not be conducted. There must be something rotten in Denmark when the central executive committee majority must resort to character assassination and cheap burlesque comedy stunts to refute the correctness of the central executive committee minority thesis, instead of putting up Communist defense for the majority thesis.

Comrade Browder, the C. E. C. majority representative, consumed one hour misrepresenting and maliciously misinterpreting the thesis of the C. E. C. minority. He then proceeded to belittle and besmirch the characters of the C. E. C. minority members. For an example, as a supposedly surprise and possibly intended for the strongest argument for the majority thesis, Comrade Browder frantically waved in the air Comrade Lovestone's book, "The Government—Strike-breaker," yelling with certainty that everyone could hear him that this book is a non-Communist piece of work. He did not dare to read one single sentence from the book to substantiate this untruth. He then spent five minutes apologizing for the C. E. C. majority attitude towards the Second-and-a-Half International as represented by Comrade Lore in the party.

Comrade Engdahl, the C. E. C. minority representative, used the same amount of time in a real Communist fashion to clarify in the minds of the comrades the importance and need to the Communist movement of America the slogan of the farmer-labor party. In a real Leninist way he clearly pointed out the political and economic situation in this country and how the united front slogan of a farmer-labor party could be used by the Workers Party to god advantage.

Comrade Engdahl hurled back to the C. E. C. majority the charges of opportunism that they are accusing the Bolshevik group of the party with. The presentation of Comrade Engdahl was not only praised by members of the minority, but also by a number of members of the majority. The reason why they have voted with the majority I will explain later on.

The discussion disclosed the elements that supported the majority thesis:

1. Comrades who express themselves as opposed to the united front farmer-labor party slogan under any condition.

2. Comrades of the Jewish branch who are followers of Comrade London (Second-and-a-Half International element in the Jewish federation).

3. The solid Finnish branch which comprises half of the membership of Local Buffalo.

The Buffalo vote was 81 for the majority and 31 for the minority. Of the 81 votes cast for the majority there were approximately 62 Finnish votes. Some of these Finnish comrades who voted for the majority praised the speech of Comrade Engdahl, but asked why they have voted for the majority stated that they did not dare to oppose the instructions of their federain contained in Comrade Burman's letter which was send to every Finnish branch.

It was surprising to note that in spite of the fact that the majority claim to represent the trade union element in the party, that the most active members in the local trade unions and the Central Labor Council have supported the minority. Comrade Campbell, the secretary of his local union and also a member of the Central Labor Council. He was a member of the N. E. C. of the F. F. L. P. and one of the signers of the call of the June 17 convention. Comrade Hammond, also a member of Central Labor Council and chairman of the Local T. U. E. L. Comrade Sogvi, another member of the Central Labor Council and active in the T. U. E. L. The writer, another member of the Central Labor Council and secretary of the Local T. U. E. L. whom Comrade Foster wrote about the Labor Herald of January, 1923, in an article entitled, "The National Railroad Conference," on page 4: "The conference was marked thruout with excellent debates. Several delegates from the Maintenance of Way, especially Bailey and Siminoff, of Buffalo, distinguished themselves in these discussions. Many delegates coming from the more aristocratic trades openly admired the able way in which these brothers, both thoroly posted feels, pointed out the way to industrial unionism and the ultimate goal of emancipation." The active trade unionists of Buffalo have repudiated the C. E. C. majority erroneous claim that they represent the trade union element in the party.

The meeting was closed by Comrade Browder by devoting the half hour supposedly to be used in rebuttal for the amusement of the children of the comrades that were present. All that was lacking for a good circus show was the tent and a bag of peanuts. The actor was present. This was to be a membership meeting to discuss serious problems confronting the American Communist movement. Comrades, this is a sample of how a Communist meeting should not be conducted.

CHICAGO BRANCH TAKES 200 MOVIE TICKETS TO SELL

Night Workers' Matinee Put on in Pittsburgh

On the basis of past performances 150 tickets for Chicago's coming showing of "The Beauty and the Bolshevik" were taken to the Douglas Park English branch. Every member was asked to take five, and the ease of selling a fifty-cent ticket to such an interesting program was stressed, as well as the financial benefits to The DAILY WORKER and The International Workers' Aid. Altho quite a few members were absent, the 150 were not enough and another comrade had to dig out fifty more that were intended for another, smaller organization.

The showing of this long-awaited program will be on Thursday, February 5, at Ashland Auditorium, Ashland and Van Buren streets. The show will be continuous from 7 to 11, but comrades are urged to come early to get the best seats. An attendance of 7,000 is expected.

A. Misterovich, secretary of the C. E. C. of South Bend, announces that the only reason why the picture "Beauty and the Bolshevik" has not been shown long ago is that one or been shown long ago is that one or another of the branches has always been busy on "something else." Now, however, the White Eagle Theater, 1125 W. Division St., has been engaged for Feb. 11, and a record breaking sucess is expected.

Pittsburgh to Run Day Show.

Because so large a proportion of the steel workers are on night shift, the committee in charge of the showing of "The Beauty and the Bolshevik" in Pittsburgh has decided to invest another $80 in rent and run a matinee as well as a night show. Both performances will be run in North Side Carnegie Music Hall, Feb. 7. Tickets can be had from headquarters, 805 James St., Room 5.

CHICAGO Y. W. L. LIEBKNECHT DAY CELEBRATION ON JAN. 11; THE LARGEST AND BEST YET

The largest Liebknecht meeting ever held in Chicago will take place on Sunday, Jan. 11, 8 p. m., at Northwest Hall, North and Western Aves.

Since the Chicago organization began holding Liebknecht meetings, each year greater and greater numbers of workers, young and old, have come to these meetings to show their solidarity with the workers of the world.

The railroading to jail of Comrade Ruthenberg, and the threat that Comrades Foster, Dunne and Minor, will soon be tried, awaken more freshly in the minds of the workers the heroic struggles of Comrades Liebknecht and Luxemburg.

At this meeting, Max Shachtman, editor of the Young Worker, will be the main speaker. Alexander Bittelman, member of the C. E. C. of the party, Peter Herd, of the Young Workers League, and one of our active juniors will also speak. Music will be supplied by the Young Workers League orchestra.

Remember the date, the place and the time, and most of all remember to be there.

BUFFALO AND BOSTON COME TO THE FRONT TO "INSURE DAILY WORKER"

By T. R. SULLIVAN, District Organizer.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 7.—The comrades of Buffalo came to the support of the DAILY WORKER in lively style at the general membership meeting here last Sunday. The result in money paid and pledged is $366.00 for our Daily.

This amount in addition to what has already been sent in to the DAILY WORKER, puts Buffalo well out in front on its allotment. Two-thirds of our quota is now practically in hand.

All of the branches are determined to insure the DAILY WORKER fully by the end of January.

ZELMS REPORTS FOR BOSTON.

Thirteen branches of the Workers Party in Boston proved their militancy at the general membership meeting held there when they heaped nearly five hundred dollars in the insurance policy pile for the DAILY WORKER, according to report received from Robert Zelms, secretary. He enclosed a check for $320, declaring that Boston intends to complete its quota before the end of the month.

Philadelphia Y. W. L. Karl Liebknecht Day Celebration Jan. 10

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Jan. 7.—The sixth memorial of Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg will be marked by a great memorial meeting arranged by the Philadelphia Young Workers' League. The meeting will take place at Eagle's Temple, Broad and Spring Garden St., on Saturday, Jan. 10, 8 p. m. Admission will be 10 cents at door.

Speakers well known in the revolutionary movement will address the meeting. Comrade Harry M. Wicks of the Workers Party, well known for his activities in the Communist movement will explain the lessons that we learn from the murder of these leaders by the social democratic government of Germany. Comrade Oliver Carlson, formerly a member of the executive committee, Young Communist International, will speak on Liebknecht's activities in the International Youth movement. Comrade Ludwig Lore, editor of the N. Y. Volkszeitung will speak in German. There will also be a speaker from the Juniors. Comrade Naomi Litvakoff will represent them.

Another interesting feature will be the German chorus. All workers young and old should come to commemorate the death of these revolutionary leaders.

"Russia and Germany" Will Be Shown Jan. 9 In Binghampton, N. Y.

BINGHAMPTON, N. Y.—This film which was received with great enthusiasm by thousands of people wherever it was shown, is being revived on the 9th of this month in a showing in Binghampton, N. Y. A special request was sent in by the comrades of Binghampton for this picture proving that interest in Russian and German conditions has not flagged.

Go to Your Class Movies.

"Russia and Germany" will be shown at Hither Theater, 193 Clinton St., Binghampton, N. Y., Jan. 9, 1925. All comrades and sympathizers in and around Binghampton are urged not to miss the opportunity of seeing the most interesting and instructive pictures of Russia and Germany that has as yet come to this country.

This picture is shown under the auspices of the International Workers' Aid for the benefit of political prisoners and their families in Europe, India and America.

Live in Pittsburgh? Then You'd Better Not Pass This Up!

PITTSBURGH, PA., Jan. 7.—The promised Fruit and Costume Carnival will be held on Saturday evening, Jan. 10th, at the International Lyceum, 805 James St., N. S. The Fruit and Costume Carnival will be the most inspiring affair ever held by a workers' organization in Pittsburgh. A fruit carnival in itself is a very interesting event. In addition to this we will have a costume carnival. Three prizes will be offered. One for the costume most representative of the revolutionary movement or revolutionary spirit, one for the prettiest costume and one for the funniest costume. Real good music is another item that will add animation to our entertainment. We on the arrangement committee have spared nothing to provide this very fine entertainment. Now it is up to you. South-Slavic Branch Of South Chicago Is For Minority Position

The South Slavic Branch of South Chicago unanimously indorsed the thesis of the minority at the last meeting. The statement unanimously passed by the branch says in part: "The South Chicago branch of the South Slavic Federation of the Workers Party carefully discussed the question, 'Shall the party continue to use the slogan for a class farmer-labor party.' The branch unanimously voted that the party should go ahead with the use of the class farmer-labor party slogan as an effective means of building the Communist party.

"We did not consider who leads the majority and who leads the minority, but considered the situation alone. This branch declares itself for the thesis of the minority as the only correct Communist policy under consideration, and which our party must follow if it is to become a mass movement." (Signed) A. Bezovich and A. Sarich.

Harlem, New York, Italian Branch Is for Minority Unanimously

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.— The Italian branch of Harlem, New York, unanimously voted in favor of the minority thesis by a vote of 25 to 0, and passed the following resolution: "The members of the Italian branch of Harlem, New York City, after a thoro discussion on the majority and minority theses, have unanimously voted the thesis presented by the minority of the C. E. C. of the Workers Party, as the most coherent to Leninist theory, and to the needs of the American masses. The members blame the passive attitude of the majority for the development of the Lore tendency in the party, and declare that this tendency must be eliminated by means of an implacable struggle against the opportunism of the majority alligned with the Lore group."—(Signed) M. Sala, Secretary.

Shop Nucleus No. 5 Votes 15 to 1 for Majority Theses

Shop Nucleus No. 5 has the following to report: About the most important action is the result of our principal discussion at which comrade Bedacht and Earl Browder spoke on the party theses. The nucleus voted 15 to 1 for the majority thesis.

Our membership discusses at length union activities of many trades and our need to function within them and to assist in all union fights in which party members are involved.

The nucleus secured 8 subs for THE DAILY WORKER.

"WHO OWNS THE WORLD," THE SUBJECT OF OPEN FORUM TALK SHOWING WHY U. S. ENTERED WAR

All who heard Loland Olds at the Open Forum last Sunday, were pleased with his exposition of the subject of "The Men Who Own America" which, in fact, turned out to be "The Men Who Own the World." Furthermore, those present were pleased to learn that Robert Minor, cartoonist and journalist, will lecture next Sunday on "The Stagnant South in the American Revolution."

The Financial Revolution.

Prior to 1914, Mr. Olds explained, great portions of American corporate securities were held in Europe, particularly in England. The industrial revolution of about 150 years duration, had made England the dominant power. But the financial revolution of much shorter duration, has made America the dominant power.

The speaker cited the currents of thought in the financial world which led up to the war, showing an almost uncanny foresight or a deliberate preparation for the conflict and its material consequences. From the magazine, "Commerce and Finance" of April 15, 1915, he read quotations saying that the week previous had witnessed "The financial discovery of the United States . . . and opened a new world reservoir of credit." The same paper had prophetically declared that America faced "an over-stock of gold and in payment for war supplies to the allies would rather have American securities held abroad," but required that "the minimum prices on shares be removed."

The New Reservoir of Credit.

Mr. Olds told of the pre-war dependence of America on the British banks, the pound sterling being the standard. But the passage of the federal reserve act in 1913 had released reserves to the use of the bankers and multiplied their credit possibilities by five, which had again been doubled by the amendment to the act passed in 1917. This allowed American bankers within nine months after the war began, to begin reaching out for world empire. The federal reserve act had created "a fourth dimensional space in finance and credit," that "new world reservoir of credit" which the "London Financier" immediately declared, indicated that "America seeks power."

Fundamentally, the basis of this power to go out and conquer the world resided in the American proletariat using American resources. The capitalists of America by their control, their dictatorship over the workers who, as a class, accepted their exploitation with docility, profited from this power by mobilizing it and transforming it into finance-imperialism thru the federal reserve act.

That Deceptive "Over-Expansion"

We must not be deceived, the speaker said, by the domestic view of the "over-expansion" of industry, which creates a chronic crisis and a constant margin of unemployment; for from the joint of view of finance-imperialism on a world scale, this "over-expansion" is a first requirement of success in attaining international hegemony.

The abolition of minimum prices on stocks, in view of Europe's necessity to buy war supplies at any cost, placed American stocks previously held in Europe on the American market at cut rates. The American interests, which sold munitions at big profit had ample surplus to buy these stocks and had actually took back $2,000,000,000 of stocks from Europe in the first two years of war.

Lowest Proportional Wages.

While the workers, from 1914 to 1917 had suffered a loss of wages in proportion to their productivity to the lowest point in history, American capitalists were making such undreamed of profits that they not only bought back the American securities held in Europe, but they began, as the British then said, to "look over desirable properties in Canada and the other colonies." In fact they had acquired a grip on every part of the world.

Bear in mind, said the speaker, that the federal reserve board is not a government institution, but is absolutely controlled by the banks.

These banks, in October, 1916, began to put pressure on Europe, especially England, by saying, "No more short term loans," really a threat to cut off munitions unless England surrendered the securities she held in her colonial enterprises. England, driven to the wall, threatened to dislocate the entire capitalist system by forming a pool with Russia and France, shipping a billion dollars gold to the United States for munitions—then de-monetizing gold as a money standard.

Why America Went to War.

If England had done this, the United States would have lost the basis of world power, and stood a chance to lose what she had already gained. The United States retreated, fell in with England, Wilson announced that "economic neutrality was abandoned," and soon abandoned all neutrality and led the nation into war against Germany, "to make the world safe for democracy."

But the unsettled contest between England and the United States had been the background for this issue, as everything since 1920, the Dawes' plan, the reparations bank in Germany, the war debts and so on. The speaker showed how imperialism clutched out with the talons of finance which gained its power by making fictious capital, by ability to create deposits. The deposits are, he declared, twenty times the real money in existence, and he traced the method whereby the federal reserve had assisted in enlarging this ability.

This pyramid of credit stood up so far because of the quick turnover of currency, a twenty-nine day turnover being made of all money in the national economy. There were $7,000,000,000 in credits without any collateral. The machinery as a whole, Mr. Olds said, was the machinery of financial imperialism, which he compared or contrasted to the imperialism of the slave empire of Rome.

How about the branch of which you are a member? REALLY ALIVE? Or just so, so? And if it needs militancy, then why don't you prescribe it? Why be a branch member if you don't MAKE THE BRANCH FUNCTION?

Militant Branches Are Wanted!

The kind of branches we must have are those which will take hold of a duty, perform it loyally and immediately, and at once look around for the next job to do.

Right Now We Must Sell Policies!

Today we must INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925. That is, ALL OF US must do this, not only a few. This includes your branch.

The Page of Militant Branches!

The DAILY WORKER will be ONE YEAR OLD on January 13th. In celebration we intend issuing a BIG RED SPECIAL EDITION. In this big edition you will find the the PAGE OF MILITANT BRANCHES. This will be the page upon which the names of all RED BRANCHES that have remitted for INSURANCE POLICY SALES will be printed.

Will the Name of YOUR Branch Appear Upon This Militant Page?

Unity, the Need of Textile Workers

The reactionary offensive against the workers, expected by Communists and threatened by the open shop bosses who hold Dawes as their model, is beginning.

The whole textile industry, cotton, wool, silk and even the thread trust is trying to force thru a cut in wages. This is the widely heralded "prosperity" the capitalist press promised and the basis for the unprecedented boom in stocks and bonds in the New York exchange. Prosperity for the multimillionaire owners of the textile mills—starvation and misery for the textile workers!

In Paterson the late autumn witnessed the resistance of the broad silk workers, led triumphantly by the Communists and the Trade Union Educational League. In Paterson the reactionary bosses were defeated, the fangs of savage exploitation were broken and a union built up and fortified. Textile workers, look at Paterson and take heart for united struggle!

Now, thruout New England, the bosses are "announcing" a cut in wages. Shall they get away with it? All depends upon the mood of the workers. Are you willing to struggle, textile workers? Are you willing to strike? Not in little groups, but in a giant wave that will sweep the whole industry!

The Trade Union Educational League yesterday issued a call to you textile workers, organized and unorganized, urging resistance, united resistance—for the keystone of the arch of triumph is named "UNITY."

The craft unions, few and weak as they are, are no weapons with which to face the combined power of the National Association of Textile Manufacturers. Battles are not won with popguns, but heavy artillery. You textile workers need an industrial union, and you must force your craft union officials to unite, immediately, in action against the wage cuts, as quickly as possible, in one organic body, one great industrial union to take in everybody in the mills.

Textile workers, you must fight your own battles, you must prepare yourselves for inevitable struggle. If you accept one wage cut another will be forced upon you. You will not protect your wage scale from attack by being humble any more than the sheep protects itself from wolves by bleating. The bleating only attracts the wolves and sharpens their appetite. Moreover, you are men and women, not sheep, and should fight like men and women.

The Trade Union Educational League has pointed the way for your victory, textile workers: An industrial union! A united front of all textile unions and textile workers against the bosses! Abolition of child labor! Instead of wage cuts—more wages! Instead of longer hours—shorter hours! Instead of many little unions—one giant union! Organization! Unity! And again unity! Unity and struggle! Only in this way can you save yourselves.

Reaction in the Balkans

Stefan Raditch, the leader of the Croation peasants' party, has been arrested and will be tried for treason, according to dispatches. This is another step in the drive against peasants and workers in the Balkans and is undoubtedly encouraged by the allies.

The Croatian peasants' party is not a revolutionary organization, but a reformist-nationalist group that has not betrayed the agrarians and therefore has earned the enmity of the reactionaries. The Raditch party has been working in a united front with the Communists with the result that both city and peasant districts have been solidified against the white guard government.

The arrest of Raditch spells trouble in the Balkans—trouble for the imperialists and their puppet governments.

This week sees the opening of state legislatures over the country. That calls for a more intensive class struggle against the upholders of child labor who are seeking to defeat the child labor amendment to the constitution. Get busy!

Some of the opposition deputies in the Italian chamber want to impeach Mussolini. The Italian Communists will laugh at this proposal. They are out to rid the nation of capitalism in all its forms, including the timid bourgeois "opposition" and the democratic pacifists, parading as socialists.

We are all agreed on the policy to "Insure the DAILY for 1925!" But that isn't sufficient. Let us all get busy and work just a little harder for that policy.

Join the Workers Party and subscribe to the DAILY WORKER.

Capitalism's Mercy to the Houston "Rioters"

The "mercy" of capitalist "justice" is nearly as bad as its vengeance. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People announces that getting a parole for 20 of the large group of so-called "Houston rioters" from Leavenworth prison is a victory of the organization during the past year.

The writer, who happens to have shared prison fare with these black soldiers, knows how many of them will receive this "mercy" with secret cynicism. They will, of course, be happy as any animal is happy to escape bondage in the narrow confines of a steel cage. But in the deeps of their hearts they will not grovel at the feet of a capitalist government that extends them the "mercy" of bondage or wage slavery in the larger prison of the capitalist system. The writer knows them well enough to understand that they have learned a profound enmity to the powers that be.

The "mercy" of parole, again, is an ironic charity, that keeps a worker at the mercy of his boss, the whims of police surveillance and treated always as a suspect to be arrested and questioned and possibly convicted any time a culprit is needed that cannot be caught. Always, the man's "record" is held against him as proof positive of present derilliction if he cannot prove an iron-bound case of innocence.

This goes back to the facts of the Houston case, too long to recite here, except to say that a regiment of Negro soldiers in their camp at night, were attacked by a bloodthirsty mob of lynch-minded Texans led by policemen. They had arms and used them in defense and counter-attack. Naturally, somebody got killed.

The vengeance of capitalist government, which recruited these black workers to shoot down colonial subjects, oppressed races like themselves in the islands—east and west, Mexico, and to protect capitalist rule with bayonet and bullet from overthrowal by the exploited workers of any and all colors—the vengeance of the courts martial was swift and terrible. A whole group was taken out, about twenty or thirty, as we recall, and hung—almost without pretense at trial. The others were sentenced to a living death—to life at Leavenworth.

Now some of them are paroled from the prison of Leavenworth to the prison of the capitalist system, closely watched and required to account for their every hour. This is the "mercy" of capitalism for a worker who mutinies. And it is strange to see that the fact of the remainder of these victims being eligible to receive this "mercy" of parole in 1928—three years more in the prison hell—is hailed as a sort of glad tidings. As we said at the beginning, the mercy of capitalism is nearly as bad as its vengeance.

Labor Is Aroused

The new attacks, thru the Michigan courts, against the Communists will stir the American labor movement to definite protest. This can clearly be seen thru the resentment resulting from the brutal sentence imposed on C. E. Ruthenberg, national secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, and the eagerness with which the capitalist bloodhounds have rushed him off to the state prison at Jackson.

When the attack was first launched against the Communists, thru the raids on the Bridgeman convention, the organized labor movement of the nation protested vehemently, recognizing this as an attack on the whole working class. The workers everywhere understood that this was not an offensive against the Communists alone, but against all workers and workers' organizations that dared fight the bosses. The thinking elements of organized labor, that are not now under the complete domination of the bureaucracy will realize more than ever that this continued attack on the Communists, is also a fight against all labor.

The quick response from the organized workers, as is seen for instance in the resolutions adopted by the Stone Cutters' Local, of Omaha, Neb., shows that the rank and file is jealous of its rights, and that it does not intend to quit in the fight against its class enemy, even if the capitalists are reinforced by their "labor lieutenants."

The struggle in Michigan is on again. Thinking workers will rally en masse in this struggle on the side of the Communists facing prison.

State legislatures are meeting quietly and contentedly over the country. They contain no Communist members ready to make a fight against capitalism. That explains it. Get into the Workers (Communist) Party and help remedy this situation for the future.

They are going to broadcast the speeches made in the Norwegian parliament. The Communists will surely help warm up the radios of an evening, when the workers are at home ready to "listen in."

Our first birthday—Jan. 13 Help celebrate it! Distribute a bundle. Order blank on another page. Fill it out! Send it in!

Another "allied conference" is being held at Paris. It will be as fruitless as all the rest. Not even "conferences" can keep capitalism alive.

More troubles for Mussolini. The United States wants the $2,000,000,000.00 advanced to Italy during the war.

Don't forget to send in that order for the Special Anniversary Issue of the DAILY WORKER out next week. Celebrate this day!

STUDENTS STUDY LABOR PROBLEM IN FACTORIES

Banker Denies Existence of U. S. Imperialism

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Five young college graduates are finding out by vivid personal experience what a factory wage workers' life is and are trying to find out what they, the college workers, can do to help workers reach a larger life.

Justine Wise is one of the young women in the mixed group. She told her impressions and conclusions to the annual student conference of the league for industrial democracy. The college group lives in a worker's house in a textile town near New York. The students are employed in the mills and in addition each studies a special phase of community life in reference to the dominant industries. One studies politics, another religious life, another social activities, as affected by industrial conditions. One of the group has run into the industrial spy system. Miss Wise tells, so closely are unusual manifestations watched for.

Treated Like Robots.

Employers treat workers as part of the machinery and do not even try to get maximum efficiency when piecework is the rule, Miss Wise told the conference. Workers wait hours for materials. She has earned from $14 to $17.50 per week at piecework bobbin winding. She suggested that going into industry is the best way for college students interested in the labor or radical movement to be trained.

Otto Kahn, banker, denied the existence of imperialism at the league's banquet. He said it was a myth that Standard Oil or any other business interest controlled the U. S. state department. Scott Nearing took the opposite view and said the Monroe doctrine was the cloak under which imperialism is spread by the United States.

BORAH RESURRECTS HIS PLAN FOR AN ECONOMIC WORLD MEET WITH RUSSIA TO BE INCLUDED

By LAURENCE TODD
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—Chairman Borah of the senate committee on foreign relations has revived his resolution of two years ago, proposing a world conference on economic readjustment as necessary preliminary to disarmament. In order to remove all doubt as to the purpose of the discussion of economic relations, he will call his resolution a proposal of a world conference on economic affairs and armaments. And, just as was the case in January, 1923, he proposes that Russia and Germany be invited on equal terms with Britain, France, Italy and the other powers. Without that equality of treatment, he believes, the conference will be doomed to futility.

Borah has raised this issue since President Coolidge, at the instance of large numbers of peace advocates, has hinted that he favors a new conference for reduction of armament. Coolidge does not promise to call such a meeting of spokesmen of the powers in the near future, nor does he say that should consider anything but the technical problems of getting all the world's military forces reduced in concert. But Borah, remembering how his own resolution calling for a world conference on naval reduction was followed by Harding's action in summoning the Washington arms conference of 1921-22, believes that the hour has struck for another move. If he can get his measure through the foreign relations committee of the senate, Coolidge and Hughes will have to act.

And even though Harding and Hughes excluded him from the American delegation, three years ago, they cannot shut out the chairman of the senate committee. Once a member of the American delegation, he can insist upon discussion of economic bases for militarism. He can bring up the Versailles treaty, the war debt manipulation, and the postponement of peace with Russia.

For his resolution the senate is not now ready to give its support. If he secures the approval of the foreign relations committee, however, he will have built such a fire under Coolidge and Hughes as to force them—regardless of the adjournment of congress in March—to offer to the country some plan for reducing the danger of outbreak of another world war.

UNION MEN DEMAND RETRIAL BE GIVEN FOR SACCO-VANZETTI CASE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—At the regular meeting of the Union of Technical Men, Local No. 37, a resolution was passed, protesting against the denial for a new trial of Sacco and Vanzetti, and demanding a retrial for these martyrs of labor.

A contribution was made to the Sacco-Vanzetti defense.

Prisoners Eat Swill.

GALESBURG, Ill., Jan. 6.—The 285 inmates of the Knox county prison were fed in 1924 on meals which cost only eight cents apiece. But this eight cents included, in addition to the food the turnkey's salary and the cost of soap used by prisoners. When asked if the cheap food did not harm the prisoners, Sheriff L. Wilson replied, "They grow fat on it."

MUSIC LITERATURE DRAMA

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

The twelfth program of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, given at Orchestra Hall, was the annual Theodore Thomas memorial. Theodore Thomas, the first conductor of the ochestra, died on Jan. 5, 1905. Every year since his death, on the Friday and Saturday nearest the fifth of January, a memorial program has been played for him.

These memorial programs are always made up of works of the four German composers. Thomas excelled in interpreting—Bach, Beethoven, Wagner and Richard Strauss.

The program on this occasion opened with a chorale of Bach arranged by J. J. Abert and ended on to a fugue of Abert's own composition. In this work the mathematical style of Bach is greatly enhanced by modern orchestration.

Beethoven Style Seen Thruout.

Following this came the most talked of and most written about symphony in the world, the Beethoven fifth. This symphony is the first of the nine in which the typical Beethoven style is used thruout. It is the first important use of the formula known as the "motto theme." A theme is stated at the outset, and thru the four movements it reappears in various guises to tie the whole together.

The chances are that none of them is correct. At any rate this symphony, second only to Schubert's eighth in popularity, shows all the sides of Beethoven's nature. Angry and troubled in the first movement, the second is idylic and almost pathetic. Hector Berlioz described the third section as producing "that inexplicable emotion which you feel when the magnetic gaze of certain persons is fixed upon you." The last movement is an overwhelming march in spirit tho not in form.

"A Hero's Life" Hokum.

Strauss was represented by the grandest piece of hokum in musical literature, the symphonic poem "A Hero's Life." In the six movements of this creation Strauss pictures first the hero, his adversaries, his companion, his battlefield, his mission of peace, and his escape from the world. The hero is a regular one hundred per cent, A-1, red blooded, two-fisted human. The hero is incidentally Richard Strauss himself, for in the fifth movement, where the hero surveys his life, a hash of themes from the composer's previous work is brought in. These grand self-revelations of Strauss were written for exactly the same reasons, as those actuating the memoirs of royal ex-concubines in the yellow press—to make money and attract attention.

The Wagner excerpt was the finale from "Das Rheingold," quite recently discussed here in detail.

STONE CUTTERS LOCAL PROTESTS MICHIGAN LAW

Urges Support for Labor Defense

(Special to The Daily Worker)

OMAHA, Nebr., Jan. 7.—The following resolution was adopted by the Stone Cutters' Local of Omaha at their regular meeting last Friday night and ordered sent to the press:

Resolution Against "Criminal Syndicalism" Laws.

WHEREAS, the many state "criminal syndicalism" laws and "sedition acts" are contrary to the bill of rights of the United States constitution, and such laws are used by the employers as a class to tyrannize over the workers and their organizations; and

WHEREAS, the latest act of persecution is shown by the state supreme court of Michigan in upholding a conviction for "assembling with" the Communists, in an opinion that punishes ideas and denies free speech and assemblage, and which evades and ignores the fact that the defense showed there was no violation of the state law, since no overt act or advocacy was done by the defendant in Michigan; and

WHEREAS, Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Bookwalter and others of his class insist on a maximum sentence of ten years' imprisonment and $10,000 fine, for this "crime" of holding an opinion opposed to that of the prosecutor and his class, thus recommending government action based on prejudice rather than the law and constitution; and

WHEREAS, the sustaining of Ruthenberg's conviction by the United States supreme court will mean the railroading of Wm. Z. Foster and twenty-nine other well known fighters in labor's ranks to long terms in prison also, and gives further encouragement to high-handed suppression by the capitalist-controlled government of all workers' organizations who dare oppose their open shop rule; andand

WHEREAS, the solidarity of the entire working class must be asserted in defense of freedom of opinion and in support of those at the front in our struggles; therefore be it

RESOLVED, that we protest against and condemn the action of the Michigan supreme court, and that we support the Labor Defense Council and its work and urge all labor bodies and working class organizations to take the same stand. That we petition the governor of Michigan to pardon the defendants in the event that the United States supreme court sustains the conviction, it being our opinion that action by the federal supreme court would nullify the constitution in the interest of capitalist suppression of the workers; and be it further

RESOLVED, that copies of this resolution be sent to the Labor Defense Council and to the press.

Adopted at a regular meeting of Omaha Local, Journeymen Stone Cutters' of North America, at Labor Temple Friday, Jan. 2, 1925.

Signed: R. J. Fidler, President.
David Coutts, Secretary.

Comrade Ruthenberg Takes His Post

THE doors of the Michigan penitentiary have opened to receive our Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg into the prison chain gang.

This live sense of the reality of the class struggle should be awakened by this event. Ruthenberg, indefatigable fighter and clear-headed, resourceful Marxian leader, has long been a thorn in the flesh of the capitalist ruling class. In the shock of war, and in the reaction and terror that came with it, Ruthenberg loomed high as a leader of mass demonstrations in the city of Cleveland, which led to his first imprisonment. Ruthenberg fought where other "socialist" leaders fell away from the fight, the fight from which the war had stripped away the easy parliamentary veneer. It was but logical that this man should become, as he did, a towering leader in the left wing of the socialist party and logical again that he became one of the founders of the Communist Party.

The year 1920 found Ruthenberg in Sing Sing penitentiary, under a six year sentence as one responsible for the "left wing manifesto." When released from that term he immediately stepped again into the front trenches, being made executive secretary of the Workers Party. Now again he takes up a new task in the service of the working class, to serve a term as its representative in the Michigan penitentiary. Within the prison walls he is holding a post for his party—the party which is the only hope of our class party.

The present conviction occurred a year and a half ago. The case being appealed, the cowardly supreme court of Michigan very obviously awaited a favorable opportunity, in a political sense, to register their affirmation of the verdict. The manner of these "impartial" jurists as well as the whole capitalist governmental machine, in acting always on a favorable political wind, is notable. The arrest of the Communist Party convention in August, 1922, had a direct relationship to the immense mass strikes of a million coal miners and railroad men. The Daugherty injunction was only one of the principal measures of the capitalist government against the Communist Party. The Communist convention was another of the principal measures. But the country was in a state of ferment of the working class. This precipitated the raid, but it also delayed a decisive conclusion of the cases. The Foster trial, in which a jury consisting mostly of farmers failed to respond to the capitalist state's demand for conviction, was a warning. The state tightened its lines and struck again, this time getting Ruthenberg.

But having gotten a conviction of Ruthenberg in the lower court, and having learned a severe lesson in the propaganda effects of a Communist defense, the state became wary. The ferment among the workers and farmers was still in existence; it would have been politically unwise from the capitalist viewpoint, to ad verse during the pre-election period the conclusion of a case which exposes the non-existence of "constitutional" rights for working class movements. To do so would have injured the "democratic-pacifist" illusion which it was especially necessary at that time to keep alive.

The election of Coolidge was the outward sign and signal in America for the end of the "democratic-pacifist" period, as the casting aside of the mask of "MacDonaldism" was its outward sign in England. After the election of Coolidge, the capitalist class of America felt reassured that its power to drive the masses into its corral was unimpared. Coolidge still thinks it necessary to mouth "pacifist" phrases to cover up the preparations for further domestic and international reaction, violent suppression and the coming world war. But in practice it is considered safe to proceed with the nullification of "constitutional guarantees." The cowardly supreme court of Michigan steps out in the open and strikes at those without whose program and organized leadership it knows no struggle of the working class and the impoverished farming masses can be effective.

The sentence against Ruthenberg is a savage one. Three to ten years' imprisonment, with an additional $5,000 fine to work out, was the heaviest sentence that lay in the power of the sneaking hypocrite, Judge White, of St. Joseph. This little man White acted, not for himself, nor for the so-called but non-existent "public," but for his capitalist masters. Acting thru this pitiful tool of a judge, the capitalist class proclaims the end of the "democratic-pacifist" era in America in condemning Ruthenberg.

Is this "Justice"? Yes; it is CLASS justice—the only kind of justice that ever existed in a society divided in classes. Behind the mask of court room formality, the capitalist class truly picks the enemy of its system of exploitation, degradation and violence, and strikes him down.

It is to be expected. Ruthenberg of course unflinchingly takes the blow for his class and its party. Ruthenberg in a prison uniform is still at his post for his class and his party.

"Class justice"? Yes, but there is another class justice. Each ruling class has its own form of justice, the purpose of which is to crush its class enemies. The working class will have its own justice, and with it the working class will yet put on trial the hordes of petty, prostituted tools of capitalist justice.

Meantime the leaders of the Workers (Communist) Party will take their turns with the capitalist courts of Michigan, and will be proud thus to serve the only cause that is worthy of a man's or a woman's loyalty. Undoubtedly there will be many more trials in Michigan. Robert Minor will be called to trial on Feb. 2, and undoubtedly he will defend his party there. Others will follow; the intention is evidently to imprison every possible leader of Communism in America.

Every Communist, and every sympathizer, and every worker who can be made to learn from this travesty of the name of the class struggle, must vigorously take up the defense. It is their cause—it is no cause of the individuals who are recently put on trial. The capitalist court must be made into a political sounding-board from which to appeal to the masses of toilers—every step the court must be made a principal part of agitation. Not to excuse themselves before capitalist justice, not to obscure their enmity and hatred for the capitalist system, but to inculcate into the exploited masses a knowledge of what capitalism means, and what working class revolution and emancipation means, will be the purpose of each of our comrades who faces the court at St. Joseph, Michigan.

Down with capitalist class justice; long live the justice of the working class!

4,000 ANGRY MINERS IN PROTEST

MANY CITIES TO OBSERVE DAILY WORKER'S BIRTH

Hold Celebrations from Coast to Coast

The first anniversary of the DAILY WORKER will be celebrated by all Workers Party branches and district organizations from coast to coast with dances, entertainments, balls, and meetings which have been arranged by the various sections of the party.

These celebrations will commemorate the wonderful strides that have been made by the Communist movement since the first English language daily Communist newspaper was born just a year ago.

The first DAILY WORKER birthday party will be celebrated in Chicago Monday evening, Jan. 12, with a program of music, games, dancing and speeches at Imperial Hall, 2409 N. Halsted St. Supper will be served without charge at the Chicago celebration, which will jubilate over the splendid accomplishments of the past year and discuss the prospects of the DAILY WORKER for 1925. A newspaper will be made up by the editors and members of the staff, which is promised, will be "just full of good news and cartoons." The Chicago affair will be in charge of Comrades Gussie Kruse and Natalie Gomez, of the business office of the DAILY WORKER.

The DAILY WORKER anniversary celebration in New York will be combined with the observance of the anniversary of the death of Karl Liebknecht, and Rosa Luxemburg. The district New York office of the Workers Party and the Young Workers' League have issued a statement which says, on Jan. 11 the Communist youth of the world over will commemorate the death of Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg who six years ago were foully murdered by the military henchmen of the socialist leaders of Germany. As proof that the traitors of the working class are doomed and that the revolutionary movement of the workers—the Communist movement—is rapidly advancing, and gathering more and more recruits to its fold, we will have at the same time the celebration of the first anniversary of the DAILY WORKER, the first Communist Daily in the world in the English language."

The Liebknecht memorial will be held in the afternoon and the DAILY

MILLER, COMMUNIST, IS MEMBER OF NORTH DAKOTA STATE LEGISLATURE

By ALFRED KNUTSON.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

BISMARCK, N. D., Jan. 8.—The North Dakota legislature has just started its session here and the political line-up is as follows:

The nonpartisan leaguers have control of the house of representatives and the "I. V. A.," or independents, control the state senate by one vote.

The leaguers who are house members are "raring" to go and apparently "full of fight," firmly believing that it will be possible for them to really do something by getting thru some "progressive" legislation, evidently forgetting that they are operating in a capitalist legislature and within the frame-work of the private business system of capitalism, which, of course, render impossible any changes that will really help the farmers.

The New Governor.

A. G. Sorlie is the new nonpartisan league governor. He is pretty much to the right of even the average leaguer in North Dakota. His cabinet can be easily ascertained thru statements he has made since his election, namely, that farmers, bankers and business men should all work together for the good of North Dakota. Such a policy will, naturally, play directly into the hands of the investment companies, the bankers and the grain thieves, who possess both political and economic power, and who are very anxious to be on good terms with the farmers in order the more readily to exploit them.

Communist on Job.

Comrade A. C. Miller, working farmer, is the only Communist member of the state legislature. He comes from Williston in the northwestern part of the state and was elected to the house of representatives, representing the 41st legislative district. He has been a member of the Workers Party for over a year.

In an interview Miller declared that "it was a hopeless task for the farmers and workers to expect any relief under the capitalist system, and that the work of a real workers' representative should be directed towards educating all exploited farmers and workers to realize the necessity of building up their own system."

MELLON'S GANG GROOMS PEPPER FOR FAT JOBS

Making Horse Trades with Pinchot

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—Andrew Mellon, secretary of the treasury having acquired control of the republican organization thruout Pennsylvania thru the collapse of the Ware machine in Philadelphia, is reported to be preparing to change his representation in the U. S. senate.

He is expected to find a place on the federal supreme court, or a big European embassy, for Sen. Pepper, who has still four years to serve. Then he will put former Gov. Sproul in the senate.

If Gov. Pinchot, in return for certain concessions by Mellon as to appropriations from the legislature to carry out some of Pinchot's minor plans, will agree to name Sproul to succeed Pepper, the latter will resign within the remaining two years of Pinchot's term. Otherwise Mellon will have to wait until Pinchot leaves office.

Snooks Will Snoop In Atlanta Federal Prison After Jan. 20

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—Appointment of John. W. Snook, warden of the Idaho state penitentiary, as warden of the Atlanta federal prison, was officially announced today by Attorney General Stone.

Snook will take office about Jan. 20 or as soon as he can adjust his affairs in Idaho.

ITALY UNDER MILITARY LAW OF MUSSOLINI

Communists Tortured in Prisons

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Jan. 8.—A state of martial law exists today in Italy in everything but name.

Prefects have been ordered to take any emergency measures they wish to keep the Fascisti in control of the country and suppress the opposition, regardless of the present judicial statutes.

The jails are being filled with Communists and workers who are against the fascisti rule of terror. These prisoners are being tortured in an effort to make them "confess" crimes against the state. Cases have come to light in Rome of prisoners who have had their eyes gouged out, their hands and feet crushed and their bodies mutilated.

The fascisti are continuing their campaign of suppression of opposition organizations. More prisoners are being assaulted and all but a few of the fascisti members who were jailed for violent crimes have been released.

Former Premier Giolitti is expected to become the new leader of the Aventine opposition.

All under-secretaries of state who were not members of the fascisti party have resigned, under pressure from Mussolini.

Signor Rustignac, a fascist and foreign correspondent of the New York Italian daily newspaper, Il Progresso Italo, has been arrested and quizzed by the senate. He is charged with being implicated in the Matteoti murder.

The Communists are demanding a social revolution and the seizing of power by the workers, as the only means of crushing fascism for all time.

Fascist police raided the Communist headquarters in Milan, and announced they had, "seized documents incriminating ten dangerous radicals said to have been implicated in many Red outbreaks." The fascisti are declaring everyone who opposes their mad rule of bayonets as "dangerous."

OMAHA T. U. E. L. TAKES UP CHILD LABOR BATTLE

OMAHA, Nebr., Jan. 8.—The Omaha general group of the Trade Union Educational League is plunging into the child labor fight in earnest. Secretary David Coutts is sending letters to all local unions in this territory urging them to appoint a committee on the child labor question.

The Workers Party is also getting into the fight here. The City Central Committee has made overtures to the local independent (LaFollette) club suggesting a united front campaign on the child labor question.

While time has been too short as yet for definite action, the activity of the T. U. E. L. and Workers Party militants has already aroused considerable discussion in the local labor movement.

PROGRAM FOR W. P. ALDERMEN IS ADOPTED

Pledged to Struggle for Workers Only

An enthusiastic meeting, held at 722 Blue Island Avenue last night, ratified the aldermanic candidates and the program on which they will seek to rally the workers of Chicago.

The major portion of the evening was spent in discussing the program, for workers are interested in definite measures for fighting the stranglehold which capitalistic political henchmen have on the Chicago workers. A program covering every phase of municipal administration which is of interest to Chicago working men and women was adopted.

Speaks Only for Workers.

The introduction states:

"The Workers (Communist) Party is what its name implies—a party of and for WORKERS.

"We do not repeat the ridiculous pretensions of the other parties, that we have a program which will suit all classes. We state frankly that our program will bring no comfort to the banking kings, merchant princes, traction lords and real estate sharks who now hold Chicago in their covetous grasp. But to all workers and working class organizations struggling for the advancement of the workers, we pledge our loyal support in any and all conflicts, at any and all times.

Exposes Real Issues.

"Now, when great numbers of workers are suffering from unemployment, when police and injunctions are called in by the bosses to break all strikes, when the working class standard of living is being steadily forced down, when gigantic municipal traction deals are being engineered, when working class children are suffering from inadequate and improper schooling—it is necessary to come forward with a program which exposes the real issues in the aldermanic elections to be held on February 24—a program which faces the issues frankly, and which rallies the working men and women of Chicago for struggle against the capitalists on the basis of the immediate interests of the workers."

The issues covered by the program include: Public utilities, traction, unemployment, education, police, the use of the injunction against workers, child labor, race discrimination, municipal employes, contract letting, housing and the right to vote.

Each of these issues is not only treated in a general way, but also specific ways and means of attacking the end sought are pointed out. The working class candidates of the Workers Party are all pledged to this program.

Revolution Only Real Solution.

The program concludes:

The above program of immediate demands touches issues which are vital to every working man and woman in Chicago. Everyone of these issues is a direct outgrowth of the present system of production for private profit—that is, of capitalism. Because of the monopoly which the bosses maintain over the factories, machines, etc., the workers are obliged to toil long hours for meager wages, while the goods that they produce are taken by the capitalists. With the capitalist domination over schools, press, etc., it is obvious that the workers have no real opportunity in this election. Capitalist "democracy" is nothing but a sham. There can be no real solution of the great problems weighing down upon the workers until capitalism is overthrown—until the workers seize control of the governmental power and take over industry. This will be accomplished thru the establishment of

T. U. E. L. CALLS UPON ALL WORKERS TO UNITE AROUND LABOR DEFENSE COUNCIL AGAINST WHITE TERROR

In a statement issued by the national committee of the Trade Union Educational League, it calls upon all militant workers to form a united front with the Labor Defense Council to fight the "criminal syndicalism" laws and "sedition acts," instruments used by the employing class of the United States to tyrannize over militant workers and their organizations. We print the statement in full:

T. U. E. L. STATEMENT

The Trade Union Educational League has, ever since its birth, urged the workers to solidify their forces against the menace of white guard suppression going under the guise of laws against "criminal syndicalism." It was the efforts of the T. U. E. L. that aroused the wide support among the unions for the Communists whose convention in Michigan was raided by the agents of Daugherty and Burns in 1922.

Workers Fortify For Attack.

Today there is a new cause for unity of all workers, Communist and non-Communist, organized and unorganized, of all races and conditions. The supreme court of Michigan has upheld the conviction of C. E. Ruthenberg under this infamous law, the charge being only one of "assembling with" other people not yet convicted of anything, and on Monday, Jan. 5, Ruthenberg was sentenced to from three to ten years in the Michigan penitentiary and bail denied.

Foreseeing this sentence after the action of the supreme court of Michigan, the Trade Union Educational League has begun a new campaign to unite all workers who believe in defending any worker imprisoned by the capitalist class for class reasons, around the Labor Defense Council, with offices at 166 West Washington street, Chicago, Ill.

Mine Workers First in Line.

The Trade Union Educational League has issued a call for all militant workers, to take up in their unions and fraternal organizations the issue of the defense of the victims of the Michigan "criminal syndicalist" law. Among the first to respond is local 2376 of the United Mine Workers, Christopher, Ill. The resolution of these coal miners, which appeared in the DAILY WORKER Jan. 5, should serve as a model for every worker who will take up the fight in his local union to defeat the tyrannical reaction in the state of Michigan and free all the workers now standing in the shadow of prison.

SENATE GIVES MUSCLE SHOALS TO POWER TRUST

Underwood Bill Passed by Senate

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 8.—The senate today passed the Underwood bill, turning the Muscle Shoals power project, worth many millions of dollars, over to private interests.

It is well-known in Washington that the huge power trust, controlled by J. P. Morgan and his bankers, was promoting the Underwood bill. During the discussion of the Underwood bill a Washington newspaper charged that, "If the Underwood bill passes, a steal will have been put over on the people of the United States which will put Teapot Dome in the shade."

The power trust, which will eventually gain control of Muscle Shoals thru the workings of the Underwood bill at millions of dollars below the cost of the power project to the United States, owns the Alabama Power company, which will eventually control Muscle Shoals.

Muscle Shoals consists of several huge dams, houses and hotels on a large tract of land, and large nitrate manufacturing projects.

Senator Norris' bill, providing for the retention of the project by the government, was sidetracked by the senate.

STRIKING MINER MURDERED AFTER MAKING SPEECH

Shot Down on His Way Home from Meeting

(By Federated Press.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—The first murder has taken place in the hard coal strike near Scranton, say reports from the anthracite capital. Samuel Pace a leading strike committeeman, and secretary of the Ewen Colliery local, where the unofficial walkout against the Pennsylvania Hillside Colliery originated, was slain by gunmen near his home in Pittston.

Several days ago the writer got acquainted with Pace and had a long visit with him at his home on Pine street, Pittston. He was a short, strongly built young man of 31, full of confidence in the strikers' cause and active night and day in the struggle. Pace had a wife and three children but he said he and the rest had no thought of discontinuing the fight until they got assurance that their grievances would be adjusted.

The meager reports give no inkling of the murderers. Fourteen steel-jacketed bullets are said to have pierced his body as he was returning late at night, from a strike conference. The murderers escaped in an automobile.

Pace told me of some hostile interference by the state police. It occurred after he had delivered a strike speech. The Pennsylvania-Hillside company agents had called a meeting of miners in the union hall of the Underwood local, several miles out of Scranton. About 125 men assembled out of 1,200 members of the local. The company men urged the men to go back to work.

Pace took the floor and exposed the trick that was being played on the men—it was not a regular union meeting. He urged the men to stand by the strike. As he left the hall, taking a group of workers with him, six state policemen— the "Cossacks" of ill fame—seized him and searched him, finally releasing him. But the work of Pace and others was successful.

The back-to-work movement was a fizzle, about 26 responding, instead of the 450 announced in the papers by the company. (These figures were verified to the writer by a Scranton Times reporter.) Later the local union called its own Underwood meeting, with 800 present and a lingering resolution to stay on strike was passed. Pickets were put on the line.

The killing of Pace is likely to have an opposite effect from that which the murderers intended.

Brookhart's Seat in Congress Is Contested Before U. S. Senate

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.— Informal notice of the contest of the seat of Sen Brookhart, republican of Iowa, in the new congress was filed in the senate today by Senator Robinson, democrat of Arkansas, minority leader.

The petition of contest was filed by Robinson for Daniel F. Steck, democratic defeated by Brookhart by a few hundred votes.

T. U. E. L. Meeting in St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 8.—The St. Louis branch of the Trade Union Educational League meets Tuesday evening, Jan. 13 at 8 o'clock at Workers Party Hall, 2412 No. 14th street. John Brann will lecture on the Trade Union Movement.

CAPPELLINI IS DENOUNCED AS UNION BETRAYER

His Smoke Screen Is of No Avail

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Jan. 8.—When Rinaldo Cappellini, district president, United Mine Workers of America, called a mass meeting of the striking anthracite miners to "explain" things yesterday afternoon he brought upon himself the most complete defeat a union betrayer has ever suffered in this district.

The Pittston armory was crowded with 4,000 angry miners and Cappellini caught literal hell.

They called him "traitor" and accused him of selling them out. They howled down his accusation that Communists were his only opposers and for hours plastered him with epithets as he stood alone on the platform.

Can't Fool 'Em No More.

"You can fool all the people, some of the time, and some of the people all of the time, but you can't fool all the people all of the time," declared one leader of the strikers' committee, quoting the famous saying of Lincoln.

The Italian coal miners, aroused to a high pitch of indignation at the murder of Sam Pace and Steve Prely, and the brazen treachery of the district president, were foremost in attacking Cappellini.

Cappellini was hardly disguised in his role of coal operators' agent. The mask of union officer was thin indeed. He dared not trust his life and limb to the members of his own union, and he stood alone on the platform, he had the protection of a cordon of police, forty plain clothesmen and a squadron of "Cossacks" near at hand.

"No" Shakes Building.

In "explaining" the strike, Cappellini declared that only two of the grievances which had been unsettled for months in violation of the agreement, justified the strike, and that men affected had returned to work. He demanded to know if he had made good as a district president—and the "Noes!" fairly took the roof off the building.

Cappellini's entire record was attacked and raked from stem to stern, in office and out, and heckling continued until a genuine riot threatened.

Affairs at Critical Stage.

Affairs in the mine workers' organization reached a critical stage Saturday when a delegate from twenty unions of the Glen Alden Coal company urged by resolution the coming of President John L. Lewis to this

CHARLIE HUGHES MUCH PLEASED AT VICTORY OVER GREAT BRITAIN

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—Marked satisfaction was expressed at the state department today over the progress being made at Paris in impressing on the allied finance ministers the justice of the American claim to equal participation in the Dawes annuities.

Colonel James A. Logan reported to the department after his conference with Winston Churchill, British chancellor of the exchequer, that the basis for an agreement had been reached.

Paris dispatches today say that after half an hour's session the meeting of the conference was adjourned until Monday, when reports will be received from certain experts, who are to have informal meetings meanwhile.

RUTHENBERG IN JAIL FOR THE WORKING CLASS

No Legal Basis Involved Says Ferguson

The imprisonment of C. E. Ruthenberg, national executive secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, solely because of his association with the Communists, was branded as ridiculous by Isaac E. Ferguson, attorney for Ruthenberg, in a statement to the DAILY WORKER.

If the decision of the Michigan court is allowed to stand, Ferguson told the DAILY WORKER, it "practically takes away all meaning from the constitutional guarantees of free speech and the right of assemblage."

"The idea of Ruthenberg being in prison because of his association with the Communists is utterly ridiculous," said Ferguson. "The Communist Party was condemned in Ruthenberg's trial because it is supposed to have threatened the United States government: But the United States government has done nothing to prevent the Communists from disseminating their ideas since the deportations under Attorney General Palmer in 1920.

"The United States government knows all about the doctrines of the Communists. Its agents have been able to read, in the files, ever since 1920, the principles expressed openly by the Communists in their literature and in their press.

"And the government has made no move to show that the expression of principles by the Communists is a criminal menace," Ferguson continued "If there were any reality in the charge against Ruthenberg,it is ridiculous to think that the government would tolerate the recent presidential campaign conducted by the Communists, where they stated the principles, for which Ruthenberg is in jail, hundreds of times in every city in the country.

Gesture Against Communism.

"The courts are using the Ruthenberg case to make a gesture against doctrines, but there is no real accusation against him according to the normal standards of criminal law. The judges and jury conducting the case all deem it necessary to show that they do not like the principles of Communism.

"This particular decision of the Michigan court, if it stands, unreversed, practically takes away all meaning from the constitutional guarantees of free speech and the right of assemblage."

Attorney General Andrew Dougherty of Michigan, has filed a motion, prepared by Assistant Attorney General O. L. Smith, with the Michigan supreme court at Lansing, asking the court to confirm the previous judgment that all questions have been settled. This motion will be acted upon by the Michigan court on Jan. 15, finally disposing of the case as far as the Michigan courts are concerned The case will then be appealed to the United States supreme court.

Rally Labor for Defense.

Meanwhile Ruthenberg is held prisoner in one of the worst hell holes in the country—Jackson Prison, at Jackson, Michigan. The Labor Defense Council and the militant section of the working class have rallied to the defense of Ruthenberg and the other Communists who are facing prison solely because they demand the overthrow of the capitalist system of exploitation of the workers, and that the abolition of the profit system be replaced by the rule of the working class.

"Thousands of dollars are needed immediately for the Ruthenberg appeal to the U. S. supreme court, for the Minor trial and those that will follow," George Maurer, of the Labor Defense Council, told the DAILY WORKER. "The facts must be spread broadcast, so that all workers and their organizations will know that their cause is the cause of these Workers (Communist) Party defendants and will unite in a mass protest and demand their freedom."

The Trade Union Educational League has issued a call to all trade unionists to come to the defense of these militant leaders of the working class—the Michigan Communist defendants.

The local Chicago organization of the Workers' (Communist) Party already has well under way the fight to release the militant champions of the working class who are faced with prison terms.

"One of the big demands of the all-armanie election campaign of the Workers Party in Chicago is the free dom of all class war prisoners," Martin Abern, Chicago secretary of the Workers Party told the DAILY WORKER, "especially in view of the imprisonment of Comrade Ruthenberg, and the impending trial of Comrade Minor and other leading Communists. From now on the most important task of the Workers Party is the defense of the Communists imprisoned under the Michigan anti-syndicalist laws."

LET US SHOW THE FIGHTING COAL MINERS THAT WE ARE WITH THEM

In Tuesday's issue of the DAILY WORKER an article by Pat Toohey, secretary of the Miners' Defense Committee, stated the case of the fighting miners who participated in the famous "March of the Miners" in 1922.

Twenty-five of these fighting workers have just been pardoned while thirteen others in for the same cause have still to remain behind the bars for daring to fight for their interests.

The DAILY WORKER is a paper of the fighting proletariat—and the Workers' Monthly is their magazine; so we have placed on our sub-list every one of the fighting miners remaining in jail.

But the DAILY WORKER is as poor as the poor worker, and subs are a heavy expense. Will you pay for one of these? They have been placed on the sub-list each for a six months' sub for the DAILY WORKER ($3.50) and for a six months' sub for the Workers' Monthly ($1.25). Send in your remittance and we will tell the fighter you choose that you have contributed the favor. But be sure to tell us you are paying for a certain prisoner or the DAILY WORKER or Workers' Monthly if you have a preference.

Read what Pat Toohey has to say about it:

Jan. 4, 1925.

"Dear Comrades:—I enclose here the names of the remaining miners at Moundsville penitentiary for their part in the march of the miners on he Clifton ville mine in 1922, at which a riot took place and three guards and eight union miners were killed. They repeatedly have requested of me the DAILY WORKER and the Workers' Monthly, but we are about in as bad a fix financially as they are.

"I send you their names to see if you would put them on the mailing list. This list supersedes the list I sent you some time ago, as the men have been pardoned, as these will be also, as soon as the progressives can organize their forces to make a fight in this direction.

"Teddy Anski, Frank Bodo, Charles Ciallella, John Kaminski, Angelo Marlone, Dan Machusak, Andy Rohar, Pete Radokovitch, Joseph Regis, John Stegmack, Joseph Tracz, Joseph Wallace, 818 Jefferson Ave., Moundsville, W. Va.

"If you are unable to comply with my request, please inform me. The Avella section from where most of the prisoners are from, is a section controlled by the pro-Lewis tools of this district, and if the radicals put up a fight for these men, our party will greatly benefit greatly, by having an opportunity to penetrate hitherto untouched territory.

"With best wishes, I am,

"Fraternally yours,

"Pat H. Toohey,

"Sec'y Miners' Defense Com."

SCAB HERDER SUES COMPANY FOR HIS BLOOD MONEY

Gets Doublecross When Strike is Broken

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 8.— Edward Thompson, strikebreaker boss, has filed suit against the Texas Transport and Terminal Co. for $17,420, which he alleges he would have been entitled to had he not been discharged. Thompson was engaged as general superintendent in New Orleans over the strikebreaking longshoremen during 1924, and was told by officials that the job was his for life. His salary was to be $55 a week and all the overtime necessary. William Harris, his assistant, also files suit for $14,000 on the same grounds.

While the strike was in its zenith these men drew the wage agreed up on; but when the union was licked, they were gradually let out.

The transportation company is saying nothing, but engaging the best legal talent.

Fishermen Win Strike.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, France, Jan. 8.—The striking fishermen and cannery workers of Douarnenez won an increase in wages of 25 centimes an hour, after a strike of six weeks, which was led by Communists. During the strike the Communist mayor was suspended by the government for leading a parade.

THREAD TRUST CUTS WAGES 10 PER CENT OF 7,000 WORKERS

WILLIMANTIC, Conn., Jan. 8.— Announcement was made at the plant of the American Thread company here today that the wages of its operatives will be reduced 10 per cent, effective January 12. The reduction will be general in all plants. Thirty-five hundred operatives will be affected here and 7,000 in the entire system.

The Trade Union Educational League has called upon all workers thruout the textile industry to resist militantly the concerted drive against their wages being cut in all branches of the industry. Strikes are expected all over New England.

WAGES ARE LOW, CONDITIONS BAD ON BRITISH ISLES

Workers Expect Attack on Hours Next

LONDON, Jan. 8— A levelling up and standardizing of the wages of 650,000 British railway workers is proposed by the National Union of Railwaymen. Among the rates are the following given in equivalent U. S. money: engineers, $3.80 a day; firemen, $2.96 a day; machinists, $18 to $18.95 a week; signal operators, $14.20 to $21.02; freight and baggage handlers minimum $14.20 a week. It is proposed to change the basic mileage day of engineemen from 140 to 120 miles for surface men and 100 miles for underground men, no man to work more than 840 miles a week.

Wages in all British coal mining districts with one exception are down to the minimum and at least 10 per cent of the mine workers are unemployed. Coal mine owners have started an agitation in favor of a return to the longer working day as a means of reducing costs.

Employers and employers' journals generally admit that British wages are as low as they can be without provoking the unions to fierce revolt. Trade union circles feel that the next attack of employers will be against working hours.

Forbes Ignorant of Graft in His Bureau, Is His New Defense

Charles Forbes, when head of the United States veterans' bureau, "was not interested" in hospital building, Col. E. R. Walton, chief of construction service of the war department testified in Forbes' defense. Forbes is on trial in federal court here charged with illegally letting the contracts, according to Walton "After he induced the war department to take over the opening of bids and the letting of contracts, Col Forbes said he cared only to inspect the plans, and let the department turn over the completed hospitals to him as rapidly as possible," said Walton.

The new defense of Forbes pictures him as a naive executive who did not know what was going on under him and who was not interested in eliminating graft and corruption in the veterans' bureau.

a Soviet Republic, a workers' and farmers' government.

We call upon all labor unions and working class organizations which are in agreement with the immediate demands set forth in our program to establish a united front with the Workers (Communist) Party in the fight for their realization, thru support of the aldermanic candidates listed below:

3rd WARD—E. L. Doty.
11th WARD—Victor Zokaitis.
22nd WARD—L. Cejka.
24th WARD—H. Epstein.
26th WARD—N. Dozenberg.
32nd WARD—Peter M. Lucas.
33rd WARD—J. L. Engdahl.
34th WARD—Harry Brooker.
44th WARD—J. W. Johnstone.

An energetic campaign will be made to bring the programs and candidates of the Workers (Communist Party before the workers of Chicago despite the fact that the election is being run on a non-partisan basis. The entire city organization of the Workers Party is responding wholeheartedly to this election campaign, and it is expected that by the time this election is closed, the workers of Chicago will be well acquainted with the Workers Party and what it stands for, as well as with its daily fighting organ, the DAILY WORKER.

Ku Klux Preacher Reported Shot Dies Of Natural Causes

DANVILLE, Ill., Jan. 8.—Rev. William J. Williams, preacher for the ku klux klan, who collapsed last November while delivering a klan speech at Benton, Ill., died today at the hospital of the national soldiers' home.

When Williams collapsed in November, the klansmen charged that he had been shot by anti-klansmen, and it was not until Williams' death today, that it was revealed that William was suffering not from wounds but from tubercular meningitis.

'WILL NOT HELP YOU,' COOLIDGE TELLS FARMERS

Hoover Promises Aid to Large Employers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.— President Coolidge expressed his "profound sympathy" with the struggles of the farmers but told them that they would have to "do the lions share of the work in making their co-operative movements effective themselves," in a speech before the National Council of Farmers' Co-operative Marketing associations.

Former Governor Frank Lowden of Illinois, who is posing as a farmer, altho he and his wife, formerly Florence Pullman, own a large share of the stock in the Pullman Palace Car company, is a member of the nations executive committee of this association. The Pullman car works were recently put on a ten-hour day, following a wage reduction.

Coolidge pointed to the United States Steel corporation, whose average wage is 44 cents an hour, as a "great co-operative industry built out of small beginnings."

In telling the farmers that they must work out their own salvation, Coolidge intimated that he will oppose the Norbeck-Burtness and the McNary-Haugen bills, destined to allow government relief for the farmers. "We want combination preached as a principle," Coolidge said after referring lovingly to the steel trust, in which he owns a substantial block of stock.

Herbert Hoover, also speaking before the National Council of the Farmers' Co-operatives, which represents the rich farmers, advocated the development of assemblies for the elimination of waste.

Hoover is practically turning the department of commerce over to the large employers and the rich farmers. Hoover is using the resources of his bureau to acquire data on how the industries can cut down expenses. Hoover announced that "Millions of dollars could be saved the people of this country thru application of measures to eliminate waste in commerce and industry." Hoover, however, meant the large employers, for they are the ones who will get more profits because of his campaign to cut down the running expenses of big industries.

Hoover announced that "Representatives of railway dining cars met in Chicago today to standardize their equipment, and 36 other standardization meetings involving many manufacturing industries will be held during the next few months."

The campaign to bring the capitalists larger profits is being carried on by Hoover with government money.

Bosses Take Fight Against Engravers' Union Into Courts

(Special to the Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—The International Photo-Engravers' Union is being pounced upon by the federal trade commission because of its endeavor to bring all shops up to the standard union rate.

In a petition filed in the federal district court of St. Louis, the commission charges that the Photo-Engravers' Union is trying to help the employes, organized as the American Association of Photo-Engravers, to maintain a combination in restraint of trade, by calling strikes on all shops where the prices fixed by the employers' combine are not enforced.

They charge that under "clause 10" of the contract between the international and local unions and the employers, the unions agreed to allow their members to work only in shops where the management is affiliated in good standing with the employers' combine. The commission seeks to get the court to enforce a subpoena upon Local 10 of the Photo-Engravers to produce its union minutes for certain occasions when the commission believes the union was maintaining the prices for job work.

district. They contend that the Lewis investigating committee had failed in its mission in that it had failed to go to the root of the difficulties existing between district officials and the rank and file of the union.

Strike May Spread.

The Hudson Coal company grievance committee meeting in Scranton Saturday gave President Cappellini one more week to settle the present grievances. In his failure to do this they will meet again probably to declare a strike.

The Hudson miners allege that President Cappellini has not kept his pledges to adjust their grievances and has failed even to take them up with the proper authorities.

Women of the Capitalist Class in Public Office Loyal to Class Interests

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the yellow press exploits the fact that a few women have been elected to public office. It tries to leave the impression that progress has taken a great leap forward.

Capitalist editors always like to get women into the news. And pictures! Especially when they can be touched up to make them look attractive. So the exploits of the women-executives and legislators will be improved on to the utmost, in the weeks to come, to spice the dry news that comes out of state capitols with the beginning of each new year. The misinformed will be led to conclude that a new era is really dawning.

* * * *

The granting of the suffrage to women, and the election of women to public office, does not even touch the roots of capitalism. The women of the capitalist class remain loyal to their class interests. The women of labor are still held in the chains that bind their class to the profit system. Woman suffrage does not change the class relation. The class struggle goes on the same as ever.

* * * *

In Colorado women were in the state legislature when the legalized cossacks of the state militia shot down and burned to death the men, women and children of the coal fields in what is now known in labor history as "The Ludlow Massacre." But the Colorado legislature has never been denounced as "Bolshevik," or condemned for getting its orders from Moscow. The men and women, in Colorado's lawmaking body, have always been loyal to the Rockefeller rule that dominates the state thru the established czardom of the Colorado Fuel & Iron Co.

* * * *

Capitalism shows no fear over the fact that Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson is governor of Texas, or because Mrs. Nellie Taylor Ross is the executive head of Wyoming. Wall Street knows that its flag will continue to fly over the capitol buildings in both states.

Children will be exploited in the cotton fields, and in industry thruout Texas, just as in the days when men of the capitalist class were governors. The fist of the bankers and landlords will be held as close as ever to the face of the landless farmer, both black and white. The war of the classes continues as before.

In Wyoming, Mrs. Ross may be governor, but the life of the miner will be just as bitter. The 12-hour day and the seven-day week will continue in the oil fields owned by Rockefeller. The social order that gave the Teapot (Wyoming) Dome scandal to the nation will not even get scratched.

The same is true everywhere, in all the state legislatures, where the women of the capitalist class have been elected. For instance, four women sit in the Illinois legislature, but they raise no challenge to the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, or the Chambers of Commerce. They are all of the same breed.

* * * *

Suffrage for women will not take on a new meaning until the Communist women of the working class begin entering the parliaments of capitalism in this country, as in other nations.

Not until a Ruth Fischer, or a Clara Zetkin, in this country as in Germany, joins with the Communist men of her class, in congress, or in the state legislatures, will the voice of a woman legislator be heard on the labor side of the class struggle. It is to be hoped that that time is not far distant.

STRIKE AGAINST CONDITIONS ALSO PROTECTS WAGES

If Union Loses Control, Wages Follow

(By The Federated Press)

PITTSTON, Pa., Jan. 8.—The unofficial strike of 12,000 Pennsylvania Hillside miners in the hard coal fields comes out of long-standing disputes over working conditions and not from any demand for a change in the wage scale before the agreement runs out But the fight to protect working conditions is really a fight to protect wages, the miners say. Under the piece work system worse working conditions mean worse wages.

Few unions in the country have such piratical control over the details of the job as does the United Mine Workers where it is well organized. The present fight—the strikers say—is to retain this control. They are seeking to prevent the company from laying off men at will, from keeping tonnage miners at unproductive work at which they cannot make regular wages, from forcing the men to pay the same price for inferior powder, and from other actions which have the same general effect, of reducing the earning power of the men.

A list of the grievances, mine by mine, has been prepared by the general grievance committee of the ten striking locals. A summary is given below. The committee says the strike was forced because the company refused to consent to adjustment thru the regular adjustment machinery and the committee charges the district president with failure to take proper action.

WORKER jubilee and ball in the evening, at the New Star Casino, 107 St. and Park Ave. The combined celebration will be held under the auspices of the Workers Party and the Young Workers' League. Thirty, seven and one-half per cent of the proceeds of the New York commemoration meetings will be donated to the DAILY WORKER.

"These two great events," declares Charles Krumbein, New York district organizer of the Workers Party, "the Liebknecht memorial which is the occasion for the revolutionary workers and the working class youth in particular, to review the condition of our movement and survey the tasks for the future—and the DAILY WORKER Jubilee, will be celebrated from 2 p. m. till midnight. They will no doubt bring forth a stronger determination to carry on the battle that Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg so bravely fought."

In Jamestown, N. Y., Franklin P. Brill will lecture on "Karl Liebknecht, World Revolutionist" in Odd-fellows Hall, Main and Fourth Sts. Sunday, Jan. 11, at 3 p. m. Tickets will cost only 15 cents.

The Los Angeles Workers Party organization, under the leadership of the English Branch, will hold a "First Birthday Party" Tuesday evening Jan. 13, at 8 p. m., in Brooklyn Hall, corner Brooklyn and Soto Sts. Comrades of all nationalities will meet in Los Angeles that night, and will make a final drive for insurance policies to make sure that the second birthday party of the DAILY WORKER shows even more gains for the Communist movement than the first anniversary.

LAW AND ORDER TALK AT STRIKE BREAKERS' MEAL

Coolidge Makes Love to High-Hat Millionaires

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.— Judge Elbert Gary, head of the United States Steel corporation, who allowed his trust to break every law on the calendar in the 1919 steel strike, presented a resolution to President Coolidge yesterday asking for "law enforcement." President Coolidge always throws his doors open to the steel trust head.

Gary is a handy man when it comes to supplying money to run a presidential campaign, and besides, Coolidge owns a fat block of stock in the United States Steel corporation.

Gary ate breakfast with the president yesterday, and acted as chairman of a delegation of high hatted millionaires, including John D. Rockefeller, Jr. J. S. Kresge, and other men of big business. They were members of a "committee of one thousand," seeking to enforce the prohibition laws, and they commended Coolidge for not getting drunk while on duty in the interests of big business. Gary "commended President Coolidge for his personal conscientious obedience to the provisions of the eighteenth amendment."

Rockefeller must have laughed up his sleeve when talking to Coolidge about law enforcement, if he remembered the Colorado coal strike, when his company, the Colorado Fuel and Iron company, hired thugs to murder the strikers, and evicted scores of families from their homes.

And Gary must have had a good laugh at the expense of the gullible workers, if he recalled that during the 1919 strike, manned in the employ of the United States Steel corporation brutally murdered Fanny Sellins, and that all meetings were prohibited in all of the steel towns. Strikers were arrested by the hundred, many were killed, and the state constabulary of Pennsylvania was called in by Gary to ride down strikers—all for no other cause than that they wanted the eight-hour day and a living wage.

Indeed, it was a select company of strikebreakers, that dined at the White House breakfast table yesterday, with arch-strikebreaker Coolidge, breaker of the Boston police strike, leading the discussion on "law enforcement."

POSTAL WORKERS TO KEEP UP PAY INCREASE FIGHT

Cal's Veto Is Sustained by Only One Vote

Altho disappointment was in the air at the meeting of 200 members of the Railway Mail Association in the Hotel Sherman, because the senate failed to override Coolidge's veto of the bill increasing postal employes' salaries, they determined that the fight would continue.

"We feel this especially because we felt sure of victory," said Ellis Miller, president of the association. "We believe firmly in our cause and have not given up. We have great hopes of an increase in the not distant future. The fact that only one vote was needed to give us the necessary two-thirds vote shows our fight has not been without results.

"We believe that the public is with us and wants us to attain money enough to live on—not merely to exist. We want to be able to educate our children and to live in happiness and comfort."

The vote on the bill to increase the pay of the postal workers was 55 to 29, but as only 28 votes against the the bill were required to prevent its passage over the veto of Coolidge by a two-thirds vote, Coolidge's veto was sustained and the bill will not become a law.

Coolidge pulled every wire he could to stave off the passage of the bill by a two-thirds vote. He made promises, threatened patronage, pulled "expourres" of graft, and submitted several substitute bills. Senator Borah, who at one time posed as a progressive, voted with Coolidge. This came as no surprise, as Borah worked as hard as any other Coolidge senator to prevent the postal workers from securing their raise.

Unsafe Crossing Kills.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Jan. 8.— Two school children were killed and two seriously injured here today as an unsafe railroad crossing when a Lehigh Valley railroad passenger train struck the wagon in which the children were being driven to school. Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

THE DISCUSSION IS ENDED

THE discussion of the party's immediate tasks, that has been carried on in the columns of the DAILY WORKER for the past six weeks, ends today. This is the decision of the Central Executive Committee. A statement summing up the discussion is being prepared by the Central Executive Committee. It will be published as soon as it is ready.

SIX STATES AND ONE COUNTY— OR WHO IS LOGICAL AND WHAT ARE THE FACTS

By GEORGE MAURER

COMRADE RUTHENBERG says it's "logical." What? The business of keeping the slogan and working for a class farmer-labor party. He says, in effect, 'Oh! Mr. Majority! Look to your logic. You admit that all the conditions and reasons which made for our united front farmer-labor party activity in the past still remain but yet you draw the opposite conclusions to drop the slogan, etc." Really, and oh, Comrade Ruthenberg! Did you read and understand the majority thesis, does it say that all the conditions are now the same, that the particular condition necessary, a mass sentiment for a farmer-labor party, now exists?

You started this "logic" business, Comrade Ruthenberg, and then one of the minority supporters, Comrade Harold John, came along (Daily Worker, December 10) also with the boast of logic, and said "the left wing, outside the W. P., must be organized politically in order that it can be lead by anybody and the W. P. must be included in that organization so that Communists can lead." Did you of the minority start with such an assumption and then try to give your thesis plausibility by pointing to six state organizations called farmer-labor parties and which you claim are against the LaFollette third prty movement and for a class farmer-labor party?

To be sure your minority thesis does not go so far as Comrade John. You say that actual organization of a farmer-labor party, fighting the class battles of the workers and farmers" may never take place and that it is possible that the best elements can be absorbed into the Workers Party, without passing thru the stage of actual organization into a separate party. Do you affirm that the Workers Party cannot lead the left wing and absorb its best elements without the slogan "for a farmer-labor party"? Or do you claim there is a mass need (viewed from a Communist standpoint) for a "class farmer-labor party"?

Since your thesis is so "logical" what about your assertion that if we "abandon the united front policy politically by abandoning the slogan for a class farmer-labor party, we will surrender the most effective agitational weapon we have for drawing the workers close to our party and building the Workers Party." Do you really mean that the sole and only united front tactic politically, is the business of working for a class farmer-labor party?

No, probably you were careless in wording it, perhaps you meant "on the parliamentary field" as Comrade Wicks puts it. You do think, tho, that there is lots of sentiment "in the left wing" for a class farmer-labor party and therefore it is desirable to go along as before. And this, after the experience of July 3rd, 1924, the growth of the LaFollette third party movement, the disappearance of all national farmer-labor parties, and non-development of the sentiment which had been labelled "farmer-labor," toward a real sentiment and demand for a distinct "class" farmer-labor party.

Don't you know that the sentiment for real class political action is that of Communist sympathizers, that mass sentiment aside from this will be satisfied with a third party, speaking in the name of labor. Do you want us to cover up our Bolshevik "whiskers" and with the "weapon" of the slogan "for a class farmer-labor party" gather together some masses of class-conscious workers, then uncover our whiskers and have those masses say "We knew it was you all the time; why kid us?"

Now about those farmer-labor parties in six states and Washington County, Pa., (and the "demand for revival" in Buffalo, N. Y.) as sufficient proof that the required mass sentiment exists, lives, and is growing as living things should. First let me say that to hear Bob Minor tell it the masses are yelling for a farmer-labor party. It looks like necessity was the mother of invention. The minority wanted to yell for it (a two year old habit) so they began hearing things—yells. Tell us your secret, Bob, from where do you get the gift of hearing the loud yell? From the same source as you get the never-to-be abandoned "magic" slogan?

Please, Comrades Ruthenberg, Bedacht, Lovestone, (and Wicks) in the name of Marx and Lenin, give us the dope on those farmer-labor parties in six states and one county (and Buffalo). Show us that these "numerous" and "staunch" upholders of a farmer-labor party are spreading the germ and getting themselves, staunchter. Explain how they are holding out for a class farmer labor party as against the third party movement of LaFollette and the C. P. P. A., against the class-collaboration, peoples government, ideas of the trade union leadership, aristocracy, and followers, and of the farmers. Will the "revolutionary farmers" see to it? Or the masses of unorganized workers? Or are we (the Communists) running the unions and these six state parties and therefore able to dictate?

What's the sentiment, or demand, in the unions, farm organizations, "farmer-labor parties," that you are in touch with? How big is the left bloc in the labor movement that possesses a real sentiment for a real F. L. P. which you say our members in the trade unions must split away from the third party movement and crystalize into a farmer-labor party; that is, how much bigger than the bloc among the poorer farmers (aside from Communist sympathizers) that you speak of in your thesis, but propose no ways to reach on the F. L. matters.

Tell us, how many of these six state parties are holding together, and, if any, what is it that keeps them going, —the demand of the rank and file member—units for a mass-class or class-mass F. L. P. or the prospect seen by them and the leaders of some kind of a national third party speaking in the name of labor and the people? And if they amount to anything locally in their respective states, is it because they are genuine class farmer-labor parties? Is it not true that such are farmer-labor in name, but third party progressive in fact?

Is it so desirable (if not necessary) that the left wing bloc in the labor movement be at all costs organized into a class party of their own? Or so necessary to our leadership of left wing labor and farmer blocs that the slogan be kept in spite of a new situation? Is our task to be helpless, otherwise? Shall we give out to the workers and farmers the impression and hope that a class-farmer-labor party will fight their battles, rather than the Communist Party? Is it desirable (or necessary) that we hide our face? Or do you insist that we wear a mask, let's say, just for the sake of some kind of a fancy "maneuver"?

Do you disagree with Comrade Radek, writing on the American party future, when he says "while they (the American party) will continue their work with an unveiled face, the masses will have time to get rid of their illusions of LaFollettеism" (Daily Worker, December 4, front page.) Understand, this means we will be most actively working to dispel those illusions.

If the minority wants to be so "logical" and ignore facts, I suggest they add to their slogan "for a class farmer-labor party—its logical." Perhaps then, at least, the "great mass of desperate farmers who are ready to join in a class farmer-labor party" would logically join such a party. So much for the word "logic."

The November 1923 thesis of the minority (page 49 of second year) said that the defection of that part of the labor movement controlled by Gompers and Johnston, would "be counterbalanced by the great mass of desperate farmers who are ready to join in a class farmer-labor party." Comrade Pepper first saw "the LaFollette revolution" then he saw a great mass of revolutionary farmers.

The minority claims to be "logical," and ignores facts. Lovestone and Bedacht, to be sure, give what they claim are facts, but not about this farmer-labor business. No, they give a lot of "sins committed by the majority." Maybe to them logic means irrelevant misrepresentations. Won't someone, please, draw up for private circulation only a list of "sins" of the minority? I want to contribute some facts to such a list. For instance Comrade Nat Kaplan—and other "leading theoreticians" of the minority have been throwing Pepper in our faces last year, because that "peculiar condition" (of the party) in America is by them deemed essential to the realization of a mass Communist Party.

The majority thesis proposes the correct Communist policy—and has the facts.

NO SUBSTITUTES!

By DAVID A. GORMAN

THE supporters of the minority thesis contend that dropping the farmer-labor party slogan means the repudiation of the united front tactic on the political field. There are no farmer-labor parties in Germany, France or Italy, and yet the Communist Parties of those countries are carrying out the C. I. program dealing with the united front on the political field.

Comrade Ruthenberg states there is a conflict between the analysis of the economic and political developments in the United States and the policy proposed in the majority thesis. To prove that there is a conflict, he states that the majority agrees that the conditions which created independent political action on the part of the workers and farmers still exist and, in fact, they will be intensified, and yet the majority concludes that the farmer-labor party slogan is obselete.

Now let us see whether the conclusion of the majority is correct or not. The farmer-labor party movement that developed in the last few years was a revolt on the part of workers and poor farmers against the old parties. Then when the LaFollette movement appeared it absorbed the farmer-labor party.

But Comrade Ruthenberg says that the conditions that jarred the workers loose from the democratic and republican parties will jar them loose from the LaFollette movement and the farmer-labor party slogan is the instrument with which to do it. What are the facts. The workers that split from the old parties lost faith in them as a result of those parties being in power and proving to be parties of big capital. But they have confidence in the LaFollette movement. The majority thesis is correct when it states:

"And for some time to come, that is, until the LaFollette movement will begin showing concrete and practical signs of its antagonism to the workingclass, the great bulk of the laboring masses of this country will progressively accept the LaFollette movement as their political expression. This means that the question of trying to build a farmer-labor party which shall base itself on the mass organization of the workers and poorest sections of the farmers is definitely out of range of practical politics for the immediate future."

The minority also contends, that in order to build a mass Communist Party it is necessary to create a farmer-labor party. Comrade Ruthenberg states in the December issue of the Workers Monthly that the differences of viewpoints in regard to the application of the farmer-labor united front policy developed in the central executive committee of the party immediately after the formation of the federated farmer-labor party, and he refers to a thesis in which the present minority, and at that time, the majority, stated their position. We quote from that thesis, known as the August thesis, written by Pepper and Ruthenberg: "It is our duty to attempt thru a very careful, cautious propaganda to transform the federated to a Communist mass party"

Apparently, the minority of the central executive, committee, of at least, Comrade Ruthenberg, still supports the above statement of the August thesis. Comrade Pepper in defending the thesis compared the federated with the Norwegian labor party, stating that the Norwegian labor party was based on the trade unions and when the International, with which the Norwegian labor party was affiliated, instructed them to reorganize on the individual membership basis, and when the leaders refused, the minority through careful and systematic campaigns withdrew from the Norwegian labor party all these members who accepted the C. I. decision, and formed the Norwegian Communist Party.

Pepper believed the same thing was possible with the federated. But Comrade Pepper just overlooked a few facts, and that is, in Norway, there was no Communist Party based on individual membership, and the C. I. was absolutely correct in demanding reorganization because a Communist Party to function must be based on individual membership. But in this country alongside of the federated was the Workers Party based on individual membership. This theory of converting the federated, no matter how much backing the organization in its national convention and raise the the slogan of a 'class-farmer-labor party' in order to build a left-bloc and split it away. e) We shall mobilize all the class farmer-labor elements with which we have contact and which are ready to break with the LaFollette progressive organization for the same campaign against this as a liberal, third capitalist party and not a labor party and to have them raise the slogan of a 'class farmer-labor party' and to split with the LaFollette progressive movement."

I shall not attempt to expand on the contradictions within section E of the minority thesis. Let us examine the two programs and see which furnishes the more effective methods of fighting the LaFollette movement.

Comrades, here we have the whole thing boiled down. Here we have the two proposed methods for fighting the LaFollette movement. It scarcely seems necessary to expand on the subject. However, a little further clarification will do no harm and may be of some benefit.

Our party is distinguished from such parties as the proletarian party and the socialist labor party by one thing among others. This is, our cooperation with the masses of workers who do not learn thru abstract propaganda and theoretical education. That is why we aim to win the masses by establishing our leadership in the every day struggles of the workers and to give them experience by putting them into motion against their exploiters as well as against their misleaders. This conception of mass education in the class struggle also holds good in relation to the LaFollette movement.

What does the minority propose? Read point section of their proposal above quoted and you will find repeated, "we shall conduct a strong campaign of criticism against the LaFollette movement, pointing out that it is a liberal capitalist third party and not a farmer-labor party and raising the slogan of a class farmer-labor party." Comrades, what does this mean but that we must give to the workers a theoretical exposition of the possible virtues of a farmer-labor party as against the vices of the third party movement? How many workers could be moved to action by an analysis of the economic bases of the two types of parties? Yet we cannot point to the achievements of a farmer-labor party because this party has not yet even been born, much less had a record of achievements which might draw the workers to it. Any comrade who stops to think for a moment will see the absurdity and impossibility of moving masses of workers in this fashion.

On the other hand, the majority thesis proposes a campaign of action, a campaign to get the workers near enough to scratch the paint off the surface of their LaFollette idol and bring to light the dead wood which is the real body of this movement so far as the working class is concerned.

We must choose between these two methods that one which is most efficient to accomplish our present aim, the unmasking of the LaFollette illusion. To me the two proposals resolve themselves into three words: Talk versus action. Our slogan must be: Forward to action.

How Shall We Fight the LaFollette Movement?

By IDA DAILES

IN the heat of defense and attack of the conflicting views of the question of our party's policy, many comrades are losing sight of the main issue before us, or else they are pushing it into the background of the discussion. When we eliminate the past misdeeds that each side hurls against the other, the whole controversy centers on the question, "How can we separate the workers and poor farmers from the LaFollette movement?"

Under the heading, "Immediate Tasks of the Party," the majority thesis states: "1. Exposure of the bourgeois nature of LaFolletteism. This becomes the central problem of our agitation and propaganda. It must be carried out along the following lines: a) Formulate concrete political demands based on immediate burning needs of the masses; b) popularize these demands among the masses; c) call upon the rank and file in the shops, unions, among the unemployed, to address resolutions, petitions, and to hold mass meetings demanding that the 'labor wing' in the LaFollette combination and the LaFollette group in congress propose legislation along the lines of the demands of the masses, at the same time creating the necessary united front rank and file roganization for the struggle; d) by these campaigns unmask the nature of LaFolletteism and of the labor lieutenants of the LaFollette movement, expose the futility of democratic-pacifist parliamentarism and demonstrate the necessity of following the leadership of the only class political party, the Workers Party . . . and then it continues, giving slogans for these immediate united front struggles.

The minority thesis offers, in opposition to this, the following: "The concrete steps which we must take in carrying out the policy are the following: a) Our members in the trade unions shall conduct a strong campaign of criticism against the LaFollette progressive movement, pointing out that it is a liberal capitalist third party and not a farmer-labor party and raising the slogan of a class farmer-labor party and splitting these trade unions away from the LaFollette progressive movement. (b) Wherever labor unions are affiliated with units of the LaFollette progressive organization, our members shall seek to become delegates and to make in these organizations the same criticism and raise the slogan of the 'class farmer-labor party' and to split them away from the LaFollette progressive movement. c) We shall oppose the affiliation with the LaFollette progressive organizations of any unions not already affiliated. d) In relation to the coming national convention tentatively set for January by the LaFollette progressive organization, our policy shall be, that wherever party members are in organizations affiliated and entitled to send delegates, to have our party members elected with instructions to make the same criticism against the LaFollette progressive organization in its national convention and raise the slogan of a 'class-farmer-labor party' in order to build a left-bloc and split it away. e) We shall mobilize all the class farmer-labor elements with which we have contact and which are ready to break with the LaFollette progressive organization for the same campaign against this as a liberal, third capitalist party and not a labor party and to have them raise the slogan of a 'class farmer-labor party' and to split with the LaFollette progressive movement."

COMMUNISM VERSUS OPPORTUNISM

By A. WINICK.

AT this critical time when the destiny of our party is discussed in reference to the adoption of either the majority or the minority thesis, it is highly important to analyze the fundamental differences of the two groups in the C. E. C. of the Workers Party.

Both factions of the C. E. C., I presume, agree that our aim to which we are striving is the dictatorship of the proletariat, thru which the Communistic state will be established. This can only be accomplished thru organizing a strong Communist Party of the vanguard of the working class and poor farmer, which will finally realize their aim. Mentioning these axioms which no true Communist can afford to ignore, is simply to remind some of our comrades who seem to be forgetful regarding the old truths. Now let us look into the thesis of the minority and see their inconsistency.

The thesis of the minority does not take into consideration whether the present time is opportune for the slogan of a farmer-labor party, yet they proceed arguing in favor of such a slogan and it is only as the result of severe criticism from the comrades of the majority that, no other, but one of the authors of the minority document Comrade Jay Lovestone in an article printed in the DAILY WORKER, December 9, confesses that the slogan of a farmer-labor party cannot be expected with "immediate success."

But allow me to quote a paragraph of his splendid article. He says: "Communists do not measure the calamity of their tactics and program with the same yardstick that the vulgar bourgeois pragmatists do. Communists do not test the revolutionary value of their slogans or principles by the chances of 'immediate success.'"

Comrade Lovestone forgets that Communists are not utopians and good party tacticians are not adventurists, any comrade who is endeavoring to revive a slogan which is dead, the least one can say about it, will be either a utopian or at least a poor tactician, but Comrade Lovestone does not belong to neither category because he asserts himself that he is not expecting from the minority panacea an "immediate success."

The LaFollette petty-bourgeoisie combination have received the support of the working class of America the recent election showed clearly and definitely, the fighting line is distinctly outlined for the Workers' Party, on one side the big capitalist "monster" in the center the "yellow plague" and on the left the vanguard of the working class and the poor farmers under the banner of the Workers Party. No retreating into a half-baked farmer-labor, semi-Communist Party will bring good results but will only weaken the Workers Party.

Our next practical step is a call to the workers and poor farmers to join the Communist ranks, strengthen our party within, organize the unemployed, etc., etc.

It is clearly understood that the adoption of a program is not measured with immediate results, because it is the basis on which the party rests upon, while a slogan is a question of tactics and may be changed at times due to conditions which arise, the not at the expense of our fundamentals.

The attitude of the majority is clear, pointing out that the present time is inopportune for the slogan of a farmer-labor party.

Communists have proved the world over that thru a strong disciplined workable party it is possible to exercise more influence over the great masses of the proletariat and the poor farmers than thru a loose formless organization— and that is exactly what the comrades of the minority are seeking to build if their thesis of a farmer-labor party is adopted.

In Memoriam—Lenin

On the 21st of January the workers the world over will hold memorial meetings for Nicolai Lenin, the leader and fighter for the liberation of the laboring masses. In connection with these memorial meetings, on Thursday, Jan. 15, a moving picture, "In Memoriam—Lenin," will be shown in the Gartner's Independent Theatre, 3725 Roosevelt Road. Two other pictures will also be shown: "Polikushka," and "Soldier Ivan's Miracle."

Admission will be 50c. Tickets are for sale now at Russian Technical School, 1902 W. Division St., Russian Co-operative Restaurants, 1734 W. Division St. and 760 Milwaukee Ave., at 166 W. Washington St., Room 307, at the DAILY WORKER, 1113 W. Washington Blvd., and by all members of the Technical Aid Society, U. S. S. R.

A 12-Page Issue

On the First Birthday of the DAILY WORKER.

THE issue of January 13 will be heaped full of facts and features—all gaily attired with cartoons to best celebrate the very first birthday of the DAILY WORKER.

Comrade Bob Minor's splendid cartoons will be a leading feature. A review of the past year of American labor in general and the Workers Party in particular—plus the part the DAILY WORKER has played in both—will be another feature.

Special contributions by Wm. Z. Foster, Wm. F. Dunne, J. Louis Engdahl, T. J. O'Flaherty, Manuel Gomez and others among the best writers in the labor movement will add their share to the first birthday celebration.

Give this issue to a worker and you assure the DAILY WORKER a new reader—and your branch of the party a new member.

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

THE BALANCE SHEET OF THE PARTY CONTROVERSY TO DATE

By JAY LOVESTONE.

IN view of the fact that the Comintern has not yet spoken directly on the immediate party controversy and that the national convention has not yet been held, it may be considered by some a bit premature to talk of a balance sheet of the party dispute. Still, it is appropriate, on the eve of the second stage of the party controversy, to list briefly the assets and liabilities of the contending groups in the first round of the contest.

Results of Meetings.

In the capital cities of nine of our biggest districts, membership meetings have been held to discuss the party problems. Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Minneapolis and New Haven have had such meetings for discussion and voting on the thesis before the party.

In this balloting the Foster-Lore theses received a net total of 1516 votes. The combined strength that the followers of extreme right wing of our party of the Two-and-a-Half International tendency in our party, and the crystallizing opportunistic, non-Marxian Cannon-Foster leadership could muster has been registered at about fifteen hundred.

At the same time, to use the expression of the American commission of the executive committee of the Comintern, the Marxian group led by Comrade Ruthenberg, the group of "Communist consciousness" in our party, despite overwhelming odds, succeeded in polling 1286 votes. Thus, against a vicious attack, against a barrage of unparalleled slander, and villification, against a united front ranging from the extremest right wing of Lore, Doctor Aronson of New York and "Moscow agent" fame, and Pahle Burman to certain extremely left sick comrades, the Marxian group of our party enlightened the membership to such an extent as to be nosed out by only 230 votes thruout the country.

Some Illuminating Sidelights.

But the circumstances and conditions surrounding the contest are far more illuminating and significant for the party than the cold, dry figures at hand.

First of all, the thesis indorsed by the Foster-Lore group was a jumble of false pseudo and empty promises as calculated to appeal to every section of party opinion. To the left sick Communists in our ranks the Foster-Lore group of self-annointed "pure" revolutionists turned a face anti-farmer-labor in principle. To the extremest right, opportunist elements in our party, the C. E. C. majority held proudly aloft the Lore-Poyntz Burman coat of arms of "militant Communism." To the comrades who still entertained doubts as to timidness of dropping the united front farmer-labor slogan, the Foster-Lore group yelled: "We are not opposed to the labor party in principle, but not just now, in the future."

The discussion waged in the ranks by the Foster-Lore adherents was precisely along theses lines. The futilitarian policies of this unholy alliance menacing the progress of the Workers (Communist) Party were appealed for thru an appeal to the most backward and harmful sentiments in the party. Vicious whispering campaigns were organized on a country-wide basis against the C. E. C. minority members and their Two-and-a-Half International group in our party. The growing awareness on the part of our membership of the menace to the party in such an alliance—an alliance in flagrant violation of the last C. I. decision on the American question—can only prove a source of greatest strength towards a speedy galvanizing and complete unification of our Communist ranks for intensified struggles against the exploiters, their government, and the reactionary trade union bureaucracy.

Considering all the obstacles, considering the level of the discussion maintained by the Foster-Lore group, the Workers (Communist) Party should feel highly gratified at the splendid response given by the membership to the Communist policies proposed by the Ruthenberg group. Our Workers (Communist) Party can well face the future, its rapidly growing difficult future, with so firm, with so adamant a Communist backbone in its ranks.

Foster-Lore Strength at Peak.

No one can deny that the total vote polled by the Foster-Lore group represents its maximum strength. Likewise, no one can deny the fact that the C. E. C. minority strength was not fully mobilized. The C. E. C. majority had at its disposal for winning over the membership and mobilizing its adherents of all stripes the complete state power—the party machinery. Its speakers had the tremendous advantage of speaking first and last in the debates. The Foster-Lore group had its articles placed in the best section of the space allotted to the discussion of party tasks. Certain minority articles were held up in publication for sundry "strategic reasons."

Then Comrade Burman, against the protest of a considerable portion of the rank and file, made outrageous use of the official machinery of the Finnish federation in misrepresenting the issues before the party. Certain organizers of the Young Workers' League displayed their youthful energy in working overtime for the C. E. C. majority while on tour building up the young Communist movement. Nor were the DAILY WORKER machinery and other party agencies neglected. In short, the C. E. C. majority of today, unlike the majority of the C. E. C. of last year, more than utilized the party "state power" in its widest ramifications. In parenthesis, the extraordinary energy of our "educational" department which was temporarily moved to New York might also be mentioned.

The Role of State Power.

Of course, we are not swearing volleys against the C. E. C. majority for its use of the party state power in the controversy. We are charitable enough not even to condemn its repeated flagrant misuse of this state power. We do not deny that the C. E. C. majority—the Foster-Lore group—nosed out the Marxian group of Comrade Ruthenberg by 230 votes. We do not begrudge the Foster-Lore group this paltry majority of 230. It certainly was well-earned, considering the efforts invested and the resources at the command of the Foster-Lore group. In fact, we marvel at the fact that Foster-Lore majority was so slim after the eleventh hour change of rules disfranchising hundreds of comrades at these membership meetings and in view of the lack of facilities at the command of the C. E. C. minority to mobilize its real, full strength in the party.

A Redeeming Feature.

It is plain that the party expression to date is nearly evenly divided. In every big city where the C. E. C. majority position was indorsed, it was done so only thru an organic merger and complete unity of the Foster-Burman group with the Lore followers. In New York, Boston, and Chicago, the solid block of Lore adherents alone gave the majority of the membership meetings to the C. E. C. majority. Consequently, no matter what damage the party controversy might have brought, it at least has brought one inestimable gain to the party. We have in mind the fact that this discussion has once and for all established in the eyes of the membership the unity between the Foster-Burman group and the Lore Two-and-a-Half International group in our party. The growing awareness on the part of our membership of the menace to the party in such an alliance—an alliance in flagrant violation of the last C. I. decision on the American question—can only prove a source of greatest strength towards a speedy galvanizing and complete unification of our Communist ranks for intensified struggles against the exploiters, their government, and the reactionary trade union bureaucracy.

Considering all the obstacles, considering the level of the discussion maintained by the Foster-Lore group, the Workers (Communist) Party should feel highly gratified at the splendid response given by the membership to the Communist policies proposed by the Ruthenberg group. Our Workers (Communist) Party can well face the future, its rapidly growing difficult future, with so firm, with so adamant a Communist backbone in its ranks.

THE FARMER-LABOR PARTY POLICY IN THE UNIONS

By BERT MILLER.

PAT and Mike, two bricklayers from the Emerald Isle, were working one day on the front of a building, when suddenly a portion of the scaffolding collapsed and Mike fell to the street. He lay there for a long time in a state of unconsciousness until a doctor was called. The doctor examined Mike thoroly and pronounced him dead. At that moment, Mike woke up and said, "By God, I ain't dead at all." Whereupon his colleague, Pat, exclaimed in a voice shaking with exasperation, "Shut up, ye fool, don't ye tink de doctor knows wot he's talkin' about?" And so the members of the Workers Party, as well as the working class in generaly, are asked to meekly accept the verdict of Bittelman, when he pronounces in tones of extreme unction and finality, that the labor party slogan is dead. Having, like Mike, experienced the advantages of life and real activity, the members of the Workers Party, as well as the workers in general, will be prone to question the solemn verdict of even so "sage" a counsellor as Bittelman. They will instead seriously examine the facts in the situation.

The Development of Farmer-Labor Movement.

In 1920 the national farmer-labor party polled 265,411 votes in 19 states. At the conference of the C. P. P. A. party held on Dec. 11, 1922, at which were represented 27 national unions, 8 state federations of labor and various agricultural and political organizations, a motion for "independent political action by the agricultural and industrial workers thru a party of their own" was defeated by a vote of only 52 to 64. According to figures published in the Labor Herald, almost twenty state federations of labor endorsed a labor party in 1923, in addition to hundreds of local and national unions.

In 1924 the farmer-labor majority in the lower house of the legislature of North Dakota, was increased from one to eleven. (New Republic, Nov. 26, 1924). Ayres received over 18,000 votes for United States senator on a farmer-labor ticket, and Putnam received 20,876 for governor. Two years ago the vote for the farmer-labor candidate for governor of Minnesota was 295,479 as compared with 309,758 for the republican candidate. In the recent election the farmer-labor candidate polled 365,000 votes as compared with 400,000 for the republican candidate. As farmer-labor candidate for U. S. senate, Shipstead received about 375,000 votes against 385,000 for Schall, his opponent. True the Minnesota party is part of the LaFollette movement, which we must severely criticize as such and demand a real labor party, nevertheless the results indicate that the farmer-labor party slogan still retains its popularity.

In Denver the farmer-labor vote for LaFollette was 4,951 in spite of the fact that there was a separate LaFollette-Wheeler ticket.

In Montana an energetic campaign was waged by the farmer-labor party.

These facts and figures show that the farmer-labor party movement is not a mere bubble, which has for some unexplicable reason appeared and suddenly disappeared from the political horizon, but rather that it is a movement which has years of thoro-going organization behind it and that its roots are sunk deep in the economic struggle of the industrial and agricultural workers.

LaFollette Movement and F. L. P.

It is true that the LaFollette wave has for the time being subsided. Can such a movement, however, be swallowed for long by the present nondescript shadow of an organization headed by LaFollette? Can this vague vacillating, purely temporary alliance of conflicting elements hold the workers who have unmistakably shown their determination to have a real, independent political party? Are economic conditions at this time for the crystallization of a third middle class party which can retain its hold on the workers who desire a class party?

Unless we are deliberately blind we must admit that the LaFollette hodge podge will not be able to hold the workers and farmers who, in the face of increasing exploitation and oppression (a prospect admitted by the majority), will be forced to defend themselves thru the aid of their own political weapon, a labor party. Under these circumstances let us examine for a moment what will be the probable results if we as active trade unionists were to put the majority's policy into effect, i. e., not to "promulgate the slogan of a farmer-labor party' at the present time," calling upon the workers instead to join the Workers Party. The value of a slogan can well be tested by its applicability in the trade unions.

In Practice.

Under this policy the members of the Workers Party will then have as their major political task in the labor movement (for political activity there in the unions must be a prime activity there), to force the acceptance of the complete program of the Workers Party. In the most reactionary organizations, where workers only yesterday were blindly following LaFollette, Davis, yes, and even Coolidge, you will ask the workers to come out for the dictatorship of the proletariat and to join the Workers Party. (See statement on C. P. P. A.) Those militants who have been partially sympathetic with your work in the union, but who are politically still confused will be squarely confronted with the issue to accept or reject the complete program of the Workers Party. There will be no other alternative. The result of such a foolhardy policy can only be to prejudice the very elements whose support you can ultimately win, and to make it easy for the reactionaries to expel you without a murmur of protest from your fellow workers.

It is a cardinal principle of strategy that you must not expose your weakness to the enemy whom you are fighting. When the issue of supporting the Workers Party comes on the floor will your sympathizers support you? Of course not. Only the Communists will (if they dare at this time) come out openly in support of the full program of the Workers Party. They will be completely isolated and exposed to the danger of being picked out and expelled by the officials.

Expulsion on such an issue at this time would be comparatively easy. The workers do not realize the importance and necessity of the existence of the Workers Party. The reactionaries will charge that you are in the union, not for the promotion of the interests of the workers, but primarily in the interests of the Workers Party. Immediately you would be placed upon the defensive, whereas Communists should as a rule be on the offensive. You would have on your hands a difficult job of showing even the most backward workers, even those who voted for Davis and Coolidge, first that they need a political party of their own class (which they have not yet learned) and second that the political party is the Workers Party. To this the majority would reply, "But see what the Workers Party is planning to do about unemployment, child labor, the foreign-born, etc.," and the unsophisticated workers would ask, "What has the Workers Party done about these issues? Has the Workers Party any representatives in congress or the legislature to fight for our interests." Of course, the Communists understand that these issues cannot be fought out in parliaments, but the masses of workers do not.

A Confession in Bankruptcy.

The majority would have us voluntarily give over the political leadership of the workers to the farmer-labor parties and the socialists. During the coming struggle the workers will need a political weapon. The farmer-laborites and the socialists will come out for a labor party. Shall we sit idly by, shall we merely oppose the proposition and present no counter-proposal or shall we oppose and present a counter-proposal, "Join the Workers Party?" In the first case we relinquish our role as the vanguard and the leaders of the workers. In the second we seem to be fault finding only with no constructive to offer. The third proposition is a final mass appeal at this time, as I have already pointed out.

What a sorry figure we will cut before the workers, when we the most energetic exponents of the class farmer-labor party idea, now keep silent or oppose it entirely. Will we not rightfully be branded as traitors and turncoats by the workers?

Compare the predicament into which the application of the majority policy places us, with our favorable position under the minority proposition. As soon as we actively and energetically come out for a class farmer-labor party, a national federation of workers' and farmers' organizations, both economic and political, the leaders are forced to take the defensive. Those elements which are not yet with us but who are in favor of class political action, must line up with us. The masses who are not yet amenable to the complete program and tactics of the Workers Party can easily understand and sympathize with the slogan for a real party representing all the forces fighting in the struggle for the workers and farmers of the country. We sink our roots more and more firmly in the masses and they learn to have confidence in us.

We can, therefore, the more easily state who we are and what we stand for. We do not place the backward masses in the position of taking or leaving the program of the Workers Party, for they are not yet ready. However, we energetically and systematically enlighten the more class conscious workers as to our full program, and its real meaning. These elements we can win to our party by such a plan of education and activity, on the basis of a realistic policy grounded on the objective conditions which the workers are facing today.

Contact With the Masses, Not Isolation

By HENRY BLEECKER.

THE movement for a farmer-labor party which started a few years ago was swallowed by the LaFollette movement. For this reason we must abandon the slogan, "For a farmer-labor party," and start building the Workers Party according to the thesis of the majority of the central executive committee. Instead of a farmer-labor party slogan they propose the slogan "For a labor congress."

Conditions Which Created the Farmer-Labor Party Movement.

The movement for a farmer-labor party started to crystallize during the year of 1919-20. This movemen was characterized by: (a) unemployment; (b) reduction of wages; (c) strikes; (d) open shop drive; (e) injunctions, etc. It passed from a period of economic depression, six million workers were unemployed as a result of this. Those who secured work were forced to work for reduced wages.

In the steel strike of 1919 and the miners' strike of 1920 the government used its full forces to break these strikes: Federal troops, injunctions, etc. The realization of the workers that the government is protecting the interests of the bosses stimulated them toward independent political action, with the result of the formation of the Chicago labor party. But, this movement made little progress until 1922 when the shopmen and miners' strike broke out. The government again played the role of defender for the capitalists. The farmers were suffering from the same economic depression. Millions of farmers were driven into bankruptcy. The farms were deserted, and the oppressed farmers made way for the city in search of work. This fermentation among the workers and farmers brought the farmer-labor movement to the fore. Farmer-labor parties sprung up in several states. International unions expressed themselves in favor of independent political action.

The Workers Party and the United Front.

The Workers Party was politically unknown to the masses. Thru its participation in the movement for a farmer-labor party and by applying the United Front tactic in accordance with the instructions of the Comintern, the Workers Party became a factor in the political struggles of the exploited masses.

The LaFollette Movement.

Parallel to the farmer-labor movement, the small bourgeoisie who are also in conflict with the big capitalists began organizing politically, which expressed itself in the formation of the progressive bloc in congress under the leadership of LaFollette.

The call for the June 17 convention for the sake of organizing the workers and farmers into a political party was unsuccessful on account of the attacks of LaFollette and the union bureaucrats of the A. F. of L. The workers and farmers deserted the June 17 convention, and followed LaFollette because they were under the illusion that a farmer-labor party would be created by LaFollette after the election.

Who Voted for LaFollette.

In the article, "Sound the Alarm," written in the WORKER of Nov. 15, Comrade Bittelman states that the petty bourgeoisie deserted LaFollette in the last election because of the terroristic methods used by Wall Street to elect Coolidge, and the promise of certain economic concessions on the part of Wall Street to the petty bourgeoisie. He further proves that the 5,000,000 votes which LaFollette received came mostly from the workers and poor farmers.

The Economic Situation in the Near Future.

In their analysis of the economic situation, the majority of the central executive committee state the following: (Paragraph 6, Economic Situation, majority thesis) The overwhelming weight of economic tendencies now operative, point to an intensification of the class struggle, resulting in renewed efforts of the employing class to cut wages, lengthen hours, and to destroy the unions.

We as Communists must draw the conclusion that this unrest among the workers and farmers will again be expressed in a demand for a farmer-labor party, and not to be isolated from this movement we must take an active part in it.

The Majority's Slogan for a Labor Congress.

The majority of the central executive committee are against the farmer-labor party slogan. They also claim there is no movement for it. I ask this question, is there a movement for the so-called labor congress which the majority urges us to work for? When we look thru the pages of history of the American working class political movement we find that the idea for independent political action was here expressed in the form of a labor congress. The slogan for a labor congress will only hinder the movement for the formation of a farmer-labor party, which is not only the slogan of a present but was historically popular, among workers and farmers.

Conclusion.

We expect intensive crises in the immediate future. The workers and poor farmers will again start organizing politically thru a farmer-labor party. It is, therefore, the duty of the Workers Party, if it expects to become a Communist mass party, to take an active part in this movement.

As in the program of the profintern for the Trade Union Educational League in reference to the labor party.

"The league shall take an active part in the building of the labor party. This movement not only teaches the workers their first lesson in class political action, but it also furnishes a favorable ground for the left wing in the trade union bureaucracy, and to bring about trade union progress generally. The league must take full advantage of the favorable situation created by the labor party movement."

Comrades, the slogan of a farmer-labor party means contact with the masses. Without this slogan—tends to isolation.

"REVOLUTIONARY" PHRASE MONGERS

By SIMON FELSHIN.

THE thesis of the majority is not a thesis. It is fly-paper for catching flies. There is something in it for everybody. This is a practice followed by the republican and democratic parties just before elections, so that the majority is living up to the best American tradition in the construction of its thesis. For the leftist sectarians and romantic revolutionists in the party the thesis states that the farmer-labor party tactic means liquidation of the Workers Party and is opportunistic. For those who still favor a farmer-labor party it hints that the farmer-labor party idea is not rejected definitely but that only for the present the movement is dead. To the right wing opportunists it holds out the prospect of a passive, well-behaved, declamation and propaganda club, which is just what suits them.

The spokesmen of the majority are constantly talking about fake farmer-labor parties. I would retort by writing all over the thesis of the majority in huge letters so that all may see: Fake United Front. It ill-becomes the majority to speak of fake farmer-labor parties and to swear hat they will give us the true, revolutionary united front from below when they have been guilty in the past of forming fake united fronts with any one who came along. Only one instance is enough—the fake united front with John Fitzpatrick in Chicago.

Conditions Analyzed.

The conditions that gave rise to the farmer-labor party movement have not changed. It is a fact that 23 per cent of the farmers went bankrupt. The temporary boom barely enabled only a section of the exploited farmers to pay off some of the accumulated debts, and their condition is hardly changed. Unemployment has not abated to any extent. How then have the conditions changed? The majority says that LaFollette has captured the farmer-labor party movement. If that is so it is our duty to go out and save the workers from LaFollette. We must fight for the soul of the masses, and not capitulate before the enemy without a struggle. The attitude of the majority means that we extend a helping hand to LaFollette; that's what it means in the final analysis.

A "Majority" Champion at Work.

A typical presentation of the majority point of view is that of Joe Manley, their newly acquired champion who presented his wares at a discussion meeting of the Harlem English branch in New York. One of the most remarkable transformations is that of Comrade Joe Manley. How can we take a comrade seriously who undergoes such a complete, such a sudden change? I must say that it took my breath away to hear his brazen tirade. He worked himself up blue in the face, just as he used to do over the very opposite position only a short time ago. He seems to have forgotten completely his recent protestations of faith. The whole performance looked to me like a neat bit of salesmanship. A salesman can take any kind of goods and speak to it with just as much conviction, enthusiasm and sincerity as of any other kind of goods. It's a way salesmen have. But what is this we Communists are doing? Are we selling wares?

Comrade Manley says that all the farmer-labor parties that were formed in the past were fake parties. But how about all those articles he wrote telling the very contrary? Why didn't he speak up then? Was he lying then or is he lying now?

Stand By the C. I.

Comrades should stand by the instructions of the Communist International which were issued only recently and not only in 1922 as stated by Comrade Manley. These instructions say explicitly and in such clear language that every dog in the street can understand: "The first task of the Workers Party is to become a mass Communist Party of workers. It can fulfill this task only by most actively participating in the establishment of a labor party which will embrace all elements of the working class willing to conduct a fight for a policy independent of the capitalist class and by establishing a bond with the farmers who are at present in a state of strong fermentation."

Business "Communism" in New York.

A deal has been made in New York. One week Lore's followers spoke in favor of retaining the farmer-labor party slogan. The very next week they lined up solidly with the majority. This is a deal between the majority and Lore. Lore, the Two-and-a-Half Internationalist was to stay out of the fight until the last minute in order not to inconvenience the majority by openly attaching himself to it.

At the same time he immediately released his followers so that they might line up with the majority and thus present a solid front to the Communist minority. The reward to Lore perhaps will be that in case of victory for the majority, he and another Two-and-a-Half Communist will be on the new central executive committee. If such a deal has been made, it is nothing but a dirty trick and the New York comrades should not be taken in by it.

A "Pure" Communist Protests Too Much.

Comrade Juliet Stuart Poyntz beclouds the issue by constantly reviving the third party alliance (that's their game), failing to mention that her allies past and present were the staunchest supporters of this position. Comrade Poyntz is now the second Sylvia Pankhurst. She will have nothing to do with the farmer-labor party because that is compromise, opportunism, menshevism, socialism, she says. She wants to be pure, chaste; she does not want to lose her Communist virginity. Sylvia Pankhurst, the renegade, in her day, spoke the very same kind of language, as for instance, when she wrote the following: "A Communist Party must keep its doctrine pure, and its independence of reformism inviolate; its mission is to lead the way, without stopping or turning, by the direct road to the Communist revolution."

And Comrade Lenin handled her as she deserved in his pamphlet, "Left Communism — And Infantile Sickness." Comrades would do well to read this pamphlet of Lenin, particularly now when our party is threatened by this same sickness, this left wing sectarianism which is only the counterpart to right wing opportunism.

Membership Will Not be Fooled

Comrades should not be misled by ultra revolutionary phrases which are only a cloak for passivity, lack of revolutionary conviction, skepticism, the rankest kind of opportunism. Let the revolutionary phrase mongers continue to play at being ultra-revolutionary—their shamming will be uncovered in the end. And as for those of the rank and file who are deluded by this phraseology, they will soon come to their senses.

Comrades, we must fight against the defeatism which is threatening to engulf of our party. We must fight against the forces that are trying to turn our party into a propaganda club, a sect. We must combat the one-sided ideology of trade unionism, the pseudo syndicalism in the party which does not understand the role of a Communist Party. We must Bolshevize our party with the methods and in the spirit of Leninism.

EMPLOYMENT OFF 10 PER CENT FROM FIGURE OF 1923

Vehicles, with Iron and Steel, Lead

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

No improvement in the unemployment situation is shown in the employment report of the U. S. department of labor for November, 1924. The figures drawn from 6,773 establishments employing over 2,000,000 workers show that thruout the month the level of employment remained more than 10 per cent below that of November, 1923.

The report shows a decrease in the total amount paid out in wages due in part to wage reductions and in part to reduced operations. Total wages were 13.2 per cent short of those disbursed in November, 1923, while per capital earnings were down 3.5 per cent.

The general level of employment shown in the department's index is about 19 per cent lower that the average for 1919. In other words about 1,700,000 of the 9,096,000 shown in the census of manufacturers in that year were off the payrolls in November, 1924.

Decreases in employment of more than 10 per cent compared with a year ago were reported in 20 industries while 28 industries showed total wage payments lower by more than one-tenth.

The situation is shown by industrial groups as follows, the figures representing decreases as compared with Nov. 1923:

Industries	Employment Per Ct.	Payroll Per Ct.
Food	8.5	7.9
Textiles and their products	9.5	10.9
Iron and steel products	14.1	17.4
Lumber and its products	3.7	6.4
Leather and its products	6.5	9.5
Paper and printing	*1.7	*3.3
Chemicals and oils	9.2	9.3
Stone, clay and glass prod.	6.9	8.7
Tobacco products	*0.3	*2.1
Vehicles	15.7	17.0
Miscellaneous	7.6	8.4

*Increase.

In the food group slaughtering and meat packing showed a reduction of 10.6 per cent in both employment and wages while confectionary showed a drop of 16.1 in employment and 14.4 per cent in wages. In the textile group cotton goods showed a reduction of 14.3 in employment and 19.1 in wages, hosiery and knit goods a drop of 11.1 per cent in employment and 11.8 per cent in wages and men's clothing a drop of 11.9 per cent in employment and 17.5 in wages.

The heaviest falling off in the iron and steel group occurred in foundries and machine shops which show 21.3 fewer employes and 25.6 smaller wage disbursements than in Nov. 1923. In the iron and steel industry proper employment is down 11.2 per cent and wages 14.3 per cent.

Under vehicles the automobile industry shows a reduction of 16.1 per cent in the number employed and 24.7 in wage payments, while railroad car building and repairing reports a decrease of 15.7 in employment and 17.3 per cent in wages. In the miscellaneous industry group are agricultural implements with a drop of 10 per cent in employment and 12.7 in wages, electrical apparatus with a drop of 13.2 per cent in employment and 16.7 per cent in wages, and shipbuilding with decreases of 26.4 per cent in employment and 27.9 per cent in wages.

The report also shows that in November these industries taken as a whole operated with 81 per cent of their normal full force of employes and these employes worked 91 per cent of full time. In other words industry was working at somewhat under 74 per cent of full-time capacity.

MILITANTS? WE'LL SAY SO!

EVERY members of our branch will take a $5.00 insurance policy and will pay for same the first pay that we get. At present we are all out of work and have been for some time, but the mill will start up on Jan. 6, and we are promised that it will operate a whole year. That sounds too good to be true, but let's hope it is.

"Can you place our branch on the Militant Page with this pledge?"

John Stose, secretary of the Canonsburg English branch, was answered in the affirmative.

The Workers Party in Action

CZECHO-SLOVAK EDITOR IS HELD FOR DEPORTATION

New Offensive Is Waged Against Workers

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—The capitalist government is tireless in its attacks on the workers of the country. It has its eye especially on the militants of the working class, knowing that these fighters are not afraid to defend the interests of the working class.

The latest attack is the arrest of Emmanuel Vajtauer, editor of the Obrana, the Czechoslovakian revolutionary labor paper. Comrade Vajtauer is an old revolutionist, with a record in the movement in Czechoslovakia. Comrade Vajtauer was a responsible worker in the Czechoslovakian Communist Party and came to this country in December, 1923. Here he entered the labor movement and has done splendid work in furthering the interest of the workers, especially of the Czechoslovakian workers in this country. As editor of the Obrana, he has not feared to incur the hatred of the capitalist class. His pen has been keen—and the capitalist government fears him.

Fighter For Workers

Vajtauer is also a splendid speaker and often appeared at labor meetings. The government determined to uproot the revolutionary movement in this country, had its SPY at this meeting, who made notes of Comrade Vajtauer's speech. This speech was the story of the Russian revolution. Comrade Vajtauer showed why the Russian workers and peasants were driven to put an end to the tsaristic regime. He showed that the methods that the capitalists use in one country are used in all other capitalist countries. He told his audience of conditions in this country—and that was his crime. Comrade Vajtauer is a foreign-born worker and therefore is supposed to keep his mouth shut about conditions in the United States.

Hence the capitalist government came down on Comrade Vajtauer, and he is now held for deportation on Ellis Island. A writ has been obtained, and it is hoped that the government will be defeated in its attempt to deport this militant worker.

Labor Defense Council Active

The Labor Defense Council, New York Division, 208 East 12th St., is conducting the defense of Vajtauer's case. If it is to be properly defended, money will be required. The cases of revolutionary workers before the capitalist courts are multiplying, and the demands on the Labor Defense Council are growing.

Every class-conscious worker and every labor organization must help in this defense. You must do your part AT ONCE. Delay may be costly. Comrade Vajtauer must be saved for further work in the United States.

OMAHA COMRADES OPEN THEIR OWN HEADQUARTERS

Once Started They're Going to Keep Going

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 5.—The war is on!

Now that Omaha Workers Party local has been in its own headquarters for nearly a year, the Kansas City comrades, not to be outdone by any other town on the Missouri river, have rolled up their sleeves, gone to work and opened one of their own!

Comrade J. E. Snyder, district organizer, deserves the largest share of credit for this sudden burst of Bolshevik activity along the "Big Muddy." The Kansas City comrades have always been a live bunch, but they allowed the Omaha reds to steal a march on them. The fight is now on to a finish, with no time out and no quarter given. The local which shows the most new members and most DAILY WORKER subscribers during 1925 will be able to claim the victory.

The discussion on the minority and majority theses has been continued by the Omaha city central committee until Wednesday evening, Jan. 14. At the last discussion, Dec. 29, the party members did not wish to trust their judgment to a vote until after further discussion. Comrade David Coutts defended the majority thesis and Tom Matthews the minority.

"In Memoriam—Lenin" to be shown Jan. 15 at Gartner's Theater.

MEMBERSHIP MEETINGS.

KENOSHA, WISCONSIN.

The general membership meeting, which is to vote upon the immediate tasks of the party, will take place in Kenosha, Wisconsin, at the German-American Home, 665 Grand avenue, Saturday, January 10, at 8 p. m.

Representatives of both the majority and minority will address the meeting, which will be governed by the rules laid down the C. E. C.

Attendance is compulsory and admittance will be by membership card only.

Waukegan, Ill., Membership Meeting.

The general membership meeting of the Workers Party of Waukegan, Ill., will be held on Sunday, Jan. 11, at 2 p. m., Workers Hall, 517 Helmholz avenue.

Discussion will take place upon the immediate tasks of the party and representatives of both the majority and minority of the C. E. C. will present their programs. The Waukegan Finnish, Waukegan Lithuanian and the North Chicago South Slavic branches must attend. The rules of the C. E. C. for conduct of meetings shall prevail and admission will be by membership card only.

Pullman City Central Meeting.

The city central committee of Pullman met last night at 10701 Stephenson Avenue, Pullman. There has been a steady increase in attendance at the Pullman meetings and the comrades have become vitally interested in all party problems. One of the immediate questions up before the Pullman comrades is the establishing of shop nuclei in the Pullman works. A new Italian branch has been organized in Dauphin Park and is connected with the Pullman city central.

Bronx Concert and Ball.

Saturday, Feb. 28; good music, good concert; proceeds to raise funds for section, and for library at Workers Hall. Comrades keep this day in mind.

CHICAGO LABOR DEFENSE BACKS I.W.A. MOVIE SHOW

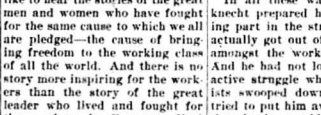
"Beauty and Bolshevik" at Ashland Auditorium

The active committee which just finished the successful five-day bazaar of the Labor Defense Council, has mobilized in support of the Russian feature film, "The Beauty and the Bolshevik," to be shown Feb. 5, at Ashland Auditorium, under the joint auspices of the DAILY WORKER and the International Workers' Aid. This action was taken at a meeting attended by delegates from a dozen organizations, immediately after George Maurer, secretary of the Labor Defense Council, had reported on the success of the bazaar. Wm. F. Kruse, of the International Workers' Aid, outlined the steps necessary to make the show a success.

Each working class organization is to distribute as many as possible of the fifty-cent admission tickets, and is to report to the next meeting the number of headquarters and other places where the large 28x42 colored lithographs can be displayed, as well as the addresses of stores and other places where ticket selling stations can be established. A souvenir program is to be printed and all branches are to endeavor to list all business houses that might advertise in it.

The picture program will consist of "The Beauty and the Bolshevik" and "Thru Red Russia Daily," a two-hour show that will be run thru twice at Ashland Auditorium, Ashland and Van Buren streets, Thursday night, Feb. 5, thus making a continuous show from seven to eleven.

The next meeting of the committee in charge will be held at Greek Hall, 722 Blue Island Ave., Saturday afternoon, Jan. 10, at 3:30 sharp. All organizations represented on the Labor Defense Bazaar Committee should see that their delegates attend, all "Red Aid" agents elected by Workers Party branches are to be present, and any organizations who have neither of these delegates should elect representatives at once, and make sure they attend.



THE STORY OF KARL LIEBKNECHT

Our young comrades always like to hear the stories of the great men and women who have fought for the same cause to which we all are pledged—the cause of bringing freedom to the working class of all the world. And there is no story more inspiring for the workers than the story of the great leader who lived and fought for the workers in Germany—Karl Liebknecht.

It is very natural that Karl Liebknecht should have, from the very beginning, been interested in the terrible conditions in which the workers are forced to live. In the very year that little Karl was born (1871), his father—William Liebknecht, who also was a loved leader of the workers—was lying in prison where the capitalists of Germany had thrown him, because he had tried to show the workers their road to freedom. As soon as Karl was able to understand, he pledged himself to continue the work of his father, and help the workers to get control of the government.

I wonder how many Juniors know just what the word "Liebknecht" means, even if it were not the name of the great German worker. It means in German "love of slaves." And you will see that Karl Liebknecht was rightly named, for all thru his life he showed that he loved the slaves—we call them workers who are "exploited" by the bosses—and that finally he even gave his life for them.

Karl Liebknecht attended school in Leipzig, one of the large German cities. When he was in school, he did just what the Juniors are doing now. He organized little clubs of his school and classmates. They met outside of school and studied together about the working class and about how the workers could be taught the truth about their terrible conditions. He took part in debates in his classes and he always choose the side that would help him show to the other pupils the conditions of the workers, the horrors and uselessness of capitalist wars, and the fact that the freedom of the workers would be obtained only if the YOUNG got behind the movement.

In all these ways Karl Liebknecht prepared himself for taking part in the struggle when he actually got out of school and in amongst the workers themselves. And he had not long been in the active struggle when the capitalists swooped down on him and tried to put him away where they thought he would be unable to influence the masses. In 1906, Karl Liebknecht gave a series of lectures to a large group of young workers organized together like the Young Workers League is now, and his subject was "Anti-Militarism." That meant that he was not in favor of militarism by the capitalists who used the armies made up of workers to get control for the capitalists, but that he was in favor of the workers having armies that would fight for themselves (as the Red Army of Russia does today).

When Karl Liebknecht had these lectures put together and printed in a book, the government of Germany arrested him and he was put into prison for a year and a half, and all his books and lectures were ordered destroyed.

The German government was afraid to have the workers read the book or listen to the lectures. The capitalists hoped that when Liebknecht went to prison some of the workers would forget about him and his ideas, and that the rest would be frightened and not try to give their own ideas for fear of getting in jail, too. But being in prison did not stop Liebknecht. The workers loved him even more when they saw that he was suffering because of his love for them. Even while he was in prison the workers of Berlin elected him to represent them in the Prussian congress. As soon as Liebknecht was out of prison, he again started his fight for the workers, this time in the "landtag," the name for the Prussian congress. He talked especially about the capitalist control of the schools to which the workers' children went. And thru his speeches in the congress the workers on the outside learned much.

English Branch of Rochester, Minn., Is With the Majority

ROCHESTER, Minn.—At the regular meeting of the English Branch, Rochester, Minn., after a thoro discussion of the Central Executive Committees and the articles appearing in the DAILY WORKER pertaining to the same, we find that:

Whereas, a mjority and a minority section of our central executive committee has perhaps unavoidably been formed, thereby unfortunately creating more or less of a muddle of opinions among comrades in general, and

Whereas, said printed discussions has a tendency in leading the membership in general to conclude that the central executive committee has failed to intelligently interpret instructions from the Communist International, if not willfully functionoing contrarily but

Whereas, we are convinced that the position of the majority is correct inasmuch as they point out that the party must be built by establishing contact with the rank and file of the workers themselves, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, that we of the Rochester English Branch unanimously approve of the majority thesis, believing that at this time the same is the proper Communist policy to pursue. (Signed) Nels M. Nelson, Sec'y.

Joliet, Ill., English Branch Unanimous for the Majority

JOLIET, Ill., Jan. 8.—The Joliet English branch of the workers Party, after discussion of the immediate tasks of the party as set forth in the theses of the majority and minority of the central executive committee, unanimously voted to support the majority.

Greek Branch, Toledo, Ohio, Unanimous for the Minority Thesis

TOLEDO, Ohio, Jan. 7.— After a long discussion of both the thesis of the minority and majority of the C. E. C., our branch unanimously adopted the minority thesis, which sets forth the effective means for permeating the politically back-ward masses of this country with Communist propaganda and for the building of the Workers (Communist) Party.—T. Dedakis, Secretary.

Cleveland Lettish Branch Unanimous For Minority Thesis

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Jan. 6.— The Lettish branch of the Workers Party of Cleveland unanimously indorsed the thesis of the minority at their meeting on Dec. 29, as constructive and the best means of building a mass Communist movement, and condemned the defeatist and sectarian attitude of the majority thesis.—(Signed) Yuria, Secretary.

West Brownsville, Pa., Also Unanimous for The Minority Position

WEST BROWNSVILLE, Pa., Jan. 7.—The West Brownsville branch of the Workers Party unanimously indorsed the minority thesis at the meeting on Jan. 4, after a thoro discussion on the effectiveness of the Communist Party slogan. The vote putting the Workers Party organization of West Brownsville on record for the minority thesis was 24 to 0.—(Signed) Vera D. Gridich, Secretary.

Philadelphia Jewish Central Branch Is For Minority Theses

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Jan. 8.—The Central Jewish Branch, the largest Jewish branch of the Workers Party of this city, endorsed the minority theses by a vote of 17 to 13, after a discussion in which Comrade Moissaye Olgin spoke for he majority and Comrade Harry Bail for the minority theses.

Brownsville Open Forum.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Jan. 8.—Is there a likelihood of revolution breaking out in China? What are the chances of its success against the whole gang of imperial robbers whose forces are stationed in the far east? What does Sun Yat Sen represent, and why are the workers interested in his success?

If you are interested in these and similar questions, then come to Comrade H. M. Wicks' lecture on "What Is the Significance of What Is Happening in China," on Sunday, Jan. 11, at 8:30 p. m., at the Brownsville Workers' Hall, 1544 Pitkin avenue, Brooklyn. Discussion after the lecture.

Lectures are given every Sunday evening, one week in English and the next in Yiddish. On Sunday, Jan. 18, Comrade Shachne Epstein will speak on "Anatole France and Henri Barbusse." (In Yiddish.)

LOS ANGELES TO CELEBRATE FIRST ANNIVERSARY OF THE DAILY WORKER JANUARY 13

By S. GLOBERMAN,
Los Angeles Representative of the Daily Worker.)

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Jan. 8.—A little over a year ago an appeal had reached us from the national office of the Workers Party, asking for a DAILY COMMUNIST NEWSPAPER.

A working class newspaper was needed which should propagate the principles of Communism every day in the year. We have done our duty and have raised a sum of over sixteen hundred dollars.

After the DAILY WORKER appeared, we constantly pointed out at the Workers Party meetings, the influence of our DAILY WORKER in spreading the principles of Communism. The result is hundreds of readers. During the year that the DAILY WORKER has been in existence, we have nearly doubled our membership. Our entertainments were always successful as well as our mass meetings. Without a Communist daily press we should not have been able to make such rapid progress.

On the 13th of January, 1925, we shall take inventory of what we have done for the DAILY WORKER, and outline plans of what we shall do after the first anniversary.

On the 13th of January, at Brooklyn Hall, corner Soto and Brooklyn Sts., Los Angeles will celebrate the first birthday party of America's only revolutionary class paper in the English language. Comrades of all nationalities are to meet that night to make the final drive for insurance policies to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925. Our slogan on that night will be, "Double the subscribers, double the circulation of the DAILY WORKER and insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925."

The English branch of the Workers Party has taken the initiative in arranging the DAILY WORKER birthday celebration.

Every comrade and every sympathizer is cordially invited to attend the DAILY WORKER celebration. I am sure that January 13 will be one of the most important nights that the Communist movement has ever witnessed in Los Angeles.

MASS DEMONSTRATION IN DETROIT BY YOUNG COMMUNISTS FOR KARL LIEBKNECHT DAY HELD JAN. 11

The greatest event in the history of the Young Workers League of Detroit will take place on Jan. 11, at the House of the Masses, Gratiot and St. Aubin, at 2 p. m.

A mass demonstration will be held to commemorate the work of our leaders—the founders of the Young Communist International—Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxenburg, who were foully murdered by the social democrats of Germany.

We must make this a LIVING monster demonstration, a demonstration that will forever be photographed on the memory of all those who attend.

The program will be as follows: Singing of the International by the entire audience. Remarks by chairman explaining the significance of Liebknecht day. Speech on role of Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxenburg in the struggle of the working class and especially in relation to the youth movement, by Comrade John Williamson, national secretary of the Young Workers' League. (Chicago.) A tableau by the Young Workers' League Juniors picturing the murder of Liebknecht and Luxenburg by the white guardist. Speech on the importance of the Communist youth movement in relation to the entire working class by Comrade A. Goetz of the Young Workers' League of Detroit, and a short talk on the work of the Young Workers' League of Detroit by Comrade F. S. Friedman. Singing of revolutionary songs will complete the program.

All workers are heartily invited to come and participate in this demonstration in honor and in memory of our dead leaders, Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxenburg. Admission free.

Roumanian Comrades Give Benefit Ball for I. W. A. Jan. 10

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—The Roumanian section of the International Workers' Aid has arranged a concert and ball which will take place on Saturday, Jan. 10, at 8 p. m., at 1347 Boston Road, the Bronx. All comrades and friends must attend this ball to help this newly formed section of the I. W. A. which has been doing such splendid work in taking care of Roumanian class war prisoners and their families.

The Roumanian revolutionary prisoners are brutally mistreated in the capitalist dungeons of Roumanian and their families are shamefully persecuted in many instances being left to starve. The Roumanian section of the I. W. A. has formed only a few months ago and is doing excellent work. In these few months the following sums have been collected thru the comrades named below:

Jesse Neufeld, $25.55; David Margulis, $52.40; Ida Weissman, $8.00; Jack Cooperman, $6.40; Leon Margulis, $12.20; Samuel Brown, $3.35; Morris Lipsin, $6.75; Abramowitz, $3.15; Anna Kimberg (Russian Branch, Y. W. L. No. 8), $2.80; Bertha Kimberg, Fania Kutchnek, $5.00; Rose Podner, $5.00; L. Roth, $5.20; Eva Bingham, $10.00;; Dimtru Tovescu, $4.50; I. Wolman, $26.75; Total, $179.75.

The Lenin Memorial Meetings

The Lenin memorial meeting, to be held on Sunday afternoon, February 1, at Madison Square Garden, New York, with similar meetings over the whole nation, will be the answer of America's workers to the black stream of lies pouring from the plute press against Soviet Russia. Experience in the past has shown that this barrage of vicious propaganda is but the opening gun of a powerful mobilization of the forces of international capitalism for a combined assault on the Soviet Republic.

Preparatory to this coming onslaught, the plute press is trying to give the impression that insurrection and rebellion are rife in Russia. The so-called revolution in Georgia was hailed with glee and later with disappointment when it proved to be an empty farce, engineered by foreign capital. More recently, the differences betwen Trotsky and the Communist Party of Russia have been pointed out as a sure sign of the hoped-for dissolution of the first workers' republic. The kept press brings daily reports of mutinies, riots, the jailing of Trotsky by Stalin, Stalin by Trotsky, and of both by Rykov, etc., ad nauseum.

The little entente in the Balkans have completed an alliance whose main purpose is frankly, united action against Soviet Russia. Of course, this alliance is subsidized and sponsored by England, France and the United States, the strongholds of international capitalism. Even Germany is being coaxed to join this unholy alliance.

Herbert Hoover, who was highly instrumental in overthrowing the Soviet government of Hungary in favor of the present fascist regime, sings a hymn of praise to the prosperity of all countries except Russia and China, the only two countries which have refused to bow to the mandates of international capital. He, of course, does not mention the fact that the workers of Germany, Italy and Japan, three of the leading capitalist countries, are suffering most terribly today, from low living standards due to low wages, long hours and the attacks on their organizations. In mighty England there are millions of unemployed and the price of bread is rising steadily. And in "happy" America the era of unemployment and wage cuts is just beginning.

But the workers of the world understand these attacks on the first workers' republic. They understand that Soviet Russia today stands as the mighty bulwark against the sweeping tide of reaction which the employing class desires to let loose. And the Lenin memorial meeting on Sunday afternoon, February 1, at Madison Square Garden will draw the workers from every part of Greater New York and they will seize this opportunity to pledge their faith and loyalty to the first Soviet Republic and to the principles of Lenin.

Send in that new "sub" today!

Blood on Cappellini's Hands

It is bad enough to know of the hundreds of deaths of coal miners resulting from preventable "accidents" thru the fault of the coal operators of this country, a slaughter which stains every lump of coal with the blood of the workers. But in Pennsylvania the anthracite mine operators are not satisfied with mere occupational murder of its miners.

In the last 48 hours two leaders of the "outlaw" strike, called against the operators and their servile tools in the district office of the U. M. W. of A., have been shot down on the street by assassins. It is a safe bet that Rinaldo Cappellini, agent of the operators in the office of district president of the union, who fought the miners at every step, knows as well as anyone who are the murderers of Samuel Pace and Steve Frely.

The Pennsylvania cossacks—the "coal and iron police"—are a murderous lot. They have a reputation for just such assassinations. But they would never undertake them unless the coal operators had ordered it. And the coal operators, in turn, would never order such provocative acts, if they did not feel assured that their agents in the office of the union could hold down the storm that would follow.

Cappellini has long prevented the anthracite miners from forcing adjustment of their grievances against the operators. They depend upon him to stop the floodgates of wrath at this new "grievance" of the coal diggers, or to divert it into channels harmful to the strike.

The miners of the anthracite region will do well to clench their fists for struggle, and to find a way to stop assassination of their comrades without yielding to the provocative acts of the assassins, and the first step in any plan of protection should be to hold Cappellini personally responsible for the safety of every striker.

The "Front Factory" Falls

The busybodies, reformers, liberals and sob-sister fraternities in New York are disconsolate. "Mr. Zero" has been ordered out of the church. Great gobs of tears for the unemployed will doubtless course the cheeks of many a philistine as he—or she—will wipe away the brine to keep it from falling into the dessert while the lecturer at the civic club expatiates on the decadence of christianity. The "front factory" has closed its doors. Another lockout.

This is how it came about: An enterprising and forward-looking hombre with a bent for religion and a record of working valiantly to get every spare worker into the trenches during the war, became, after the war, suddenly compassionate for the "under dog." This hombre, Urbain Ledoux, preserved his religion intact thru the war, not having gotten closer to it than the Brooklyn navy yards. When he saw the millions of unemployed swarming the streets in 1921 he thought of what Jesus would do, presumably, and figured out that Jesus would start a flop-house.

Having an eye for publicity, he advertised himself for sale as a slave, tried to auction unemployed workers off a block, and after attracting attention from the press as "Mr. Zero," he used the proceeds of the milk of human kindness to provide a sort of Gorky's "Night's Lodging," thin soup and stale bread for the homeless and jobless.

Not that we object to these miserable victims of capitalism getting something to eat and a place to stay. But is soup and stale bread something to eat, or a flop on the hard church benches, even the polished by pious pants, the equivalent of a real bed in a real home? The Communist believes that the jobless worker is entitled to more than a crust and a shift for the night on a pine plank. "Work or wages—union wages at that!" This is the slogan of the Communists.

This begging at back doors is a relic of slavery. This going, hat in hand, to long-faced hypocrites, ministers and churchmen, merchant and banker, whining for thin soup and stale bread is not the heritage of a class which built the world of industry and now stands homeless and starving, held back from revolt only by lack of organization which makes each individual fear the priest and the police more than the coroner. No! The Communists say that without organization and united action with the employed workers whose standard is threatened, the unemployed are not playing the part of men willing to strive for something, but the part of social wreckage, pitiful but helpless.

Anyhow, "Mr. Zero" invaded the Camp memorial congregational church in New York City, and for a time held forth with a "front factory," where rough barbering and tailoring was done, to make the unemployed presentable to prospective masters. But hope was shortlived.

God is incorporated, and "the Congregational Conference, Incorporated," announces that "Mr. Zero" must get out and stay out. Superintendent Rollins, heaven's butler in this corporation, says that if Ledoux sets foot across the threshold, he will call the bluecoats and have "Mr. Zero" put in the cooler for trespass.

The unemployed are thrust out with "Mr. Zero" to keep cool with Coolidge and the "front factory" has declared a lockout.

Textile Wage Cuts

The Commercial and Financial Chronicle announces with unconcealed glee that fully 30 per cent of the 190,000 cotton mill operatives in New England are working under reduced wage scales as a result of the wage cutting movement after the election of President Coolidge. The prevailing cut is 10 per cent altho in some mills it has run to 12 and 15 per cent.

Recent cuts include 750 workers in the Linwood and Saundersville cotton mills at Whitinsville, Mass., 1,400 workers in the Renfrew Mfg. Co.'s mills in Adams, Mass., 300 employes of the Methuen Co., Methuen, Mass., 600 employes of the Nyanza mills, Woonsocket, R. I., and 2,500 workers in the Nashua and Jackson mills, Nashua, N. H.

The Fall River cotton barons complain that their shares paid only a 6½ per cent dividend last year. These mills worked half time so that the 6½ per cent means that earnings were at least on a 13 per cent basis. Of course, in 1920 these same mills paid a 20 per cent dividend and the present earnings represent a decrease, but it is not because of increased wages and hours, but because of poor markets.

The textile workers have had to struggle thru the slack period as best they could and are now facing a further reduction in their incomes.

They will find in the statement of the Workers (Communist) Party on the textile industries the method by which they can combat most effectively the new attack on their living standards that makes the Commercial and Financial Chronicle so jubilant.

The livest thing in the spring aldermanic elections in Chicago will be the bunch of Communist candidates entered by the Workers Party. They alone will carry on a real battle against the bi-partisanship of the capitalist candidates.

Mussolini claims he has disarmed all his enemies, but the red spectre of Communism keeps him awake nights just the same. Evidently Mussolini doesn't believe the claims he makes.

TEXTILE BOSSES SLASH WAGES TO STARVATION LINE

Reaction Strikes at Fall River Poor

(By The Federated Press)

FALL RIVER, Mass., Jan. 8.—Fall River cotton manufacturers have announced a 10 per cent wage reduction for their 25,000 employes, to go into effect Jan. 12. No promise is made that the workers will get more work in consequence of the reduction.

Local unions affiliated with the American Federation of Textile Operatives are voting on the question of accepting or rejecting the cut. The action they take will probably set the pace for the workers in the neighboring cotton manufacturing city of New Bedford where the American Federation of Textile Operatives is also functioning.

Bosses United Against Workers.

The announcement of the Fall River manufacturers is in line with action taken by leading cotton concerns of New England this fall and early winter. Cuts averaging 10 per cent have been forced thru in the Amoskeog mills at Manchester, New Hampshire; in the Everett mills in Lawrence, in most of the Lowell mills, in the numerous mills of the Manville-Jenckes and B. B. & R. Knight companies in Rhode Island, in nearly all the Maine mills and in many small concerns in the several New England states. Most of the reductions took place following the Coolidge election.

Fall River—Poverty.

Fall River workers have suffered more from the textile depression than those in any other textile center. The Fall River mills produce cheap cotton print goods, for the most part, the kind of goods most readily produced in southern mills. For eighteen months most of the Fall River workers have been unemployed. During 1924 about two-thirds of a million dollars of charity was spent in partially relieving the hardships of unemployment.

Waiting in Prison Leaves Its Imprint On Sacco-Vanzetti

Looking at the photographs of Sacco and Vanzetti when they first were imprisoned almost five years ago and the pictures recently taken of them bring a story of persecution of innocent men more than any words can depict. The former photographs bring to us fresh, energtic, young Sacco; athletic and philosophic Vanzetti. In the latter photographs in the face of the once buoyant Sacco we read suffering and dejection. In the face of the soft, kindly Vanzetti we read defiance and bitterness. Thus have these two fighters for their class, in those few but long years of waiting in prison, been broken and crushed by the rulers of the opposing class, the capitalists.

The last act of this tragic drama of life and death for these two workers was commenced, on Sept. 30, when Judge Thayer decided against a new trial for them. The shadow of the electric chair rests dark and heavy on Sacco and Vanzetti.

Workers' organizations everywhere are holding protest meetings and taking up collections for the $25,000 fund which the Sacco-Vanzetti defense committee must raise to appeal the case to the Massachusetts supreme court and to the United States supreme court.

Rail Workers Pay Goes Down as R. R. Co.'s Profits Go Up

Savings of millions of dollars for railroad stockholders at the expense of railroad employes are reflected in interstate commerce commission statistics showing unit costs of class 1 carriers in October, 1924. The figures show that train enginemen received only 14.8c per 1,000 gross ton miles compared with 15.4c in October, 1923 a reduction of nearly 10 per cent.

Similarly the amount paid railway trainmen per 1,000 ton miles fell from 18.8c in October, 1923, to 17.7c in 1924 and the expenditure for locomotive repairs from 28.6c to 24.4c per 1,000 ton miles.

This last reduction, involving the total wages paid machinists, boiler makers, sheet metal workers, etc. amounted to about 15 per cent. These results are possible because increased efficiency and technical improvement produce wholesale layoffs rather than shorter working hours for the men employed.

Kellogg Likes His Job.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—Stories in circulation that United States Ambassador Kellogg was to resign from his London post have made him "all the more determined to remain," it was said at the American embassy today. This was the second denial in two days from the embassy on the subject of Kellogg's retirement. Kellogg is attending the allied financial conference in Paris.

JOINT BAZAAR OF INTERNATIONAL WORKERS' AID AND LABOR DEFENSE COUNCIL MAKING FINE HEADWAY

NEW YORK CITY, Jan. 8.—The arrangements of the International Workers' Aid and the Labor Defense Council for the joint bazaar, which is to take place at the Lyceum, 66th St. and 3rd Ave., from Feb. 11 to 14, are proceeding with great energy. The response that the call for support has met with is most encouraging.

The renewed attacks on the revolutionaries in Europe and India, the arrests and brutal treatment of the revolutionary workers in Roumania, Esthonia, Lithuania—and the flaring up of the bloody regime of Mussolini in Italy, together with the persecution of the Communists in Germany, the attacks on the militant peasantry in Jugo-Slavia—are awakening the solidarity of the American workers.

The conviction of Comrade Ruthenberg, secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, and the announcement that Comrade Rober Minor will next stand before the capitalist court of Michigan; the arrest of Comrade Lassen, editor of the Elore, Hungarian labor daily; and the arrest of Comrade Vajtauer, editor of the Obrana, the Czecho-Slovakian labor paper, which took place only a short time ago; the scores of other comrades who are soon to be tried in Michigan and the hundreds of revolutionary workers who face deportation—all of these facts are accelerating the co-operation of all revolutionists in this country and the sympathizers with their revolutionary movement.

Up to the present, the following organizations have responded to the call:

Amalgamated Food Workers' Union, who will donate their services and food.

Bakers' Union No. 3, Brooklyn, donated $25.

The following branches of the Workers Party will have booths: English Harlem, Finnish branches of New York City, Williamsburg English branch Brownsville section of the party, Bronx section of the party, Hungarian branches together, Russian Downtown branch, English Downtown branch Greek and Armenian branches together, English Westside branch—books and art pictures, Coney Island section of the party, Russian art booth, containing hand-woven linen and hand embroidery.

The Lithuanian branches also will probably have a booth.

This is admirable—and yet the work has just begun. More and more organizations are taking a favorable attitude, and more branches of the Workers Party have still to act on the matter.

No trade union, no workers' organization, no sympathizer dare fail to do their part in making this joint bazaar a huge success. The fate of innumerable revolutionary workers in Europe and the defense of our American class brothers and sisters depend on it. Large sums of money are necessary. Comrades to work: get articles for the bazaar. Get contributions from labor organizations and sympathizers Sign up on the Red honor roll. Get your organization to take a booth. ALL TOGETHER NOW—AND FOR THE SAKE OF THE REVOLUIONISTS AND THEIR SUFFERING FAMILIES!

BERLIN REPORT SAYS TROTSKY IN CAUCASIAN SANITARIUM, VERY ILL

BERLIN, Jan. 8.— Direct news I have just received enables me to state that Leon Trotsky, Soviet War Commisar, is actually sick. It can be stated on the authority of the president of one of the Caucasian republics that Trotsky is suffering from ulcer of the stomach and may die much sooner than is expected generally.

He is not a prisoner in the Kremlin, as has been reported, but is actually in a sanitarium in Sukhum-Kale, on the Black Sea, about seven kilometers from Bstum.

The campaign against him is altogether "literary."

STEEL HOUSES MAKE WORKERS' SKILL USELESS

British Unions Facing Fight for Life

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Jan. 8.—A way to put the building trade unions out of business and the building trade workers on the permanently unemployed list, is being tried out by the Scottish firm of Weir and company, which is erecting steel cottages.

The building trade unions are circulating a pamphlet showing that a steel house, such as is attempted, cannot be maintained in habitable shape for more than thirty-five years, while brick and stone houses last from 100 to 150 years.

The steel houses also, are claimed to require more expense to maintain than brick and stone houses, and as they last only 35 years, the union has quite a talking point in the fact that loans to build houses extend nearly 60 years, and the houses would be collapsed long before they were paid for, according to this theory.

The steel houses are erected on a concrete foundation into which the framework is set. This is covered with sheets of steel plate lined with asbestos, and the inside walls are made of a composition like American wall boards, or stamped sheet steel like that used widely in America on ceilings. All by unskilled labor.

7,000 COTTON GOODS WORKERS GET 10 PER CENT WAGE REDUCTION

HARTFORD, Conn., Jan. 8.—Seven thousand more cotton goods workers are cut ten per cent by the wage reductions of the American Thread company, beginning Jan. 12. Three thousand are affected in the company's plants at Williamantic, near here. The remaining are Rhode Island and Massachusetts workers.

The cut in the American Thread plant at New Bedford, Mass., is the first action of that kind in any large New Bedford mill since the general wage cutting movement began.

EVOLUTION OF INDUSTRY DOES NOT PASS ACTORS

Folly of Tinkering with Capitalism

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.— Altho radio broadcasting of first rank singers and performers by the Victor Talking Machine Co. and the American Telegraph and Telephone Co. arrangement does not directly concern the Actors' Equity Association, the actors' union is very much concerned over the encroaching power of radio to keep people away from the theater.

Frank Gillmore, executive secretary of the Equity, says: "The Equity is unfortunately limited in any action it might take. It is distinctly the sense of our council that radio is a terrible menace to the actor, but the actor's time and talents belong to the managers, and it is from them that any real action must come."

To Fight Radio.

Equity has provided "that if a radio microphone is placed in the footlights for the purpose of broadcasting the performance, the manager shall then be charged by the actor for an extra performance" with the idea of making play broadcasting too expensive for managers. "Plays cannot emerge badly over the radio," Gillmore asserts, "and I am sure that such performances keep many people from the theater. An open meeting of the Actors' Equity is scheduled for Jan. 26, to consider the danger of radio to actors and arouse the theaters to concerted action."

Morgan Tightens Hold on Phone and Telegraph Systems

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—J. P. Morgan has tightened his hold on the American Telephone and Telegraph company by purchasing $125,000,000, 35-year, five per cent sinking fund gold bonds of the company. The American Telephone and Telegraph company, in addition to controlling the bell telephone system, the Western Union telegraph company and the Western Electric company, is connected with numerous railroads and with the U. S. Steel corporation and the General Electric company thru interlocking directorates.

The company announces it will maintain a fund of $1,250,000 dollars a year for the purchase of these bonds in the open market "if available."

The money from the sale of the bonds will be used to purchase securities held by subsidiary companies, it was announced.

Population Increase 5 Per Cent Above Food Production Since 1912

Each person (capitalist class exempted) must eat five per cent less food than in 1912, according to the Sears Roebuck agricultural foundation's statistics. Population has gained on national agricultural production to the extent of five per cent in twelve years.

Figures made public today show that the population of the United States has increased 18 per cent from 1913 to 1925, while the total crop production has increased only 13 per cent.

MUSIC - LITERATURE - DRAMA

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

A review of anything so completely Parisian as the opera "Louise," given by the Chicago Civic Opera company last Wednesday, should be written in French. For "Louise" is Paris, Paris perfectly rendered in terms of tone and action. The only distinctly Parisian quality lacking in this performance and this opera was the smell.

The composer, Gustav Charpentier, is a man known for only one work. Mr. Stock now and then plays his "Impressions of Italy," but aside from that only "Louise" has gained any recognition. Charpentier wrote both his book and his music.

Louise is a seamstress living with her parents on Montmartre. She is in love with the poet Julien. Her parents object to their marriage. The first act is concerned with the quarrels of Louise and her parents over Julien.

Rather Fleshy Spirit.

The second act opens with one of the most curious of all opera scenes. It is a scene that Andreyev might have written. Before sunrise, at the juncture of two streets below Montmartre the rag pickers are sorting their catch. A coal picker and a street sweeper bemoan their fate. Enters a night prowler in evening dress who makes love to a little newspaper girl. Asked who he is he replies that he is the spirit of Paris.

With the coming of the dawn these creatures of night disappear. The sunrise reveals the shop where Louise works. Her fellow workers arrive, and finally she herself. Julien is waiting for her. She promises to run away with him.

Quite a Mixture.

The third act is taken up with a most spectacular scene. The poets philosophers, grisettes and ruffians of Montmartre, come to crown Louise the muse of Montmartre. She is living with Julien in a cottage near the summit of the hill. The night prowler is crowned King of Fools, and conducts an elaborate ceremony. Louise and Julien sing an apostrophe to Paris and the spirit of Montmartre (For Montmartre is the true Paris soaked with the blood of the Communards of 1871, it is the home of the artists, the thinkers, the workers, the hobees and the prostitutes of Paris. Surmounted with a glittering white jewel of a church, the basilica of the sacred heart, it stands up and dominates the city even more than the famous Eifel tower across the town.)

When the ceremony is over Louise's mother arrives and tells Louise that her father is dying. Louise goes to her former home. In the last act Louise is kept practically a prisoner in her parents' home. Her father tries to persuade her to leave Julien She refuses. He becomes enraged opens the door and tells her to go. Leaving the curtain down on an artistically unfinished story.

Plenty of Atmosphere.

The plot is thin given in detail in order to get across the idea of the absolutely Parisian atmosphere of the opera. Charpentier simply took his town and wrote it down in notes. He orchestrates with a truly Wagnerian sense of the possibilities of instruments in conjunction with the stage. The music of the entire opera is a colossal masterpiece, as Chaykovski would say, of atmosphere.

Added to this one may eulogize the work of the company. It was as close to a perfect performance of opera as can be given.

The part of Louise seems made to order for Mary Garden. She did it in approved Garden style, except that she seemed troubled with a cold. Georges Baklanoff, besides having one of the finest baritone voices in the company, is perhaps the best actor of all the male stars. He played the father. Maria Claessens, playing the mother, took the role of a relentless vixen with considerable more genuine feeling than really exits in the role.

Lucky It Wasn't Pink.

Ferdinand Asseau unfortunately had a brown tie with white polka dots wished on him as part of his costume for Julien. In spite of that he looked like a man. Nothing more need be said.

Jose Mojica, the young Mexican tenor, a person of a high voice, firm and large in sonority, who acts with considerable Spanish swagger, played the night prowler, and the king of fools.

Costumes and scenery were, in the main, authentic. One backdrop showed Montmartre surmounted by the unfinished scaffolding of the basilica of the sacred heart. Now Sacre Couer has been finished since the rinetles, but the costumes of the people of the play were those of 1924. Another backdrop showed Paris surrounded by high hills that do not exist. Outside of that the settings were typical

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

A GRAFTING capitalist politician may be out, but he is seldo. ever down and out. When Harry Daugherty was shown the way back to the little town in Ohio, where he banked the money secured from the bootleggers and other pioneers in his dustries not yet legalized, well meaning but not sufficiently sophisticated people said; "The fellow's goose is cooked." But Communists smelled a big rat in the premises and cautioned a policy of watchful waiting; watching Calvin Coolidge who gave him his walking papers and waiting until after the elections.

THERE is no good reason to recapitulate the events that led up to the evacuation of Washington by Daugherty. Those who do not already know the details are yet too young to be given any stronger nourishment than pasteurized milk. What we are concerned with is proving that Daugherty's removal was only a piece of political stage-play made by Coolidge in order to save his person from the odium cast on the administration thru the exposure of the greatest orgy of corruption that ever instigated the American people. Intrigued is the word.

COOLIDGE, slowly, and with poor grace, yielded to the clamor for Daugherty's removal. Daugherty was personally sore at the way in which he was booted out of the department of justice for doing the right thing by the gang. He was merely the goat. Communists pointed out at the time that in the event of Coolidge getting back into the White House the president would find a way of de-oiling and politically defouling the former attorney general.

YESTERDAY'S newspapers tell us that Harry Daugherty, former attorney general of the United States was one of Calvin Coolidge's guests at the White House. The event was not given wide publicity and may pass unnoticed except by the bootleggers and others who knew Harry's technique and would rather see him back on his old job than waste a lot of time and good money breaking in somebody else. So much for Calvin's puritan sense of the political fitness of things.

OUR capitalist editors detest dictatorship in general and one dictatorship in particular. The particular one as anybody whose brain is not addled with cross word puzzles will be guessed immediately. It is the dictatorship of the proletariat in Russia. But there are half a dozen capitalist dictatorships existing in a more or less precarious condition thruout Europo and our capitalist moralists do not expend much indignation on them. Take the Italian specimen for instance.

ONE of the reasons why our be-whiskered secretary of state does not recognize Soviet Russia is because that government was not elected by the votes of capitalists of all descriptions, legalized swindlers as well as by the votes of the workers. The Russian government was born out of a revolution, grants only to those who participate in the production of the nation's wealth the right to vote. In America, it is for all practical purposes the other way around.

MUSSOLINI'S dictatorship is praised because it saved Italy from the "menace of Bolshevism" that is from the rule of the workers. It is quite clear that it is not dictatorship our American capitalists fear but the kind that dictates for the workers and not to them. Mussolini is skating on thin ice at the present time. His dictatorship has hit a snag. It could not help doing that. Even a first class brain could not avoid disaster. His friends on the American capitalist papers who objected so strenuously to the suppression of the bourgeoisie in Russia finds words of praise of Mussolini even when he is trampling on the freedom of the press which our editorial ostriches worship so dearly. Of course they do not object to the suppression of Communist papers. Benito was their idol while his show was running smoothly. Even now they have a soft spot in their hearts for him.

Auto and Bus Collide Causing Injury and Death to Passengers

GALESBURG, Ill., Jan. 9. — Two were killed and two injured when a motor bus, carrying ten persons, was in collision today with a small touring car occupied by four Burlington railroad workmen betwen this city and Monmouth.

The dead are: Everett Kissick and Harold McKnight, both Burlington employes of Monmouth. A third occupant of the touring car and W. B. McCullough, driver of the bus, were injured.

COMMUNISTS IN LIEBKNECHT DAY DEMONSTRATION

Tell of Class Murders the World Over

The Communist youth all over the world will commemorate the martyrdom of Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg, who died six years ago—martyrs to the brutal violence of the German white terror, backed by the corrupt remnants of social-democracy.

Meetings will be held today and tomorrow in all the principal cities of the country.

Meeting at Northwest Hall.

The speakers at the Chicago meeting, in Northwest Hall, North and Western Aves., tomorrow night, Jan. 11, at 8 p. m., will be John Williamson, national secretary of the Young Workers' League; Alexander Bittelman, member of the central executive committee of the Workers Party; Peter Herd of Chicago, and Barney Mass, member of the national executive committee of the Young Workers' League.

The Young Communist International is making its voice heard round the world in the Liebknecht meetings, against the persecution of the socialists and fascist preachers of violence and oppression of the workers against the class justice of the capitalists, the Communists are raising the slogan of "justice administered by the workers."

An important feature of the program of the Chicago meeting will be the speech of Al Galatski, representing the junior groups, and a recitation by Ida Middleman of the junior section of the Y. W. L., who will recite Charley Ashley's poem, "Liebknecht." The Young Workers' League orchestra will furnish the musical program.

List of Other Meetings.

Meetings in others cities are as follows:

New York City—Jan. 11, Star Casino, 107th St. and Park Ave., 2 p. m. Speakers, J. Stachel, H. Zam, M. Spector, S. Don, and Ludwig Lore. Tableaux, dancing, singing. Violinist, Mischa Lifshin. Music by Lithuanian mandolin orchestra.

COMMUNISTS AND LEFT WINGERS IN MINNEAPOLIS GIVING FAKERS REAL FIGHT FOR THE ASSEMBLY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 9.—The Communists and left wing forces in the Minneapolis labor movement are filing a complete slate of candidates in the elections for the Minneapolis Trades and Labor Assembly to take place next Wednesday, Jan. 14.

In putting forth these candidates, the Minneapolis section of the Trade Union Educational League does so on the basis of a program designed to strengthen the local trade union movement.

Unions Losing Members.

Since the "open shop" crowd launched their attack against the unions in 1921, the unions have been continually going down until today many locals are mere skeletons of their former selves. The group in control of the central body at the present time are interested only in "filling" the "rolls"—but never in building the movement.

They are now going to be forced to render an account of their activities to the rank and file members of the local unions. The left wing program is a constructive program—its adoption means the giving of life and vitality to the working class movement in Minneapolis.

During this coming week it will be taken into all local unions in the city where the rank and file will have an opportunity to pass judgment and instruct their assembly delegates.

The slate and program is as follows:

Minneapolis Trades & Labor Assembly Elections, Jan. 14, 1925.

For president—George A. Thornton, Painters' No. 138.

For vice-president—Carl Skoglend, Railway Carmen No. 259.

For recording secretary—Dan W. Stevens, Painters' No. 138.

For financial secretary—J. O. Johnson, Carpenters' No. 7.

Editor, Minneapolis Labor Review—V. R. Dunne, Bookkeepers' No. 17561.

Sergeant at arms—Oscar Lilja, Blacksmiths' No. 205.

Register clerk—L. A. Roseland, Carpenters' No. 7.

Trustee—William Mauseth, Machinists' No. 91.

Program.

In giving its endorsement to the foregoing candidates, the left wing forces in the labor movement do so on the basis of the following program:

(1) Organization! The immediate launching of an organization campaign to build and strengthen the trade union movement. We urge all

BRITISH AND AMERICAN SAILORS GET TRUTH ABOUT SOVIET RUSSIA

(By Rosta Telegraph Agency.)

MOSCOW, Jan. 9.—It is reported from Odessa that a meeting was held at the international club there in honor of the English sailors from British ships anchored in the port. A report was made in English on the internal and external situation of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

In the discussion that followed the report several English speakers declared that during their stay in Odessa they had been amply satisfied as to what an amount of falsehood was circulated on the Soviet-Republics by part of the English press, and that now they themselves that the Soviet power is really the power of workers and peasants defending the interests of the proletariat not only of Russia but of all the world.

Twenty American sailors from the steamer Nobles, which has brot to Novorossyisk Fordson tractors, technical materials for the "Azneft" (Azerbeidjan Oil Syndicate), have come on a visit to Tiflis. They have been greatly interested in everything they have seen. In conversations with their hosts, the American sailors have stated that the workers in America are openly agitating in favor of recognition of the Soviet government.

THANK YOU, COMRADE ALLEN!

A THREE DOLLAR remittance from H. Allen of Berkeley, Cal., for a subscription to a political prisoner has been applied to a six months sub for the DAILY WORKER for Joseph Wallace, a prisoner in the Moundsville, W. Va., jail for participation in the famous March of the Miners in 1922.

We are sure the gift of a subscription to a fighting working class newspaper to a fighting miner will be a welcome one.

Thank you, Comrade Allen!

HAMMOND, Ind., Jan. 9.—Local 209, I. A. of M., in its last meeting endorsed the entire left wing slate for the nomination of officers of the union. The only opposition put up against the left wing slate was by the Anderson group. Their slate received only three votes and Bill Johnston and Co. were not successful in being mentioned. The boys here say: "May the present administration rest in peace."

H. Garner, who is candidate for vice-president, is also president of Local 209. He represented his local at the recent convention held in Detroit.

NORTH DAKOTA FARMERS GREET COMMUNIST BILLS

Miller Fights Compromisers on Issues

By ALFRED KNUTSON.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BISMARCK, N. D., Jan. 9.—Farmer members of the state legislature realize the difficulties of forcing the state legislature to consider measures that would be beneficial to the working masses. It becomes apparent that only an organized struggle can bring the needs of the farmers to the fore in the present session of legislature.

Dividing the Spoils.

That there is little difference between the office-holding non-partisan leaguers and the I. V. A. (independent voters' association), is to be seen by the compromise arrangement agreed on in the senate the first day of the legislative session. Under this agreement, control and jobs are divided and the non-partisans will drop contests of senate seats.

There is much talk of harmony, Lieutenant Gov. Maddock (leaguer) declaring "that the senate would do much good for the state by working without bitterness of feeling." Sorlie, the new non-partisan governor, is also for "co-operation." All this, of course, simply means that the exploiters of the farmers have the upper hand.

It is common talk among the rank and file leaguers in many parts of the state, who are still imbued with the militant spirit, that there is no fundamental difference between the "rival" political factions in North Dakota.

The Communist Legislative Group.

To offset this degraded compromise and political trading, A. C. Miller, the Communist member of the legislature, is rousing a considerable enthusiasm among the farmers for the Workers Party program which is fundamentally based upon the need for unity between the poor working farmers and the industrial workers.

Comrade Miller stresses this great need and the broad nature of the class struggle which these poor farmers and workers must fight together against exploiting classes. He is introducing a resolution for the recognition of Soviet Russia and for the ratification of the child labor amendment and the taxation of big incomes to defray the expense of educating the children of workers and poor farmers. Program Touches Immediate Needs.

These measures of A. C. Miller touch the immediate needs of the great mass of poor farmers, and a fine response is given his bills for compulsory state hail insurance with a flat tax to be levied on all tillable land; all tax titles to revert to the state and the proposal that all public funds be deposited in the Bank of North Dakota and state-owned branch banks established, one in each county.

DAILY WORKER HAS MADE THE BOSSES QUAKE

Incalculable Strength to the Working Class

Militant workers all over the country have begun to celebrate the first anniversary of one of the most outstanding events in the history of the Communist movement of America and the world—the founding of the DAILY WORKER, the first Communist daily newspaper to be printed in the English language.

In New York an excellent concert where professionals will render fitting revolutionary entertainment will be given at the New Star Casino, 107th St. and Park Ave., on Sunday evening, Jan. 11. At 9 p. m. a grand ball will start, with splendid entertainment in between.

The entire staff of the DAILY WORKER will be present at the first birthday party given in Chicago, Monday evening, Jan 12, at Imperial Hall, 2409 N. Halsted St. This celebration is reported in another column.

The DAILY WORKER has been a thorn in the side of the capitalists, the labor fakers, and all other enemies of the working class, but it has been a bright red star of hope to the toiling workers of America.

The DAILY WORKER has stood side by side with striking workers on the picket lines thruout the country, playing a prominent part in the Chicago Ladies' Garment Workers' strike the strike of the Paterson, N. J. silk workers, the Pullman and Hegewisch carbuilders' strikes, and many other skirmishes of the class struggle. The DAILY WORKER has been an inculcable power for strengthening the working class in the left wing fights in the carpenters,' machinists,' miners,' and many other trade unions. Wherever the workers have battled for power, the DAILY WORKER has been at hand to press the immediate demands of the workers in their every day struggles. The DAILY WORKER has been the standard bearer of the American Communist movement, rallying the workers to demand control of industry and government, and the overthrow of the employing class.

When the call came for the DAILY WORKER readers to establish a fund to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925, the response was immediate and substantial, and the workers are continuing to respond.

Celebrations of the DAILY WORKER'S first birthday are being held in Los Angeles, Philadelphia, New York, Rochester, Buffalo, and all principal cities of the country.

Night Shirts Are Asked to Join in Church Revival

PARIS, Ill., Jan. 9.—A long step toward church unity has been taken in Paris, as protestant churches having united in a three weeks' evangelical campaign. Pastors of the various congregations are speaking and converts are to affiliate with the church of their choice.

It is understood that members of the ku klux klan have been urged by the leaders to attend the services as individuals and aid in the campaign.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—At a general membership meeting held here last Thursday evening, to discuss the immediate tasks of the party, the theses of the C. E. C. (majority) was endorsed by a vote of 63 to 13.

HARRY M. DAUGHERTY, OUSTED FROM DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE, IS AGAIN 'SILENT CAL'S' ADVISER

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 9.—The expected has happened! Harry M. Daugherty is again quite at home in Washington, not in the "little green house on K street" but in the big White House on Potomac avenue.

Harry Daugherty, once the head of the powerful department of justice and chief of the law enforcing agency of big business, is again back on the job, tho unofficially—yet.

President Calvin Coolidge, is selecting a new attorney-general to succeed Stone who was elevated to the United States supreme court to succeed McKenna. Harry M. Daugherty is among those doing the selecting.

Among the guests at a reception given by the president on Thursday night, was Harry M. Daugherty, who left Washington in disgrace only a few months ago. His walking papers were written by Calvin Coolidge.

Killing Big News.

Daugherty's appearance at the reception had big news value, but it was soon played up by the capitalist press.

Those versed in political strategy declare that Coolidge and the big business elements he serves have a very warm spot in their hearts for Harry Daugherty and furthermore that their hard business heads tell them that he was and is and can be in the future a very useful man for them.

Breaking the Strike.

They cannot forget that he was largely instrumental in breaking the shopmen's strike in 1922 thru the use of all the necessary governmental powers to do the job. Since then, railroads have not been bothered with any serious strikes and the railroad shop craft unions are but pitiful caricatures of their former selves.

Big business wants the "public" to get used to the presence of Daugherty in Washington. The next election is a long way off and democrats and "progressives" were interested in getting Daugherty's scalp only because they believed such an operation would bring them votes.

Expecting More Trouble.

Big business knows that it is not thru with labor troubles. But it is taking precautions. Daugherty secured a wealth of experience during his term of office. He is one of the white-haired boys of big business. He "does his stuff" as he is told and it was unfortunate that he had to be made a goat of, but he kept his mouth shut during those trying days when a word from him could have knocked the G. O. P. elephant for a row of giggling donkeys.

Daugherty will be rewarded.

WORKERS PARTY BRANCHES READY FOR 'SUB' DRIVE

Get Readers and Voters at Same Time

The DAILY WORKER special Chicago subscription drive is in full swing. All party branches are supplied with the special sub-card folders containing five one dollar subs.

The joining of the subscription drive to the aldermanic campaign has presented an opportunity to get real action on house to house work for the DAILY WORKER. Every party member is instructed when he carries his petitions about in the precincts to have with him and try to sell, sub-cards from his subscription folder.

Put Workers in Charge.

Either the secretary of the branch or the branch DAILY WORKER agent has charge of the folders. A strict record is being kept of everyone taking a folder from the branch. Every member is expected to return either the folder or the money.

The campaign captains in the wards in which we have candidates have an additional supply to make certain that every petition worker receives a folder.

MINERS' UNION VOTES HEAVILY AGAINST LEWIS

Progressives Display a Surprising Strength

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Jan. 9.—Election reports from the miners' union locals continue to show a heavy vote for the progressive candidates.

How the reactionaries manage to sneak in despite these returns is a mystery only to those who do not know the ways of the labor fakers. A little better organization on the part of the radicals will take care of that deficiency.

Five locals in this district give 109 votes to John Lewis and 832 for George Voyzey, his opponent; 128 votes for Murray and 804 for Arley Staples; 137 for William Green and 819 for Joseph Nearing.

For district officials the vote was: Pat Fagin, candidate for president, 163; William Guller his opponent, received 355 votes. The other progressive candidates defeated the reactionaries by approximately the same proportion.

Voyzey Beats Lewis.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Jan. 9.—Local Union 4917 gave John L. Lewis three votes while George Voyzey, progressive, received 42 votes; Philip Murray received 8 and Arley Staples 36; William Green received 18 and Joseph Nearing 27.

Don't Think Much of Lewis.

COLLINSVILE, Ill., Jan. 9.—The members of Local Union 4648 do not think so very much of John Lewis judging by the result of the elections. The returns show that Lewis polled only 160 votes to 358 for George Voyzey, his opponent; 203 for Philip Murray; 336 for Arley Staples; 248 for William Green; 236 for Joseph Nearing.

In Local 685, Lewis received 178 votes and Voyzey, 372; Murray polled 175 and Arley Staples 352; Green got 226 and Nearing 393.

MEMBERS OF Y. W. L. IN N. Y.! REMEMBER THE MEMBERSHIP MEETING

The general membership meeting of the Young Workers' League was arranged in New York City prior to the conclusion of the discussion in both the league and the party and it is expected that every member will attend the meeting which has been arranged for Friday, Jan. 16, in Stuyvesant Casino, 142 Second Ave.

The position of the national executive committee of the Y. W. L. on the future outline of work and the political policy of the party will be presented by Comrade John Williamson, executive secretary of the league.

It is imperative that every member of the league in New York City be present at this meeting as it will be of the greatest importance. It is expected that the activity of the New York league will increase manifold after a thoro discussion of the immediate tasks that lie before the Young Workers' League on a national scale.

This meeting will be limited to members of the Young Workers' League only. Admission will be by paid up membership card.

Comrades, of New York City, cancel all other meetings immediately and prepare to attend the general membership meeting en masse.

DEMAND RELEASE OF RUTHENBERG IN COURT BRIEF

Imprisoned Solely for Opinions

A brief was submitted to the Michigan supreme court yesterday, calling for the release of C. E. Ruthenberg, national executive secretary of theWorkers (Communist) Party now in Jackson penitentiary, and demanding that Ruthenberg be given a new trial.

The brief submitted by Isaac Ferguson, attorney for Ruthenberg, requests that the previous judgment of the supreme court of Michigan be reversed, on the grounds that Ruthenberg committed no crime by expressing his opinions.

The hazy, indefinite and unconstitutional character of the criminal syndicalism law, under which Comrade Ruthenberg was sentenced to a prison term of from three to ten years and a fine of $5,000, is brought out in the brief, which was submitted to the court by Isaac Ferguson, attorney for Comrade Ruthenberg.

"The judgment entered against respondent (Ruthenberg) deprives him of his liberty and property without due process of law, and denies to him the equal protection of the laws, contrary to the provisions of section 1, article XIV of amendments to the constitution of the United States," the brief for Comrade Ruthenberg says in part. "The judgment entered in the circuit court against respondent ought to be reversed and set aside by this court, especially because it is not within the due process of law to penalize respondent for the act of assembling with a group of persons who espouse certain doctrines when there was not intent or attempt, in connection with said act of assembling, to achieve, incite or promote an overt act of physical injury to any persons or property or to any governmental establishment or operation."

Violated No Law.

"It contrary to due process of law and a denial of the equal protection of the laws, as provided by the fourteenth amendment, to proscribe the peaceful assembly of any group of persons because of their belief in certain doctrines."

The brief than declares that the Michigan criminal syndicalism law is not limited by its terms to the mere act of assembling with other persons, but violation of the law must show intent to promote acts of criminal injury. This Comrade Ruthenberg did not do, and is not charged with doing, the brief points out.

Law Unconstitutional.

"The judgment ought to be reversed because the provisions of the criminal syndicalism statute upon which it is based, establish a prior restrain upon expression of opinion, in violation of the fourteenth amendment," the brief continues. "The mere expression of opinions, no matter how reprehensible, cannot constitutionally be punished as crime."

"The judgment ought to be set aside because the provisions of the criminal syndicalism statute upon which it is based are too vague and indefinite to provide an ascertainable standard of guilt of crime."

Right to Assemble.

"Syndicalists, Communists, or others who favor doctrines proscribed by the criminal syndicalism statute, are as much entitled as any other persons to the protection of the law in peacefully meeting together, unless there is involved immediate intent or attempt of overt criminal injury."

Get Busy With the Petitions!

The aldermanic elections in this city are near. In order to wage an effective Communist campaign during the election period the Workers Party must have candidates in the field.

In order to get our candidates on the ballot, certain legal formalities must be complied with, the most important of which is collecting signatures.

This job must be done at once. The petitions can be secured at the office of Local Chicago of the Workers Party. Next Sunday—TOMORROW—is a very good day to collect signatures. Get your petitions today and be on the job tomorrow helping to put our candidates on the ballot in the city aldermanic elections.

LENIN MEMORIAL MEETINGS

It is important that every city in which there is a party organization hold a Lenin Memorial meeting. Many such meetings have already been arranged and speakers assigned.

Every party unit which has not already done so should immediately arrange to hold a Lenin Memorial meeting and send in to the National Office the date of the meeting, name and location of the hall, time, name of the person in charge, and state whether local speakers are available or whether assignment of speakers should be thru the national office.

Following is a list of meetings which have been arranged:

Wednesday, Jan. 21.

Chicago, Ill., at 8 p. m., at Ashland Auditorium, Ashland and Van Buren Sts. Speakers: Browder, Dunne, Engdahl, and Swabeck.

Kansas City, Mo., hall to be announced. Speaker, J. E. Snyder.

The spirit in which the first anniversary of Lenin's death is to be commemorated is not one of mourning, but a living proof of the fact that while Lenin is dead, Leninism lives and grows toward the realization of our common goal, the Communist state.

In the United States we must make these meetings a real demonstration of party strength, of Leninist following and devotion to our greatest leader and teacher.

MAD ARMAMENT RACE SOON WITH GREAT BRITAIN

Coolidge Plans a New "Arms Conference"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Only the fact that the United States is trying to get the most powerful governments of the world into another "arms conference" temporarily halts a mad naval armament race with Great Britain, it is stated in official circles.

Coolidge and members of his cabinet, Secretary Hughes in particular, are manuevering for the United States to play the leading role in another "arms conference."

This conference, the Coolidge administration plans, will discuss means of combatting the increasing strength of Communism thruout the world, the foreign debts owed the United States, enforcement of the "Dawes plan" of enslavement of weak nations, and the extending of American markets.

Coolidge has declared it would be "inadvisable for this government to begin spending large sums on naval armament at a time when another arms conference is just around the corner"; especially as it would force the United States to enter the arms conference laboring under a disadvantage.

Another reason for the temporary lull in the armament race is the alliance between British and American capital. As Coolidge said, "We are not going to war with Great Britain," meaning that there is at least a temporary understanding between British and American exploiters.

Representatives Fred Britten, republican of Illinois is doing his utmost to force an extreme militaristic policy on the government. Britten announced that he will press his demands for a larger navy at the next session of congress. Britten recently tried to stampede the congress into a militaristic program by setting up the cry of the "Yellow Peril."

Admiral E. W. Eberle, chief of naval operations, testifying before the senate appropriations committee, said that the United States navy could be made equal to Britain's by the conversion of four coal burning ships to oil burners. He said that this country leads Britain in the number of destroyers and submarines, but is behind in the number of light cruisers and light aircraft carriers.

$1,535,788,299.00 has been spent on the navy in the last 20 years, testimony of Secretary of the Navy Wilbur disclosed.

Yes, Thomas, and the Democrats Are Backing the Campaign

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—A well-organized and liberally financed campaign of misrepresentation has been waged thruout the country to defeat the child labor amendemtn to the constitution, recently submitted by congress to the states for ratification, Sen. Thomas J. Walsh, democrat of Montana, charged in the senate yesterday.

POWER OF RED FLAG GROWS IN ITALY DAILY

Communists Lead Workers Against Fascism

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Jan. 9.—Hundreds of Communists are now confined by fascisti in Italian prisons, but Communist demonstrations are daily increasing.

That the fascisti violence is striking not at the "Aventine opposition," pledged to passive resistance, but at the Communists, whose influence is daily growing, is shown in the numerous acts of violence against the Communists.

At Cinisella a huge crowd gathered on the streets and sang "The Red Flag," a clash with fascist bands ensuing, several fascisti and one Communist being wounded by revolver shots.

At Bre[illegible] the workers attacked the police who had arrested a Communist leader. Three Communist and several fascisti were shot. At Mainate a crowd of workers stormed the police headquarters to free a Communist who had been arrested. A street battle occured when fascisti fired into the crowd, and many were wounded.

At Castelnuovo, near Reggio-Emilia, the head of the local fascisti, attacked a Communist, who defended himself with a knife, fatally wounding the fascist bandit.

A manifesto issued by the opposition declares that Premier Mussolini has not yet free himself of grave charges, and that an election now would insult the intelligence of the nation, and would be but another attempt of Mussolini to rule by force.

The opposition calls for Mussolini's resignation, declaring that "The government is trampling the fundamental laws of the state, stopping the free voice of the press, surpressing the right to meet, and persecuting individuals and parties while it tolerates the leaving unpunished of devastations and crimes which damage its adversaries. A criminal association, which is the instrument of violence and death is housed high up close to the government."

'THE STAGNANT SOUTH,' SUNDAY'S TOPIC OF MINOR

The Significance of the Negro Problem

The southland is nearly an undiscovered country to the revolutionary labor movement. While a few of the northern states show a certain political backwardness, the south is a solid block of fudealism.

This is a potential enemy of working class revolution—and Robert Minor, famous lecturer, cartoonist and journalist has made a special study of the significance of the south, and will give Chicago workers a chance to hear his analysis of the problem and how to solve it, in his lecture on "The Stagnant South—A Problem of the American Revolution" which will be given at the Open Forum, in the Ashland Auditorium lodge room, 8 p. m. this Sunday evening, Jan. 11.

The speaker will capably expose the struggle which divides the most oppressed class, the poorest workers, tenant and share farmers, from the exploiting classes. This struggle is obscured by the real, yet less fundamental, racial problems between the whites and the Negroes.

It may come as a new idea to some that particularly in the south is a class of real peasantry, in the European sense of the word. Here the tenant and share farmers, in great majority Negro, have no idea as have the poor farmers of the north, of ever becoming land owners. They accept their status of an exploited class, but are by general backwardness and the obviousness of other racial oppression, more conscious of race than of class.

The stagnant south, from this and all other angles, constitutes a menace to any struggle the revolutionary proletariat may engage in. It is a reservoir of potential counter-revolution which, however, can be purified, and only the Communists in their analysis and tactics know what the problem is and how to solve it.

It is a gigantic problem, and every worker who wants to hear the method of its solution as set forth by Robert Minor, will come to the Ashland Auditorium lodge room, at 8 p. m., Sunday.

All workers are invited, but Negro workers are particularly urged to attend.

TOKYO, Jan. 9.—No damage resulted from three earthquakes felt here during the past 12 hours, according to reports this afternoon. They were the first of the new year.

Imperialism Clings to Opium as a Faithful Ally of Its Profit Rule

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, suave statesmen of the stripe extant in London, Paris, Rome, Tokio and the seats of lesser capitalist governments, are working overtime pulling wires for the control of the Second Opium Conference opening at Geneva, Switzerland, on Monday. Their job is not a difficult one.

Huge profits roll in from the sale of this dope used to sodden the minds of the hundreds of millions of subject oriental peoples, especially in India and China.

But the great world imperialisms, of Great Britain, France and Japan, with Holland, Portugal and smaller countries, see greater stakes than the profit in opium alone. "Opium" is the drug that aids in keeping whole peoples enslaved to foreign imperialists. It is a powerful weapon in aid of the armies of occupation.

The Opium Conference is only a child of the League of Nations, capitalism's black international. Its purpose is not to war on opium; but to use opium as a weapon of imperialist interests. This truth looms big as one considers the fact that Soviet Russia had no representatives at Geneva. This might give the Communists an opportunity to expose this nest of capitalist thieves.

It will be remembered that the much-heralded Washington Disarmament Conference declared against the sending of arms and other munitions of war to China. But the various upstart "generals" of the different imperialist nations have always been well supplied with the weapons of slaughter, to battle for their respective masters.

Great Britain and Japan are most concerned in the Geneva dope conference. They control the market and are the real traffickers in the drug raised in China, Cochin-China, and the Dutch and Portuguese possessions.

Political expediency demands that the British Empire supports and promotes the opium habit in India. Drugged India thru this diabolical means is rendered more helpless in her struggle against British rule. Opium, the drug, is a faithful ally of that other opium, religion, in keeping the Indian natives in submission. Therefore the British statesmen are eager champions of the opium traffic.

Great Britain with Japan are in China with opium as one of their most loyal field marshals. But the Chinese, more loyal than ever to their revolution, are also combatting the opium phase of the imperialist menace.

The extent of the opium trade can be seen from the fact that it puts $3,000,000,000 annually into the pockets of the opium profiteers; 200 vessels are engaged in the opium traffic; 90,000 opium dens are to be found in Asiatic cities; 9,000,000 are doomed to die, victims of this curse, within the next two years. One authority charges that a larger number of Orientals die every year from the effects of opium than there were soldiers slain in the world war.

There is no denying that Soviet Russia holds out the only solution for the opium curse upon Eastern peoples. The Workers' Republic, with its Communist program, comes to the peoples of the east with the double drive: (1) take the profit out of the opium traffic, and (2) liberate the subject nations of Asia from the imperialist yoke.

Capitalist imperialism, for its own preservation, must combat both of these solutions of the opium problem. Capitalism never has and never will take up arms against private profit. Capitalist nations will make no move that will handicap their dictatorships over colonies or subject peoples. The opium curse will remain until capitalism is overthrown. End capitalism, and the opium plague goes with it to its doom.

This threat of a Communist solution of the opium traffic will be a nightmare, not a hope, at the opium conference in Geneva. The gathering in Switzerland is just another tea party apologizing for capitalism but proposing no cures for the evils growing out of it. Those cures are only proposed by the aroused working masses driving toward the world's social revolution.

MINNEAPOLIS HAS TAKEN REAL STEP FOR LABOR UNITY

By C. Skoglund.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—In our last T. U. E. L. meeting were represented some of the best working class elements in Minneapolis. Individuals of the local I. W. W. were invited and they responded enthusiastically. A committee of four was selected to visit next Thursday's meeting of the local I. W. W. for the purpose of having them elect four members to effect some plan of unity between all left wing elements in the local labor movement. If the same spirit be continued, it is no doubt but we are going to effect unity of our forces.

A program for the labor assembly election was presented by the industrial committee of the T. U. E. L. and approved. Steps were also taken that a committee will visit all Workers Party branches outlining our industrial program, and also having every member of the party join their respective unions.

The organized labor movement in Minneapolis is in a very weak condition, and a campaign to arouse enthusiasm in the labor movement is necessary. Now campaign to organize the unorganized since the citizens' alliance launched their famous open shop drive, has taken place and as a consequence, the organized labor movement has lost its militancy that it formally had.

A campaign to organize the unorganized is absolutely necessary and such a campaign must be started in the spring, and on such a broad basis that every worker will bear the effects of action. Every party member must become members of unions and give their assistance in the struggles of the working class.

WRECKS OF WAR DEMAND BREAD FROM CONGRESS

Disabled Without Money for Food or Medicine

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—One thousand and sixteen disabled world war veterans today hammered on the doors of congress for belated justice.

This battalion of cripples, with their hundreds of war decorations from all the allied governments, but little money for food or medicine, sent a delegation to plead for a enactment of the Bursum bill granting regular retirement pay to disabled emergency army officers.

All other officers who served in the world war have long since received this compensation as a reward for their wounds. The handful who volunteered, received emergency commission, served thru the war and then were dropped from the rolls alone are excepted.

As a result of the plea, Senator Bursum, republican of New Mexico, announced he would demand consideration of the relief bill in the senate at the "first opportunity."

Of the thousand and sixteen veterans benefitted by the measure, all served in France and all fell from wounds or disease "contracted in the line of duty." Since the bill first came before congress in 1920, their lines have been decimated by death. Two hundred of the eligibles died while congress delayed and 18 died since congress reconvened in December.

The total cost of the bill, Bursum said, would be about $600,000 a year, with the amount annually decreasing thru deaths.

local unions to proceed at once with the organization of their membership on a shop committee basis as a preparatory step for this drive.

(2) Unemployment: The immediate organization of a council of the unemployed workers under the auspices of the assembly and to include all working class organizations. This council to raise the slogan of work or full trade union wages for the unemployed.

(3) Wages and hours: The assembly to lead an aggressive fight for increases in wages and against any lengthening of the hours of labor or reductions of wages.

(4) Child Labor: A militant fight to force the ratification of the child labor amendment by the Minnesota state legislature—a fight against the employment of children in Minneapolis industries—and a demand that the government give full support to children of wage earners and farmers so that child labor laws may be made effective.

For a Fighting Organ.

(5) Labor Review. To be made into a fighting organ for the trade union movement by adopting the following program: (In order that this program may be carried out we propose a campaign to get the local unions to subscribe for the paper in block so that it may be made independent of its advertisers); (a) It should recognize and advocate the class struggle in accord with the preamble of the A. F of L. (b) It shall severely criticise all schemes aiming to bring about class collaboration. (c) It shall give the news of the international working class movement. (d) It shall fight for the unity of the international trade union movement—organizational unity between the American Federation of Labor, the International Federation of Trade Unions, and the Red International of Labor Unions.

(6) Delegates. No persecutions or expulsion of delegates because of their political beliefs or affiliations or because of their support for any working class program.

(7) Political. The assembly must carry on a fight for a class program and against the influence of the republican, democratic, LaFollette, and all other capitalist or middle class politicians in the farmer-labor federation.

(8) Criminal Syndicalism Laws. A militant fight to force the repeal of the Minnesota criminal syndicalism law and all other laws interfering with the workers in their struggle for improved working conditions. Support of all campaigns for relief of class war prisoners.

(9) United Fronts. The assembly shall enter into united fronts with all other working class organizations that will fight for the issues enunciated in this program.

RAIL CHIEFS HAD KILLING BEE FOR 3RD PARTY, NOV. 8

Meeting Was Called by Warren Stone

CLEVELAND, Jan. 9.—The third party, so far as the railroad brotherhoods and associated unions are concerned, was killed over a week before the opening of the American Federation of Labor convention in El Paso, Nov. 17. The killing took place in Cleveland, Nov. 8 at a meeting called by Pres. Warren S. Stone of the locomotive engineers for another purpose.

There were present, according to Editor John F. McNamee of the Botherhood of Locomotive Firemen & Enginemen's magazine, the chief executive or representatives of 17 railroad labor organizations and of the Longshoremen's Union, the railway employes department of the A. F. of L., of the A. F. of L. itself and Edward Keating, manager of Labor, the rail unions' weekly.

The principal business was the handling of the Howell-Barkley railroad control bill which is backed by rail labor.

"Towards the conclusion of this meeting," McNamee reports, "the question of the establishment of a new political party was taken up and considered and a motion setting forth that this body is not in favor of the establishment of a third political party' was adopted. A motion was adopted providing that the chairman appoint a committee of three, in addition to the chairman, to interview Sen. LaFollette to ascertain his views upon the action taken as outlined by this motion."

The conference for progressive political action, of which the railroad unions form the backbone, meets in Chicago, Feb. 21 to consider launching a new party.

U. S. COMMERCE REPORTS SHOW HOW BAN ON RUSS TRADE KEEPS WORKERS HERE JOBLESS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—How the failure of the American government to recognize Russia is barring American trade is once more indicated in Commerce Reports, official publication of the department of commerce, in which the chief of the hide and leather division of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce says, concerning Russian foreign purchases:

"Purchases abroad of 3,000,000 feet of chrome and kid leather have just been completed by the Russian state trading organization. This was a government order, placed to cover the needs of the leather syndicate.

These purchases were: Germany, 200,000 feet of chrome and 150,000 feet of colored kid; France, 400,000 feet of kid; the United States, 450,000 feet of kid. Part of these orders had already been received and the remainder is en route. Terms of four to five months without intreest were obtained from the firms making the sales. A contract has also been made for delivery of 3,600,000 pounds of sole leather from a leather factory in Lithuania for a year's time."

Huge Contracts in Sweden.

In the same issue, A. E. Fenselau, clerk to the American commercial attache at Copenhagen, reports: "Eight machine-building plants in Sweden are engaged in executing Russian contracts for machinery, four of which will employ about 1,560 workers on these Russian orders and four others 200 hands until the end of the year. Three plants in addition to the eight mentioned recommenced operations during the second quarter of 1924."

Germany, France, Sweden and Lithuania all have full diplomatic relations with Russia.

Unemployment Increased.

Meanwhile the Federal Reserve Bulletin for July, 1924, has declared that production of basic commodities in the United States was lower in May, 1924, than for May, 1923; that factory employment fell 4 per cent in May, and that "the largest reduction of working forces occurred in the textile, metal, automobile and leather industries."

Without diplomatic relations, American exporters of machinery, leather and other goods needed by Russia are compelled to face special difficulties as to credits, insurance, ship papers, inspection of goods, etc., or to cut prices to cover the cost of this extra work if it is done by the Russian government trading corporation.

Changes Made in Battlefront for the Aldermanic Campaign

The following changes have been made in connection with the aldermanic elections in Chicago on Feb. 24:

It has been decided not to enter a candidate in the 31st Ward. Instead Comrade Candella will take charge of captaining the 11th Ward, in which Comrade Victor Zokaitis is the candidate.

The Greek branch has been transferred to aid in the 11th Ward. The Douglas Park Jewish branch has been changed from activity in the 22nd Ward to the 24th Ward, where Comrade Epstein is the candidate and Kruse captain.

The Mid-City English branch has been transferred to work in the 22nd Ward, where Comrade Cejka is the candidate and A. Overgaard the captain.

The Hungarian branch has been transferred to aid in the 44th Ward, where Jack Johnstone is the candidate and Walt Carmon captain.

The petitions have been out already a week—which Ward is the first to fill its quota? Ward captains, bring filled out petitions to the local office as soon as you get them. Keep after the members to fill out petitions as soon as possible.

Secret Documents Reveal White Plots Against Red Russia

MOSCOW, Jan. 9. — As reported from Berlin, several German papers have published a series of secret documents relative to the peace negotiations at Versailles, some of these interesting documents referring to the intervention in Soviet Russia.

From the latter it appears that in the question of this intervention there was originally a big difference between America and Britain on one hand and France on the other. Both President Wilson and Premier Lloyd George considered that intervention was not possible and advocated negotiations with the Soviet government. Winston Churchill was the only English politician entirely in favor of intervention.

On the French side, however, Mr. Clemenceau urged the necessity of intervention the most energetically and was supported in his views by Marshal Foch. The latter, in March, 1917, came forth with his scheme of succoring Poland, which was allegedly threatened by the Soviet republics. Altho the marshal's plan was not endorsed by the allied supreme council, both Foch and Clemenceau persisted all thru the years of 1918 and 1919 in urging the necessity of a resolute struggle against Soviet Russia, a struggle of which the burden was to be borne by the lesser states of central and south eastern Europe, such as Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, and Roumania.

Atlanta Prison Warden Is Ousted On Bribery Charge

BOISE, Idaho, Jan. 9.—The resignation of Warden John Snook of Lemphie county, "effective as soon as possible," so that he may become warden of the federal prison at Atlanta, Ga., was tendered the state prison today.

Warden Snook will succeed A. E. Sartain at the Atlanta prison. Sartain is under indictment, returned following an investigation of charges that he had accepted bribes for "soft berths" to prisoners.

BOGUS COUNCIL WOULD ENSLAVE POOR FARMERS

Coolidge and Bankers Control "Co-operative"

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 9.—The preliminaries to a libel suit against Henry Ford have been completed by Aaron Sapiro, who is asking the bankers to control the co-operative marketing organizations, charging Ford with libelous statements in the Dearborn Independent. Ford charged Sapiro with being in a "Communistic conspiracy," along with Bernard Baruch, Julius Rosenwald, Otto H. Kahn, Albert D. Lasker, and other bankers, to gain control of agriculture.

According to the formal document which Sapiro has sent Ford, announcing his intention of suing for libel, Ford said, "This whole Kahn-Baruch-Lasker-Rosenwald-Sapiro program is carefully planned to turn over to an organized international interest the entire agricultural industry of the republic. Between the lines one reads the story of the Jewish Communistic movement in America, which seeks to make the United States what it has already made of Russia."

The national council of farmers' co-operatives is controlled by these bankers, who keep in close touch with President Coolidge. It was formed in an attempt to eradicate radical ideas from the brains of the farmers.

In line with its program of sabotaging all attempts of the farmers to secure legislation to better their bankrupt condition, the "co-operative council," meeting in Washington, went on record as opposing government aid for co-operatives, declaring it "unwise to stimulate artificially such organizations by any sort of governmental aid, special favoritism or subsidy." This resolution follows out the wishes of Coolidge, expressed in a speech at the opening of the convention of the bogus co-operative association. Coolidge said at that time he would oppose legislation to aid the farmers.

The council is entirely reactionary in character. A judge—Robert Bingham of Louisville, was re-elected chairman of the council. One of the members of the executive committee is former Governor Lowden of Illinois, who pretends to be a farmer, but who does the dirty work of Wall Street in agricultural circles, and who is connected with several of the largest corporations in America, including the Pullman car company, in which he owns much stock. The council cooperates with President Coolidge altho it has nothing to do with the bankrupt farmers.

Waterfront Workers Display Real Class Solidarity in Strike

SYDNEY, Australia, Jan. 9.—The wateside workers' strike thruout Australia defies all efforts to secure a settlement. The men are displaying great solidarity and have the support of other unions.

At all ports the wateside workers refuse to work on any oversea vessels the cargoes of which have been handled by men employed by the non-union labor bureau of the Oversea Shipping companies at Sydney—a bureau established to try and introduce the open shop policy on the Australian waterfront. Vessels loaded by men from the bureau are forced to lay up or leave Australia without cargoes.

As the non-union labor bureau is established only at Sydney (all other states being under labor rule) there is no trouble in the other ports except that unionists will not touch non-union work.

The following unions are likely to be also involved in the dispute, carters and drivers, motor transport workers, railway workers, seamen, engineers and firemen, ships' painters, marine cooks, bakers and butchers, and dockers.

Negotiations are now taking place whereby any vessel loaded by non-union labor in Australia will be boycotted on arrival in Great Britain.

Burn Girls' Time Cards to Dodge the Minimum Wage Law

TORONTO, Jan. 9.—The changing and theft of employes' time cards figured in the evidence given before the minimum wage board that the Willards Chocolates, Ltd., had violated the minimum wage law. This is the firm against which the Toronto Trade and Labor Council made charges. The same was kept secret until just lately.

Cyril Johnson, former timekeeper, swore that his immediate superior, J. A. Gratton, had ordered him to change the dates on the time cards of certain girl employes to prevent inspectors from finding out that the girls were being underpaid. He testified that the girls were being underpaid. He testified that to cover up the alterations he had been told to make out new cards for all the girl employes and to throw the old cards into the furnace. The latter part of his instructions had not been carried out and "someone" stole those old cards.

During the hearing, which is not yet finished, it came out that the company's paysheets for four months were missing.

LABOR DEFENSE COUNCIL ISSUES FINANCIAL STATEMENT AND CALLS FOR FUNDS FOR NEW LEGAL BATTLE

The great, aggressive defense fight for the Michigan Communists started in September, 1922. Hundreds of thousands of pieces of printed matter, publicity, leaflets, pamphlets, folders, etc. were spread far and wide.

Workers' organizations, unions, fraternal organizations, Communists and sympathizers, believers in free speech for workers, were rallied all over the country, and contributed to the work of the Labor Defense Council.

An enormous legal battle was waged. The Foster jury disagreed in the spring of 1923, but the prosecution oiled the machinery for Ruthenberg's conviction. After a year and a half the Michigan Supreme Court upheld the conviction, and the prosecution of the Michigan cases has been revived and speeded up. The law is ignored, the courts show their capitalist colors once again. A whole organization—the Workers (Communist) Party is in danger since 32 of its leaders are menaced.

Thousands of dollars are needed immediately for the Ruthenberg appeal to the United States supreme court, for the Minor trial and those that will follow. In addition to the legal fight, the cases must receive the widest publicity, the facts must be spread broadcast so that all workers and their organizations will know that THEIR CAUSE is the cause of these Workers (Communist) Party defendants, and will unite in a mass protest and demand for their freedom.

The Labor Defense Council appeals to all workers to give generously, without stint, NOW, in the new emergency. Let funds pour in as in 1922-23. The need is very great. The money is carefully and economically raised and used. From the beginning in 1922 up to Jan. 1, 1925, the total amount raised was $137,787.14, the total used for direct defense expenses—attorney's fee and expenses, printing of briefs and records and other legal expenses was $87,456.62. Other expenses, administrative and for the collection of funds was $50,146.00. This latter sum, about 35 percent covers the entire cost of printing, publicity, leaflets, folders, pamphlets, advertising, etc. as well as rent, postage, circularizing, wages, etc. and is low considering the results accomplished.

The financial statement for the quarter ending Dec. 31, 1924 follows:

Honor the Spartacists

The Communists of America are honoring on this Sunday the memory of Karl Liebknecht and of his comrade in life and death, Rosa Luxemburg, both lion-hearted leaders of the Spartacus Bund, which carried on the spearheads of its few but valiant lances the star of proletarian revolution thru the midnight of confusion and betrayal, into which the German working class was plunged by traitorous social-democrats at the end of the world war.

These traitors, who have fathomed the nethermost depths of political and ethical decadence and counter-revolution, on January 15, 1919, jointly with monarchist officers who acted under their orders, murdered in the most cowardly and ghastly brutal fashion Liebknecht and Luxemburg, while they were formally under arrest, helpless, unarmed and cut off from their comrades.

Karl Liebknecht! How your name rang the whole world around in those days after August 4, 1914! Son of a fighting sire, old Wilhelm Liebknecht, comrade and friend of Marx, even your training of years, to abide by the unit rule in the parliamentary bloc, and the fact that you stood alone against the whole fraction of 110 deputies of the social-democratic party in the reichstag of the kaiser, could not keep you, after the surprise of the first vote on war credits, from crying out above the tempest: "The workers have no Fatherland, and no enemy but capitalism!"

In the reichstag Karl Liebknecht launched a daring crusade against the imperialist war. His speeches, protected by parliamentary immunity, rang out around the world, and in the armies of France—Germany's lengendary foe—the conscripts murmured his name in veneration of that power which they instinctively knew was the only power to save their class from world slaughter—the power of the social revolution. And under many a spiked German helmet Liebknecht was a name loved but forbidden.

When expelled for violating the decision of the traitorous social-democratic party to support the war, he answered: "Mightier ties of discipline bind me—those of international solidarity."

When the kaiser conscripted him and sent him to serve on the eastern front, he addressed a tremendous crowd in Berlin on May Day, 1916, and openly called for armed revolt. A sentence of four years followed his immediate arrest. (How light the kaiser was beside the savage sentence given Ruthenberg by American "democracy".)

But the wave of revolution which he had unchained, released Liebknecht in October, 1918, and he at once took the fighting position of the Communist guided minority who, recalling the memory of the great gladiator that led the mutiny against Rome, termed themselves Spartacists and began an armed struggle against the class collaborationists of the social-democracy who turned the infant Soviets into the paralyzing substitute Betriebsraete.

Liebknecht—and Luxemburg—was again arrested and lodged in a military prison in the west end of Berlin. On January 15, 1919, they were ordered transferred by motor car, under guard, to the Moabit prison, but on the road they were brutally murdered by their guards in a lonely spot in the Tiergarten. The socialists have seen that the assassins escaped with a light term in jail. Liebknecht is dead, but in the coming German revolution the workers will fight for power with his name upon their lips.

The Gang Was All There

In what was admitted to be the first test of strength for Coolidge since the election, the strike-breaker administration won its fight to prevent the postal workers from getting a decent wage. Silent Cal is letting it be known in deeds, not words, that he regards his election as a mandate to crush labor into serfdom if the power of government can do it.

Of course, the postal workers are still too timid and bound to a tradition of servility to take a strike vote and let the autocrat in the White House see what would happen to the sacred cow of "business interests." The darned critter would, we imagine, wrinkle up and die. But they ought, at least, to have an eve open as to who are the enemies of the workers.

If the postal workers—or the workers generally—for exmaple, will survey the whole capitalist system with an analytical gaze, they would see that they are foolish to depend upon anything but their own organized power to get decent treatment out of a government which is but the executive committee of the whole ruling class. Losing their case by one vote has a suspicious air about it. It is like a man sentenced to be hanged and who upon appeal, is told that out of the nine judges of the supreme court, four were willing to let him live, but five upheld the sentence. It sounds like the poor devil got a "fair and impartial" trial, but the net result is that he gets a broken neck. The "dissenting opinion" of the four judges fail to save his life.

But when the postal wage bill was up in the senate, how brilliant was the example of Coolidge's savage aim to keep the working class from getting one penny more of wages out of the enormous fortunes piled up by the capitalist class of this country. He had rallied all the bloated, overfed and semi-moribund old saxtons, half of whom are always absent from their benches in ordinary times, to attendance afid support against the postal workers. Only two senators were absent on the final roll call.

And what a lovely steering committee Calvin had. Senator Curtis, the senate "whip," was everywhere, working every minute right up to the roll call, urging the doddering old imbeciles to stand fast for reaction against any appeal from voters in their constituencies. They stood.

In the republican cloakroom sat Secretary Weeks of the war department, to whom the hesitant and weak were brought for divine guidance. And if this were not enough, the reports tell us that "Mr. Butler of Massachusetts was always within call."

Mr. Butler, you must remember, is the president of the Textile Manufacturers Association, which is trying to force a ten per cent cut of wages upon all workers of that industry. Mr. Butler is the same multimillionaire who hired a swarm of Sherman detectives to spy upon his mill workers in New Bedford and even to worm themselves into the unions. The Mr. Butler who did both of these things and who was "always within call" to help crush the postal workers' wage demand, is the same Mr. Butler who was the campaign manager for Coolidge.

The gang was all there. And such a precious gang it was. If only the postal and other workers would elect a real Communist into that assembly of senile corporation lawyers we would guarantee, not a successful wage raise, but a thoro exposure of the most reactionary gang of capitalist henchmen who ever gathered in any parliament in the world.

The Chicago Elections

The Workers (Communist) Party has entered the local aldermanic elections in Chicago. The law says the candidates must be non-partisan. Like the primary law this provision is another one of those typically American political pretensions calculated to fool the masses into the notion they have democratic control over "their" governmental institutions. So that the nine candidates endorsed by the Workers (Communist) Party are, before the law, partyless.

But when you read the program upon which the candidates are running you will discover that each and every one is a Communist.

The democratic and republican aldermanic candidates are raising issues. They are the usual municipal issues concerning schools, traction, building, etc. They are issues that are almost invariably forgotten outside election time. They are raised primarily to give the two old fake parties something to fight with each other about.

The platform of the Communist candidates has something to say about these issues also. It has very important things to say about every phase of municipal life. It says things that the other parties would not and cannot say. The Communist candidates don't look upon these issues as merely convenient grounds upon which to disagree with political opponents. Nor do they merely take a negative stand because these issues have been raised by capitalist parties.

They say that the problems of schools, traction, unemployment and building vitally concern the working class of Chicago. And they have taken a stand on every point raised in the campaign.

They say that the city shall take over all transportation lines with workers' control. They say that the administration of school affairs shall be conducted by joint councils of teachers, parents and students. They say that the "Chicago Beautiful Plan" shall be turned into a plan to make homes for workers. They not only say what to do on all local questions, but they point out as well how it can be done.

The Communist aldermanic candidates in Chicago have a practical program. It is a practical program because it is based on the coming to power of the working class. It is, thruout, a working class platform for which every worker can vote without fear of being either reformistic or preposterous. It is a Communist program.

Warren S. Stone, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, manager of the Coal Rivers Collieries and editor of the Locomotive Engineers' Journal, has served notice on the former employes of his scab coal properties that they must immediately vacate the houses they occupy in Boone county, West Va. "Progressive" reporters in Cleveland, attached to Stone's payroll, but "influenced" by filthy lucre, might find something to report in this.

The Russian workers would not object to Ford sending a fleet of flivvers over there provided they did not carry a human cargo. Fertilizer is by no means the scarcest commodity in Russia. White guards may be valuable where lots of dung is needed.

The American dollar is now worth only 58 cents, taking the 1913 dollar as a standard, according to the results of a survey made by the chief statistician of the International Typographical Union. Why call it a dollar any longer?

PEASANTS EAGER TO LEARN NEW FARM METHODS

Priests Regard Tractors as "Black Magic"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WILMINGTON, Dela., Jan. 9.—Harold Ware, recently returned from Russia, where he carried on agriculture work for three years under the auspices of the international welfare association, spoke here at a meeting of the Society of Friends. Ware said that with the exception of the priests, who regarded the tractors as black magic, and bitterly opposed the bringing in of this advanced method of farming, they were "met with the heartiest of co-operation at every place." The priests preached to the peasants to keep away from the tractors, but the peasants were quick to see the advantages to be gained and eagerly learned as much as they could about the new method in framing.

Ware said: "An example of their co-operation was manifested when they first begun in the spring of 1922. At that time the Soviet government gave as a concession of three farms in southeastern Russia, and we began work with two shifts a day of seven hours each. Being afraid to leave the machines in their hands, we were forced to work the entire fourteen hours ourselves. When the peasants saw that we were working the full time they immediately held a meeting—which is one of the best things they can do—and unanimously decided that since we were there to help them and were working fourteen hours a day, they would also work the same length of time.

"Their eagerness for learning is astonishing for people who have been kept in ignorance for so many centuries. Not from the professional men did we receive so much aid as we did from the peasants. These seem to realize the situation that faces them and want to prepare themselves to meet it.

"As our work kept us largely in the small farming villages of southeastern Russia, we had little chance to see what impression our work was having on the rest of the country, but when we visited Moscow in the fall, we found the warmest welcome awaiting us. The people there seemed to regard us as living gods who were proving a salvation to them from the famine that strikes them every seven years."

Ku Klux Klan Is Strong in Indiana, State Legislature

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. Jan. 9.—The ku klux klan candidate for speaker of the Indiana lower house, George W. Freeman of Kokomo, was defeated by Harry G. Leslie of Otterbein here today. The klan candidate ran strong and had more votes than James Knapp, of Hagerstown.

The ku klux klan will have much to say in the making of Indiana's laws during the term of governor-elect Jackson, the strength showed by the klan in the election of speaker reveals.

Bosses Defy Night Work Ban

PASSAIC, N. J., Jan. 9.—Reports made to the New Jersey commissioner of labor show that four woolen manufacturers are defying the law against night labor for women between 10 p. m. and 6 p. m., which went into effect Jan. 1. The defiant manufacturers are the Botany Worsted Mills, Forstmass & Huffmann Co., Gera Mills, members of the Industrial Council of Passaic Wool Manufacturers.

The mill owners are acting on advice of counsel, it is said. They declare the law against night work for women unconstitutional.

Chauffeurs Sign Agreement.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 9.—The St Louis taxicab drivers gained two extra days a month off in their new agreement. The regular scale of wages of $28.50 remain altho they demanded a raise to $32.50 and the owners threatened to cut their wages to 25. These chauffeurs are 100 per cent unionized with more than 110 members. This is one of the few cities in the country where the Yellow cabs were forced to recognize the union.

Who Will Win?

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 9.—Negroes were denied membership here in the Order of the Moose. A group of St. Louis Negroes organized a colored branch and named it the Paramount Progressive Order of the Moose. This brought a temporary restraining order against the Negroes by the whites' Order of the Moose. St. Louis is heavily populated by Negroes, many of whom are on the police force, in the fire department and mail service. The outcome of this is being watched here

The Workers Party in Action

CHICAGO PARTY ACTIVITIES

THE aldermanic election, Feb. 24, was the main feature of the last city central committee meeting of the Workers Party Local Chicago. A complete report on candidates entered, wards organized for activity, petitions out was presented. The conduct, organization and policy of the campaign were outlined.

The election campaign will connect itself readily with large national activities initiated by the central executive committee of the Workers (Communist) Party, such as child labor, release of class war prisoners, especially in connection with the recent Ruthenberg conviction, unemployment, abolition of the injunction, education, etc. Resolutions to be introduced in trade unions and other working class organizations in connection with the campaign are being prepared. Members shall be on the job in their organizations to put them over.

This is a so-called non-partisan campaign, that is the party label does not appear. However, all candidates of the party will state the full position of the Workers (Communist) Party. The organization committee in elections will take these matters up extensively.

Program for Election Adopted.

A program for the election submitted by Comrades Swabeck, Gomez and Abern was adopted by the city central committee. This is being printed in full in the DAILY WORKER. A digest of the program will be made for widest distribution thruout the city in the shops and houses. Full details in connection with the campaign are reported in other columns of the DAILY WORKER.

Comrades must get on the job to put our candidates on the ballot by securing the necessary number of signatures.

Industrial Activity Noted.

Comrade Bell reported on the industrial activity pointing out that the left wing had made excellent gains in the recent elections in the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and were crystallizing left wing forces. A left wing slate of International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, was thrown out by reactionaries. A campaign is being initiated by our comrades in this connection. Building Laborers are issuing a leaflet in conjunction with their industry. (Building Trades group meets every first Sunday of month at 722 Blue Island Ave.)

Metal Trades have put up a complete left wing slate (See DAILY WORKER). They have gotten endorsements in Locals 390 and 397. The next Metal Trades Bulletin will deal with the election and its issues.

Comrades are conducting a good fight in Local 181, Carpenters, to reinstate expelled members. Barbers' election returns not in yet.

National T. U. E. L. has issued rules for the T. U. E. L. and how to conduct the work. Material sent to all local groups and branches. Study these carefully so that you will know how to conduct your work in the trade unions.

Young Workers' League is calling meetings of various trades in an effort to get all its members working in those trades and who have not as yet joined a union, to become members of trade unions and active in T. U. E. L.

Branches are to make sure of taking up at every meeting the attendance of members at union and T. U. E. L. meetings.

New Members Must Attend Class.

City central committee adopted a motion that all new members of the party must attend two lectures on the program of the Workers Party in charge of Comrade A. Henderson, beginning Jan. 13 and further that no applicant shall receive his membership card unless these have been attended.

37 New Members Accepted.

Thirty-seven new members were accepted into the party at the city central committee from the following branches and nuclei:

Lake View Scandinavian 5, Czecho Slovak Town of Lake 1, Ukrainian No. 1, 1; Lithuanian No. 2, 2; South Slavic No. 1, 2; Northwest Jewish 4, Englewood English 1, Douglas Park English 7, Mid-City English 3, Bulgarian 1, Czecho Slovak No. 1, 1; South Side English 1, Finnish 4, Nucleus No. 3, 2; Lithuanian No. 5, 1; Polish North Side 1.

Shop Nucleus No. 6 made up of railroad workers organized. Red revel committee on the job for Feb. 23. Comrades will have to be very much on the job now in Labor Defense Council activities in view of the conviction of Comrade Ruthenberg.

Lenin memorial meeting, Wednesday, Jan. 21, 8 p. m. in Ashland Auditorium. Tickets have been sent to all active comrades. Date of next city central committee will be announced later, inasmuch as the Lenin memorial meeting falls on the night of the city central committee meeting which has for that reason been called off.

There is good progress being made in every field in the party. United efforts of the comrades will bring even better results. On with the job of Bolshevizing the party and building a mass Communist Party.

Pittsburgh Jewish Branch Unanimous For Majority Theses

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Jan. 9.—The Jewish branch of the Workers Party of Pittsburgh, Pa. at its last meeting unanimously voted for the majority thesis of the C. E. C. This branch is one of the most active branches of the party, and last year was very active in the farmer-labor movement. The branch was well represented at the general membership meeting on Jan. 4 and helped swell the votes of the majority.

The membership of the branch is about 100. The members of the branch were pleased with the discussion held last Sunday by Comrades Bittleman and Bedacht.

Verona South-Slavic Branch Is Unanimous For Minority Theses

VERONA, Pa., Jan. 9.—The South Slavic branch of Verona at its last meeting thoroly discussed the theses of the majority and minority in the party discussion by first listening to a speaker from each side and then following by discussion by the membership. It was then taken to a vote which resulted in unanimous support of the minority theses.

Chicago Comrades Attention.

All comrades and friends are invited to the concert given at the Freiheit Singing Society Hall, 3837 Roosevelt Road, on Saturday evening, Jan. 17. A good musical program has been prepared.

Dancing will follow the musical program from 11 to 1 o'clock. The Young Workers' League orchestra will play. The concert and dance will be held under the auspices of the local Jewish propaganda committee of the Young Workers' League.

Argue Dictatorship in Labor Temple.

TORONTO.—J. W. Buckley, representative of the American Federation of Labor, is not in favor of the dictatorship of the proletariat. He so expressed himself at a meeting in the Toronto labor temple and this brot interruptions of emphatic dissent from many present. The meeting was under the auspices of the Canadian labor party.

Approve Big Chicago Budget.

The city council finance committee approved a budget of $45,600,000 for this year's corporate purposes, at a session early today. Last year's appropriation was $46,172,76[illegible]

N. Y. JUNIORS HOLD MEMBERSHIP MEETING DISCUSSING PAST WORK AND MAKING PLANS FOR THE FUTURE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Jan. 9.—The Junior Section of the Young Workers League here held a general membership meeting at the headquarters of the John Reed (Downtown) group, 105 Eldridge street. In spite of the bad weather and the insufficiency of the preparation, more than 160 juniors were present at this meeting which represents about 25 to 30 per cent of our membership.

The meeting was opened by Comrade Morris Spector, the city organizer of the Junior Section, and the greetings of the D. E. C. and of the leaders' committee were presented by Comrade Anna Thompson, the district junior director. Comrade Martin Gross of the Red Guard (Williamsburg) group was elected chairman and Esther Gross (of the same group) the city secretary, remained secretary for the meeting.

The general report for the junior section of New York was given by the city organizer, Morris Spector of the Foster (Brownsville) group. He gave a general review of the work of the past few months, emphasized the necessity for more school work and for a greater participation in the school struggle, complained of our low literature sales and our laxity in dues payment, and finally presented a sketch of the work in the future, going into some detail on the matter of new groups to be organized. The discussion on the organizers report was lively, resolving itself finally into a spirited debate on the question of further organization. The report was finally referred to the C. C. C. of the junior section and to the leaders' committee for action.

Reports were then presented on school work and school units, on the installation of the proposed prefecture system, and finally on the program and arrangements for Liebknecht day. The latter part of the meeting was taken up with the final preparations, under the supervision of Comrade Miriam Silverfarb, leader of the Trotsky (lower Bronx) group, for the participation of the junior section in the Liebknecht memorial meeting. The meeting finally adjourned at 6:15 p. m., with the general feeling that a strongly-knit city organization of the juniors was already in existence and functioning.

The following resolution was passed unanimously, Jan. 3, 1925:

Whereas, the report of our city organizer has shown that the further development of our existing groups and the organization of new groups in the city depends in the first place, upon the co-operation we are going to obtain from the Y. W. L. and the W. P. in the matter of providing us with leaders and other comrades to help us in our work, therefore,

Be It Resolved, that we make this special appeal to the members of the Y. W. L.—especially to the members of the Left Swing branches—to pay attention to junior work; to organize their junior committees; to aid in every way the junior leaders in their section; and finally and most important, to see to it that at least two or three comrades of each branch take up junior work as their major activity and become junior leaders. A copy of this resolution to be sent to the Freiheit, the Young Worker, the Young Comrade, the DAILY WORKER, and to the D. E. C. of the Y. W. L., district two, for transmission to the branches.

Morris Spector, City Organizer,
Esther Gross, City Secretary.

NON-PARTISAN LEAGUE MEMBERS BELONG IN W. P.

Majority of Them Are Working Farmers

By A. C. MILLER.
Communist Member of the North Dakota State Legislature.

BISMARCK, N. D., Jan. 9.—Judging by the general make-up of the non-partisan league members in both houses of the legislature, realizing what their economic conditions are, they should all belong to the Workers (Communist) Party. All of them voted for LaFollette in the last election, thinking that he represented their interests, while as a matter of fact he did nothing of the kind. The business and banking interests of the state, that safely could have supported LaFollette, on the other hand voted for Coolidge.

In listening to the conversation of league members one gets the idea that they are ready to do a whole lot of injury to the exploiters of the farmers, but whether this will materialize or not remains to be seen. The compromise and political trading in the senate does not show much fighting ability and the agreement on committee assignments is not going to be to the interest of the financial operation of the small industries.

The nonpartisan league has a safe workable majority in the house. The large majority of them are working farmers and they are sincere and honest in their efforts to better the economic conditions of themselves and their class. However, more honesty and sincerity will not save us from our exploiters if we employ the wrong principles and tactics. It is the private business system that is faulty and we must educate and organize to do away with it and establish the farmers' and workers' system.

Bills and resolutions of a working class character that really mean something, like the recognition of Soviet Russia, ratification of child labor amendment and taxing of high incomes to pay for the education of children of workers and poor farmers, the levying of a hail tax of all till able land in the state, should receive the enthusiastic and whole-hearted support of all farmer members of the legislature.

Flying Lieutenant In Court.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.— Lieutenant James Hutchinson, of the army air service, went on trial today by general court martial, charged with flying a plane so low over Broadway that passing pedestrians were terrified. The trial is being conducted at Governor's Island.

Bolshevism or Trotskyism?

By G. Zinoviev

Some Facts Regarding Brest and the First Party Conference After October.

The Differences of Opinion in October and My Mistake at That Time.

TO replace Leninism by Trotskyism that is the task which Comrade Trotsky has set out to accomplish. In this respect he had already in 1922 in his book "1905," attempted "to attain something by allusions." So long as Comrade Lenin held the threads in his hand, Comrade Trotsky decided not to undertake a direct attack. Comrade Trotsky has now obviously decided that "the moment has arrived." According to all the rules of strategy, before one strikes the decisive blow, one must prepare the way by artillery fire. The attack upon the so-called right wing of Bolshevism is intended as a smoke-screen, particularly regarding the October failures of the writer of these lines.

It is an actual fact that at the beginning of November, 1917, I committed a great error. This error was freely admitted by me and made good in the course of a few days. As, however, these days were not ordinary days but very fateful days, as this was a time of extreme tension the error was highly dangerous.

In any event I will not minimize the extent of this error.

It was precisely because of the extraordinary tension of these times that Vladimir Ilyitch so energetically opposed our error. All these extremely draconic punitive measures, which he at that time proposed against us, all the passionate chastising which he inflicted, were of course thoroly justified. In the shortest time after these events, some weeks afterward, at the commencement of the disputes over the Brest peace, Vladimir Ilyitch, as the whole C. C. and all the leading circles of the party are aware, regarded these differences of opinion as completely liquidated.

In his speech on "Trotskyism or Leninism," Comrade Stalin very rightly remarks that in the September-October period as a result of a number of circumstances, the revolution endeavored to carry out every step under the form of defence. This was to be understood after all the shilly shallying connected with the Kornilov period. I, who at that time, was living illegally, fell a victim to my failure precisely owing to this peculiarity of that phase of October.

When Comrade Lenin reverted to our error, three years after it had been committed, he wrote as follows:

"Immediately before the October revolution, and soon afterwards, a number of excellent Communists in Russia committed errors, of which one does not like to be reminded. Why not? Because it is not right except on a special occasion, to refer to such errors, which have been completely made good. They showed hesitations in the period in question in that they feared that the Bolsheviki would isolate themselves and undertake too great a risk in holding aloof too much from a certain section o the mensheviki and of the social revolutionaries. The conflict went so far that the comrades in question, as as a demonstration, resined from all responsible posts, both in the party and in the Soviets, to the greatest joy of the enemies of the social revolution. The matter led to the most bitter polemics in the press on the part of the C. C. of our party against those who had resigned. And after some weeks, at the most after some months, all those comrades perceived their errors and returned to their responsible posts in the party and the Soviets." (Lenin, Collected Works, Volume XVII, Page 373.)

Comrade Lenin makes no reference whatever to a "right" wing.

For myself, I endeavored more than once, before the party and before the whole Comintern, to deal with my error. I spoke of it, for exemple at the opening of the Fourth World Congress of the Comintern, which took place on the fourth anniversary of October, as follows:

"Allow me to say a word regarding a personal matter. It seems to me that I, particularly now on the fourth anniversary of the revolution, am called upon to say that which I am about to say. You are aware comrades that five years ago I, along with some other comrades, made a great mistake, which, as I believe, was the greatest mistake I have ever made in my life. At that time I failed to estimate correctly the whole counter-revolutionary nature of the mensheviki. Therein lies the nature of our mistake before October, 1917. Although we had fought against the mensheviki for over ten years, nevertheless, I, as well as many other comrades, could not at the decisive moment get rid of the idea that the mensheviki and social-revolutionists, although they were only the right fraction and the right wing, nevertheless formed a portion of the working class. As a matter of fact they were and are the 'left,' extremely skillful, pliable and therefore especially dangerous wing of the international bourgeoisie. I therefore believe, comrades, that it is our duty to remind all our comrades . . . etc."

I spoke of our error in the most widely circulated book from my pen, in the "History of the Russian Communist Party," and on numerous earlier occasions.

To consider the writer of these lines as belonging to the "right wing" of the bolsheviki, is simply absurd. The whole of the Bolshevik party is aware that I, working hand in hand with Comrade Lenin in the course of nearly 20 years, never once had even a sharp difference of opinion with him, except in the one case mentioned. The epoch of the years 1914-1917, from the commencement of the imperialist war up to the commencement of the proletarian revolution in our country, was a not unimportant epoch. Precisely in these years there took place the decisive regrouping in the camp of the international labor movement. The books "Socialism and War" (1915) and "Against the Stream" are sufficient witness that during that time I in no way came forward as representative of a right wing of bolshevism.

At the April conference of 1917, the importance of which Comrade Trotsky misrepresents, I had not the smallest difference of opinion with Comrade Lenin. In the dispute between Comrade Trotsky on the one side and comrades Kamenev, Nogin and Rykov on the other side, I was wholly on the side of Comrade Lenin as was to be seen from a number of my reports and speeches at the April conference. The whole dispute was naturally confined within the limits of bolshevism — as Comrade Lenin and the party regarded it—and only under the pen of Comrade Trotsky does it assume the form of a struggle of a "right wing" against the party.

Not the least differences of opinion occured between myself and Comrade Lenin during and after the July days. We had the opportunity to test this at our leisure in the course of several weeks as long as I lived together with Vladimir Ilyitch in hiding. The first difference of opinion was noticed by me at the beginning of October, after the liquidation of the Kornilov period, after the article of Comrade Lenin "On Compromises." (in this article Lenin proposes, under certain conditions, an agreement with the mensheviki and the social revolutionists.) My error consisted in the fact that I endeavored to continue the line of the article "On Compromises" some days later. In all only a few days, but the days at that time counted as months.

In the famous sitting of the Central Committee of the 10th of October, at which the revolt was decided on, and at which for the first time differences of opinion regarding the time to be fixed for the revolt and as to judging the prospects in the Constitutional Assembly arose between me and Kamenev on the one side and the rest of the members of the C. C. on the other side, the first political bureau of the C. C. for the leadership of the revolt was created. The seven following comrades were elected to this political bureau: Lenin, Zinoviev, Kamenev, Trotsky, Stalin, Sokolnikov and Bubnov. In the no less important joint meeting of the Central Committee and a number of Petrograd funtionaries on the 16th of October, after the debates between Comrade Lenin and ourselves, 19 votes were cast for the motion of Comrade Lenin in its final form; 2 were against and 4 neutral; while my motion was introduced by Comrade Volodarsky as an amendment to the motion of Comrade Lenin. My amendment read that "in the next five days before meeting our comrades and before discussion we must not arrange any revolt." My written motion, which was submitted to the vote at this meeting, read: "Without postponing the measures for investigation and preparation, it is decided that no action be permitted before consultation with the bolshevist section of the Soviet congress."

It was at this time that Comrade Lenin wrote his famous articles against us. I continued to work diligently for the Pravda. When the action was finally decided on, in order to silence the exaggerated rumours which had appeared in the press regarding our differences I wrote a short letter to the editor which was published by the central organ with a comment of the editor that the dispute was ended and that in essentials we were and remained of one mind. ("Pravda," 21st November, 1917.)

The unsigned leading article which appeared in our central organ "Itabotshi Put" (The Path of the Worker), which appeared in place of Pravada, on the day of the revolt October 25, was written by me. The second article was likewise written by me and was signed by me. In this last article we read:

"It is a great task which confronts the second Soviet congress. The events of history are followed each other with breathless speed. The final hour is approaching. The least further hesitation brings the danger of immediate collapse. . . ."

"The last hopes for a peaceful solution of the crisis are past. The last peaceful hopes which—I must confess—up to the last days were cherished by the writer of these lines have been dispelled by facts."

"All Power to the Soviets.—It is here that everything is being concentrated at the present historical moment."

In the number of our central organ "Itzboishi Put" which appeared on October 26, a short report was published of my first speech after the period of illegality in the sitting of the Petrograd Soviet of October 25, the day of the revolt. Here we read as follows:

The Speech of Zinoviev.

"Comrades, we are now in the period of revolt. I believe however that no doubt can exist regarding the outcome of the revolt—we shall be victorious!

"I am convinced that the overwhelming portion of the peasantry will come over to our side as soon as they become acquainted with our proposals regarding the land question.

"Long live the social revolution which is now beginning. Long live the Petrograd working class who still achieve the final victory!

"Today we have paid our debt to the international proletariat and delivered a terrible blow to the war, a blow at the breast of all imperialists, the greatest blow at the breast of the hangman Wilhelm.

"Down with the war: Long live international peace!"

Sharp differences arose in our circle again in the first days of November (according to old calendar) at the moment when the right social-revolutionists and mensheviki were already shattered and when it was the question whether we would not succeed in bringing over the left social-revolutionists and the best section of the mensheviki to the side of the Soviet power. In these days I had to take part with other comrades in the famous negotiations with the then exisiting organization of the railwaymen. These negotiations led to a complete agreement of the central committee of our party with the then central executive committee of the workers' and peasants' councils. These differences lasted actually from two to three days, but during this time they were exceedingly heated.

On the 2nd of November, 1917, the central committee of our party, in the presence of Comrade Lenin, adopted a resolution which, among other things, stated:

"The central committee confirms that, without having excluded anybody from the Second Soviet Congress it is even now fully prepared to note the return of the Soviet members who have resigned (as is known the right social-revolutionists and the mensheviki withdrew from the Second Soviet Congress) and to recognize the coalition with those who have withdrawn from the Soviets, that therefore the assertions that the Bolsheviki will not share power with anybody are absolutely devoid of all foundation.

"The central committee confirms that on the day of the formation of the present government, a few hours before its formation, it invited to its session three representatives of the left social-revolutionists and formally invited them to participate in the government. The refusal of the left social-revolutionists, even tho it was only limited to a certain time and subject to certain conditions, places on them the full responsibility for the agreement not being arrived at."—(Pravda, No. 180 v. 4-17 Nov., 1917.)

This paragraph of the resolution, which was doubtless written by Comrade Lenin, must be specially noted by the reader in order the better to understand that which follows:

In the Pravda (the central organ of our party was on the 30th of October again named the Pravda), we read in No. 189 of Nov. 4 the following extract from my speech which I delivered at the session of the central executive committee of the social-revolutionists and of the social-democrats on Nov. 2, 1917:

"In the name of the central committee of the Russian social-democratic labor party (at that time our

Comrade Zinoviev's Speech Delivered at the Sixth All-Russian Trade Union Congress.

(Concluded from last Saturday)

Relations Between Workers and Peasants.

Here too we are not faced with the necessity of adopting new theses. That which is fundamental remains the same as it was drawn up by the hand of Lenin, but there is something new in the political and economic situation that you, the leaders of the organized working class of our country must consider first of all. Comrade Lenin taught our party and the comrades working in the trade union movement that he is not a Bolshevik who thinks of the workers only, but he is a Bolshevik who thinks of the entire country and feels himself to be the giant of the revolution, the leader, its basic force. Here at the congress we have to take a decision not on the tasks of the labor policy in general, but of the tasks of the labor policy in a peasant country, and you will have to map out your fundamental policy not as merely as trade union policy but as the policy of the working class in a peasant country. Only then will the question be solved in a truly Bolshevist instead of lifeless manner.

Our congress should map out the basic principles of this policy, remembering that we are effecting a dictatorship in a country predominantly peasant. It would have been the worst kind of craft unionism, were our trade union workers to consider these questions from a purely "workers'" point of view. You would get a workers' point of view in quotes, and since the working class governs the country, since it is holding the dictatorship in a peasant country, it must effect a wise dictatorship, it must effect such a dictatorship that would be accepted by the overwhelming majority of the peasants. It must act as the master of the entire country, and not think as a craft unionist defending his own craft. Therein lies the fundamental difference between Leninism, Bolshevism and craft unionism. We are members of trade unions, i. e., of the organizations of our trade, but we are not trade unionists in the sense that we stand for our craft only, we are not mensheviks in politics, we are members of trade unions, but we are Bolsheviks, we feel ourselves a class holding supreme power, we must feel ourselves a class pursuing its policy in a peasant country, and here our congress finds itself in a situation that is new to some extent.

"Jealousy" of the Workers.

We observe a certain kind of jealousy of the workers on the part of the peasants, something that we did not observe before or that was observable in quite a different form. In some places we even have mutual jealousy on the part of some backward groups of workers towards the peasants. However this feeling is particularly dangerous among the peasants, and it crops up sometimes, being based upon the class division in the village; it is displayed by the rich peasants who are interested in stirring up hatred for the workers among the peasants.

We have in our country two classes, or perhaps two classes plus an appendix, a fraction. This appendix consists of the remnants of the old bourgeoisie, of the embryonic new city bourgeoisie, of a part of the bourgeois intelligencia, who hate us organically. Of course, this semi-class is discontented, it is jealous of the workers and of the Soviet power, but they are of no danger. We do not have to worry about them. They will wait as long as necessary.

The difficulties do not lie here, but in the inter-relations of the two main classes, the working class and the peasantry. Here the least friction of one degree might give us a big deflection, and here you must keep your eyes wide open. We must remember this sentiment of the peasantry.

Trade Unionism and the Bolshevist Attitude Towards the Village.

We must stop short every trade unionist who looks down upon the village, who thinks he is not concerned with the village. It is a narrow trade unionist who does not understand that we are located on the border between two classes and that we have decided upon a world historic task, both in our own country and on a world scale. Therefore, comrades, we have no right to evade this question. There is, of course, something in the sentiment of a part of the peasantry which we cannot concede under any circumstances. No doubt there are peasants who think that the eight-hour day is a luxury; "I work 16 hours during harvest time —they think—why should the worker work only eight hours?" Can we make any concession on this question? Under no circumstances can we do so. There are questions in which we can not give in to the prejudices of the peasants, for they are only prejudices, and the peasantry must grow up and understand that the eight-hour day is the basis of the workers' economy and promotes the welfare of the country, including also the peasants' welfare. There are a number of questions on which the workers can not and should not, under any circumstances, give way to the prejudices of the backward peasantry and there can be no question of giving in on this matter.

However, there is a group of questions arousing the just discontent of the peasants, over which we must do some thinking. The first question is that of prices. Now, frequently, separate groups of peasants say: "We give bread to the workers at pre-war prices; tell us, when will you give us city products at pre-war prices?" To day only separate groups of peasants are saying these things, tomorrow the entire peasantry may be saying them. This is a question which cannot and should not be evaded by the Sixth Trade Union Congress, it is a question that stood in the center of the attention at the plenary meeting of the central committee of our party the other day, and which should engage the attention of such an important congress as is yours. You cannot back out of it. This one is not a prejudice of the peasants

Of course we must explain to the peasant why the question of prices is not so easily solved, why the war and the blockade ruined the city economy more than the village (all this can and should be said by us) but it must be remembered that this question is knocking at the door, and we cannot disregard it. It will return to us in its varied form. The peasant will put this question before us, and I think that it will be useless for us to hide our heads, we must clearly see that which is new in our political and economic fields, and remember that not much time is allowed us in this question. Already at the Eleventh Congress of our party Vladimir Ilitch told us about it. It is necessary to use all the forces of the workers and of the party, of the trade unions and of the managing boards to push this question ahead to find a satisfactory answer to it, to show the peasants that we really want to meet their demands. Of course, the solution of this question will require a certain amount of time.

The question of land improvement in the village also requires much time. However, there are questions that can be solved much quicker, and this depends entirely upon us.

What Sort of a Soviet Apparatus Does the Village Need?

We must set up in the village a real Soviet power, an honest cultural sober Soviet power without graft, without moonshine, a power such as we now have in the principal centers of the labor movement. We did not have an easy time even in establishing it in these principal centers. You remember how, two or three years ago, we had to stop our meetings by apologizing to the workers for the fact that all sorts of outcasts and adventurers wormed themselves into our party and the Soviet institutions. In the city the apparatus has been put more or less into order, and that only more or less. In the village we have not even accomplished this.

Recall, for instance, the Demovko trial. Malinovsky was killed near Nicolaev, only 50 versts from the big labor center. The incident may appear to be only of a local nature, but it reflected a very sad fact. We cannot pass by it with an easy heart. Remember, comrades, we are still lacking a safe transmission belt, an inexpensive, sober, honest Soviet machinery in the villages.

Can the Trade Union Congress help this? Very much so, just as during the first trade union congresses, along with the current work, along with the trade union work there stood such serious questions as the organization of the civil war, just so must we here, together with the questions of current trade union interests, remember the fundamental question which is of general political importance; how to help the village to set up an honest, sober, cultural inexpensive Soviet apparatus for which one would not have to blush.

The Trade Unions in the Village Must Strengthen Their Work.

We spoke about this at the Thirteenth Congress of our party. We were all surprised to hear that we have more than a million trade unionists in the village, and I even think that this will be just as new to you as it was to us at the Thirteenth Congress. The educational workers have 211,000 workers in the village, the land and forest workers 196,000, the sugar workers, 177,000; the miners, 100,000, etc., etc., altogether, in excess of a million trade union members in the village. Comrades, let us confess, do these village trade unionists work as they should? Have you thought seriously about this, as party and trade union members. No, we have not. But this was in the past. Now with the new development in the village, this million trade union members should move from the realm of shadows, papers and diagrams into the realm of realities.

Most serious attention to this question! The Thirteenth Congress adopted a well thought out decision on this matter. We must consider it as a problem, such as it is—it is the key to every position.

The Baldwins in themselves do not worry us very much. When we speak of the phase of world reaction, we know that the U. S. S. R. is not directly threatened by this world reaction; that it threatens the workers in those countries where it is beginning to reign. The world reaction cannot afford us very powerfully. And this question of which I spoke, the question of jealousy of the discontent of the peasants with the workers, is a serious matter which the trade union congress should consider precisely because we are not sectionalists. Here is a trade union congress of Bolsheviks, of Comrade Lenin's pupils, there are no narrow sectionalists here, but men who know how to fight effectively for the needs of the working class, who know how to be revolutionary Bolsheviks, who are worthy members of the class enforcing the hegemony of the working class, thus far only one-sixth part of the globe, but let us hope that the borders will shortly extend.

Productivity of Labor the Pivot of Our Policy.

The question of the relationship between labor and the peasantry leads us to the question of labor productivity. This is a most important problem, with a political aspect. We consider a raise of the productivity of labor as a most important question of international, economic and internal significance. The workers can say without exaggeration that the productivity of labor in any particular branch of industry, Baku or the Don Basin is of international importance to us, and has a tremendous agitational significance to the workers of all other countries. It is not only a direct factor in increasing our wealth, but it is one of the bridges connecting us with the peasantry, and one of the answers which we must give to their expressions of discontent. It is the only chance of giving the peasant goods at a reasonable price, and it is the only chance of raising the workers' wages.

It is time to put an end to the situation when we had "the union between the workers and the peasants" only on placards. This union should be effected in practice, concretely. This union cannot be only a cultural union, as we thought for some time, but it must be a cultural and economic union, because the question of economy, of prices, is the fundamental one.

The Life and Sufferings of a Bolt.

The campaign for higher productivity of labor is at its hight, already some positive aspects of this campaign are noticable, but there are also some negative aspects. Among the negative aspects is the rigmarole and noise about labor productivity. The workers quite properly nicknamed this prattology. There was a lot of noise and buzzing without businesslike advice and things were represented in such a way as if the whole business depends upon the workers alone. This is untrue, the productivity of labor depends only partially upon the workers. One little document, a workers' note handed down at the non-party conference shows also another aspect. A certain non-party worker reported on productivity of labor as follows: I will write you—he said—a history of the life and sufferings of one bolt.

"A bolt dropped out of a machine, a bolt 1¼ or 2 inches long, its price is only 1½ kopecks. In order to receive the production foreman must write: At Roller No. so and so, please have a new bolt fixed, then you must go to the engineer to have this signed, then to the mechanical engineer who will send you to the repair shop. The order has been received, and you must now write out a request. The request is written in three copies and must be signed by the production foreman, who is not always on the spot, as the plant is two versts in circumference, must be found, for he is a busy man and has other sections under him, and in order to find him you must walk about the plant. Finally you find him, and he signs the paper. You must then go to the engineer and then to the storehouse, at the storehouse you find that there are no such bolts, but that there are 3-inch bolts. You take the bolt, cut it short and fix it in its place. Sometime it happens in a way: You come to the storehouse, you don't find what you want, and you go to the 'main warehouse,' the rubbish heap near Ekaterinin's Park. You'll dig in there until you find something. This is happening at Leningrad in the Triangle factory, which cannot be classed as among the worst." Is it the workers' fault if he cannot raise his productivity under such conditions? Of course not. This is only one example and their number could be greatly multiplied.

The Administration and the Unions Should Be Equally Interested and Responsible for Productivity of Labor.

Productivity of labor cannot be created merely by personal intensity. Here 50 per cent depends upon the state, the management upon all of us. But the other 50 per cent depends upon the workers. This should be plainly told the workers that the other 50 per cent depends upon them. Some time ago you and we demanded together the eight-hour day from the bourgeoisie, the czar and company. Now we have a workers' government, and all of us ask you for an eight-hour day, a real honest, sober eight-hour day, which we do not yet have. In many places much less time is worked.

Thus, comrades, it is wrong to put the question of who is to raise productivity, the administration or the trade unions, "we" or "you." Under such a situation we shall perish, for we shall never raise the productivity but merely intensify the conflict with the peasantry. We must all raise pro-

Communist Youth of World Pay Tribute to Karl Liebknecht

By JOHN WILLIAMSON.

SIX years ago the working class of the world was watching with intense interest the revolutionary struggles of the German working class to establish the Soviet republic. Revolutionary fervor ran high. The working masses were awakening to a realization of their power and were beginning to assert it. The workers of Germany, tho poorly organized, were struggling against the well-armed and disciplined forces of the government.

In this revolt who were the leaders? Who was it that issued the stirring manifestos and proclamations?

The Spartacus League of Germany, headed by Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemberg.

This attempt of the workers to overthrow the capitalist republic was drowned in blood. The leaders, Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg were foully murdered by the armed forces of the government under the direct supervision of the social-democrats who were in power.

The blood of these great working class leaders together with that of thousands of other militant workers stains the hands of the German socialists. These leaders had dedicated their lives to the struggles of the workers against the capitalist state and had suffered many times in the prisons of Germany. It was left to the yellow social democrats to commit the crime of murdering our leaders while engaged in the valiant struggle to establish a workers' government.

Karl Liebknecht was well-known for his continual struggle against the German plutocracy. Born at a time when his illustrious father, Wilhelm Liebknecht, was serving time in jail for socialist agitation, Karl early became interested in the revolutionary movement. Early in his activities he realized the importance of organizing the socialist youth since he had become convinced of the sterility of the old line socialists and their non-revolutionary attitude He was instrumental in calling the first International Socialist Youth Congress in Stutgart in 1907, which assumed a revolutionary position in opposition to the reformistic struggles of the party. During the world war Liebknecht's name was on the lips of every honest revolutionist. In the midst of the betrayal of the workers' movement by practically every leading world figure in the socialist movement it was Liebknecht's voice which rang thruout the world in defiance of the world war. As a result of his stirring appeal to the workers of Germany on May Day, 1916, Liebknecht was imprisoned until 1918 when he again assumed the leadership and rallied the masses against the continued betrayal of the social-democrats. It was in this struggle that he met his untimely death—murdered—shot in the back—he died in the struggle.

With the same thought of Liebknecht come his constant ally and co-worker, Rosa Luxemburg. Known for years for her constant struggle against the opportunism of the leaders of the Second International, she also was banished in 1915 for her agitation against the capitalist slaughter. Early in life she was noted for her leading part in organizing the Polish revolutionary party, and giving it a definite and clear-cut Marxian program. She wrote article after article, book after book, exposing the reformistic nature of the entire leadership of the Second International. She became a thorn in the sides of both the German bourgeoisie and their socialist lackeys. On the same night that Liebknecht was murdered, Luxemburg was stabbed in the back by a group of army officers under whose care she was being transported. While suffering from the first blows, the rest of the cowardly beasts struck and shot her till she was a mass of bloody flesh. Thus ended the career of Red Rosa—murdered under the socialist reign of terror against working class leaders.

While the German working class suffered temporary defeat in 1919, the Communist Party of Germany has forged ahead and today rallies around its red standard the masses of Germany. The socialist lackeys still continue to crush the Communists and today thousands of our German comrades lie in jail under the guard of socialist watchdogs. However, the German working class has been slowly disillusioned and realizes today that only the Communist Party is the party of the masses—the party of struggle—the party of Communism.

January 15 has been dedicated by the Young Communist International as a day upon which the Communist youth of all lands mobilize the working class youth for struggle against their exploiters and to advance the struggle for working class power. The Communist youth of all lands carry on the struggle where Liebknecht left off. We must not only mourn our departed leaders. We must utilize International Liebknecht Day as an occasion to mobilize the masses of working class youth.

Thruout America the Young Workers' League has issued the call to action. In America where the youth are subjected to the most subtle propaganda, thru the most scientific means of dissemination, in favor of capitalism, the Young Workers League calls upon the workingclass youth to rally around its standard on the following issues:

Abolition of child labor.

Maintenance by the state of all school children of workers under sixteen years of age.

Six-hour day, five-day week for all youth labor with full pay.

Against capitalist wars and militarism.

Against the enslavement of German workers thru the Dawes' plan.

For a workers' republic.

Young workers of America, rally to the standard of the Young Workers' League of America. Joint with us in our struggles against the capitalist class and their hirelings. Let us be determined that Liebknecht and Luxemburg did not die in vain. We must conduct the struggle with ten times more vigor, with a determination that in our final struggle we will be victorious. The spirit of Liebknecht lives on. It is imbedded in every young revolutionist the world over.

Long live Communist Party of Germany.

Long live the Young Communist International.

Long live the world leader of the revolutionary working class, the Communist International!

OUR COMMUNIST MARTYRS

KARL LIEBKNECHT ROSA LUXEMBURG

Murdered by German White Guards, January 15, 1919.

Letters From Moscow - By Anna Porter

MOSCCW, Nov. 8.—(By Mail.)—My farewell to Moscow was a spectacular one and thrilling—something like a million comrades turned out and demonstrated for me—or so it seemed, for I lingered over Nov. 7, the day of days in Red Russia—the anniversary of the October revolution.

For days beforehand, truck loads of green garlands rattled down the cobbled streets, and the fire ladders carried them to the top of every official building, looping them over the whole facade—the Comintern, the Moscow Soviet, the Dom Soyus or Central Labor Council House, and the Soviet doms. Every building in town carried its share of decoration, even to the Nep hotels. And among the ropes of evergreen, hung banners of red and gold, fluttered scarlet flags, flaunted mottoed buntings—almost screamed the color and glitter of the revolutionary day. Over all, rested the queerest flaking of the first snow, caught in the green, leaving untouched the red.

Without a permit or membership in an organization, no one might enter the Red Square today, so I bethought me of an organization which was careless in its censorship, to which I might be said to belong by virtue of my presence in Moscow. At 9:30 a. m. I took my place in the ranks of the English-speaking section of the Immigrants' Club. Above us advanced a cartoon of the Dawes plan, with unflattering portraits before us a red banner announced us as "Anglo-Saxon Communists." Near me marched Gertrude Haessler and little Ruth Kennell, just from Kuzbas, and Anna Louise Strong—"immigrants" all. About half of us were Jews and as each contingent arrived, they were greeted with the friendly jeer, "Hurrah for the Anglo-Saxons!" and they evidently enjoyed the joke as well as anyone. The one who walked by me said, "Only workers can enter the Red Square today." "And Communists," I added. "All Communists," was the quick and proud reply, "are workers!" No one had censored me and I might have been a "counter" and carried bombs in my pocket. These revolutionists are growing careless! Nevertheless, again and again, the eagle-eyed marshal of our division prevented some by-stander from the crowded sidewalks from falling craftily into line.

Most of the Americans are voluntary exiles, but many others—practically all the French—are political refugees. The French section marched just behind us, arrogantly proclaiming on their bunting, "The bourgeoisie recognize us, but we do not recognize the bourgeoisie." Back of them the Italians were marching to the measure of their "Alar——ma! Alar——ma! Alarma, Communisti!" on the bugle tones. And under the slogan, "Hands Off China!" marched the students of the Far Eastern University. Looking forward and backward we could see no end to the lines moving steadily on in rhythmic advance under the red banners of the revolution. Even the "Oktyabrati" were out—truck loads of the wee ones born since Red October, and lines and lines of the little "Leninists," striding valiantly, and ranks and ranks of the Communist youth tramping sturdily, and workers—men and women—and the soldiers of the Red Army, all under the red banners of the revolution.

Into the Red Square we marched—over the frost of white that mottled its cobbles, and past the tribune of the mausoleum where Trotsky stood above his sleeping comrade to see our ranks go by. Very grim he looked and motionless, with hand at cap, while the crowd, not a whit awed, spelled out his name and shounted as each division passed. Very determined, too, and soldierly, and I think he saw us, in his mind, marching on and on, west and still west, until our ranks had doubled, tripled, swelled a hundred fold, and our feet were stayed by the Atlantic breakers. That, at least, is what

Fake Child Labor Programs -

By KARL REEVE

THE WORKERS PARTY demands that the emaciated anti-child labor amendment to the federal constitution now before state legislatures for ratification by supplement by full governmental maintenance of all school children of workers and poor farmers. The trade union bureaucrats and liberal anti-child labor organizations who are pretending to be against child labor, are on the other hand interpreting the amendment so as to make it altogether useless.

John H. Walker president of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, in his annual report to the state convention in Peoria on Sept. 8, practically assures the employers that they need not fear that this amendment, even if ratified by 36 states, will abolish child labor. "The enemies of this legislation are trying to prevent the different states from ratifying this measure by making it appear that, if ratified, it becomes an operating part of the constitution and, that congress will likely pass a law prohibiting any young person from working at anything until they are eighteen years of age," says Walker. "THIS SORT OF ARGUMENT IS PURELY DEMAGOGY. IT IS THE RANKEST KIND OF MISREPRESENTATION. The eighteen year provision included in the amendment enables congress and the legislatures of the different states to enact legislation THAT WOULD REQUIRE THAT A PERSON UNDER EIGHTEEN YEARS OF AGE WHO MAY BE WORKING BUT WHO IS BELOW THE STANDARD IN EDUCATION THAT WOULD FIT HIM PROPERLY TO BECOME AN AMERICAN CITIZEN, DEVOTED A CERTAIN AMOUNT OF TIME IN SCHOOL OR IN SOME OTHER WAY FOR THE PURPOSE OF ACQUIRING A SUFFICIENT KNOWLEDGE AND TO MAKE THEM FIT FOR AMERICAN CITIZENSHIP."

Walker, in other words, is for the child labor amendment because it does not abolish child labor, and considers any interpretation of the amendment to imply that it does abolish child labor as "rank misrepresentation." The amendment is useless enough as it stands. It provides that "congress shall have the power to limit, regulate and prohibit the labor of persons under eighteen years of age," but does not definitely curb child labor in any way.

The National Child Labor Committee, an organization of liberal, petty bourgeois and capitalistic organizations, has pushed the so-called child labor amendment more than any other body. But this conglomerate organization, including side by side with the women's welfare clubs, such capitalistic bodies as the American Legion, is equally as careful in pointing out that the amendment might as well be ratified as it doesn't mean anything anyway. This body interprets the amendment to mean that child labor on the farms is by no means affected.

Owen R. Lovejoy, the petty bourgeois spokesman for the child labor committee, asks,—"Will congress attempt to regulate employment of children on farms? The National Child Labor Committee believes not. The National Child Labor Committee includes in its organization citizens of every state who are known to be leaders in child labor reform and YET ARE DEFINITELY AVERSE TO ANY SUCH EXERCISE OF FEDERAL POWER. THE ATTEMPT TO LEGISLATE AGAINST EMPLOYMENT OF CHILDREN ON FARMS WOULD LIKEWISE BE OPPOSED, WE BELIEVE BY THE NATIONAL MANUFACTURERS ASSOCIATION, THE NATIONAL GRANGE AND SIMILAR ORGANIZATIONS."

Lovejoy's statement, made officially for the child labor committee, is all the more amazing when it is recalled that the overwhelming majority of child laborers are employed on the farms. The U. S. census figures for 1920 show that of 1,060,858 children between the ages of ten and fifteen inclusive, who work for a living in the United States, 647,309, are employed in agricultural pursuits. In other words, the child labor committee, at the start interprets the already futile child labor amendment to mean that 61 per cent of all children working in the country must continue at work.

The Workers (Communist) Party, on the other hand, takes the lead and calls for a united front of all workers and poor farmers in America against child labor everywhere. The Workers Party demands the, passage of laws, not only abolishing child labor, but providing for full governmental maintenance of all school children of workers and poor farmers. The Communists call on the workers to enforce, thru their organized power, the relief of the suffering child workers of America.

Coolidge has refused to work for the passage of even the futile child labor amendment. The A. F. of L. bureaucrats are laying down in the fight against child labor. The liberal and petty bourgeois child labor committees are accepting the interpretation of child labor laws laid down by the manufacturers associations and the capitalistic supreme courts.

The Workers (Communist) Party is the only organization which bands the working class together for a relentless fight to overthrow child labor and capitalist control of industry.

MUSIC - LITERATURE - DRAMA

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN

"LA BOHEME," the operatic paradise of all sentimentalists, was given its last performance by the Chicago Civic Opera company at the Auditorium last tuesday night.

The music of "Boheme" is, on the whole, too good to account for the opera's popularity. The explanation of the appeal of this Puccini opus is in the plot.

The story is familiar to all who go to opera. The four Bohemians, Rudolph the poet, Marcel the painter, Schaunard the musician and Colline the philosopher, live together in an attic in Paris. Their nighbor, Mimi, comes to borrow a light for a candle from Rudolph. Love at first sight.

In the second act the four friends and Mimi dine at an open air cafe. Musetta, an old flame of Marcel, appears with an ancient lover. Marcel and Musetta patch things up and the six principals make a hurried exit leaving the basso bouffe to pay the bills.

While the curtain is down between the second and third acts Mimi and Rudolph have a fight. They meet at the gates of Paris in the beginning of the third act and are reconciled. Marcel and Musetta quarrel again in the same act.

In the last act, Mimi dies of TB. Colline pawns his coat to save her, but she dies anyway, leaving the five other principals scattered about the stage in various attitudes of sorrow and despair.

The appeal in this plot is that deep down in the makeup of anyone artist enough to enjoy opera lies the desire, either suppressed or unfulfilled in the majority of cases, to live the bohemian life. The bohemian life is the completely individualistic one. Your bohemian is free of all the compulsory contacts and observances of ordinary men. You never have heard of a family of bohemians living together, have you? Whether or not a real bohemian exists on this planet is quite another argument.

Puccini's score for "Boheme" is much better than those of "Madame Butterfly" or "The Girl of the Golden West," but not so brilliant as that of "Tosca." "Boheme" contains fewer set arias and duets than most of Puccini's other works. "Butterfly" and "Tosca" are two character operas. "Boheme" is divided between six principals.

The cast was splendid in each part. Edith Mason is not so sylph like as a good Mimi should be to look the part, but she can sing it in 100 percent fashion. Gladys Swarthout was a good looking, convincing and attractive Musetta.

Of the four bohemians two were played by some of the best singing actors in the company, Desire Defrere as Schaunard and Virgilio Lazzari, that prodigious Italian bass, as Colline. Mr. Hackett's Rudolph was a little cold, perhaps because Hackett has not been in good health lately. Mr. Rimini sang Marcel.

That man Puccini had an astounding fund of sentimental tunes. "Boheme" keeps constantly this side of the vulgar. It takes an artist to write a tune that might be vulgar and isn't. Musetta's waltz song at the end of the second act and Colline's farewell to his coat in the last act are two of Puccini's greatest melodies.

The eleventh week of the Chicago Civic Opera company's season brings an interesting reportoire, with a number of extra matinees and special performances.

On Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, the second performance of Louise will be sung with Garden, Claessens, Ansseau, Baklanoff, with Polacco conducting.

Monday night, Samson and Delilah will be given a second performance with Homer, making her last appearance this season. The artists assisting her will be Marshall, Formichi, Oukraisky, Miles, Elisius, Millar, Nemeroff, Shermont and Corps de Ballet. Conductor, Polacco.

Tuesday night, Tales of Hoffmann will be given for the second time with Macbeth, Forrai, Ansseau, Schwarz. Conductor Lauwers.

The Wednesday matinee will be a special performance of Otello with Raisa, Perini, Marshall and Schwarz. Mornazoni will conduct.

Wednesday night, Martha will be sung for the first time with Mason, Perini, Schipa and Lazzari. Morangoni again conducting.

Thursday night, the Jongleur de Notre Dame will be given its second presentation with Garden, Cotreuil, Kipniss, Polacco conducting.

Friday night the first performance of Boris Godunoff will be given with Van Gordon, Cortis and Chaliapin. Polacco again conducting.

The Saturday matinee will be L'Amrore Dei Tre Re, The Love of Three Kings, with Garden, Ansseau, Baklanoff and Lazzari, with Polacco in the pit.

Saturday night, Hansel and Gretel, at popular prices, with Orens, Derzbach, Lenska, Swarthout, Westen and Beck, followed by the Ballet Divertissment, with Frank St. Leger conducting.

THE LITTLE DEVIL IS GOING TO GET — ?

THE Shop Nucleus of the DAILY WORKER has granted a special privilege to the little red printers' devil in the shop. On Monday night at the FIRST DAILY WORKER birthday party at Imperial Hall they will allow him (at the danger of arrest of course) to "associate with" Communist printers. But his social debut must be made with proper decorum (not full dress) or the printers insist he will be a poor little devil at the next nucleus meeting.

This is party because there is work to be done that night. A newspaper will be made up and the whole DAILY WORKER staff will participate in this novel stunt that will break all established Robert's rules of order. There will be other novelties, as all will admit when they hear that no party discussion will be allowed. And woe to the poor suckers who attempt it for Steve Rubicki and his Cheka will be on the job.

As a free supper will be served, no points of order will be considered but it will be a classy meal the committee assures us.

The Flaming Youth orchestra of the Y. W. L. will donate their tinkling tintinabulations to secure a lively movement on the dance floor. And there will be vocal and piano solos by Margarite Lewis whose work will some day make her city-agent-husband the better-half of a famous woman.

There are other novel stunts in store for those who will spend fifty cents to attend the party of our daily —and they will get other things beside a free meal to take home with them.

Comrades Natalie Gomez, and the well known sisters, Gussie Kruse and Emma Blechschmidt form the committee whom you will have to thank for the evening's jollity, and they are arranging a treat that will make DAILY WORKER parties a by word in the movement.

"Gompers, A Philosophic Anarchist"

A Reply to Yanofsky, Editor of Justice.

By A RANK AND FILER.

According to Mr. Yanofsky's statement in Justice of Dec. 19, Gompers "derived his strength from the working mass, reflecting in his policies their ideas, aspirations and state of mind." Before going any further I asked myself, "What is the policy of the A. F. of L." I tried to analyze its "contribution" to the welfare of humanity and the workers in particular. My conclusions are that the A. F. of L. with the great labor leader, Samuel Gompers, in whom, according to Yanofsky's opinion, "The workers have lost a real example of a labor leader," was nothing but a hindrance to the emancipation of the workers.

As to the question, what the policy of the A. F. of L. is? one can answer at once, "The obtaining of increasing wages and reduction in the hours of labor." But this is more of an abstract phrase than a practical aim and even if it were a practical policy, has it any real value? No! On the contrary. It is a disadvantage to those who produce all the wealth we have, that is, "they" have, they who control the tools of production and in return give the workers just enough to keep "soul and body" together in the form known as wages. It was Gompers with the rest of his clique who was throwing sand into the eyes of the workers, to prevent them from seeing whither they were led. Gompers, the great "philosophic anarchist," thruout his entire career was lulling the workers to peaceful sleep and content with the famous song, "A fair day's wage for a fair day's work."

In my opinion Gompers and the rest of the officials of the A. F. of L., the highest as well as the lowest, were traitors to the workers and were a menace to society as a whole. Yanofsky says, among other things, "With his life-work Gompers has immortalized his name in the history of our struggle." Yes, Mr. Yanofsky, you are right, but let me tell you how he has "immortalized his" great "name." Gompers was a faithful servant to the capitalist class but not to the workers. It is partly due to him that the latter are today enslaved and chained. It was Gompers who knew how to tighten that chain around the neck of labor.

Was your "philosophic anarchist" a labor leader, Mr. Yanofsky? Yes, but only insofar as to "lead" labor into such channels as would be of greatest benefit and profit to the employing class. Gompers' function was always to keep labor at the lowest possible point of economic and political consciousness. His death means a great loss to the master class he served. As sick as he was, he went to Mexico, his nurse accompanying him.

But you know, Mr. Yanofsky, as I do, that it was not for the benefit of labor that he went there. It was for the class who recently lost in him a valuable ally. The capitalist class of the United States ordered him to accomplish a task which was very difficult for him to accomplish and "the great labor leader," whom in the columns of Justice you have so highly praised, helped with all in his power to carry the victorious banner of Wall Street into Mexico.

The American ruling class is mourning the loss of their lackey who to the very last minute maneuvered in the ranks of labor to please his masters. The sand, Mr. Yanofsky, you try to throw into the eyes of the workers by means of your pen is scattered by the wind. You are dealing today with a new type of a reader of Justice, one who rebels at empty phrases and searches for concrete facts, for these facts stare him in the face.

Can an HONEST labor leader in his lifetime accumulate $30,000 and after his death be buried in a Sleepy Hollow cemetery between Rockefeller and Carnegie? It is clear even to a child and to workers especially that Gompers, your "philosophic anarchist," who, according to your statement, was such "a passionate lover of liberty," lived and died for capitalism, for, were it otherwise, he would not have had the honor of being buried among those who forged gold out of the flesh and blood of the working class.

You confess that years ago you condemned Gompers as a reactionary, as one who was holding back the forces of social revolution in America. But this, Mr. Yanofsky, was at the time when you were the editor of the Freie Arbeiter Stimme, when you occupied a little room in a basement of an East Broadway tenement where is was cold, dark and dreary. But today as the editor of Justice, sitting in a swivel chair in the building of the I. L. G. W. U. where it is quite comfortable for officials who are nothing else but tools and screws for the capitalist machine—today, you are singing a different song. Today you see Gompers as "the idol, the lover of liberty, a person of sterling honesty and as a philosophic anarchist." Mr. Yanofsky, your work is in vain. Labor all over the world is awakening and soon will say to you and your associates of Compersism: "Gentlemen, I defy you! For my power is growing stronger daily. In vain you are trying to curb my will. From now on you will no longer succeed."

I am sure that deep in your heart, Mr. Yanofsky, you know it very well that all labor fakers and corrupt union officials will have to make room for the rank and file who are capable to control industry and manage their own affairs.

In your eulogy of Gompers you go so far as to say that, "we in the labor movement shall feel orphaned because of his departure." Some of the autocratic officials may feel that way but surely none of the rank and file members share this sentiment. I as one of them feel that my estimation is correct and take the liberty of telling it to you.

With wrath and indignation will the tombstone and say, "Here lies one who betrayed our ancestors, it was partly due to him that they were plundered, outraged and disinherited." Their cry of protest will shake the world, a protest which will raise the battle cry, "Down with all sorts of prostitution." All sorts, including pen prostitutes.

Views of Our Readers on Many Subjects

The DAILY WORKER and the Negro Workers.

To the DAILY WORKER:—It is imperative that Negroes read, subscribe to and support our Communist daily newspaper, the DAILY WORKER. By so doing they will be helping themselves and also aiding our paper. Negro workers suffer from discriminations, petty police interferences, mob violences, which white workers do not suffer from. Therefore, Negro workers have extra difficulties to face on the account of the color of their skins. The Negro newspapers in general, some more boldly than others, constantly and doggedly fight against lynchings, burnings, segregation, Jim Crowism, unwarranted police interference and other discriminations.

As Communists we recognize the fact that the capitalist newspapers and other agencies are the ones behind the scenes constantly fomenting and stirring up anti-Negro prejudices. The capitalist legislative bodies pass and put into effect discriminatory measures against Negroes. We are convinced that the only way to completely eliminate the evil conditions under which Negroes suffer, is to destroy the capitalist system bag and baggage.

The stupid and ignorant white workers, imbued with their unfounded prejudices against all Negroes, as a result of this anti-Negro propaganda, composed the mobs who attack Negroes, and believe the vicious lies disseminated by the capitalist agencies against Negroes to be true. Many white workers even join the anti-Negro organization, the Ku Klux Klan. These white workers are badly in need of enlightment on the Negro.

Our Communist paper, the DAILY WORKER, in order to enlighten these white workers and at the same time obtain Negro subscribers and readers must constantly contain editorials and news articles on the Negro. In this way the anti-Negro propaganda of the capitalist newspapers will be counteracted. Already the Chicago Tribune and the Chicago Daily News have issued front paging and head lining crimes committed or alleged to have been committed by Negroes, as a result of the merciless exposure of their policy thru the columns of the DAILY WORKER and several Negro newspapers, by one of our Negro party members.

We know of a white girl, who said that she was afraid to come into the Negro district. No doubt that she had read these stories in the capitalist newspapers, of how Negro men kidnapped white girls, took them to some house in the "black belt" and there assaulted them and had other Negroes to do likewise, and believe the lies to be true. This shows to what extent the capitalist papers will go in Negro baiting.

We hope that the DAILY WORKER in the future will realize the significance of constantly publishing editorials and articles on the Negro, and will answer thru its columns the attacks made on the Negro by the capitalist newspapers and other agencies. By so doing, Negroes will come to learn that our Communist paper is truly a champion of the Negro workers as well as the white workers.

Gunmen in Demand.

Morgantown, W. Va.

Editor of the DAILY WORKER:—Yes, Gompersism must be killed as dead as Gompers is. The rank and file in and out of the unions have no confidence in Gompersism. The old dynasty must be dethroned. Keep up your drive at the A. F of L. leadership as having proved their unworthiness on many fronts. Judas was a gentleman compared to them. Their finish is near at hand, unless they are endowed by an Eastman a Duke, or a Rockefeller, which would be properly in line with their methods of crushing the workers.

The boom is on here in full blast. Machine guns are in heavy demand by the open shoppers. There is not so much unemployment as one would suppose after seeing the starving men around here. In fact, anyone who is willing to shoulder a gun and shoot down workers on demand is sure of getting a job. Such wonderful prosperity must be beautiful to behold by the stock market crowd and our money kings. And so it goes from Maine to California.

But Arthur Brisbane, the self-appointed schoolmaster of the world in his flights of imagination bids us be calm as things will be better in a few million years. It must be nice to be intelligent and civilized like Arthur Brisbane and his scientific friends—the blind slaves of capitalism. But I fondly hope they will soon relieve the most of us of our stomachs as we have little use for them in these times of high prices, low wages and unemployment.

(Signed) Henry Dondery, Morgantown, W. Va.

To the DAILY WORKER:—I have been employed by an owner of several greenhouses here, and everything went as well as might be expected when employed by a miser of a small capitalist, until this most reactionary employer of mine found out by opening my mail that I subscribe to the DAILY WORKER.

Since then I have been humiliated in the most treacherous manner conceivable: my room searched while I was gone; all sorts of petty "jokes" (as I heard the boss call them), from setting carpet tacks into my bed clothes to setting an alarm ringing at my door while I was asleep after having fired five boilers all night. Orders were given me as if I were on board a convict ship, the last of which was a command to work days in the greenhouse after a sixteen-hour night firing shift. It was impossible to drop off to sleep for a minute on this job because the boss insisted that the temperature be kept fluctuating within two degrees, almost an impossibility with his small boilers and in bad condition.

This last command I positively refused to obey and asked for my wages. He refused to pay until he had found a man in my place.

This is nothing now. Neither is the fact that the rest of the workers working here are not class conscious and think that by sticking with the boss they will be better off. It only means that we must work harder to reach them.

Wishing you the very best results in your Insurance Drive.

Fraternally yours,
LOUIS BOMAN,

Letter to Pravda.

Editor, Pravda, Moscow,
Union of Soviet Republics.
Dear Sir:—

Russia is to be CONGRATULATED in suppressing Christianity and ALL religions.

They are ALL bad.

Last Christmas the christians had a BIG celebration and stole my chickens and other things.

Then when I complained to the authorities threatened me with $5,000.00 fine and five years imprisonment, for asking that I be protected in accordance with the laws of this so-called republic.

Emma Goldman may think it harder in Russia than in America, but I assure the people of the Union of Soviet Republics that such is not the case.

Were I master of the great Russian language, and young and healthy, I would at once throw in my lot with the people of the Union of the Soviet Republics, for in Russia alone is liberty.

It is only a myth in America, and no one ever got any justice in any court here.

Today, the bleeding laborers are looking to Moscow, and not to Washington, for their salvation.

We are looking to Communism, and NOT christianity for our relief, and we are looking BECAUSE christianity has failed, and been proved as the foulest system of graft the world has ever known.

Yours for the Third International,
B. YORKSTONE HOGG.

Bolshevism or Trotskyism?

party was not yet a Communist Party), I declare that the comrades of the social-revolutionists (it was the question of the left social-revolutionists whom the central committe of our party, with Comrade Lenin at the head, tried at that time to induce to participate in the first Soviet government) should not have started to criticize us Bolsheviki while events were taking place in the streets of Moscow regarding which our Moscow delegates have reported today. (At this time the struggle for the Soviet power was still going on in Moscow.) On this occasion we remind the comrades of the social-revolutionists that before we published the composition of our government we called upon them to take part in the government, but they declared that they would take part in the work of the government, but for the time being would not enter the government."

At the session of the Petrograd Soviet of Nov. 3, 1917, the writer stated:

"Comrades:—There are among us comrades from the red army, soldiers and sailors, who in a few hours will hasten to the aid of our Moscow comrades and brothers. (Loud and prolonged applause.) The revolutionary military committee wished two days ago to send help, but met with obstacles precisely from those quarters from which one could only have expected support. I speak here of some leading circles of the railway employes, who in these hours so fateful for the revolution have adopted a 'neutral' attitude. In these terrible hours, however, one cannot be 'neither hot nor cold'—I do not wish to speak too sharply, but you yourselves will understand, comrades, how the future will judge these facts.

"Just recently a transport of troops to Moscow was held up. When the leaders of the railway workers' union were asked how they could act in this manner, they replied: We have also held up transports from the other side.

"We must appeal to the lower sections of the railwaymen and explain to them what 'neutrality' means under present conditions. I do not doubt that 99 per cent of the lower sections of the railway employes and workers will side with the fighting soldiers and workers. A whole number of central committees are sitting on the fence. Unfortunately, among these is the central committee of the railway workers. No one could have foreseen that the leading organ of the railway workers would preserve 'neutrality' whilst workers and and soldiers were fighting on the barricades. This state of affairs must be ended. The railway proletariat must stand like one man on the side of the fighting workers and soldiers, they must help them to break the resistance of the bourgeoisie and of the landowners. . . .

"Greetings to the comrades who are hastening to the help of the revolutionaries in Moscow (long and stormy applause). Now we are giving back to Moscow what it gave the revolution in 1905. At that time the Moscow proletariat began the revolt, and delivered the first blow against despotism. We are happy we are now able to help, that we now have the possibility of throwing our victorious troops on the Moscow front.

"Long live the comrades proceeding to Moscow—all Russia is watching them."

On the evening of the 3rd of November and on the morning of the 4th, our negotiations with the left social-revolutionists and with that conference which had invited the leaders of the railway workers' union, arrived at the most critical stage. At this moment we committed the greatest errors. The famous declaration of some comrades, among them myself, in the central committee of the Bolsheviki and the council of people's commissaries (regarding the resignation of our responsible posts owing to the obstinacy of our central committee) was signed on Nov. 4, 1917, and on Nov. 7, 1917, my "Letter to the Comrades" was published in the Pravda (No. 183). In this letter we said: (I quote the most important part).

"The central committee of the All-Russian Soviet Congress placed in the foreground a definite plan of agreement (the resolution of Nov. 3), which I fully agree with, as it demands the immediate recognition of the decrees regarding the land, peace, workers' control, and the recognition of the Soviet power.

"In reply to the resolution of the central executive committee, the mensheviki submitted a number of preconditions. The central executive committee, as it did not wish to place any difficulties in the way, adopted a resolution proposed by us which removed the hindrances in the way of these negotiations.

"In spite of this the other side would not make any concessions to the central executive committee. The conditions submitted by the latter were rejected by the mensheviki and the social-revolutionists. The attempt to arrive at an agreement was consistently carried out in spite of all obstacles; it led, however, to no result. It is now evident that the mensheviki and the social-revolutionists did not want an understanding and only sought for a pretext to wreck it.

"Now all the workers and soldiers will know who bears the responsibility for the wrecking of the agreement. Now—I am convinced—also the left social-revolutionists will throw the blame for the wrecking of the understanding upon the mensheviki and for refusing to enter into our government.

"In the present state of affairs I adhere to the proposition of the comrades and withdraw my declaration regarding resignation from the central committee.

"I appeal to my immediate comrades. Comrades, we made a great sacrificee when we openly raised a protest against the majority of our central committee and demanded the agreement. This agreement, however, was rejected by the other side. We are living in a serious, responsible time. It is our duty to warn the party of errors. But we remain with the party, we prefer to commit errors along with the millions of workers and soldiers and to die with them than to stand aside from them at this decisive historical moment.

"There will and shall be no split in our party."

Since Nov. 8 I participated as previously in the work of our central committee. On Nov. 9 I spoke in its name at the All-Russian Peasants' Congress, and on the 10th of November at the session of the Petrograd Soviet. Here I said that we would recognize the constitutent assembly, "if the constituent assembly would give expression to the actual will of the workers, soldiers and peasants."

Naturally, now after seven years, it seems monstrous to every member of our party how one could deceive himself with regard to the real forces of the leaders of the railwaymen and those alleged internationalists from the camp of the social-revolutionists and mensheviki grouped round the railway leaders. Of course, in order to understand the situation one must place one's self in the position obtaining at the time. It was not until six months after the October revolt that it became evident that the left social-resovlutionists had also become a counter-revolutionary force. In October, 1917, however, they were expressly invited by Comrade Lenin and our central committee to participate in our first Soviet government, as they were then connected with a large section of the peasants and with a portion of the workers. In fact, even the negotiations with the leaders of the railwaymen's union were, as the reader has seen, conducted with the approval of the central committee.

The result of the exposure of the mensheviki and of the social-revolutionists on the occasion of the railway workers' conference was, that the left social-revolutionists, whom Comrade Lenin had formerly in vain called upon to participate in the Soviet government, now entered into it; altho some days before the social-revolutionists had the intention even to resign for the central executive committee, which under the conditions then existing would have meant a severe blow for the Bolsheviki and would have hindered the winning of the peasantry.

In the Pravda of Nov. 4 we read:

"The fraction of the left social-revolutionists in the central executive committee submitted an ultimative declaration regarding the necessity of drawing up of a platform in the name of the central executive committee. The central executive committee agreed to this demand and in the name of the central executive committee a platform was drawn up."

It was just the rejection of this platform by the mensheviki and the social-revolutionists at the conference convened by the railway leaders which led to the change in the tactics of the left social-revolutionists in favor of the Soviet power.

At this time there was published in the Pravda a number of resolutions from the most important factories in which we find the following.

"Whilst we regard the agreement of the socialist parties as desirable, we workers declare that the agreement can only be reached on the basis of the following conditions . . ." (These conditions were practically the same as our representatives had submitted to the railway men's conference.)

In our attitude during these days there was again reflected the hesitation of these workers—in this respect our error was not a personal, not an accidental error.

Now, seven years afterwards, do not the words in the resolution of our central committee that "the assertion that the Bolsheviki would not share power with anybody is devoid of all foundation" sound monstrous from our present standpoint? And yet these words were written down by Comrade Lenin on Nov. 3, 1917, and approved by our central committee. Everyone who reflects over these facts, everyone who remembers that the left social-revolutionists at that time represented an important section of the peasants, everyone who reflects at all over the conditions at that time, will understand the extent and the character of our error. It was a great, but nevertheless not a "social-democratic" error.

We, of course, do not say that in order to prove that our error was a small one. We stood outside of the central committee of the party only for three days—from Nov. 4 to 7. In spite of this, this error, as we already said at the opening session of the Fourth World Congress of the Comintern, was the greatest error we made in our life. The only thing we wish to prove here is that it is not correct to draw from this error the conclusion that there existed a "right wing" in Bolshevism.

Every one who experienced those historical days knows that these differences, how much they strained the relations of such near comrades and friends, left no bitter feeling behind. Everybody adopted a sincere attitude towards the errors of the others, without attempting to "make use of" these errors for "diplomatic," fractionist purposes. Everybody understood that only the exceptional moment led to exceptional means of solving differences, which arose like a whirlwind but which, like a whirlwind, soon calmed down without causing great damage.

These differences were swept away by the avalanche of fresh events—they remained isolated with the leading circles of the party. A few days passed and the error was admitted by those who had committed it and the general staff of the party and the whole party could proceed to the solution of actual tasks. These differences have left behind such little traces in the party that at the first party conference (VII) which took place after the October revolt (which dealt already with the question of the Brest peace), nobody mentioned a single word regarding these differences.

Nobody reproached us regarding this error, altho it so happened that I, on behalf of the central committee, had to fight energetically against Comrade Trotsky and the "left"*) and its is clear that the party, under the fresh impression of the differences, would have attacked the guilty ones if they had estimated this guilt as Comrade Trotsky does now.

Comrade Trotsky now says in the "Lessons of October." seven years after these events, that our attitude to the question of the Brest peace was one of capitulation. What did Trotsky himself say on this Seventh Party Congress some weeks after the October differences:

"Before the last journey to Brest-Litovsk we discussed during the whole time the question of our further tactics. And there was only one vote in the central committee in favor of immediately signing the peace: that of Zinoviev. (We assert that there was not only one one vote, but also Lenin, Stalin and Sverdlov said the same thing; Comrade Kamenev was arrested in Finland, G. Z.) What he said was, from his standpoint, quite correct: I was fully in agreement with him. He said, that hesitation would only render worse the peace conditions, and that they must be signed at once." (Minutes of the seventh party conference, page 79.)

If the proposal to sign the Brest peace was a "capitulation," then Comrade Lenin was a "capitulator." (As a matter of fact, the tactics of Trotsky at that time would have led to the downfall of the revolution, i. e., to an actual capitulation.) If Comrade Trotsky himself spoke in the above mentioned way as to this affair, who can give credit to his present ultra-polemic remarks? Is it not evident that all this has been discovered afterwards?

At the Seventh Party Congress the debates turned upon quite other questions. It was Comrade Trotsky this time who submitted a declaration regarding his resignationa from all responsible posts. (Minutes, pages 147-148.) Against Trotsky and against the "left" Communists, there was directed the resolution of Lenin and Zinoviev (Minutes, page 3), and as regards resignation from the central committee in general, Comrade Lenin said the following words:

"I also found myself in a similar situation in the central committee when the proposal was adopted not to sign the peace, and I kept silent without closing my eyes to the fact that I could not take over responsibility for this. Every member of the central committee is free to repudiate responsibility without resigning from the central committee and without creating a scandal. It is, of course, permissable under certain conditions, and is sometime even unavoidable; but whether that was necessary just now, with this organization of the Soviet power which enables us to control insofar as we do not lose contact with the masses, there can only exist one opinion."

At the Seventh Party Congress Comrade Trotsky, who at that time had only been six months in our party, provoked the first Trotsky crisis. Since that time, unfortunately, these crises occur periodically.

*It is interesting to mention the result of the election of the new central committee at this party conference. The writer of these lines received only one vote less than Comrade Lenin.

ductivity, we as the working class, the Soviet government, the party and the trade unions. We are a unit. We are doing one and the same historic work. We must boldly tell the managers that something depends upon them, and that something is about 50 per cent, the other half depending upon the workers. The trade unions should help the managers raise productivity, not in words, but in deeds. And now, at the sixth congress, we must say this more boldly than at the fifth, even tho because the wages and economic conditions of the workers have begun to improve. True, not yet to the degree that is thought in the village, where it is said that the workers are having a wonderful time.

The question of labor productivity stands point blank, and you cannot back out of it. You must stand above the everyday, sometimes inevitable friction between the managements, trade unions and party members. You must understand and thoroly think out the historical task facing us. I understand that Vladimir Ilitch's words on labor productivity have already been read to you. They have now become clothed with flesh and blood.

Productivity of Labor is of Decisive Importance at Present.

Our international situation depends to a much greater degree upon the productivity of labor than the ability of our red diplomats and even more than upon the Red Army. There was a time when the red army determined our international stability 100 per cent. Of course, it is of great importance even now, but at the present moment no one can make open war upon us; their hands are too short. The importance of productivity of labor is of decisive international significance both for the destinies of our country and for the destinies of the international revolution. It should attract, like a magnet, the heart of the workers of all the capitalist countries, for it shows them that socialism is developing here. It alone can strengthen us economically and politically and consolidate our union with the peasantry. Here is the key to the entire situation. Only in raising productivity lies the reply to the question of the relations between labor and the peasantry, to the question of concessions and to our entire international situation.

I heard men speaking along the line of "we are very much to the left, we are not interested in the country boors," we are interested in the workers, we must raise the heavy industries at any price. For this sake we must agree to concessions, and have as many of them as possible, not hesitating to give in to international capital, and agree to a loan even if the conditions may be very bad. Here you have the other side of this leftness which looks very much like menshevism. We think otherwise. We think that there is no special need of being particularly lavish in distributing concessions at the end of 1924. In 1918, when things were pretty bad, this could be done. But now we can ourselves raise the industry and there are no reasons for making special concessions to foreign capital. There is no need of letting the goat into the garden; no need of becoming the slaves of foreign capital. We shall raise much on our own shoulders, but this can be done only if we all of us work unanimously to the end of raising the productivity. Despite all the bad features of this campaign which I have mentioned, all of us clearly see that productivity of labor is onty beginning to increase and that some results are already evident.

The Trade Unions Nearer to Production.

The next question of principle is the question of the trade unions approaching more closely to production. At the Fifth Congress we spoke little about this. At the sixth this must be said loudly and resolutely. Two and a half years were spent to raise the workers' wages. There is no reason for repenting, that was quite as it should have been. But now another period is coming. The trade unions have made large conquests. This is a fact. During the two and a half years they came nearer to the working masses, and this also cannot be denied. They have catered for their material interests; they have themselves become greater mass bodies, and there lies the achievement of the labor movement. Our trade unions have made great progress also in their educational work. They have set up 2,000 clubs. This is truly proletarian work, instead of prattle about proletarian culture. The trade unions should continue to work in this line. But as regards industry, as regards direct participation of the trade unions in managing industry, we have, in my opinion, lagged behind during these two years. The production circles now being set up are of course, very promising. But this is not enough. The trade unions do not make use of their industrial rights to the extent that Lenin's resolutions have entitled them to, resolutions adopted unanimously. The trade unions were absorbed in other tasks. Of course, it is good that they had fulfilled them, but we are now entering a new phase. The trade unions should engage more closely than before in industry, in the drawing up of the production programs, in forming the administrations in fixing prices, etc. In all this the trade unions should take an active part, and they should raise productivity of labor to the highest possible degree. Only thus can the issue with the peasantry be solved.

The Problem of the Commanders in the Real Sense of the Word.

It appears to me that in this connection the problem of commanders in the real sense of the word again arises. I am not speaking here of the commanders in the red army. I speak of the teacher who also belongs among the commanders. I am speaking here of the production commanders. The trade unions have begun to promote the production personnel from among their ranks, have begun to remove the sham specialists, in order to replace them by their own people and support the truly honest and real specialists. The question of commanders in the broad sense of the word, never stood as clearly as now. It now stands broadly in relation to the peasantry, in relation to land improvement in the village, in relation to culture, etc., etc., in every sphere in which our life is developing. We cannot pass over this question, which is one of the essential questions of our internal policy. This gave rise to the new attitude to the teachers. This is no mere unprincipled flirtation, but a new historical situation. A similar attitude is necessary all along the line.

The production commanders, both the lower and middle should be sought primarily from amongst your own ranks, and this question should be tackled in all seriousness. Now that the country is warming up, when the alarm over bread and butter has been forgotten, when new political and economic questions are being raised, when new relations between the workers and the peasantry are clearly developing, that represents a possible menace (they are not necessarily a menace if the proper measures are taken), under such a situation the several hundred thousand men thruout the country who make up the commanding personnel in the broad sense of the word, should be ideologically organized by us, should be ideologically with us, so that we could be responsible for them. This should become an object engaging the constant attention of the party and the trade unions. I do not know how this matter will turn out in reality, in practice, but any way, it stands as a political problem intimately affecting also the Sixth Trade Union Congress. I thought it my duty to touch upon it briefly.

Attention to the Proletarian Students.

One of the sub-groups of this problem is the question of the proletarian students. Let me say a few words on this question. Trade union nuclei are now beginning to be organized among the students. You may discuss how they should be organized; the question should be considered in the most serious manner. However, we have here also a political problem, for here you have a part of the question about the commanders and our congress should take up in some section or commission the question about the proletarian students and give it due attention. In 192 technical schools we have 20,000 workers, who will make up a large part of the future production commanders. This group of 20,000 workers should hear a word of interest from us, should hear a word of attention and support, should feel definite support and see a true Bolshevist attitude towards them, for I repeat, this is a part of the question about the commanding personnel.

They Are Basic, Not Temporary Questions.

Comrades, these are the questions standing on the order of the day. Of course, there are many other questions that are, so to speak, eternal, imperishable, fundamental. Among these are primarily the slogan "Nearer to the masses" and the question of the Bolshevization of the labor movement. During the last two years the trade unions have come much more closely to the masses, this is a fact. Still nearer to the masses! No matter how near we come to them, we must not boast of the successes or stop there. We see how the cultural needs of the masses have changed. The worker is different from what he was in 1919. The needs and demands of the peasants have also grown, and our leaders should remember this fact, they should themselves grow and satisfy the growing needs of the masses. The material welfare of the workers and peasants has improved, and with it grow their cultural demands and grow politics. It is wrong to assume that if the peasants will live better he will think less of politics. Just the contrary. With the growth of the material welfare of the peasants and workers will grow their cultural and political demands and interests, that they will put before us, the leaders of the trade unions and the leaders of the party. They must be answered.

Always Learn From Leninism.

We are now teaching the workers of the world to Bolshevize the labor movement. But we ourselves must also remember this. We are of course, the most Bolshevist party in the world, we are the strongest labor movement in the Comintern. But this does not mean that we have been Bolshevized 100 per cent. Our party still needs more Bolshevization. The trade unions need Bolshevization, and our labor movement as a whole needs it. As long as you live, study Leninism, perfect yourselves and then you will be a real Bolshevik. No self satisfaction. We know our strong sides. But we must also know our weak sides, but we must see both the conscious and unconscious attempts to revise Leninism, that are sometimes made even in Lenin's name.

Honest and Dishonest Wrongdoers.

You remember how at the beginning of the revolution, when Vladimir Ilitch came from abroad, he brought with him a new term "honest defenders." When we lived abroad there was no talk about honest defendists. We only knew the dishonest, dyed in the wool fakers of the Second International who drove the workers to the slaughter. And when Vladimir Ilitch came here and saw masses of soldiers and peasants who sincerely and enthusiastically marched off to the defense of the revolutionary "fatherland," he nicknamed them honest defendists and he preached patient, systematic, constant explanation and patience for them.

We now have among us some honest "misunderstandings" of Leninism. Let us see what is taking place. Everybody now calls himself a Leninist. There are men who would like to Leninists, but cannot be, because they have not been boiled in the fire of the organizational discipline of the Bolshevist party, they have learned little, etc. These are men who could be said to be honestly misled. They are honestly wrong; they need explanation; they do not quite understand Lenin's ideas, the vanguard must therefore patiently enlighten them.

But there are men who interpret Leninism in whatever way suits them best. They cannot be said to be honestly misled. There is very little honesty about them, and we must fight them ideologically in a most determined manner.

The Bolshevization of the labor movement is not only a slogan meant for export. No comrades, this slogan is meant for us as well (laughter).

We live in a country in which there are so many illiterates, in which the legal labor movement is just in its teens. We have a party with a wonderful past. It has gone thru three revolutions, has had an incomparable leader, and teacher, the like of whom cannot be found anywhere in the world. Still we worked in a poor illiterate country, and our organization is weak. And it would have been a miracle were the entire labor movement here Bolshevised 100 per cent. This of course, is not so. We will have to do much hard labor those of us who have learned something from Lenin, that is, the trade unions and the party, will have to work hard many and many a year in order to promote the growth and Bolshevization of the labor movement, to make it keep abreast with the world events, to have it remember that is past services will not bring any more tributes on the world arena, and that it is time to think of the future.

Conclusions.

I therefore think that we have a number of new problems.

On the question of the international labor movement we are for unity. We shall fight under this slogan resolutely and to the end like Bolsheviks.

On the question of the peasantry we have a new situation. We have various difficulties that are perfectly surmountable, and we shall remove them.

On the question of productivity of labor, down with "we" and "you"! It is clear that this is now the fundamental question of our entire economy, of our world situation. This is of greater importance than diplomacy even than the red army; it is the question of all questions.

The trade unions nearer to industry!

The problem of the commanding personnel is raised for the first time on the proletarian arena.

The problem of the proletarian students is a part of this question.

All these questions are dominated by the economic question. Metal, was the slogan raised by the Thirteenth Congress. We now can say more precisely: metal, textile, coal, oil and railways. This is what decided the fate of our country and in a certain measure, the fate of the international movement.

Well then, the entire determination and passion of the Bolsheviks, which have heretofore been put into the civil war, and in the other businesses that were put forth by the precious situation, the entire determination and passion, the entire "die-hardiness," which Vladimir Ilitch taught us. The entire energy, the entire power of the masses, all the brains and talents possessed now by the party and the trade union movement, all this must be put into metal, textile, coal, railways, oil, higher productivity of labor (stormy applause), and everything should be solved from the point of view of the problems which Lenin has taught us, in the light of true Leninism, in the light of the modest, quiet, unshowy, but firm work of Bolshevizing our labor movement. If we solve this problem, our congress will be marked as a serious stage in the history of the labor movement of our country, in the history of the struggle of the world working class for the emancipation of labor. (Stormy, lasting applause, deafening the sound of the orchestra).

"One Single Cohesive Fear" -

By Robert Minor

A TINY corner of the political jungle of the Solid South was illuminated when Senator Pat Harrison, democrat of Mississippi, clashed with Senator Bruce, democrat of Maryland, last Monday afternoon in the senate.

Harrison comes from the depth of the Southern political and economic jungle. Bruce comes from the edge of the feudal jungle. That partly explains the difference. And from their sharp difference we obtain a little picture of the deepening class antagonism in that vast, unhappy, decaying and yet living human mass which we call the Solid South.

Bruce and Harrison are, both equally political vultures. Superficially they are of the same school of vultures—both are members of the "immortal party of Jefferson." But the school of political vultures which is called the democratic party is dividing. The vulture who lives on the edge of the clearing has learned to live on a different kind of meat—the meat which is the political garbage of modern capitalist society while the vulture from the heart of the wilderness still lives on raw jungle meat.

Bruce of Maryland represents the bourgeoisie of that northern fringe of the South which has been reached by the march of modern industry—the big bourgeoisie which has been made big, rich powerful, and has been orientated toward the financial metropolis. Bruce took his stand with the big bourgeoisie of the country as a whole on the Mellon tax plan.

Harrison of Mississippi represents a decaying, backward, ultra-ignorant petty-bourgeoisie, and the decayed remnants of a feudal landlord class. Mississippi has never ceased to be a "slave state"—it is a slave country, not in the sense that all capitalist countries are lands of wage-slavery, but in the sense of still retaining to a large degree the old system of production thru the bodily ownership of chattel-slaves by feudal masters, with an elaborate system of restrictions against "free" competition of workers in the wage-labor market and the "free" production of farm products. Twenty-four years ago there were 137,852 families of agricultural serfs working as "share-farmers" and "tenant-farmers" in Mississippi, with many other scores of thousands of slave laborers without even the claim to hold land as tenants; and since that time the proportion of serfs has increased.

Practically all of the laboring and tenant farming class are completely without political rights, and without redress in courts of law. Less than one-tenth of the adult population of Mississippi exercises the right of the ballot. Thru a system of agricultural "credit" the entire class is practically bound to the land as "debtors" for life, their children inheriting the "debts" and living on in slavery without hope of freedom. It is a notable fact that in Mississippi we have a large agricultural class which has never even known the hope of owning land. The greater portion of these are Negroes—more than half of the population of the state are Negroes—and as such are disfranchised; and those who are not Negroes are mostly disfranchised as "ignorant." Virtually no schools are provided. Lynch law and the stake are the only law for them, and the paranoiac preachers' "God" is the only court of appeal.

There are no cities of consequence in Mississippi, no manufactures, no minerals (and therefore no mines), and until recently there was no seaport. Mississippi is one great cotton plantation, varied here and there with sugar-cane plantation.

The vast field of primitive agriculture is broken only by a few stunted cities and towns, and by lumber camps in which the timber cutting is done largely by labor recruited thru "vagrancy" laws under which slave-hunters are rewarded at two dollars per head for the destitute and homeless laborers that are caught in a moment in illegal idleness and sold "to pay costs" of their conviction for vagrancy, tho they often receive not even a form of trial. For being caught idle, men, women and children are sold by local officers into forced labor for terms as long as a year, without compensation and under corporal punishment.

This is the social system represented by Senator Pat Harrison. Naturally he does not represent the masses of toilers. He represents their masters. But even the masters are not of the class of the big bourgeoisie—they are a peculiarly primitive and stunted petty-bourgeoisie. The type represented by Harrison is the cross-roads store-keeper, who lends "credit" to the impoverished tenant-farmers and who thus becomes their bodily owner; and the landlord who spends his life haggling with a dozen or a score of "share" farmers, taking customarily one half of their crops as rent and the other half in repayment of "loans."

The Mississippi system of serfdom is a backward form of production and cannot be made to produce large results, nor to produce a really wealthy bourgeoisie. Herein lies the peculiar form of stagnation characteristic to the most backward sections of the Solid South. The master class for the most part remains an impoverished exploiting class, and this gives the class character to Senator Pat Harrison's constituency. It is this which orientates the Mississippi senator on a myriad of questions, including the question of whether the burden of the income tax shall fall directly upon the small parasitic incomes or the large parasitic incomes.

Senator Harrison, representing the snivelling, nickel-nursing parasites, wants the big bourgeoisie of the far-away industrial centers to pay the income tax.

Senator Bruce

Senator Bruce of Maryland, representing a class of parasites which has been introduced to the more efficient method of exploiting thru wage-slavery in industrialized production (and which nurses dollars instead of nickels), wants the burden of taxation to fall upon the smaller incomes.

So the two "democratic" senators fight. On the face of it, the two should be members of separate parties, each fighting for separate class interests. But it is not so simple as that.

The case was stated sharply by Senator Bruce. He taunted Harrison with the very plain fact that the Mississippi democrat might logically be expected to line up with "Wisconsin, Nebraska and North Dakota"—meaning, of course, that the Southern cockroach bourgeoisie might logically line up with the LaFollette movement which represents the cockroach bourgeoisie of the country generally. But at the same time Senator Bruce taunted Harrison with the reason why he DOES NOT line up with the country's general petty-bourgeoise movement. Bruce gave the reason as:

"ONE SINGLE, COHESIVE FEAR."

Fear of the Negro

He meant altho he did not pronounce the words—the "single, cohesive fear" of the NEGRO. He meant that the Southern cockroach bourgeoisie does not dare to face the slightest disturbance of the political surface of the South, the slightest disturbance of its relationships to the Negro. He meant that the backward exploiters of Harrison's constituency do not dare to break the front of the democratic party. The "Party of the Immortal Jefferson" (and of Jefferson Davis, Grover Cleveland and Woodrow Wilson) stood for half a century as the guardian of chattel slavery in the South, and for another half century as the preserver of its remnants. For half a century the democratic party in the South has been the accepted political medium for preserving what is called "White Supremacy."

The master class of the South in general and of Mississippi in particular had never had the slightest aversion to contact with the Negro. To mention the most extreme fact, the Southern master class has shown a distinct preference for inter-breeding with the Negro race in numberless instances. At the same time, the ruling class has exercised the most brutal repression and savagery against the Negro. Why?

Why does "the one single cohesive fear" of the Negro constitute the power that holds the bourgeoisie of the South in a single political line?

Because the fear of the Negro is not the fear of a race, it is the fear of a CLASS. The secret of it is that THE EXPLOITED CLASSES OF MISSISSIPPI CONSIST IN OVERWHELMING PROPORTION OF NEGROES.

The vast majority of the tenant-farmers and laborers on whose backs Senator Pat Harrison's ruling class lives, is composed of Negroes. They are exploited as laborers and peasants. But they can be held in political subjection and directly applied terror more conveniently as Negroes. The coincidence, that the exploited class is (mostly black of face, enables the ruling class of the South to obscure its class oppression under the easy cover of race oppression. (In fact the whites of the same economic classes are almost equally terrorized and oppressed).

Contradictions

The rotting, putrifying, impoverished and discontented petty bourgeoisie of the Solid South has many impulses toward solidarity with the similar class of the North as against the more wealthy bourgeoisie. But it dares not let go or disturb its front for the "One Single Cohesive Fear" that it may lose its hold on its serf class which is mostly black of face.

The big bourgeoisie of the North also at various times during the past thirty years has been inconvenienced by the stagnant cohesiveness of the Solid South. Democratic and republican politicians alike have made repeated gestures toward breaking up the Solid South of the democratic party. As a child in Texas in 1896 the writer was astonished to see a local banker's sons actually flaunting a republican banner, (considered an unspeakable offense) which meant that the danger of the Bryan movement capturing the government thru the capure of the democratic party and hereby using the political strength of the South in a debtor's drive against the big bourgeoisie, was frightening the Southern bourgeoisie. Since that time republican politicians, Roosevelt, Taft, Elihu Root, Harding and Coolidge, have made overtures to the Southern bourgeoisie by offering to commit the republican party to "white supremacy" in the Southern states. Today, subsidized Negro newspapers continue to flaunt the slogan of Frederick Douglass (of the Civil War period) that "the Republican party is the Ship; All else is the Sea," but Mr. C. Bascom Slemp strives to introduce the republican party to the Southern ruling class as the thing it is—another party of "White Supremacy"—which means capitalist class supremacy over the toiling masses whose faces are largely black. And it has already been proven that the democratic and republican parties act on a "gentleman's agreement" by which they co-operate in killing every gesture (however slerile) toward granting political rights to Negroes.

History forces the question of the breaking up of the Solid South upon the order of the day. Yet neither the republican party nor the democratic party (both of the big bourgeoisie), nor any party of the petty bourgeoise, will do it or can desire to do it at the cost of extending citizenship rights to the most exploited of all classes in America, the Negro toilers. Such citizenship rights would not free the Negro masses from exploitation, terror and suppression. The break-up of semi-feudal restrictions would make the exploitation more efficient and productive, and put the terror and suppression on a more secure basis. But the existing exploiting class has its lines of operation laid in feudal conditions, and dares not face any change which tend to substitute a new and more capable set of exploiters in their place.

This is the impasse.

The big bourgeoisie, generally speaking, has an interest in breaking up the backward system of feudal production. But in concrete cases it becomes the interest of the big bourgeoisie to make a truce with the remnants of feudal conditions. Thus it is, that the republican party in attempting to introduce itself to the ruling class of the South, offers itself as another party of "White Supremacy." In past history, capitalism, in order to overthrow feudalism as a then ruling system, has been forced to draw the proletariat into political activity. But in the present stage of capitalism it can better afford to ally itself with the beaten remnants of feudalism (as witness Central Europe), than to stir up the exploited masses.

With things as they are in the South, no capitalist party, nor any petty-bourgeois party, will or can dare to stir the exploited masses into even "democratic" political efforts. Under the existing circumstances, none but a revolutionary party—the revolutionary party—will or can do this.

Any effort to break up the Solid South into political divisions of the republican and democratic parties, will be made only with the severest precautions by both parties against political enfranchisement (little as that means) of the black masses.

None but the most exploited masses of the Southern jungle (whose faces are mostly black) can set these masses into motion, and no party whose purpose is not revolution will dare to lead such a movement.

Senator Bruce in a moment of anger can taunt Senator Harrison with indiscrete hints of the fear of the masses whose faces are black. But when his anger cools, the knees of Senator Bruce must also tremble with the "one single cohesive fear."

The Workers (Communist) Party alone can and must become the embodiment of the "one single cohesive fear"—the leader and liberator of the exploited masses of the backward South whose faces are both black and white.

THREE MOVIES IN ONE EVENING FOR ONE PRICE

The workers of Chicago will have the opportunity to see three live working class pictures in one evening for the price of one. All the pictures were made in Russia during the revolution.

The first is "Polikushka," the famous story of serfdom by L. N. Tolstoy. Made into a movie by the world famous Moscow Art Theatre.

The second "Soldier Ivan's Miracle," a comedy, tells a serious story about religion, but in a funny, peculiar Russian way.

The third, "In Memoriam—Lenin," is showing Nicolai Lenin in action, the last picture is shown in connection with the first anniversary of Lenin's death.

The pictures will be shown in Chicago only ONE EVENING, THURSDAY, JANUARY 15, from 6:30 to 11 p. m. at Gartner's Independent Theater, 3725 Roosevelt Road, near Incepedence Blvd.

COMMUNIST PROGRAM ISSUED FOR ALDERMANIC ELECTIONS; WORKERS SIGNING PETITIONS

All Sunday the members of the Workers (Communist) Party were busy circulating aldermanic petitions among workers in those wards where the party has placed candidates in the field. Thousands of signatures were secured and the outlook is good for placing the whole list of Communist candidates nominated on the ballot for the elections February 24.

Today the DAILY WORKER publishes in full the municipal program of the Workers (Communist) Party on which it has entered its candidates in the elections. The program is as follows:

THE WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY is what its name implies—a party of and for WORKERS.

We do not repeat the ridiculous pretentions of the other parties, that we have a program which will suit all classes. We state frankly that our program will bring no comfort to the banking kings, merchant princes, traction lords and real estate sharks who now hold Chicago in their covetous grasp. But to all workers, and working class organizations struggling for the advancement of the workers, we pledge our loyal support in any and all conflicts, at any and all times.

Now, when great numbers of workers are suffering from unemployment, when police and injunctions are called in by the bosses to break all strikes, when the working class standard of living is being steadily forced down, when gigantic municipal traction steals are being engineered, when working class children are suffering from inadequate and improper schooling—it is necessary to come forward with a program which exposes the real issues in the aldermanic elections to be held on Feb. 24—a program which faces the issues frankly, and which rallies the working men and women of Chicago for struggle against the capitalists on the basis of the immediate interests of the workers.

The Workers (Communist) Party and the candidates it endorses stand for the following immediate program; if elected, the candidates will make use of their position to mobilize the masses toward putting it into effect:

PUBLIC UTILITIES

The Workers (Communist) Party demands immediate removal of public utilities from the ownership and control of private capitalists. Confiscation of all franchises. Operation to be for public service and not for private profit—under direct public management, vested in committees chosen by the workers engaged in the various branches of service.

2. Traction. The voters of Chicago have repatedly gone on record for a single, unified, municipally owned traction system of surface lines, "L" and subway. In place of this, Mayor Dever is dickering with the traction magnates to turn over to them what amounts to a perpetual franchise on Chicago transportation. The Workers (Communist) Party demands that the city immediately take over the existing lines in the form outlined below:

(a) Operation to be carried on by the traction employes, thru special committees, working in conjunction with the existing street carmen's and elevated employes' unions.

(b) Provisions for immediate improvement of service—increased seating capacity for men and women going to and from work.

(c) Reduction of fares, with special rates for passengers during rush hours.

UNEMPLOYMENT

Work or compensation for all unemployed, not as a matter of "charity" but as a direct municipal responsibility. The city to bear the cost, and compensation wages to be paid thru working class bodies selected by labor unions in conjunction with unemployed workers.

2. No evictions for non-payment of rent.

3. City government must assume responsibility for comfortable housing of unemployed workers free of charge while they are unemployed, and rooms in the houses of wealthy residents must be requisitioned for this purpose.

4. Immediate inauguration of a

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

CHARLES EVANS HUGHES will not direct the course of the United State's foreign policy after next March 4, the date on which the Massachusetts mill king, Butler, takes over the White House for Wall Street, thru the compliant little man, Calvin Coolidge. Hughes' letter of resignation leaves nothing to be desired in the way of diplomatic refinement, but capitalist statesmen are not accustomed to telling the truth even when no good purpose can be served by lying.

WHY did Hughes quit the cabinet? This question will be asked and answered for many months to come. We are not interested in superficial reasons. This much we do know about capitalist governments and the individual members of those governments, that on the whole they are the executive committees of the capitalists and individually, the representatives of powerful groups of capitalists. When the representatives of one group is not getting its share of the spoils it is customary to spring a resignation on the administration, and fight it a bit. But there is more in this case than the usual resignations.

HUGHES is a capitalist statesman of the Wilson sense. He considers foreign policy from the viewpoint of the interests of capitalism as a whole. His extremely hostile attitude towards Soviet Russia, his willingness to surrender points to England in order to save that country's dignity, in the interests of a united front for the exploitation of the world by the big robber powers; his desire for peace with Japan as proved by his unfortunate suggestion to a previous Japanese ambassador on the Immigration question; his persistent attempts to find some substitute for the league of nations that could be put over in the United States; all these policies indicate that Hughes had the aim of bringing about an international alliance among the big capitalist powers for the common exploitation of the world. In this grand scheme the destruction of the power of the workers and peasants of Russia figured prominently.

PERHAPS the question of Soviet recognition is at the bottom of the Hughes' act. The rise of Senator Borah—an advocate of Soviet recognition—to power in the present government and the death of Samuel Gompers, a bitter foe of Russia, makes the position of Hughes very difficult. There is no doubt but the question of Soviet recognition will come up, unofficially at least, after March 4. Obviously Hughes prefers to be somewhere else than digging into the mass of evidence collected by his stoolpigeons during the last four years, designed to prove that Russia is interfering with the internal affairs of the United States. Hughes is a good riddance anyhow. His successor Kellogg is just as reactionary but less intelligent, which is not our lookout. The reasons for Hughes' retirement will become evident as time goes on. We cannot miss the luxury of guessing however.

UNLESS the German socialists remember at least a little of their socialism the Communists will win back what they lost in the recent election, warns the London Daily Herald. The trouble with the Communists, continues this paper, is that they have their faces turned to the past, in other words to Marx. Nevertheless unless

Germans Want to Collect in Munitions Made by the British

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Eng., Jan. 11.—A claim filed by the German armaments firm, against Vickers Limited, English munitions makers, reveals that an agreement existed between the German and English firms. The agreement called for the payment to Krupps of royalties on all shell fuses made by Vickers. The agreement was to expire on Sept. 30, 1917, but at the outbreak of the war, in 1914, Vickers stopped meeting their obligations. Krupps claim royalties on millions of shell fuses made for the British army during the war.

BUTLER TRIES NEW WAGE CUT AT NEW BEDFORD

United Textile Fights at Fall River

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Jan. 11.—Wages in all of the cotton mills of New Bedford, which normally employ 41,000 workers, will be reduced 10 per cent Jan. 19, it has been announced at a meeting of the New Bedford Cotton Manufacturers' association.

William Morgan Butler, Coolidge's campaign manager, has long controlled the New Bedford Cotton Manufacturers' Association, and is the president of the National Association of Textile Manufacturers which announcing a wage cut at the same time it is asking for higher tariffs.

The action follows a similar wage cut in the cotton mills of Fall River and reductions approximating 10 per cent announced recently in other New England textile centers.

Beginning next Monday the seven member unions of the New Bedford textile council will vote on acceptance of the reduction.

Are Butler's Stools at it Again?

A few months ago the DAILY WORKER exposed Butler as having hired a swarm of Sherman detectives to worm themselves into the New Bedford textile unions, actually controlling the Textile Council with a squad of wily stoolpigeons who knew how to pretend to be with the workers, but were all the time getting paid by Butler for sidetracking the workers' militancy and persuading them to accept reductions of wages.

The Trade Union Educational League has issued a rigging call to all textile workers to force their seat tered and impotent craft unions to unite in action and fight with a solid front against the wage cuts.

United Textile Fights Fall River Cut.

At Fall River, Massachusetts, the executive committee of four unions of the United Textile Workers of America, at a special meeting last night, voted unanimously to oppose the reduction of 10 per cent in wages which the Fall River Cotton Manufacturers' Association recently announced would become effective in Fall River on Monday.

Six Unions Surrender.

Six unions thru their central organization, the Fall River Textile Council, have accepted the wage reduction, although two of the member unions favored strike action.

The rank and file of the textile operatives are indignant at the surrender of the union officials without a fight, and without even calling a strike vote in the locals. Protests are voiced in the textile council even, but in the locals acid comment is heard, asking if Butler's stoolpigeons have got control of Fall River as well as New Bedford.

The reduction affects all Fall River cotton mills and involves between 26,000 and 30,000 workers.

FASCISM'S RISE SEEN IN GERMAN CABINET MIX-UP

Moderates Giving Way to Monarchists

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Jan. 11.—The efforts of Finance Minister Hans Luther to form a right wing cabinet in Germany have not met with the dismal failure of Chancellor Marx, who gave up attempts to form a moderate coalition cabinet after five unsuccessful trials.

The monarchists have claimed four portfolios in the reactionary cabinet Luther is trying to form, and are certain to be given three. The failure of the moderate parties demonstrates the fast drift of the German government toward the right wing, and points to the probable rise of a fascist government in the near future, in order to prevent possibility of a coalition in which the moderates take part.

Chancellor Marx, leader of the Catholic party, and Foreign Minister Stresemann, head of the people's party, are now bitter enemies, having failed to work together after months of effort. Stresemann is accused by the catholic party of deserting their "republican ideas" and of stabbing their leaders in the back by allying himself with the monarchists. The catholic party refuses to participate in the Luther cabinet, which if formed will be dominated by the monarchists, the fascist elements and the extreme right wing.

Jan. 10, the day when France was to evacuate Cologne, according to the Versailles treaty, passed with Cologne still in possession of the French, who declare they will not depart.

The financial scandal, comparable to America's Teapot Dome oil scandal, is leaking out in all its corrupt details. Former Chancellor Wirth, one of the latest to be implicated in the scandal, is charged with having accepted large grants of credit from Minister of Postifices Hoefle. Hoefle has been dismissed from the cabinet by Ebert, and more cabinet members are expected to resign shortly.

Hoefle has been found to have shown favoritism to friends in granting millions of dollars in credits from post-office funds to his associates when German business was at a standstill on account of lack of credits. Others implicated in the government grants are former chancellor Fehrenbach, deputy Lange-Hagermann and Dr. Ludwig Haas. President Ebert's name has also been linked in the credit scandal.

ENGLISH MINERS AND BELGIANS GO TO RUSSIA

LONDON.—Herbert Smith, president of the British miners and who will be rembered in America as the fraternal delegate from the British trades unions congress to the American Federation of Labor in 1922, has recommended that the British miners send a strong delegation to Russia, with a view to establishing permanent relations with the Russian miners.

The Belgium miners have accepted the invitation but the German miners have refused to go along.

The International Federation of Trade Unions will meet next week in Brussels to consider the British unions' plans for bringing in the Russian unions. Stormy sessions are expected as there is a strong group of capitalist lackeys and class traitors in the I. F. of T. U., the Amsterdam International, hostile to everything that helps the workers unite, and therefore hostile to unity with Russian workers.

Capitalist Imperialism Makes Shrewd Moves in Coolidge's Cabinet

REACTION IN TRADES AND LABOR ASSEMBLY OF MINNEAPOLIS SHUTS OUT TWO LOCAL UNION DELEGATES

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 11.—At the last session of the Trades and Labor Assembly here, two of the most progressive leaders of the working class movement were denied seats as delegates to the central body on the grounds that they hold membership in the Workers (Communist) Party of America.

William Mauseth, Machinists' Local 97, and Dan Stevens, Painters' Union 186, were the two men who faced the onslaught of the reactionaries.

Under the rules the accused must appear before a committee appointed to hear the charges. The chairman of the local assembly, himself a staunch reactionary, took extreme care in naming the committee to see that only conservatives served on same. Fullerton of the Pressmen, famous for his "red baiting" activities, Nelson of the Carpenters, and Manley of the Retail Clerks, compose the committee.

The advocates of the open shop in Minneapolis have reason for their great joy and emitted chuckles. Four years ago the citizens' alliance succeeded in having Dan W. Stevens incarcerated behind prison walls because of his undying loyalty to the slaves of industry. Every worker in the city hated and despised the alliance then, but now their offices are visited by conservatives in the local labor movement.

Trade it is, that they carefully cover their footsteps and ask that their name be not divulged, even to the stenographers employed by the citizens' alliance, but they hold confidential chats with O. P. Briggs, nevertheless.

They are given beautifully bound books written by W. A. Appleton, the Gompers of the British labor movement, and asked to read them. But even O. P. Briggs doubts the intelligence of these reactionary stools, for he says that he does not believe that the books were read.

And so, last night, Dan W. Stevens faced the bitter tirade of those for whom he went to jail. Service and loyalty mean nothing to the wreckers, however, and in spite of the fact that for over nineteen years Stevens has been a member of the trade union movement of this city, the greater part of which has been served as an official of the local assembly, he must go. There is no room, seemingly, for those who work for progress.

The refusal to reseat Wm. Mauseth, of the Machinists, follows closely upon the heels of the action of the Trades and Labor Assembly in unseating C. A. Hathaway, also of this same local, whose case is to be appealed to the executive committee of the A. F. of L.

When Mauseth stepped forward to be obligated, a reactionary arose in the rear of the hall and shouted, "Mauseth, there, is the man who once sent a message to Bill Haywood while he was in jail. He is now a member of the Communist party. Object to his being seated as a delegate here in this assembly."

Mauseth has been a member of organized labor for several years and is well known thruout the city as one of the most progressive workers in the movement.

W. F. Bennett, business agent of Painters' Local 186, demanded that he be given the floor in defense of his co-delegate, Stevens.

Bennett said in part, "If you object to one of our delegates you must object to them all. This is a brazen attempt to disfranchise us who were chief name as our representatives to this body. I believe our international will stand with us in this fight. It is Stevens' sacred right to believe politically as he sees fit."

To prove that the reactionaries can not be trusted, the following incident is related. A letter from the labor intelligence bureau of Canada was read at the meeting, asking data on the activities of the "reds and radicals" in Minneapolis. A capitalistically inclined reactionary immediately moved that the request be complied with.

SORLIE DODGES POOR FARMERS' BURNING ISSUES

Nonpartisan Leaguers for "Harmony"

By ALFRED KNUTSON.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BISMARCK, N. D., Jan. 11.—The officialdom of the nonpartisan league of North Dakota is not fighting the battles of the struggling farmers.

Contact with the working masses of the state and nation is completely lost sight of. This is clearly shown by Governor Sorlie's message to the legislature.

Exploiters Safe.

The message declares that "for the time being" there should be no further experimentation in a state ownership. This statement can only mean that the league is more and more giving up the idea of fighting against the private business interests that are robbing the farmers. Instead of rousing the farmers as a class against the banking and grain capitalists, the policy is to go easy and not to meddle "too much" with things as they are. In other words, the aim is to get something for the farmer and the worker without fight, without struggle, which, of course, is impossible.

Fighting Program.

The farmers and the workers want something done. The 1924 crop has not at all put the farmers on easy street as most of the money realized from this crop went to bankers and business men. All talk about a terminal market for wheat at Grand Forks, zoning of hail insurance, new grain grading law, economy all along the line, etc., is not going to bring the farmer very far along in his struggle against the system that oppresses him. The least that should be attempted is to provide for compulsory state hail insurance, taxing equally all tillable land; ratification of child labor amendment and conscript high incomes to pay for the education of the children of workers and poor farmers; all public funds to be deposited in the bank of North Dakota and the establishment of state-owned branch banks, one in each county within the state; all tax fales to revert to the state; resolution for the recognition of Soviet Russia. The majority of the farmers and the workers in the state will stand back of this program.

Harmony, Harmony.

Sorlie's message closes with a plea for harmony. Harmony with whom? With the capitalists? Yes, the farmers and the workers should quietly, without protest, permit themselves to be exploited by their enemies! Every farmer in North Dakota should immediately write to his representatives in the legislature, protesting against the violations of his fundamental rights contained in the governor's message.

15 Workers Injured.

CINCINNATI, Olo, Jan. 11.—Fifteen laborers were injured here in an explosion at the east end plant of the Union Gas and Electric company. Unsafe working conditions caused the explosion, workmen say.

HUGHES IS OUT, KELLOGG PICKED; WARREN FOR D. J.

Sugar and Steel Trusts Are Beneficiaries

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—Capitalist imperialism made three shrewd moves yesterday in the cabinet of the strike-breaker, Cal Coolidge.

Charles Evans Hughes stepped out of the secretaryship of the state department; Frank B. Kellogg, ambassador to Britain, now acting United States plenipotentiary in the allied financial conference at Paris was named as Hughes' successor, and Charles Beecher Warren was appointed as the new attorney-general.

The sugar trust owns the department of justice, the steel trust owns the state department, and the credit trust of Wall street banks owns the whole administration.

Borah's Policies Favored.

Rumors are rife that the resignation of Hughes may mark a new policy in the state department, particularly as Coolidge is known to be favoring the policies of Borah, now chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, who sees the present advantage of recognition of Russia to American export trade upon which must be based the comparative "prosperity" the republican party must use as talking point in the next election. Incidentally, Borah hopes to get the nomination.

If such recognition should come, it will be from no love of the Soviets, but from the rivalry of America with England, and a smooth trick by American capital against the tory government.

The fact that Coolidge did not ask Hughes to stay after March 4, as he asked other cabinet officers, and his favoring Borah's friend, Kellogg is rumored to mean a new orientation in American foreign affairs, toward a policy more aggressively independent toward England and France as well.

Helps Dawes Plan Grab.

Kellogg's advancement comes, moreover, at an opportune moment in the negotiations at Paris, where England's tory leader, Churchill, is fighting American claims to reparations under the Dawes plan and fencing for advantage against America in the matter of war debts. Kellogg's sudden magnification of power may impress the allied diplomats with the necessity of being courteous if not yielding to the new secretary of state.

Kellogg has shown great promise as an imperialist diplomat, winning his greatest glory in his handling of the delicate matter of forcing the London conference to accept the Dawes plan, the charter of American dominion over Europe. He has served the United States Steel corporation as its general counsel, and has been the attorney

COMMUNISTS OF FRANCE URGE LABOR UNITY

Big Demonstration Held in Paris

By CARL BRANNIN.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

PARIS, Jan. 11.—Voicing their demand for a unification of the two most important federations of labor in France and their opposition to the efforts of the reactionary press to encourage fascism, 20,000 working men and women gathered just outside Paris and listened for hours to Communist and trade union speakers.

In spite of the gloomy raw December day and the mud underfoot, people came from all parts of the Parisian district, by autobus, subway, street car and on foot to line up in four great sections behind their red trade union banners for the parade to the place of speaking. So far as could be observed no participant came in a private automobile, not even a Ford.

End of Red Week.

This demonstration was the climax of a week of meetings in various centers under the auspices of the Communist Party urging amalgamation of the Confederation General du Travail (Reformist) and the Confederation General du Travail Unitaire (Communist) into one body capable of opposing the attacks of the employing interests.

Three different speakers stands with addresses going on simultaneously were needed to carry the message to listeners. Marcel Cachin, Valiant-Couturier, Doriot, members of the chamber of deputies, and others spoke for the Communists.

Growing Bourgeois Fear.

Referring to the recent campaign of abuse heaped upon the Communists by the Paris press and the expulsion of Communists originally from Italy, and other countries, Cachin declared that it indicated the fear of the bourgeoisie of the growing strength of the Communists.

"However," said he, "we must not turn from our path but must continue to build up a strong organization of the proletariat to oppose the enemy. We are not so foolish as to make a premature gesture which would play into the hands of the government and lead the proletariat to a catastrophe. We do not prepare a riot but the revolution. We thrust aside all provocations no matter where they come from."

Need For Unity.

Monmousseau, and others not members of the party, spoke on behalf of the C. G. T. U., stressing the need for unity of all French workers for revolution. Communist youth circulated among the crowd selling literature and emblems.

There was singing of the International and the Red Flag. All speakers were applauded vigorously. A small contingent of police was on the outskirts but took no part in the proceedings. A few anarchists endeavoring to sell their Libertaire came in for much good-humored joshing.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 11.—The Missouri tax commission in its fourth biennial report shows a loss of $18,000,000 in St. Louis city taxes because of tax dodging. The biggest property owners are the worst offenders.

THE KING'S SOCIAL DEMOCRATS REGULARLY BETRAY THE WORKERS— "SOMETHING ROTTEN IN DENMARK"

By ANDREW OVERGAARD.

The entire trade union press announced to the world a year ago that a "labor" government had been formed in Denmark; the socialist press cried victory for socialism and all was to be rosy for the workers.

Now the workers are beginning to find out that the social-democratic government is being used as a last bulwark against them and further to enslave them.

The social-democrats promised the workers cheap bread, cheap milk, cheap beer and what not, and since the worthy Stauning cabinet has been in power the conditions have grown steadily worse for the working class.

Instead of cheap bread and cheap milk, etc., the prices of food have practically doubled, and besides, the workers are to have a "criminal syndicalist" law as good as the one we are enjoying in the good old U. S. A.

Like "Section Six, Article Two."

The social democratic minister of justice has submitted proposals for a law for the protection of the capitalist state. This proposal is, without doubt, directed against the Communists, and our own state of Michigan could do no better.

The law calls for drastic action against anybody who threatens the safety of the state and proposes a 12-year term in prison for persons who may participate in any attack upon this state. It even calls for prison terms for those who happen to know that the safety of the state is in danger and do not inform the state authorities.

Socialists Arm White Guard.

Another wonderful social-democratic service to the working class is that of disarmament. They propose, instead of the army, to have a standing militia which shall be selected by the king and his loyal servants. In other words they are proposing a white guard for the protection of the capitalist class against the workers, whom they of course will have disarmed, as the conscript army was composed of mostly workers.

These workers are not exactly safe when they carry guns, they may turn them against their masters at times they may refuse to shoot their fellow workers, as for instance during the general strike, when the government ordered a whole regiment of soldiers from Copenhagen and instead called in a new regiment composed of new recruits that could be trusted to stand by his majesty, "Long Christian."

Some of the soldiers at that time openly talked about joining the strike in their garrisons, and now the social traitors have discovered a new way to keep the king of Denmark on his horse. The capitalists can very easily support such a proposal as it offers them more safety than before. In reality it means to arm the bosses and disarm the workers.

There is no proposal for the control by the workers' organizations over this militia. That will be done by his majesty, the king, who, I believe will soon make his application to join the social-democratic party. All indications point in that direction.

At a recent banquet in one of the most exclusive cafes in Copenhagen one of the leading social-democratic women pleased the petty bourgeoi audience by her exclamation "Long live the king." I do not know whether the old lady had too much "three-star" cognac, but the conservative organ wrote a long article about the pleasant and painless way the social democrats are introducing socialism.

"Painless" Socialism.

It is indeed a painless operation for the capitalist class of Denmark, but the workers are suffering under the increasing unemployment, unable to buy the necessities of life, still fighting against the attempts to lower their standards of living and still fighting to keep the 8-hour day.

They are watching the social-democratic leaders and trade union bureaucrats become petty defenders of capitalism than the capitalists themselves. The workers are gradually turning away from these social traitors and turning toward the Communist Party for leadership in their daily struggles, and for the overthrow of capitalism and establishment of a Soviet government.

FROM $3,000,000 TO $40,000,000 INCREASE THAT HOOVER ADMITS

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—American exports to Russia during the 11 months ending Nov. 30, 1924, were worth $40,170,981, as compared with $3,430,006 for the same period in 1923, according to the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, U. S. department of commerce. Total American exports to Europe in the first 11 months of 1924 were valued at $2,171,130,182, while total American exports to all countries for that period were $4,145,823,645.

SHOOT, TORTURE AND THEN HANG YOUNG NEGRO

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, Jan. 11.—The sensational true story of the lynching of 15-year-old Sammie Smith, a Negro boy, in Nashville, Tenn., is being told by Walter F. White, assistant secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

White's report is the result of his own investigation of the lynching in Nashville, Sammie was dragged from the Nashville general hospital where he was chained to bed mortally wounded. The masked mob took him to the country, hung him to an oak tree and fired 40 or 5 rounds of buckshot into his abdomen.

Supported Large Family.

White saw the body's body lying in its coffin in the Fifth Avenue Baptist church, Nashville and tells the story given him by Nashville colored people: Until last May, Sammie worked for a white man named Preston Lee at Smyrna, Tenn., 8 or 10 miles from Nashville. One day in that month Lee beat Sammie Smith. Sammie quit and went to Nashville where he got a job with the Atlantic Ice company. All summer he worked there turning over his wages to his mother to help provide for the mother and nine children. Cold weather came and Sammie was discharged. He lived alternately with his uncle, Eugene Smith, and grandmother at Arrington.

Sammie and his uncle went to Nashville in the uncle's Ford on Dec. 12. Coming back the machine went into a ditch and turned. The man and boy righted it but found a part broken. The uncle went back to a garage. Sammie started later to find Eugene and met him coming towards the car with a white man holding a gun to his back. The garage man had caught Eugene stealing the needed part. When the man found that Sammie was with Eugene, he shouted to the boy:

Shot Thru Stomach.

"Then come along with me—I'm going to put you in jail too." Sammie took out his gun and fired. The white man returned fire and shot Sammie thru the stomach. Sammie lay in the field unconscious all night and was taken to the Nashville general hospital in the morning and chained to bed, altho his wound was fatal. A band of masked men entered the hospital after midnight Monday, covered the custodian with guns, searched for Sammie, sawed thru his chain, and lynched him.

White declares that Nashville colored people have been subjected to innumerable insults and cruelties, especially immediately before the lynching. Colored women are struck on street cars. A colored man was murdered by a white divekeeper who goes unpunished. A pullman porter was killed by Leon Medford, distillery owner of Kentucky, who was acquitted of the murder charge.

Klan Lynched Him.

The ku klux klan is strong near Nolensville, scene of the lynching. White reports. Asked why the 15-year old victim carried a gun, people in every instance used the same words to White: "The klan . . . ." White gave the names of four white men who called on Sammie in the hospital and told him he would never live even if his wound was not fatal to Governor Peay, Mayor Howse, Sheriff Birley, Chief of Police Smith and the Nashville chamber of commerce. "No clues" are found by authorities, in spite of large awards offered.

"I talked with one of the most prominent colored men of Nashville," says White. "They might as easily have offered a million," he said cynically. "They know they'll never have to pay any of it."

Commercializing Radio Proves Big Problem for the Rule of the Dollar

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the radio offers a tremendous problem for profit rule. Hungry profiteers feel that the possessors of radios are getting something for nothing.

There was a great storm recently when John McCormack and other opera stars sang to millions, it came for the most part from theater owners, who felt that their houses were being emptied. Brady, the producer, declared that the theater stood before a crisis. Theater employes of all kinds were also in a panic.

• • • •

It is declared that the problem is to commercialize broadcasting. This is hardly true. Broadcasting has already been commercialized. The big broadcasters are those who use the radio to advertise and those who broadcast to promote the sales of receiving sets and supplies. But the money makers feel that this profit grip is not sufficient. They want every listener in on the radio to pay for everything that he gets. Not even the froth from the air waves broadcasted must be without its golden profit tingle.

• • • •

The American Telephone & Telegraph Company denies that it has perfected a device making it possible to control the reception of broadcast programs. Perhaps the phone trust hasn't got its scheme down to the nickel in the slot basis as yet. But its officials show that they are studying the proposition. And human ingenuity in the pay of the dollar usually finds a way.

• • • •

The eagerness with which the millions have seized upon the radio is proof of the desire of the multitudes to enjoy even the smallest luxuries brought within their meager means. The complete commercialization of broadcasting will only cut off many from enjoying this advance in science; just as profit rule, establishing its high prices, bars the many from the enjoyments of the theater, the opera and even the movies.

Yet any plan to completely divorce broadcasting, the theater and other forms of amusement for the masses from exploitation by private interests, would no doubt be hailed immediately as a step toward Bolshevism. It would be denounced as Communism in disguise. Every effort would be made to repel such an insidious attack on "the rights of private property."

• • • •

It is reported that the First Workers' Republic is now building a powerful broadcasting station at Moscow. This station can easily reach all of Europe, and no doubt much of the remainder of the world. Soviet Russia will set an example in the complete liberation of broadcasting from all profit. "Another Bolshevik horror" for capitalism. But for the masses striving for a little sunlight in their sodden lives it will be like the new day. Commercializing the radio is a big problem for profit rule. But the handling of this problem by Russia's Soviet Rule will make it much bigger.

MORGAN FORMS COAL COMBINE IN W. VIRGINIA

Discrimination Against Union Coaldiggers

A $6,000,000 Morgan coal combine has just been completed in the non-union fields of West Virginia. The new corporation controls 155,000 acres of coal lands in the Logan and Kanawha fields and in the northern part of the state. The 42 mines already working have a normal output of 7,000,000 tons a year. The corporations merged are the West Virginia Coal & Coke Co., the Main Island Creek Coal Co., the Logan Mining Co., the Rich Creek Coal Co., the Empire Coal Co., and the Glen Phares mines of the Oakland Co.

Morgan's First National Bank of New York co-operating with the (Rockefeller) National City Co., put over the deal and as usual saddled the new corporation with a $10,000,000 bonded debt which probably represents all the real money put in by the owners. But in addition the miners will be expected to earn dividends on 65,000 shares of preferred stock and 185,000 shares of no par common stock.

Non-Union Mines Get Tonnage.

Discrimination against union coaldiggers continued to show in the weekly reports of the U. S. bureau of mines. According to the bureau the percent of normal operation in leading union fields in the week ended Dec. 13, 1924 was: Illinois 48.5 per cent, Indiana, 47.3 per cent, Pittsburgh 48.7 per cent, central Pennsylvania, 58.6 per cent, Fairmont 88.7 per cent and western Kentucky 40.2 per cent. Operations in the leading non-union fields were: Westmoreland, 74.4 per cent, Winding Gulf, 65.4 per cent, New River, 64.6 per cent, Pocahontas, 80.6 per cent, Tug River, 69.8 per cent, Logan, 71.1 per cent, Kanawha, 58.1 per cent, Kenova-Thacker, 62.8 per cent, Harlan, 63.1 per cent, Hazard, 71.3 per cent and Virginia, 77 per cent.

British Miners Make $2.80 a Day.

The average wage paid British miners in November was 10 shillings 11 pence per day which means approximately $2.59 at present rate of exchange. This represents an increase of about 6% per cent over 1913, while the cost of living in England has been steadily advancing to 80 per cent above the pre-war level.

The wage cost of South Wales coal is reckoned at approximately $3.18 and the total cost at about $4.77 a ton.

In Memoriam—Lenin

On the 21st of January the workers the world over will hold memorial meetings for Nicolai Lenin, the leader and fighter for the liberation of the laboring masses. In connection with these memorial meetings, on Thursday, Jan. 15, a moving picture, "In Memoriam—Lenin," will be shown in the Gartner's Independent Theatre, 3725 Roosevelt Road. Two other pictures will also be shown: "Polikushka," and "Soldier Ivan's Miracle."

Labor in Building Trades Gets Wage Raise in Some Spots

Bricklayers in Brockton, Mass., have been granted an increase of 12½c an hour effective April 1, 1925. This raises their wage for an eight-hour day from $9 to $10.

Carpenters in Birmingham, Ala., have an increase of 10c per hour making the rate 75c.

Structural iron workers in New Orleans secured an increase of 12½c per hour bringing the rate up to $1.12½.

Pile drivers in St. Louis have been granted a 25c increase establishing the rate at $1.50 per hour.

A surplus of unemployed common labor has reduced the rate for this class in Dallas and Seattle. According to the Engineering News Record, the range in Dallas is 20c to 50c compared with a previous range of 40c to 75c. The rate in Seattle has fallen from 62½c to 50c per hour.

Plumbers' President Says He Expects More Work and More Money

(By Federated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—John Coefield, president of the Plumbers' International Union, attending the special meeting of the executive council of the building trades department, American Federation of Labor, in Washington on Jan. 5, announced that the members of his organization expect to bring their minimum wage up to $10 a day in the United States this year. At present their average wage is $9.30, while in many cities it is $10, in some $12 and in East St. Louis it is $14 a day. Prospects for employment in 1925 in the building industry are good, particularly in the larger cities, where office structures and big hotels are to be the leading types of construction. Housing was the chief item in 1924.

Your Policy Must Be Bring a Policy

Against British Capitalism in Egypt!

The far eastern bureau of the Comintern calls upon workers and farmers of all countries to protest against the British government's ultimatum to Egypt. The following is the appeal issued by the bureau:

Fellow Workers:—The conservative government of Great Britain renewed its activity by a murderous attack against Egypt. Using the assassination of General Lee Stack as a pretext, the British conservative government has taken a decisive step towards the destruction of even that pseudo "independence" which Egypt was presumed to have. As compensation for the assassination of the general, the British government imposed on Egypt a fine of £500,000 and demanded the severe punishment of those guilty of the assassination.

The British government has compelled the government of Egypt to withdraw the Egyption troops from the Sudan.

Still Boss of Egypt.

Taking advantage of this assassination the conservative government managed to get its own way, namely to leave the management of the internal and economic life of Egypt, as before in the hands of the British financial and legal advisers. Thus the British imperialists will continue to control the internal and economic life of Egypt, and will establish its rule of violence in that oppressed land.

In order to instill into the minds of the Sudan population respect for British bayonets, several officers and soldiers of the Egyptian and Sudan army have been hanged and shot by British generals. This plan of action was devised by Ramsay MacDonald who mentioned it in his letter to General Allenby in October last. The British plunderers' desire to utilize the assassination of General Lee Stack as a pretext for carrying out their predatory plans in Egypt and the Sudan.

To compel Egypt to accept its truculent and cynical demands the British government is shaking its mailed fist in the face of that defenceless country.

From all sides, from Malta, Gibraltar and Cyprus, British cruisers and gunboats are hastening to the shores of Egypt. British military units are being despatched to Egypt itself. The British air fleet is hovering over the doomed country like a horde of vultures, seeking victims for their bombs.

Final preparations are being made to seize Egypt by the throat and compel her to consent to allow herself to be plundered.

Meanwhile the leaders of the Egyptian bourgeoisie together with the landlords are shamefully capitulating to the imperialist bandits.

In spite of these traitors the revolutionary national movement will grow and become stronger until the chains of imperialist oppression are completely broken.

BRITISH WORKERS!

Ward off the criminal hand of your aristocrats from Egypt! Rectify the terrible crime committed against the Egyptian people by the government of Ramsay MacDonald. Confound the piratical plans of the Baldwin-Curzon and Chamberlain government. Compel your leaders to come out actively in defense of the independence of Egypt. Fight against the predatory ultimatum! Form a united front with the Egyptian workers and peasants!

WORKERS AND PEASANTS OF EGYPT!

Do not despair. Keep a brave heart. The advanced workers of all countries are coming to your aid. Expose the shameful conduct of the Egyptian government. UNITE AROUND YOUR COMMUNIST PARTY. Demand the release of the imprisoned Communists. Demand a determined and irreconcilable struggle against British imperialism for the complete and real independence of Egypt.

WORKERS AND PEASANTS OF ALL COUNTRIES.

Raise your voices in protest against the British government's ultimatum! Compel the colonial pirates to restrain their appetite. Demonstrate your solidarity with the oppressed peoples of the east.

Down with the colonial pirates!
Long live the fight for the independence of Egypt!
Long live the fighting unity of the toilers of the world!

HOW ABOUT NATIONALIZATION OF MINES AND ABOLITION OF COSSACKS?

(By The Federated Press)

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Jan. 11.—Executive boards of Districts 1, 7 and 9, the three anthracite field districts of the United Mine Workers' Union, meeting here endorsed the following proposed legislation, which they will seek to have adopted, in co-operation with the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor.

A bill requiring attendants to be constantly in duty at mine ventilating fans;

A bill for elimination of the use of electricity in gaseous mines;

Adequate funds for old age pensions if law is found constitutional and if law is not constitutional to urge the passage of a constitutional measure with adequate money to supply pensions;

Increased funds for the mothers' pension act;

Increased and adequate funds for state hospitals in anthracite regions;

Bill opposing state taxes on anthracite coal and opposing the present state tax;

The legislative committees will be empowered to act on any other legislation which may come up while at Harrisburg and which will be presented to the legislature later.

HINTS AT AUSTRALIAN TERROR

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SYDNEY, Australia, Jan. 11.—A veiled threat to introduce a fascist dictatorship in Australia is made by the anti-labor prime minister of Australia, S. M. Bruce, who says:

"The idea of a dictatorship of the six best brains in the land has occurred to me. That task would be to evolve the lines on which the country could be developed to the best interests of the people."

The capitalist press heartily supports a dictatorship, while the proposal is roundly condemned by the labor press, the Australian party and the mass of the people. It is not likely that the Australian people will tolerate any such dictatorship.

BOSSES FEARING THE REDS AVERT FASCIST DEFEAT

Keep Bloody Mussolini in Power

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Jan. 11.—Dictator Benito Mussolini is able to keep the fascisti in power only because the violence of the fascist party is backed by the large industrial capitalists and the landowners, opposition leaders here point out.

"Mussolini is kept in power by the rich men because they regard his violence as the force that prevented Italy from being governed by a Communist dictatorship," said a former liberal member of the fascist cabinet.

"Between the dictatorship of the workers and that of the fascisti whom they can control, the powerful financiers chose Mussolini."

Charges Against Fascism.

The Aventine opposition, which continues to abstain from taking part in the chamber of deputies' deliberations in a new statement, charges Mussolini and his party with intimidations at elections, suppressing the opposition with violence, destroying free speech, promoting crimes against opposition leaders, suppressing the newspapers, arresting men on the sole grounds of political activity, and exiling opposition leaders.

The opposition declares that Mussolini maintains an army at his personal service, and chalks the expense up to the government, and that he sets the fascist party's interests above the interests of the country as a whole.

Afraid of Elections.

Mussolini has definitely stated that there will be no election for many months, altho he earlier said that an election would be held before March. Mussolini's excuse for indefinitely postponing the elections is that, "It will take five or six months to prepare the ballots."

The new electoral law, which will be passed by the chamber of deputies as soon as Mussolini gives the word to his majority, upon closer examination, has been found to give the fascist supporters double and triple votes, and hold the opposition supporters down to a single vote.

Law Disfranchises Opposition.

According to the law, five classes of Italians are to receive three votes each. These include, royalty and the cardinals; those decorated with gold medals for military valor; those belonging to the military or civilian order of Savoy, and the knights of labor, which is composed of rich men; high officers of state; those who fulfill three of the eleven qualifications giving two votes.

Those receiving two votes are, members of scientific, literary or art academies; professors and teachers; those having high school diplomas; those with rank of knight in all orders of Italy; officers of the army and navy; those holding military decorations; those who have held municipal offices; managers of newspapers; administrative managers of industrial, commercial and agricultural firms; and fathers of five children.

Boycott Polls.

Thus the Communists and socialists, and all opposition adherents belonging to the industrial workers and peasants, will be confined to one vote. The Aventine opposition, in the face of this law which gives the fascisti supporters double and triple votes, are advising the voters to boycott the elections when held.

Gabriele D'Annunzio, the warrior poet, is preparing to enlist actively against Mussolini, following the arrest of Major Vagliasidi, a war hero, by the fascisti. The fascist government refuses to release Vagliasidi. He was arrested for activity against Mussolini.

IT WAS A BUSY DAY AT THE CAPITOL WHEN HARRY WINITSKY STARTED THE DRIVE TO INSURE THE DAILY WORKER

By H. O. WATT.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 11.—Comrade Harry Winitsky, of New York, accompanied by enthusiasm for the DAILY WORKER drive, blew into Washington yesterday. No, it is erroneous to say that Harry "blew in." No hurricane, nor cyclone, has been reported in the vicinity of the Capitol. Nothing short of a storm of the nature of a tornado could possibly lift Comrade Winitsky from his solid contact with mother earth.

All There for DAILY WORKER.

For the information of those comrades in the sections of the country to which Winitsky has not yet peregrinated let it be said that from every pore of Harry's huge frame there vibrates intense fervor for the cause of the DAILY WORKER. A secretary of a chamber of commerce would term Comrade Winitsky a "live wire."

At a general membership meeting here Comrade Winitsky oiled the machinery which is being put into operation to assist in insuring the DAILY WORKER during the current year. The speaker appointed committees and issued instructions on how to proceed to procure a substantial fund as Washington's quota in the drive. The committees are at work and will report results at our next meeting.

Altho remaining in Washington but one day Comrade Winitsky found time to visit several of our sympathizers and some of our comrades who were unable to attend our meeting. He had no difficulty in persuading our generous member, Comrade Brodsky, that the DAILY WORKER must live and procured from him a check for $100.

The arrival of an official of the Workers Party, in Washington, always results in inspiring our members to greater efforts—we look forward to the day when these leaders will come to Washington to take charge of the government bureaus.

Laurence Todd a "Pink."

Information concerning party activities thruout the country is invariably sought from visiting officials, and Comrade Winitsky was subjected to the usual questioning. Amongst the many questions put to Winitsky was a query as to his explanation concerning the anti-Communist attitude adopted by Laurence Todd, in his articles sent out from Washington. Todd is the correspondent of the Federated Press. Winitsky declared, in his vigorous manner, that Todd is like all other pinks, he believes in revolution "when it is three thousand miles away."

One of our prominent local comrades believes that Workers Party should adopt a system of questioning each and every member of the party concerning Marxism. It is the belief of this comrade that any member who cannot reply to fundamental test questions should be placed on probation for two months and if at the end of that time he again fails he must not be "tolerated" in the party. Comrade Winitsky was asked what he thot of this plan. Even the gods shudder when Comrade Harry Winitsky rises in his might and proclaims himself. This question brot Harry to his feet. "What in hell," he declared, "does this comrade think the Workers Party is—a college? There are millions of workers who have never studied Marx; don't study Marx now and never will study Marx. Many of them are good workers; they are active in the party and they are willing and ready to fight and to die for the party. We need action more than we need study. We must not drive active members from the party, by hurling Marxian questions at them."

Anti-Labor Judge Breaks Loose on Bricklayer's Union

"Injunction Judge" Dennis F. Sullivan has broken out again on his anti-labor campaign, this time the big stick of big business being wielded against the Bricklayers' Union. Sullivan fined Peter Shaughnessy, president of the union $500, and costs, and John J. Strech, business agent, to 20 days in the county jail for being active in labor disputes with the Contracting company employes last May.

Sullivan issued an injunction at that time, prohibiting the union officials from, "intimidating" employes of the sewer construction company. Another business agent, John Campbell was fined $300 and costs, and John Charles L. Wilde, assistant financial secretary, was fined $50 and costs.

OLGIN LECTURES ON ASPECTS OF OUR REVOLUTION

Workers' School Offers Talks on Tuesdays

NEW YORK, Jan. 11.—Much has been written and said about the economic and political aspects of the Russian revolution. He is truly ignorant today who does not know how the economic and political machinery of Soviet Russia functions, and what are the industrial achievements of the first workers' republic.

There is another side, however, to the picture of the new life being built by the workers and epasants of Russia—a side which has not received so much publicity, but is of the utmost significance.

To understand the full meaning of the Russian revolution we must be acquainted with more than the economic and political aspects of the revolution. We must know also what are the cultural achievements, what new cultural values have been created.

This will be the subject of the third lecture in the series on the Russian revolution given by Moissaye J. Olgin at the Workers' School of New York, 208 East 12th street.

On Tuesday, Jan. 13, 8 p. m., Comrade Olgin will speak on "The Cultural Aspects of the Russian Revolution." Workers who want to learn about Russia should not miss this lecture. Extensive discussion follows.

Other lectures in the series will be given as follows: Jan. 27—"The Internal Controversies in the Russian Communist Party."

Feb. 10—"Proletarian Culture."

Feb. 17—"Proletarian Culture," continued.

March 3—"Modern Russian Literature."

March 24—"The Theater and the Russian Revolution."

April 7—"The Intelligenzia and the Russian Revolution."

Registration for the course is still open. The fee for the series of lectures is $1.50; single admissions, 25 cents. For registration and information apply at office of Workers' School, or telephone Stuyvesant 4634.

AS WE SEE IT

the socialists stop supporting the Dawes plan, pleading for the ten hour day and in general putting up a united front with the capitalists, the Communists will surely win. The only thing we can get out of all this is that the Cogmenists alone fight the battles of the workers and stand as the guardians of socialism while the socialists are the enemies of the workers and the executioners of socialism.

IT is interesting to note that James Ramsay MacDonald, leader of British yellow socialism, arrived in Kingston, Jamaica, a few days ago accompanied by a prominent British banker. MacDonald is taking the air so to speak after his defeat in the last election in Britain. He is not a Communist of course, believes in domination of the workers by the capitalists, backed up by police and battle cruisers; is opposed to Soviet Russia; is looking forward—to his next term of office as a capitalist flunkey. MacDonald was feted by the Kingston chamber of commerce.

THIS is the way a typical British socialist acts abroad and at home for that matter. But while MacDonald is romping around the pleasant places of the capitalist world a delegation of British trade unionists are giving enthusiastic reports of what they saw in Russia to large audiences of British workers. They find that Russia is steadily improving under Communist rule while the conditions in the capitalist countries of Europe are changing for the worse.

EMME EXPELLED FROM ST. PAUL, MINN., TRADES AND LABOR ASSEMBLY

ST. PAUL, Jan. 11.—Julius F. Emme, avowed Communist, and O. R. Votaw, one of his supporters, were expelled from the St. Paul Trades and Labor Assembly Friday night after one of the bitterest fights in the organization, it was announced today.

of the Hill and other railroad interests.

Kellogg represented President Harding in the imperialist convention of the Pan-American Union at Santiago, Chile, and during the Harding administration was wealthy enough to pay for the construction of a residential palace costing $250,000 in St. Paul, Minnesota. In London, as ambassador, Kellogg entertained lavishly in the Crewe House, one of the mansions in the West End.

"Beet Sugar Charlie."

The appointment of Charles Beecher Warren as attorney general ignored the protest of the whole Michigan congressional delegation. Warren was prominently identified with Harding's campaign, and got the plum of ambassador to Japan out of Harding later. He engineered Japan into the Washington "arms conference" and was selected by Coolidge last winter as one of the two commissioners to Mexico, which resulted in the complete surrender of Mexico to the control of Yankee imperialism.

Warren came from Mexico last June at Coolidge's request to act as chairman of the platform committee at the republican national convention in Cleveland, and was the one who told Gompers to take his hat and shut the door from the outside after giving the old faker five minutes to beg for favors to organized labor.

LaFollette has always attacked Warren as "Beet Sugar Charlie," but then it is to be noted that Judge Spreckles, LaFollette's chief financial supporter, is interested in cane sugar production.

Warren a Swivel Chair Hero.

Warren attained fame and a medal for heroism during the world war, without getting anywhere near the trenches. He was made a major of the reserve corps in 1917, became assistant to the judge advocate general in 1918 and helped send to prison all the doughboys who went "absent without leave" in France. He became a colonel in July 1918, and without leaving swivel chair captured a "distinguished service medal" in 1919.

From 1914 to 1916 Warren was president of the Detroit chamber of commerce, and is known as an implacable enemy of unionism and an advocate of the "open shop."

Movie Operators Win New Demands Without Striking

The moving picture operators won most of their demands in a last minute conference with members of the Exhibitors' Association, and the strike which had been ordered for midnight Saturday, was called off by business agent, Thomas Maloy.

The members of the Motion Picture Operators' Association had demanded a flat raise of ten per cent in the new contract with the exhibitors. Their representatives signed a two-year contract, which granted the operators a five per cent raise the first year and a similar raise the second year.

According to the theater owners, the motion picture operators' union has no set scale, but demands wages in proportion to the size of the theatre and the profits taken in.

Workers Party and Y. W. L. of Phila. Will Meet Thursday

An enlarged session of the industrial department of the party and the Young Workers' League in Philadelphia, Pa., is called for Thursday, Jan. 15, at the party headquarters, 521 York Ave.

Branch industrial organizers, members industrial council and active comrades in the trade unions will hear the industrial report given by Comrade Baker, city industrial organizer of the party and Comrade Milgrom, industrial organizer of the Y. W. L.

The first order of business will be the question of reorganizing the party on the shop nuclei basis. Question of unemployment and child labor campaign will be taken up beside the means of better grasping industrial problems.

Politician Wanted For Swindling Chicago Priest

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 11.—Thomas Carey, former "back of the yards" politician of Chicago, for whom a warrant was reported to have been issued in Chicago, on charges of operating a confidence game, is in this city.

Carey, who ran for mayor of Chicago in 1918, is wanted in connection with alleged loss of $6,000 representing the life savings of the Rev. M. O'Sullivan, Chicago priest.

PROGRAM OF THE WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY IN THE ALDERMANIC ELECTION, FEB. 24

program of public works, especially with a view toward relieving the unemployment situation.

(a) Construction of adequate municipal subways, to be owned and operated as indicated above.

(b) The so-called "Chicago Beautiful" plan to be completely changed to provide improvement and sanitation of working class districts, and to be immediately inaugurated.

5. Abolition of private employment agencies. Establishment of public free employment bureaus by unemployed workers' organizations and unions, operating at municipal expense.

6. The candidates endorsed by our party will support the above unemployment measures, and, further, will lead in the creation of councils of unemployed workers, for the purpose of bringing pressure to bear upon the employers and the municipal authorities.

EDUCATION

Education to be taken out of the control of the political servants of big business and placed in the hands of teachers, students and working class parents.

(a) Complete supervision over school policies to be voted in councils of teachers and parents, which will decide what shall be taught in the schools, text books to be used etc.

(b) Administrative matters in the schools to be in charge of joint councils of teachers and students, who will select all principals and other officials.

(c) No discrimination against individual teachers because of political opinions. No interference with the right of teachers to organize in their Teachers' Union.

2. Unequivocal rejection of the platoon system.

3. We demand that all children in public schools of Chicago shall be fully maintained at the expense of the city thruout the year, not only as regards text books, but also in regards to food, clothing, transportation to and from school, vacation expenses, and all other expenses necessary to a healthful life while studying.

4. Improved schooling facilities with adequate playgrounds.

5. Substantially increased pay for teachers. Money for increased wages to be obtained thru special assessments levied against wealthy tax dodgers and coupon clippers.

POLICE

Abolition of use of police to break strikes, and their use in all other labor disputes. Maintenance of order during strikes, picketing, etc., to be exclusively in the hands of committees elected by the workers on strike.

2. Abolition of private detective agencies, which have proved to be nothing but institutions of thuggery and frame-ups against the workers.

3. Prohibition of use of scabs; penalty of fine or imprisonment for all employers using or importing strike-breakers.

INJUNCTION

We demand abolition of the use of injunctions against the workers in labor disputes, and we urge mass violation by the workers of any injunction that may be issued.

CONDITIONS OF LABOR

We demand the use of the city government power of public health regulation, to compel the payment of not less than the union scale of wages to all workers employed in so-called private industry or in any kind of labor, with enforcement of eight-hour day and 40-hour week, severe penalties to be put upon employers violating same.

2. Sanitation, safety devices, ventilation, heating and all other conditions of labor in workshops to be subject to the sole control of shop committees elected by the workers, any employer violating regulations laid down by such committee, to be punished as violating a city health ordinance.

3. All factory inspectors to be selected by the labor unions.

4. Maximum six-hour day for women in industry, equal pay of women with men for equal work done.

5. Maternity maintenance of working women during vacation of six weeks before and six weeks after childbirth—at expense of employer.

CHILD LABOR

In accordance with the consistent national campaign against child labor initiated by the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party, we demand the abolition of all child labor up to 18 years of age, children to be supported at municipal expense.

(a) Funds for this purpose to be secured thru taxes levied against corporation profits and high individual incomes.

2. Young workers (youth).

(a) Equal pay for equal work for young and old.

(b) Maximum six-hour day for all young workers under 21 years of age. Five days of work a week.

(c) One month's vacation for young workers each year, with full pay.

RACE DISCRIMINATION

1. The Workers (Communist) Party demands unqualified social, economic and political equality of all workers, irrespective of color, race or creed.

2. Equal pay for all workers for equal work done.

3. Immediate and unceasing action against the menace of the ku klux klan.

4. No discrimination against Negroes in matters of residence, admission to restaurants, theaters, etc. Severe penalties for landlords persisting in the practice of charging higher rents to Negroes than to whites.

5. We demand that the habit of Chicago police in breaking into the homes of Negroes at will, be brot to an immediate end. No toleration of attempts to establish a caste system with the Negroes as an inferior caste by the arresting and terrorization of them and women of the two races for no other offense than friendly association in their homes and public places. This must be made a political issue.

MUNICIPAL EMPLOYES

Reduction of salaries of mayor, city council, municipal judges and other higher city officials to put them on a level with the average wage earner.

2. No interference with the right of any branch of municipal employes to organize in labor unions. Establishment of the shop committee system as a means of direct control of job conditions by the employes of the various departments.

CONTRACT LETTING

Abolition of private contract system in the construction of public works; all contracts to be let thru the unions, with union working conditions, wages, hours, etc.

HOUSING

We demand that all rents be drastically reduced, and that the extortion and "unfair practices" laws be invoked to enforce this demand.

2. That the city government immediately begin construction of modern apartment houses for workers, to be rented at the cost of operation—the construction work to be undertaken on a scale to provide employment for workers now unemployed.

RIGHT TO VOTE

Extension of the suffrage, giving ALL workers in Chicago the right to vote—present restrictions requiring citizenship, permanent residence, etc., being an obvious discrimination in favor of the capitalist class.

The above program of immediate demands touches issues which are vital to every working man and woman in Chicago. Every one of these issues is a direct outgrowth of the present system of production for private profit—that is, of capitalism. Because of the monopoly which the bosses maintain over the factories, machines, etc., the workers are obliged to toil long hours and for meager wages, while the goods that they produce are taken by the capitalists. With schools, press and police power in the hands of capitalism, it is obvious that these elections do not offer any real opportunity for the workers. Capitalist democracy is nothing but a sham. There can be no real solution of the great problems weighing down upon the workers, until capitalism is overthrown—until the workers sieze control of the governmental power and take over industry. This will be accomplished thru the establishment of a Soviet republic, a workers' and farmers' government.

We call upon all labor unions and working class organizations which are in agreement with the immediate demands set forth in our program to establish a united front with the Workers (Communist) Party in the fight for their realization, thru support of the aldermanic candidates listed below:

DETROIT I. A. M. GETS A DOSE OF BROWN'S EMETIC

Says He Is Glad Union Lost Membership

By ALFRED GOETZ.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 11.—Thursday evening, Jan. 8, District Lodge No. 60, of the I. A. of M., gave a banquet in honor of the installation of the officers of its component lodges at the Wolverine Hotel, Detroit, for the purpose of getting the members of the organization better acquainted with one another. When the eats had finally been disposed of and the dishes cleared away, the audience was treated to what Chairman Batt called "mental feeding."

The first speaker called upon was President F. X. Martel of the Detroit Federation of Labor, who, after a few remarks intended to be funny, brought out the important point that the chamber of commerce, the Rotarian and Kiwanis Club were continually having just such get-together meetings and that as a matter of fact every banquet, every dance or social affair was being utilized to talk "shop," and to cement the opposition to organized labor. He exhorted us to go and do likewise.

"Radical Jags" Disliked by Faker.

This seemed to be the keynote for all the speakers that followed him. They all harped on the same subject in precisely the same way, and in almost the same words. Martel also pointed out that the Detroit machinists passed thru, what he called a "radical jag," during the war and that at that time their principle aim was to "save the world," instead of trying to build up the organization, but, he continued, they are safely out of it now, they have now quietly set for themselves the task of organizing.

This is all very nice, the only trouble is that, Martel forgets that when the Detroit machinists passed thru that "radical jag" they got thousands of members into the unions and now that they are safely over it, the district numbers only a few hundreds, where formerly there were thousands.

Brown's Usual Platitudes.

The main speaker of the evening, however, was Henry Brown, international vice-president of the I. A. of M. Brown started by rehashing all the tiresome platitudes of the preceding speakers and finally branched out to touch a few of the more important problems confronting the unions. He spoke in glowing terms of the B. and O. plan, which he claims should be known as the "Johnston plan," after the man who fathered it. This wonderful plan which is opposed only by those who do not understand it and which is merely "application of common sense to industry" (capitalist common sense?), would ultimately do away with that "crude weapon—THE STRIKE."

Is it not marvelous? All we have to do is to use a little "common sense," apply it to industry, get the bosses to understand the advantage of it, to him . . . and good-bye strikes and lockout, suffering, picket lines and injunctions! Simple, isn't it? Too bad Johnston couldn't have thought of this remarkable plan before.

The Fewer the Members, the Better the Union!

There were many other things said by Brown, for he talked fast and long, but none were so significant as this. He told us to stick to the organization and, flying in the face of experience, he said that if times got hard enough the workers would be more than glad to join the ranks of the organization. He informed us that he was not sorry to see that the rapid gains in membership which marked the war days were lost, as they represented a "mushroom growth" that could not be retained by the organization.

The fact that most of those who joined during the war left the organization because of the do-nothing policy of the Johnston-Brown combine, was considered not at all by the speaker, who holds the workers alone responsible for not belonging to the unions. He said much more in the same line and spoke so long that the end of the speech was enthusiastically appreciated by every one.

This gathering was called for the purpose of inspiring the members of the organization to greater effort during the new year. But as an inspiration affair it was a flat failure. Instead of a short analysis, showing past mistakes and defects, we were treated to a long explanation of "unfortunate combinations of circumstances over which we had no control," and "too much radicalism." Instead of a clear clarion call to struggle, we were asked to apply common sense to industry and wait for the day when we could discard the "crude weapon of the strike."

Truly have the labor fakers of the Johnston machine shown their complete bankruptcy, their complete lack of leadership in the I. A. of M.

PROCEEDS FROM CHICAGO'S MOVIE SHOW GOES TO DAILY WORKER AND TO INTERNATIONAL WORKERS' AID

Delegates to the Chicago C. C. C. greeted the notice of the coming big movie show at Ashland Auditorium, Feb. 5, with real interest and enthusiasm. Hundreds of posters and thousands of tickets were distributed, and the delegates are to report back to their branches to establish at least twenty public ticket stations in various parts of the city.

Comes to Chicago At Last.

This picture, "The Beauty and the Bolshevik," has been awaited in Chicago for a long time. All over the country big audiences showed their appreciation of this new Russian feature, and still Chicago seemed left out, because it was impossible to get a suitable hall or a date that would not conflict with other affairs. It is well known that nothing can draw a crowd against a proletarian movie, so all organizations will refrain from running any rival affairs on or near Feb. 5.

This rollicking romantic comedy of red army love not only tickles our own members, but interests the general working class public. Old and new blush sharply when the young Komsomol comes at the head of the Soviet troops to give a hand to the poor farmers, and in the process falls in love with the (temporarily) conservative daughter of the rich village priest. Besides the feature there is an inspiring picture of Russian industrial reconstruction called "Russia in Overalls." Besides purely Russian industry like the Baku oil fields, Volga fisheries, Ural smelters, etc., there are those in which American labor has participated and in which it is specially interested—Kuzbas, the R. & I. C. clothing factories backed by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, the F. S. R. farms and factory, etc. Both pictures for one price of admission, 50 cents. Program is continuous, 7 to 11 p. m., comrades can come any time, but should come early for good seats.

Proceeds to DAILY WORKER and International Workers' Aid.

Financial proceeds will be divided between The DAILY WORKER and the International Workers' Aid. To make a real success of the show 7000 should attend, this means that every member and reader must bring five fellow workers to the show.

A souvenir program will be printed, prices running from $20 to $3, for space. Every member is expected to get his party or Y. W. L. branch, his aid or benefit society, and his local union to take space. Local business men should also be approached. Information can be had from or sent to I. W. A. office, 19 S. Lincoln St.

Tickets can be had, among twenty other stations, at I. W. A., 19 S. Lincoln St.; Labor Defense Council, 166 W. Washington St.; Workers Party local office, 166 W. Washington St., Workers Party national office, 1113 W. Washington St.; DAILY WORKER, 1113 W. Washington St.

STATEMENT BY FINNISH COMRADES.

NOTE—This statement of the membership of Superior, Wis., Workers Party Finnish Local was ordered published by the Central Executive Committee about two weeks ago. It was mislaid, however, and did not appear as part of the discussion of our party's immediate tasks before the close of the discussion last Friday. It has therefore been ordered published in this issue. It is as follows:

Statement by the Membership of the Superior, Wis., Workers Party Finnish Local on the C. E. C. Majority and Minority Theses.

We have considered thoroly and in the same spirit the affairs and the situation of our party, on the basis of earlier observations, the C. E. C. majority and minority theses and the articles that have followed in the press, and wish to express our opinion concerning the situation to the membership of the party.

Our sad general observation is a grouping, which has found a nesting-place, still during the current year, in the C. E. C. of our party. A grouping which has stamped its impression on every move of a more determined nature made by the party; and of the bad features of this grouping it is not necessary to seek evidence any further than the theses already mentioned and the consideration of the issues as a result of them. We figure as one of the results of this sad grouping the enormous waste of energy and funds, which is combined with the maneuvers thru the theses carried on among the membership of the party. We consider that the first move of the present maneuvers was the extremely long-winded theses from both groups, the membership being unable to find any more serious differences of opinion in them unless special messengers of the majority and minority visit the membership and explain the differences to them.

What we note as the most serious difference of opinion is in relation to the work to be carried on under the slogan, "farmer-labor party." The minority desires to attach the main attention of our organization and its functioning on work to be carried on under that slogan, and to set the greatest hopes of the progress of Communist movement on our labors under said slogan for the building of the farmer-labor party. The majority we understand from its thesis, is endeavoring to attain intensive work for the "bolshevization" of our party. If the intention of the majority, in its statement on the farmer-labor party question, is not to deny nor hinder work under the farmer-labor party slogan where there is a natural basis for it, or where that slogan proves to be the most profitable in the campaign for a united front, then we support the thesis of the C. E. C. majority in their general points, because they have nearer to the methods and viewpoints thru which we believe the "bolshevization" of our party can be accomplished. We hope that the aspiration of the C. E. C. majority is a true intention to strengthen and organize our party (the aspiration to build from the bottom upwards), and that it endeavors to carry out this intention energetically, not allowing itself to be continually disturbed by the internal politics of minority groups, artificially developed in part, seeking adventure and desiring positions of power, and in a manner so that the wholeness of our party can be preserved to carry out these viewpoints.

But we note at the same time, that regardless of numerous words neither one of the theses calls the attention of the membership to the many defects existing in the activities of our party, which attention would be of great importance in the organizational work of our party. In our opinion it is high time for the membership to take a hand in the internal construction of our party and its arrangement, not as spectators viewing a sick fight from the outside, but as active members of a communistic party who endeavor to form of their party a model and well functioning class struggle party.

We can not be satisfied with the arrangement of affairs that has been in power in our party ever since its organization. During the existence of this arrangement nearly all of the working forces of the party and its economical ability has been attached to the executive machinery of our party, which has organized and directed the party work from above, while the party has been relatively small in membership and weak in its working ability. In this unnatural situation the leadership of our party has the time, and in this arrangement of its work it is compelled to overload the ability of the membership with possible and impossible daily declarations, orders and demands. This is done in a manner where even the best of the membership does not have the time to acquaint itself with all the declarations, not to say anything of carrying them out in practice or getting larger masses acquainted with them. On the other hand it seems that the leadership of our party has always been afflicted with a form of leadership mania, which it attempts to apply to every possible and impossible act, and which governs all the declarations of our party and its instructions in maneuvering. While we should endeavor and be able, with the superiority of our activites and our work among the lower strata, to earn the confidence of the proletariat and a leading position in its struggles, it has instead been characteristic with the leadership of our party to seek, thru newspaper declarations, organizations which it may lead, which as a rule childish and in most cases sets up great obstacles to the work of those members who endeavor to build and strengthen the party up from the bottom.

Thinking over the past tactics of our party, the supernatural centralization of forces in its governing organs, the waste of our economical abilities, and on the other hand our "leadership" maneuvers, we recall a certain seagoing vessel and its command. For its pride and for attracting outward attention a special fog-horn or whistle was placed on the boat. This whistle, when blown, took all the steam from the boilers. When the whistle was blown the propeller stopped turning. When it was necessary to proceed in a storm and fog, the propeller always ceased to turn because all the power was consumed by the whistle. Just as impossible as it was for the command of the vessel to get the propeller of the ship to rotate by shouting to the firemen sweating in the coal bunkers, just so impossible it is to get the constructive work of our party to make progress by declarations and decrees to the sweating membership of the party. Everything must be arranged proportionately.

We are fully behind the viewpoints presented by the majority to build the party from the bottom upwards. We might use the words of Lenin, "to build and work in." But we are of the opinion that the first duty is to cleanse the party's working machinery of all factional fights, entailing untold work and financial expenses, and of "pork-barrel" politics, which sad feature leaves their impression forth every move by our party machinery and make full success difficult in every attempt. We are of the opinion that it is necessary for the membership to pay more attention to the regulation of the work of the C. E. C., its working procedure, and its economical policies, until we have reached the stage where the groupings which have been in effect with all their disastrous results shall disappear, and we shall have an effective well centralized and capable C. E. C., which shall dare and shall be able to use the rights it has enjoyed in the past among the membership in a manner that will gain their confidence.

In order to attain these purposes we present to the locals and the district conventions for consideration and decision the following demands:

b). That the coming national vention shall express its strong condemnation of all groupings during periods between national conventions; that in selecting the C. E. C. it shall see that the C. E. C. is not elected on a group basis, and that the members of the C. E. C. shall be elected on the basis of the confidence which the members elected on the C. E. C. have earned from the membership by their work in the Communist movement and not upon the basis of the heated passion that certain persons posses in seeking memberships on the C. E. C. and hold themselves privileged to belong to it on the basis of their birthrights.

b) That the coming the national convention shall decrease the membership of the C. E. C. to nine members, and in this manner shall aid us in securing a better centralized, a more capable and more elastic C. E. C., which shall be composed of more mature Communistic elements and which shall function with less expense. This C. E. C. shall be sufficiently large for the working committees and the machinery of the party and will have time to plan and prepare sufficient programs for the masses which our party has at its disposal. We deem, at the time, that in a smaller actual working machine of this C. E. C. there is time nor are many reasons for the continued groupings.

c) That membership on the C. E. C. shall not be dependent upon the pay roll of the party, so that members of the C. E. C. automatically feel that the membership on the committee is a guaranteed position to earn their bread and butter, regardless of the needs of the party or the abilities of the party or the member. Let the principal condition for eligibility for membership on the C. E. C. be knowledge of the Communist movement, the zeal to work for the Communist movement and the ability of the member, not taking into strict consideration the possibilities to work in the party offices.

d) That in the arrangement of the practical party work the C. E. C. shall perform a thorough investigation, and that the aim in this investigation shall be to draw up a good clear working program, which shall be as simple as possible, and which shall be in accordance and will go hand in hand with forces and the abilities of the party in its outward work. We expect a very noticeable improvement in the political effect in changing the working force for outside organization work, in so far as the funds of the party warrant and its ability make the latter possible.

e) The offices of the district organizers shall not be dependent upon "pork-barrel politics," which we believe has been the cause of the peculiar work entailing and wasteful methods of continually shifting the district organizers, in the midst of which shifting it is impossible to take into consideration organization work based upon experience and acquaintance with the territory. The work of the district organizer must be transformed into actual organization work, so that it shall not be merely an office for duplicating the correspondence of the national office and collecting assesments from the membership. The work of the district organizer should be measured very accurately by the results attained in each district in all he forms of our activities, such as the increase in the membership of our party, the strengthening of the functioning of the branches, the circulation of our papers and the distribution of literature, the progress of the work of the W. I., the progress of our work in the unions, etc. Such offices should not be supported, nor men kept on the pay roll, who do not show regular increases in these various forms of our activities.

f) A better system must be attained in sending out speakers, so that the work carried on by the spoken work shall be transformed into actual organization work, and not merely trips to collect funds from the best centers of the party. The sending out of speakers, while it may be enlivened, should be arranged to take place by districts for systematic organization work, wherein the results shall not be measured wholly by individual collections and the sacrifices of the party members, but by what has been accomplished in building up new party units and in circulating literature and papers.

g) The national office shall arrange its outward correspondence and its circularization work, as well as its general subscription campaigns, as centralized as possible, so that the duplication and the triplication of every new move of the party may be avoided, and the party membership shall not be exhausted by innumerable letters on the same subjects. Improvements in this respect will save the party funds for more rational organization work and will bring about better results in the general campaign carried on by circular letters.

h) The general campaigns by appeals to the membership and supporters must be decreased, be better considered, so that each campaign will bring better results.

i) In the outward propaganda work of the party all the attention of the party must be centered from time to time on the circulation of THE DAILY WORKER, The Workers Monthly and party literature. The party should recognize that propaganda work thru the press

UNITED TEXTILE UNION TALKING FIGHT ON CUT

Official Wants "Discussion" at Least

(Special to The Daily Worker)

FALL RIVER, Mass., Jan. 11.—John L. Campos, secretary-treasurer of the Dofers' Union and member of the executive board of the United Textile Workers of America attacked the ten per cent wage cut announced by the Fall River cotton manufacturers for their 35,000 employes:

The United Textile Workers will stand for no reduction, says Campos. Denouncing the employers for refusing to lay their cards on the table and show the cost conditions on which they base their wage reduction program Campos closed, saying:

"At least the United Textile Workers cannot consent or approve a reduction in wages, especially when it comes without the proper serious discussion of the facts in our possession and which an impartial public should know."

The United Textile Workers contests the union field in Fall River with the American Federation of Textile Operatives, an independent organization.

Views of Our Readers

The Humble Patrician.

To the DAILY WORKER:—A few days previous to the late national election I was looking out the window and saw on the opposite side of the street a seedy looking individual enclosed in a monument of rags. He shook like a victim having a congested chill. The weather was severe. Apparently he had no particular destination. The north wind whipped and whisted thru his threadbare garments. His feet were partly encased in a worsted pair of hob-nail shoes, all of which made him resemble a scarecrow on a pole waving in a Kansas cyclone. The poor fellow presented the scene of withered woe. After a few moments I remembered where I had seen once in my life the duplicate of such melancholy distress. I recalled to my vision a painting I had seen fifty years ago, entitled "The Bleak Shores of Labrador in Mid-Winter." Curiosity prompted me to get a closer view of that man and sympathy prompted an interview. I went out and by closer inspection discovered on the lapel of his coat a badge which read: Keep Cool With Coolidge

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 11.—A railroad man accosted by two armed St. Louis highwaymen dropped his overalls as he held his hands up. "What's in that package?" demanded one of the desperados. "Just my work clothes," was the reply. "Oh, lord," exclaimed the pair, "we're not robbing workingmen. Go on home."

REVIEW OF FOREIGN LABOR STATUS SHOWS INSTABILITY OF CAPITALISM THE WORLD OVER

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

In Austria unemployment has been increasing approximately 10 per cent a month since August, 1924. The number of subsidized unemployed on Dec. 15 was 116,000 in a nation with a population considerably less than New York City. The large number of suicides and tragedies which marked New Year's eve was attributed by the capitalist press to the difficult times the Austrians are experiencing.

In Belgium the coal mines were shut down by a hard fought strike by which the miners won an 8 per cent increase.

In Bulgaria wages remained low in spite of the steadily mounting cost of living.

In Denmark the number of unemployed has increased seasonally from 20,000 in November to 27,000 in December. In the same month a year ago there were 32,300 unemployed.

In Greece the large number of unemployed Armenian and Greek refugees from Turkey made it easy for the government to break strikes in 1923 and 1924 without important concessions to labor. As a result wages failed to keep pace with the cost of living which is still advancing.

In Lithuania wages of farm laborers are lower than a year ago with farmers finding it difficult to pay expenses and taxes.

In Norway the end of widespread labor conflicts has been followed by an increase in industrial operations.

In Poland strikes have been frequent during 1924. In spite of this fact foreign capital has been increasing its hold, coming especially from Italy and Great Britain.

In Portugal labor disturbances are reported common.

In Roumania labor is suffering from a severe depression with manufacturing industries running at 50 per cent capacity.

In South Africa unemployment is prevalent with both the national and the local governments attempting projects to furnish employment. The banks and mines are paying generous dividends. The gold mines report profits 25 per cent greater than 1923, having introduced efficiency methods to speed up productivity.

In Sweden employers decided to lockout 100,000 metal trades and textile workers to combat demands for wage increases. Lockouts of other trades are expected and it is expected that 65 per cent of Sweden's organised labor will be affected. The government has appointed an arbitration commission.

CAPPELLINI MAKES SOME PROMISES, BUT MINERS FIND THEY ARE EMPTY

SCRANTON, Pa., Jan. 11.—The seriousness of the unofficial anthracite strike situation in District 1 of the United Mine Workers has led President Rinaldo Cappellini to offer the strikers the best terms he has offered since the strike began. The terms, conditional on the men returning to work, are:

Prompt action by conciliation board on grievances which caused the strike.

Full restoration of charters and funds held up by the international union when the charters were lifted.

Complete amnesty of all leaders of the strike.

Strikers opposing the Cappellini plan said it carried no certain assurance that grievances would actually be adjusted, but was only a pledge that the grievances, which are of long standing, would be "taken up."

BRITISH MENACE U. S. GRIP ON COTTON MARKET

Migration of Negroes Causes Labor Shortage

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—The continued migration of the Negroes from southern states to northern industrial cities, endangering America's dominance of the world cotton market, a report issued by the agricultural bureau of the chamber of commerce of the United States shows.

"Due to a steady migration of cotton belt Negroes to industrial centers of the north and east, there has developed an acute labor shortage in this region of the United States," says the report. The report shows a steady decline in the production of cotton in this country, and increased production by foreign countries. Another cause given for the decline is the spread of the boll weevil.

One of the strongest competitors of the United States cotton producers is the ring of cotton growers backed by the British imperialist, Baldwin government. The British government recently suppressed an uprising of Sudanese cotton growers in Egypt who rebelled against the conditions of slavery which exist on the British cotton plantations along the Nile.

"DAILY NEWS" CONDONES MUSSOLINI OUTRAGES WHILE IT WEAVES WEB OF LIES AGAINST SOVIET RUSSIA

The "Daily News," largest of Chicago evening papers, has frequently found occasion to boast about the fact that it maintains special correspondents in all the important centers of Europe to relay the foreign news. Evidently the ordinary lies furnished by the syndicated press service are not strong enough for the Daily News so it lires men to write as per instructions.

At present, two of its servants, men of considerable journalistic fame, are vying with each other in giving a good capitalist version of developments in Europe. Hiram K. Moderwell, and F. A. Mackenzie are the two men. The exigencies of their duties (as brass checkers) requires that both lie like hell, the former in glossing over the outrages of fascism and the latter in trumping up lies about Sovie Russia.

In the issue of January 7, Moderwell has a dispatch dealing with Mussolini's present effort to remain in power. He consumes most of the space in dilating on the fascist program for complete national control, a program which as we know, they are putting into effect thru persecution, terrorism and murder. But the dispatch gives no inkling of such things. However, it explains that Mussolini has been compelled to disperse 95 political bodies, make 111 arrests, suppress 25 opposition organizations and search 655 homes and offices, in order to "prevent plots and seditions." The whole article purports to place these acts in the most defensible and legitimate light. Altho the most undisguised terrorism is being used to intimidate the people, Moderwell affects to maintain at attitude of benevolent neutrality. The much vaunted American hatred of tyranny—which his fellow correspondent so hypocritically parades when he deals with the Communist government of Russia—does not stir in Moderwell at the sight of violent excesses of the fascisti. He is fully agreed that Italian capitalism must be saved at all costs. The last paragraph of his dispatch is illustrative of attitude. He writes: "The government's recent measures, tho unusual, has not been unconstitutional, because they have been based on broad interpretations of existing laws."

One of the days the Italian proletariat will rise and overthrow Mussolini with a similar disregard for existing laws. And then Moderwell and others of his prostituted profession will not deal of it in terms of benevolent neurality, but in terms of opposition, hate and abuse.

Mackenzie's article, which was published in the same issue with Moderwell's, is strongly reminiscent of the days of 1918 when the panic-stricken bourgeois press knew no limits in its attacks on Soviet Russia. Mackenzie sheds bitter tears over the sad lot of political prisoners in Russia. After the manner of the most approved fiction writers, he goes into great detail in describing prison life on a lonely island in the White Sea—which place he admits never having visited. Nevertheless, this does not prevent him from giving minute discriptions of the inhuman treatment recorded of the prisoners by their ferocious Communist guards. It cannot be denied that Mackenzie has a fertile imagination, but he should exercise more discretion in trying to pan fiction off as truth. Unfortunately his time, innumerable observers and visitors in Russia have testified that the prison system there is the most human in the world, and that both penal and political prisoners are accorded the best treatment. In fact if Mackenzie were to be truthful, he would have to report that which he as well as everyone who has been in Russia has observed, namely that it is less afflicted with crime than any other country in the world. But, of course, that sort of news, while possessing the incidental merit of being true, would be unacceptable to the Daily News. It must have anti-Communist news or nothing at all. Perhaps that is why it withdrew Mackenzie from Russia, where he was under some external compulsion to send out facts and not lies.

Comrades reading Mackenzie's articles will experience a haunting sense of familiarity—a sense of having read the same sort of stuff before—and in the very same paper. Perhaps it will stimulate their recollections to remind them of the lurid and ill-fated stories by the ex-sleuth Spolansky.

LOS ANGELES COMRADES TO BRING TO RUSSIA MOST MODERN BUILDING MACHINERY AND START COOPERATIVE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 11.—The overwhelming desire of the whole capitalist world is: to see Russia poor and suffering.

They fear nothing so much as the progress and prosperity of the first Workers' Republic.

The days of capitalism, to a great extent depend upon the ratio of progress of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

As free, happy and prosperous Russia will be the unanswerable argument against capitalist exploitation and oppression. That is why it should be the aim of every class conscious worker to do all in his power to help to make this workers' republic impregnable, to assist in its reconstruction, thus hastening the day of the universal emancipation of the workers.

The above consideration was the main reason for the organization of the Technical Aid Society to Soviet Russia which has sent many well-equipped groups to Russia and the same reasons has also inspired a number of workers in the building trades of Los Angeles, Calif. to organize a co-operative building group, with the object of migrating to Russia, taking along with them the most modern machinery used in the building industry as well as introducing American methods and labor saving devices.

The group is known as the Russia-American Construction Co-operation, code name, "Racco." The group decided to limit its membership to fifty workers, and that one thousand dollars per member the minimum share. Outside of this sum each member will have to pay his own and his family's (if any) traveling and other expenses. An application fee of $10 is required to cover incidental expenses in connection with the organization work.

The group will consist of workers in every branch of the building trades such as: Masons, bricklayers, carpenters, plumbers, plasterers, electricians, painters, machinists, etc. We are organizing this group under the guidance of the Technical Aid Society and the central office of same will have the final arrangements of departure in their hands.

We invite all comrades who are in a position to join us to communicate at once with the group secretary, A. J. Lipshitz, 942 Pasadena Ave., South Los Angeles, Calif. Write in any language you wish your letter will receive prompt and careful consideration and since we are contemplating going as soon as possible, those who wish to join should act promptly. Needless to say that comrades of all nationalities are welcome. Interested comrades will be supplied with a copy of our rules provisionally compiled. Final rules and regulations will be in accordance and subject to the approval of central office and the laws of Soviet Russia.

S. L. P. OFFICIALS AT THEIR BALL STOP COLLECTIONS OF FUNDS FOR PROLETARIAN VICTIMS IN EUROPE

The following letter was received by the International Workers' Aid with the request that it be forwarded to the DAILY WORKER for publication. The writer protests against the S. L. P.'s refusal to co-operate with class conscious movements to raise relief funds for proletarian victims of capitalism. The letter is self-explanatory. We publish it in full:

International Workers' Aid:—Find enclosed $24.00 which I personally believe the most should go to Germany. All our efforts should be concentrated on Germany to bring about a change in the government and bring them nearer to Russia. That will be the greatest moral influence on the rest of the workers of the world.

I am an S. L. P. man (on the outside.) I visited the S. L. P. concert and ball and hoped to collect some money for the imprisoned revolutionists to whom the S. L. P. should show their sympathy, but as soon as I received a few donations from five members assisting at 11.15 the Sherlock (Shylock) Holmes of the S. L. P., Adolph Orange came over to me and told me to stop. When I asked him to give me his reason, he shouted "Stop it and that's all." And when I remarked to him that he has some conscious International solidarity, he told me with anger and blood in his eyes and face, "If you don't stop I'll throw you out." Being there with my family and friends I was forced to surrender.

I want to add here that after the Bolshevik revolution I went over to see the S. L. P. national secretary, Arnold Peterson, and asked him to start a fund in the "Weekly People" for Russia and offered him $5.00 for a start, but he answered it was not necessary as they control the government and its resources . . . and afterwards realized that Russia is really in desperate need, and that the S. L. P. aside from not participating in aiding Russia attacked the Friends of Soviet Russia, I kept silent about A. Peterson's reply. But A. Orange's act overfilled the cup and I must protest.

What is the S. L. P. doing for the international victims of the white terror? I fully agree with the S. L. P. principles and tactics but its methods to enforce them are disgusting and therefore, I step out of that organization. But I am still active on the outside over whom they have no control. Yours for International Solidarity, L. Platt, New York City.

OUR DAILY PATTERNS

A PRACTICAL GARMENT FOR YOUNG CHILDREN.

4568. Here is a style that will appeal to the busy mother of little children, especially those of the "creep" age. This design provides a convenient closing at the inner seam, which is very practical for children below 2 years of age. The garment may also be made with this seam closed, for the back is in drop style.

The pattern is cut in three sizes: 6 months, 1 and 2 years. A 6-months size requires 1⅛ yard of 36-inch material.

Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in silver or stamps.

IN ORDERING YOUR PATTERN BE SURE TO MENTION THE SIZE YOU WANT IT IN.

PRACTICAL UNDERWEAR.

4973. Batiste, cambric, satin, crepe, radium silk or crepe de chine may be used for this model. It may also be made of dress materials, such as laille, satin, velvet or flannel, and worn under a tunic.

The pattern is cut in four sizes: Small, 34-36; medium, 38-40; large, 42-44; extra large, 46-48 inches bust measure. A medium size requires 2¾ yards of 36-inch material. The width at the foot is 1¾ yard.

Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in silver or stamps.

IN ORDERING YOUR PATTERN BE SURE TO MENTION THE SIZE YOU WANT IT IN.

Building Trades Fight Wage Cuts

TORONTO, Jan. 11—Bricklayers and carpenters in Toronto are fighting wage cuts. The attack on the carpenters appear suspended but the employers are pushing their campaign against the bricklayers. "It is not a case of a reduction in wages," says Joe Bamber, union secretary, "but a reduction in the standard of living." Bamber declares that present wages are lower than in the border towns of the United States and are driving men across the line. "The result," he says "is that southern Europeans are being brought in, and they are undermining us and cutting our standard of living."

He Must Be Fact Blind.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 11.—President Clarkinson of the St. Louis chamber of commerce in a statement says he expects a continuation of the "present unprecedented wave of prosperity" for 1925. Maybe he has not seen the overcrowded flophouses and the employment offices flooded with jobless. Maybe he only associates with bootleggers.

WORKERS AID SACCO-VANZETTI DEFENSE FUND

Early Friends Assist Labor Leader

(By The Federated Press)

PLYMOUTH, Mass., Jan. 11.—Bartolomeo Brini thinks of Bartolomeo Vanzetti with great affection. Vanzetti encouraged him most when he began to study his beloved violin.

For seven years Vanzetti, who with Nicola Sacco is still fighting to prove their innocence of the murder and robbery for which they are imprisoned, lived with the Brinis in quaint old Plymouth, Mass. Beltrando was a boy of thirteen helping Vanzetti to peddle eels. Beltrando was one of the eighteen important alibi witnesses in the Italian workers' first trial.

Beltrando is a sensitive youth of seventeen now and remembers regretfully that the last time he saw Vanzetti before the detectives took him was the occasion on which Vanzetti politely scolded him for jumping into a neighbor's garden for the "ricky" with which Beltrando and other boys were playing. Beltrando has seen Vanzetti in Charlestown prison and receives letters from his friend rejoicing in his success with his music. Beltrando is in great demand as a violinist in Plymouth even tho he plays no jazz. He wants to go on with his music in Boston after he graduates from high school this year.

Against Fascisti.

Beltrando cannot understand how a man so kind and thotful could be accused of the crimes for which Vanzetti was convicted. He says he realizes now the difference between his school teachings and the actuality of American justice. He participated eagerly in a school debate in which he argued against the Italian fascisti.

"I asked my friends before the debate whether they believed in the fascisti," he tells, "and they said they did. But when I asked them afterwards, they said they didn't at all any more. I hope I helped to change the teacher's attitude, too."

Vanzetti Led Strike.

Vanzetti worked for a time in the Plymouth Cordage Co.'s mill where Beltrando's father has worked over 30 years. Vanzetti was a leader of the great strike in the big cordage and binder twine plant.

Beltrando's mother works all day in the Puritan mill of William M. Wood's American Woolen Co. She leaves the house at 7 a. m. and returns after 6 p. m. to cook dinner for the family, which includes a younger sister, Zora, and older brother, Lefevre, is a young bride living nearby. Her husband works at the cordage mill for $20 weekly.

Lefevre proudly shows visitors the beautiful inlaid wood mosaic treasure box Vanzetti sent her for her wedding and the lovely note he wrote. She wonders why so generous a man, one who had been part of their family really, should be taken for a robber and killer. "He left his money lying about his room," she relates. "Once he lost a purse of $100, he was so careless, even tho he did not have much."

Beltrando's mother corresponds with Vanzetti's sister in Piemonte, Italy. The sister writes that she is well but her heart hurts her that he brother is still in prison in spite of his friends' four years effort to win a new trial and possible release for him.

Father Brini goes out every Sunday, even after working night and day at the mill, collecting funds to help continue the fight for Sacco and for Vanzetti.

Hughes Makes His Exit

One of the worst enemies of Soviet Russia in the Coolidge administration at Washington is getting out. Charles Evans Hughes, secretary of state, has handed his resignation to the president. Sam Gompers, the late head of the American Federation of Labor, ally of Hughes against the First Workers' Republic, was removed by death. Hughes retires to make money as a corporation lawyer. The outlook for the recognition of Soviet Russia grows brighter.

Coolidge has picked another corporation lawyer, Frank B. Kellogg, to succeed Hughes. Kellogg and Hughes are two lawyers of the same stripe. They both won political prominence thru fooling the voters.

Hughes attacked the big insurance companies and became governor of New York state. But later he was considered "safe" enough to go on the United States supreme court, and in 1916 he was the republican candidate for president. Altho Hughes was defeated, Harding, four years later, made him secretary of state; perhaps the best agent American imperialism has ever had. He was better known as the "secretary of oil."

Kellogg also carried on a fake attack against big business. He was a "trust buster" under Roosevelt. The popularity he won as a would-be smasher of big business combines sent him to the U. S. senate. But the workers and farmers in Minnesota woke up sufficiently to retire him and elect a farmer-laborite in his stead. Big capitalism takes care of its servants, however. Kellogg was sent as American ambassador to London, and now he is to be secretary of state.

Kellogg will be a good secretary of state for American imperialism. If Kellogg is told to continue the Hughes' policies against Soviet Russia he will do so, like any good office boy of the big business interests. If Wall Street feels that it is losing out to western Europe in capturing the trade of the First Workers' Republic, then Kellogg will be ordered to get in closer touch, than Hughes ever did, with Senator Borah, head of the foreign relations committee, who has been an ardent advocate of the recognition of and the opening of trade relations with Soviet Russia.

Borah has his own ideas about what the foreign relations of the United States should be. Big business isn't worried that Borah has an opportunity to give voice to these ideas on the floor of the senate. It has the secretary of state's office, which carries policies into effect, in its own grip.

All of which shows what a cleverly arranged organization the American capitalist state really is. Hughes is defeated for president. But for four years he has been one of the most powerful figures in the capitalist state. Kellogg was overwhelmingly repudiated by the workers and farmers of his own state. But now he rises to a position, third in line for the presidency. If President Coolidge and Vice-President Dawes should die, or become incapacitated, Kellogg would become president. Another similar instance is that of William Howard Taft, chief justice of the United States supreme court. Taft suffered a crushing defeat for the presidency in 1912, carrying only two states. But he was raised to a position where he now has a veto power over the acts of congress itself.

With these changes made in the president's cabinet, the exploited workers and poor farmers every where must intensify their agitation for full recognition of Soviet Russia; for the opening of trade relations with the First Workers' Republic. But this struggle should also teach all labor that complete victory finally comes only thru the abolition of the capitalist state, and the creation of Soviet rule in its stead. In place of the Wall Street rule of Coolidge, Hughes and Kellogg, the liberating rule of the whole working class.

President John L. Lewis can read the handwriting on the wall in the figures showing the results of the elections in various miners' unions over the country. Reaction is getting some stiff jolts. If the progressive miners keep up their excellent work, reaction will soon be hanging on the ropes. It ought to be a real knockout.

Harry M. Daugherty, ousted attorney general, is back in Washington attending receptions at the White House. And then the kept press wonders why the crime wave is rising higher and higher. Just as if the little fellows weren't entitled to their petty plunder as well as the big thieves with their rich hawls.

Child Labor

The Mansfield News (Ohio) is against the proposed child labor amendment. It calls it the "compulsory idleness amendment." Our contemporary has learned that the DAILY WORKER favors the amendment and quotes the following from the Workers Party statement on the question, unapprovingly:

"To compel the legislatures to immediately ratify the child labor amendment to the constitution. Compel the state and federal legislatures to pass a law providing for full government maintenance of all school children of workers and poor farmers, without which, the Workers Party declares, a child labor law would be useless."

What angers the plute sheet is the Workers Party demand that the money to provide for the maintenance of poor school children should come out of the pockets of the rich thru a tax on high incomes. This is considered pernicious and a step "in the direction of the Communist organization of the nation."

The capitalists do not want any government interference with the business of turning the flesh and blood of little children into dollars. They do not object to government aid, however, when soldiers and police are needed to break strikes. When the government is urged to depart from its mission of looking after the interests of the capitalists solely, even for such a small reform as the child labor amendment, the money barons roar with anger and declare that the home and the family and all the workers are endangered because they may not be allowed to exploit the labor of youth to their heart's content.

There will be child labor so long as capitalism exists. Only the establishment of a Communist society will bring an end to the exploitation of human beings, old and young.

The last day of the first year of the DAILY WORKER. Tomorrow we start the second year. Let all readers of the DAILY WORKER pledge themselves to help make it a big year.

The Klan and Kansas

The supreme court of the state of Kansas has delivered a decision which makes it rather difficult for the ku klux klan to function in that part of the United States of America.

The court issued an order ousting the klan from the state, but curiously enough, the decision was not based on the crimes committed by the klan but on the highly technical provision in the state law prohibiting purchase of lodge paraphernalia and supplies without a charter in Kansas.

Scores of lodges have been functioning in Kansas for years in violation of this law, but it was not invoked until now.

The klan seems to be out of luck in Kansas. It does not fit somehow. Down in Herrin, Illinois, it got in right with the coal operators and the bankers and the governor. No danger of the kluxers of southern Illinois getting bounced because they happen to overlook such a little thing as a law.

We fear that the imperial wizard in Atlanta was too drunk or too busy running his bawdy ventures to pay enough attention to his incompetent kleagles in Kansas. Perhaps the lads were not properly initiated in the art of tarring and feathering strikers, raiding the homes of workers and in general making themselves agreeable to the capitalists.

Of one thing we are certain. The capitalists in Kansas do not find its kluxers an asset.

The British are not willing to give General Dawes credit for concocting the Dawes plan. The point is that Dawes got the credit and cashed in on it in the last election.

Now We Can Eat Sardines Again

A great part of the publicity which arose over the work of our brother party in France, strangely took the form of a "red menace" in the form of a strike of fisherfolk and cannery workers in the sardine industry at the village of Douarnenez which lasted six weeks and was led by a Communist mayor.

The Communist mayor led the pickets and even after arrest by provincial police, managed to get back into the fight, was wounded seriously by gendarmes and made an issue in the French parliament of himself, the strike, and the cost of living which caused it.

Communist agitation aroused all France over the strike of the sardine workers of Douarnenez, in the village itself everything was in turmoil—to the eyes of the bourgeoisie, the mayor declared that strikers would pay no rent, stopped evictions, confiscated food from merchants, and generally upset all the sacred traditions of capitalism.

Now, we are glad to say, the dignified ministry of labor at Paris has announced that the sardine workers won the strike. They get an increase of 25 centimes an hour. It was not a revolutionary demand, but the struggle was conducted in a revolutionary way. The workers of all the world heard about it. Now that Communist tactics won the strike, we can eat sardines again.

It is reported in Berlin that Henry Ford is financing the Grand Duke Cyril's aspirations to the throne of the Romanoff's. Perhaps Henry will put wings on his flivvers and give the duke "that thrill that comes once in a lifetime." It will be his last thrill if he ever runs foul of the giving end of a Russian rifle.

The Bloody History of the Esthonian White Terror

(Special to The Daily Worker)

REVAL, Esthonia, (By Mail)—Seven years' "independence" of the Esthonian shopkeepers and profiteers, seven years of dastardly crimes, shooting and persecution of the revolutionary workers of Esthonia. This is the record of those seven years.

1919.

As soon as they got into power, the capitalist rulers of Esthonia celebrated the triumph of their "independent fatherland" by a series of outrageous murders. In the autumn of 1919, the police and secret service men raided the first congress of the Esthonian trade unions, arresting 102 delegates of the congress, representatives of the different trade unions. 76 of them were driven to the Russo-Esthonian border and put in the very front of the battle line and compelled to run forward, towards the Red Army posts. At the same time, firing was started by artillery in the direction of the Russian border in order to provoke the Red Army detachments to shoot, and it was only a happy chance that the Esthonian comrades managed to reach the Red Army fore posts in safety. The remaining 26 were arrested labor leaders were brought at night to Narwa where they were brutally murdered by the Esthonian marauders.

1920.

In view of the growing revolutionary consciousness among the working masses, the pseudo-democratic government suppressed a number of trade union organizations, and at Reval, Dorpat and other places, hundreds of labor leaders were thrown into jail.

1921.

Other revolutionary workers were arrested by the secret police, and in the summer of the same year 115 workers belonging to revolutionary, trade union, co-operative, sport, and other labor organizations were put on trial. The majority of the accused were sentenced by the military district court to eight, ten and twenty years' penal servitude.

New sacrifices were exacted from the working class of Esthonia. In 1922, the working class thruout the world was shocked by the news of the murder of the leader of the Esthonian revolutionary movement, Comrade Kingisepp, who was shot within 24 hours of his arrest.

In connection with the murder of Comrade Kingisepp, there were whole sale raids and domiciliary searches and about 80 new victims were thrown into the dungeons for long terms of detention. In 1923, another victim fell in the person of Comrade Kreuks, a member of the E. C. of the party and a prominent organizer of the masses. He was captured and murdered in the street by an Esthonian secret police agent, who shot him down on the spot. The bourgeois press tried to hush up the murder, pretending that it was "purely accidental," that Comrade Kreuks had resisted the police when being arrested in the street, and so on.

The current year was started by the Esthonian executioners with a number of new crimes. The economic and political position of the Esthonian bourgeoisie which loses ground day by day in the total economic collapse, the sharp antagonism among the ruling cliques on the one hand, and unemployment high cost of living and growing discontent among the masses on the other hand, drive the Esthonian shopkeepers and profiteers to new prosecutions directed against the labor movement. Only a couple of months ago, a young student was sentenced to penal servitude for life just because a bundle of Communist literature had been found on him. Only a week ago two workers were executed for the mere attempt to aid political prisoners in their escape from the Reval jail.

The Accused in the Trial of 149.

They consist of the best and most devoted leaders of the labor movement in Esthonia. Along with a score of active rank and file workers we find in the list of the accused in the Esthonian trial the names of prominent leaders of the labor organizations:

1. Janson, Alexander — Member of the Board of the Esthonian Trade Union Council.
2. Kanzur, Vladimir — Organizer of the young workers.
3. Allik, Hendrick—Editor of labor paper and secretary of Agricultural Laborers Union.
4. Keetlo, Paul — Secretary of the Esthonian Trade Union Council.
5. Tomp, Jan—Chairman of the Esthonian Trade Union Council.

The above five comrades were members of the National Assembly.

6. Hansen, August — Chairman of the Agricultural Laborer's Union.
7. Kask, Nadia — Trade Union organizer.
8. Leyman, John—Vice chairman of the Reval Trades Council.
9. Jalakas, Anton—Responsible Secretary of the Railway Workers' Union.
10. Rizev, Alexander—Secretary of Metal Workers' Union, organizer of the youth.
11. Ruppar, John—Chairman of the Reval Trade Union Council.
12. Tennison, Julius — Secretary of the Reval Trade Union Council.
13. Reinson, Alexandra — Chairman of the Esthonian Printers' Union.
14. Prulian, Rudolf — Chairman of Factory Council.
15. Welkson, Rose—Secretary of the Garment Workers' Union.
16. Kunapu, Olga — Organizer of working women, Chairman of the Esthonian Trade Union Council.

Composition of the Court.

All the members of the military district court at Reval are former tsarist officers who now occupy prominent positions in the army. These old tsarist officers continue all the cruel customs of the hangmen of the last of the Romanoffs. In looking at their "solemn" stupid faces one cannot help recalling the court martial of 1905 and the years of tsarist reaction which drowned the Russian revolutionary movement in blood.

M. Trakman is the counsel for the prosecution, a former officer in the czar's army, now a captain in the Esthonian army—permanent chairman at all the trials of the workers. Thru his hands have passed more than a score of the best sons of the Esthonian proletariat, who were thrown into dungeons for eight, twelve, fifteen and twenty years' imprisonment. Among the Esthonian bourgeoisie he enjoys the reputation of a smart and efficient oppressor of the labor movement.

M. Gelk, the presiding judge, a lieutenant in the Esthonian army, a former officer in the czar's army. The same characteristics as the preceding one. It was he who caused the court martial and murder of the late Comrade Jan Tomp. It was he who insisted on trying the accused on the additional framed-up charge of armed rebellion.

Who Are the Defenders?

Owing to the provocative attitude of the court and the foreign office in refusing the admission of Soviet lawyers led by Comrade Tchlenov, the accused refused to have counsel, and only some of the accused are defended by lawyers appointed by the court. In court prisoners from the dock exclaim: "Keep your dirty hands off the labor movement of Esthonia." This was the answer of the accused to the question of guilt that was put by Gelk, the presiding judge.

Rose Welston: "I plead guilty in not having succeeded in doing enough for the liberation of the working class of Esthonia, so that you. . . (Comrade Welston wanted to say: should be here in the dock.)," but at this point the presiding judge ordered her removal from court.

Helen Laid: "None of you can be my judge." (She was led out.)

Ida Monsson, a working girl: "The hangman's court of Reval cannot judge me."

John Juster: "I do not plead guilty before the class court of the bourgeoisie. I admit that I acted in the interests of the toilers."

Pauk: "I plead guilty that I fought against the oppressors and exploiters of the workers."

The chairman, apparently did not quite understand the "reply," for he asked him to state what he meant.

Pauk: "It means just what I said."

Olga Kunapu: "I believe that not everyone who rattles his spurs is fit to judge me."

Jan Tomp: "I do not plead guilty before the court of the government run by the scoundrels of Esthonia."

Vladimir Kangur: "If I have to answer anyone, it is the working class. Before the bourgeoisie and its class court I do not plead guilty."

Rizev, organizer of Youth: "A Communist will never plead guilty before bourgeois scoundrels."

Court Visitors Sing International.

At the first session the public in the court joined the accused in singing the International, and this compelled the police to take measures to clear the court of any likely sympathizers among them. According to meager recent information, only the nearest relatives of the accused are admitted into the court, and those only on special tickets, grudgingly issued each time by the prosecutor.

In the last few days the reactionary papers of Esthonia started a campaign for the complete closing of the court to all persons without exception, including the relatives of the accused, and for the further hearing of the case in camera. The fury of the bourgeois press even increased after the shooting of Comrade Jan Tomp and the assassin which this foul murder caused among the masses of the workers thruout the world.

Thus, the bourgeois Esthonian paper, Pavalist, wrote about the murder of Comrade Jan Tomp: "The culprit got what he deserved. The court rendered a just verdict, and the majority of Esthonian laws has been reasserted."

What Are the Charges?

The evidence in the case of 149 consists of 14 bulky volumes, while the summary of the accusation occupies approximately 12 printed sheets (about 200 pages). More than 60 people are subpoenaed as witnesses, nearly all of them agents of the secret service.

Below we give a few samples of the way in which the accusation was worked up.

The accusation has collected and piled together the resolutions of Profintern, and Comintern on the one hand, and of the Esthonian labor congress on the other hand. Thus we read:

"In the chapter on the trade unions the factory committees and the Third International (see resolution of Second Congress of the Comintern, held from July 17 to August 7, 1920), the following passage occurs: 'In order to fulfill this task, Communists must in fact subordinate the factory committees and the trade unions to the Communist Party, and thus create a mass organ of the workers which would embrace all the organizations of the proletarian struggle.'"

On page 14, the summary of the accusation we read: "The program of the 'united front' (unification of the trade unions of Esthonia) advanced the following 12 demands:

"1. Minimum wage securing to workers a decent existence.

"2. Workers' insurance at the expense of the state in the event of unemployment, invalidity, mutilation, old age, and in the case of working women—during pregnancy and childbirth.

"3. Housing accomodation for evicted workers.

"4. No compensation whatever to landowners for the confiscated land and property.

"5. Taxation of large incomes and inherited property.

"6. General peace, especially with Soviet Russia.

"7. Abolition of the secret police, the money hitherto expended on up keep of armed forces and on the intelligence department to be used for the improvement of workers' conditions and for public instruction.

"8. Abrogation of martial law. The same freedom of opinion, press, association and meetings for workers as enjoyed now by the manufacturers, traders, housewomers and kulkas. .

"All these principles," we read further down, "have also been recognized by the second national congress of the land and forest workers' union, held on March 20-22, in Reval."

But the worst is still to come:

"The second national congress of the land and forest workers' unions after a discussion of the question of International unity, resolved to affiliate to the Red Profintern.

"If this is to, it is clear that they (the unions) co-operate with the illegal Communist Party for the purpose of overthrowing by violent methods the existing form of government in Esthonia and of establishing the dictatorship of the proletariat."

In the next line we read:

"In presenting the report of the Central Committee(congress of the Communist Party of Esthonia, June 16-18, 1923), Hansen said that the Central Committee taking its stand on the revolutionary class struggle is endeavoring to establish its influence in the trade unions."

The "Zinoviev letter" had been mentioned, the picture would have been complete. But to make up for this omission, we read in paragraph 25: "The Second International Trade Union Congress sends hearty greetings to its compainions in arms—the Esthonian Central Trade Union Council—under the oppressive rule of the newly formed bourgeois and of the barons, who have to work under extremely difficult conditions, your path is a thorny path, it leads thru prison and death sentences, but you have behind you the working class of the world."

The picture is made complete by the number of "substantial" proofs mentioned—pamphlets and trade union literature containing the statement that:

"The whole history of mankind is the history of the class struggle."

Even during the illiterate czarist days, indictments were presented in a more finished form.

"CRIMINALS OF THE YOUTH AND SPORT ORGANIZATIONS.—On page 41, we find extracts from speeches made at the conference of the working class youth, held on August 5, 1923.

"The conference was opened by a representative of the Central Trade Union Council. . . Allik said that the workers' youth movement was part and parcel of the labor movement as a whole, and that therefore the working class youth must be part of the general united front of the workers. The special task before the working class youth is struggle against militarism and against the peril of war for the working class youth is the first to be sent to the trenches in the event of war and is being kept away from its work and has to live in barracks during peace times."

Workers' Sports Terrorizes Them.

In connection with sports organizations, we read on page 43 (from the report of the above mentioned congress in 1923): "Working class sports has nothing in common with the bourgeois sports movement. It must identify itself with the class struggle. . . All working class sports leagues, affiliated to the National 'Spartacus' Association, for the purpose of conferring the sports movement into a powerful working class movement."

In order to make everything "clear," the indictment adds the following statement: "The Sports Association, Spartacus' was founded in June, 1923, and took the place of the Hercules,' which by order in council had been forbidden to convene meetings as long as martial law was in force."

High Treason.

Thus we can see that the whole indictment is endeavoring to make out that trade union, co-operative, sports and youth organizations are under the influence of the Communist Party (which is "evident" from the respective resolutions) and are carrying on revolutionary activities. Can it be otherwise? Seeing that none other but workers' organizations. . .:

"Persisted in telling the workers that the only choice before the proletariat was either to be exterminated by exploitation under bourgeois dictatorship, or to come out openly into the struggle against the bourgeoisie (from the resolution of the Second Trade Union Congress included into the indictment."

"These crimes" are punished on the strength of paragraph 102—actions directed towards the overthrow of the existing form of government, and on the strength of paragraph 257, "high treason." The former is punished by a long term of imprisonment up to 20 years penal servitude, and the latter, even with the death sentence. With regard to "high treason," this ignoble and impudent accusation can be traced back to events which took place in the spring of the current year. After the closing down of all the Esthonian trade unions, there came a wave of fierce attacks and arrests directed against Esthonian working class leaders. The growing economic crisis and the political bankruptcy of the Esthonian bourgeoisie, resulted in a whole series of brutal persecutions directed against the Esthonian labor movement. But Esthonian revolutionary ideology, which had been driven underground, was growing in strength and volume from day to day. Resolutions were passed at numerous workers' meetings in April of the current year, emphasizing the hopeless position of the working class under the dictatorship of the Esthonian shopkeepers and speculators, and pointing out that the only way out of the impasse is the close union with the U. S. S. R.—"high treason."

Jan Tomp has already died at his post. Many of the other defendants stand in danger of death sentences, especially as at the proposal of the public prosecutor, the second part of paragraph 102 has been added to the indictment (armed rising is punishable by death). This was also done on the strength of the identification of the program of the Esthonian Party with the resolutions of the Comintern, Profintern and of the Esthonian Labor Congresses.

Social Traitors in the Trial of the 149.

Esthonian social traitors have already earned a notable reputation as helpers of the Esthonian bourgeoisie in the latter's brutal treatment of the workers.

It was none other but Gellat, the social democratic minister of the interior in the coalition government of 1918, who drove 76 arrested comrades across the Russo-Esthonian frontier to certain death. It was none other but Gellat who with the help of his body guard, brutally murdered 26 of our comrades in Izborsk.

None others but social democrats championed the cause of the Esthonian bourgeoisie at meetings, in the press, at congresses and wherever they had an opportunity to do so. Only eight days ago the entire social democratic fraction consisting of 20 members voted in the national assembly together with the bourgeois bloc in favor of handing over five working class members of the assembly to the intelligence department and to the court.

Rey, Ast, Piskar and all the other democratic scoundrels are carrying on a daily campaign of unashamed incitement against the Esthonian labor movement in the columns of the yellow, Ekhendus, Naninson, the well known renegade traitor and agent provocateur has found worthy followers in Reya, Asts, Piskars, etc.

Theses for Reports.

1. The history of the seven years' "independence" of bourgeois Esthonia is a history of ignoble brutalities and insults on the part of Esthonian shopkeepers and speculators against the workers.

2. Esthonian justice is the old czarist justice with all its sanguinary methods and forms.

3. The trial of the "149" in Reval is an unprecedented act of class vengeance on the part of the Esthonian bourgeoisie.

4. Esthonian social democrats, who have been responsible more than once for the shedding of blood of Esthonian workers, are playing in the trial of the "149" their usual ignoble role of traitors to the working class.

5. The majority of the accused are in danger of having long sentences of penal servitude, and many even the death sentence imposed on them. The international proletariat must tear its best fighters out of the grip of the Esthonian executors.

REACH AGREEMENT IN RUSSO-JAP PARLEYS BEING HELD IN TOKYO

(Special to the DAILY WORKER)

TOKYO, Jan. 11.—Government circles were confident this afternoon that a virtual agreement had been reached in the Russo-Japanese parley now in progress in Peking.

Japan agrees to evacuate her troops from Russian soil as soon as physical conditions permit. Questions of debts and claims are to be left to future conferences.
